"This book is more than a piece of good reporting. Mr. Gray moralizes in an obvious way on the relation of science and war, takes his fling at the propaganda factories and philosophizes, by way of an epilogue, on the social function of science. He prefers to quote rather than to think on his own account when he branches off into sociology and philosophy. But the quotations are to the point and round out an effective and trustworthy record of scientific and technological progress, which, it is to be hoped, will be amplified when the veil of secrecy that conceals so much is stripped away." Waldemar Kaempffert

+ — Yale R n s 33:535 spring '44 1450w

GRAY, ROBERT DAVIS. Systematic wage administration in the southern California aircraft industry. 90p pa $1.25 Industrial relations counselors

331.282913 Job analysis. Wages. Airplane industry and trade 43-17417

"A case history of job analysis and evaluation as developed and applied by seven large companies in the Southern California aircraft industry. The program described substitutes a systematic scheme of wage administration for the inconsistent and chaotic wage conditions that existed in the seven companies prior to the application of the plan. The study outlines successive steps in the development of the system and describes the merit-rating plans of the cooperating firms." Managament R

"The study will be found of help to all concerned with wage administration." Gustav Peck

+ Am Econ R 34:936 D '44 500w

Am Soc R 9:717 D '44 50w

"Companies desiring to install and maintain wage and salary administration systems will find much interesting data in this brochure."

+ Management R 33:38 Ja '45 140w

GRAYSON, HARRY. They played the game; the story of baseball greats. 139p $2 Barnes, A.S.

796.357 Baseball 44-40066

"Fifty-six sketches of personalities in baseball since it became a leading American sport. The sketches are not biographical but describe the outstanding qualities of the men as players. Tendency to make many of them 'the greatest.'" Booklist

"The older fans will clamor for more and the younger ones will have to admit there were giants in those days."

+ Am Hist R 50:183 O '44 50w

Booklist 40:280 Ap 15 '44

"The human side of baseball, an excellent addition to baseball history, with the emphasis on the personalities from 'the glorious past to the lamentable present.'"

+ Kirkus 12:163 Ap 1 '44 80w

GREAT BRITAIN. Admiralty. See Ritchie, L. A. da C.

GREEN, MARY MCBURNEY. Everybody has a house; pictures by Jeanne Bendick. [20p] spir $1 Scott, W.R.

44-4337

Cardboard picture book for very small children. On one page a question is asked about the house of some animal: "What does the cow have for a house?" On the opposite page is the answer, with a picture of the house.

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p10 N 27 '44 60w

Kirkus 12:216 My 1 '44 100w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
N Y Times p21 My 21 '44 50w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p5 My 28 '44 120w

GREEN, PAUL. Hawthorn tree; some papers and letters on life and the theatre. 157p $2 Univ. of N.C. press

814 43-18981

Collection of fifteen essays, written at various times. They touch on many subjects, art, religion, the Negro in the South, but the central theme is a plea for appreciation of the fundamental values of American life. The author is professor of dramatic art at the University of North Carolina.

Booklist 40:209 F 15 '44

Christian Science Monitor p12 My 6 '44 700w

Reviewed by Gilbert Chase
Sat R of Lit 27:34 F 19 '44 550w

Theatre Arts 28:190 Mr '44 340w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
Weekly Book Review p17 Ap 30 '44 100w

GREENBERG, DAVID B., and CORBIN, CHARLES. So you're going to buy a farm. 140p $1.50 Greenberg

631 Farms. Agriculture Agr44-195

Takes up such questions as how much land to buy for each type of buyer: truck gardening, poultry raising, cattle raising, etc; how soon may I expect cash returns; what help can I get in financing; what to look for in selecting a farm; what I should know about soils and fertilizers; and the future of farming.

Booklist 40:372 Jl 1 '44

"In spite of the authors' laudable motives, and the pertinence of their advice in general, the book is sometimes trite, and for the most part it is superficial in treatment. This renders it inadequate as a practical handbook, but it still constitutes supplementary reading of interest to anyone contemplating a venture in farming." M. W. S.

— + Christian Science Monitor p16 Je 1 '44 480w

"An excellent guide. . . It goes sensibly into the question of probable cash return and makes good reading for both the would-be week-end farmer and for the man who wants to make farming his full-time work." Meyer Berger

+ N Y Times p26 Je 4 '44 60w

"For all prospective gentry and potential dirt farmers, 'So You're Going to Buy a Farm' is a valuable guide in the selection of farm land and buildings, which they should digest before leaping. . . A number of returning veterans, as well as civilians who are laying aside war bonds for a postwar 'stake,' will find this an interesting and informative guide." E. W. K.

Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 24 '44 220w

GREENBIE, MRS MARJORIE LATTA (BARSTOW). Lincoln's daughters of mercy. 211p $3 Putnam

973.7771 U.S. Sanitary commission. U.S.—History—Civil war—Women's work 44-3429

"This is the story of the United States Sanitary Commission, the great relief organization of the Civil War, which was the ancestor of the American Red Cross. From it are derived most of our techniques for mitigating the horrors of war and binding up the wounds of battle. The U.S.O., the American Women's Voluntary Services, the United Seamen's Services, and most other War Relief agencies present modern variations of its over-all structure and specific ministrations. The WACS, the WAVES, the SPARS, and other women's military services find in it the first great example of the enlistment of women for war." (Pref) Appeared in condensed form in the Reader's Digest. Bibliographical note. No index.

Reviewed by Sylvia Crosby
Book Week p7 My 28 '44 380w

Booklist 40:315 My 15 '44

Reviewed by Mary Poore
N Y Times p10 Ap 30 '44 500w

"The inside story of the United States Sanitary Commission, greatest relief organization of the Civil War, which Mrs. Greenbie tells vivaciously from original sources for the first time, has at this moment an interest other than historical. . . In the nick of time, just not too late to draw on transmitted memories this contribution to Civil War literature has been made. It jumps with life." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p14 Je 18 '44 600w

GREENE, WARD (FRANK DUDLEY, pseud). What they don't know. 218p $2.50 Random house 44-5663

Story of a middle-class American family, living in a suburban Long Island town during the present war. Mrs Crockett ran all the town activities that she could and took in war refugees on the side; Mr Crockett was hampered in his business by the WPB; Nancy was young and beautiful and finally married her George, and young Harry Crockett went overseas. The Crocketts were a fairly typical family: "impulsive, disorderly, kind, rude, jolly, and ambitious."

Book Week p8 Jl 30 '44 180w

Boston Globe p15 Jl 26 '44 160w

"Not consequential, but nice."
Kirkus 12:238 Je 1 '44 150w

"Ward Greene maintains his reputation as a writer of hard-boiled novels about the contemporary American scene in this rowdy and stimulating story. . . Some small library boards may view the book askance." E. F. Walbridge
Library J 69:603 Jl '44 70w

"'What They Don't Know' is smoothly geared to show the resilience of an average American family in wartime. . . It's all brave and debonair; some of it is mildly touching. But none of it really stirs the heart. Mr. Greene has stayed too close to the surface—and moved too fast." William Du Bois
N Y Times p6 Jl 16 '44 550w

"The sympathetic, readable, and not too penetrating story of a likable, middle-class family in suburban Long Island during the war. Mr. Greene isn't as amusing in the company of nice people as he is with drunks and ladies of uneasy virtue, but he is funny enough, and to his humor he has added sufficient warmth and mellowness to give his book a certain charm."
+ — New Yorker 20:58 Jl 22 '44 60w

"Still another pleasantly zany family comes to light in 'What They Don't Know,' which, since it is written with gentle humor and has practically nothing to do with the South, is not the sort of novel one expects from Ward Greene." Herbert Kupferberg
+ Weekly Book Review p10 Jl 23 '44 500w

GREENE, WILLIAM CHASE. Moira: fate, good and evil in Greek thought. 450p $5 Harvard univ. press
880.9 Greek literature—History and criticism. Philosophy, Ancient A44-2212

"Is God the author of evil as well as good, or does an ineluctable Fate govern gods as well as men? Is man the slave of necessity? Is Fate omnipotent, but God not? Is the world divided between a developing god and a developed devil? These are questions older than the Greeks, of course, but it is the Greek answer to the human dilemma which has left its indelible impress on occidental habits of mind and morals. The answer, obviously, is not one answer but many, and these are scattered up and down the whole field of Greek letters. These answers, historically and critically examined, are the subject of Mr. Greene's erudite work." N Y Times

Christian Science Monitor p12 S 9 '44 450w

"One need not be equipped with the proverbial 'little Latin and less Greek' to recognize that in this book Mr. Greene has made a genuine contribution to classical scholarship." E. C. Richards
+ N Y Times p25 Jl 16 '44 550w

GREENHOOD, DAVID. Down to earth; mapping for everybody; with il. by Ralph Graeter. 262p maps $4 Holiday
526 Maps 44-6571

"A book for the layman, on a subject that has never been so important since the New World was discovered. In simple, logical steps, the theories and techniques of maps are developed: Coordinates, from backyard grids to parallels and meridians; Great Circles, from planes to airplanes; Distance, from scale to sky; Direction, from wind roses to the gyrocompass; Relief, from ocean bottom to mountain tops; Projections, from Ptolemy's fan-shaped map to Fuller's Dymaxion World. Woven through this development are fascinating facts, anecdotes, thumb-nail biographies, shorts cuts and helps." (Publisher's note) Index.

Commonweal 40:307 Jl 14 '44 120w

"This book covers much of the ground of the usual textbook on cartography, and more besides. Yet it is not a textbook, but rather a manual for the amateur enthusiast who wishes to understand, make, or collect maps—a volume to be relished in leisure hours rather than studied for classroom or utilitarian purposes, though it contains a wealth of practical information. The style is clear and breezy, studded with bits of mild philosophizing. . . Altogether, the author is to be congratulated on one of the most attractive books on maps that has appeared in a long while. It should do much to promote a better knowledge of cartography in this country, for which the need is still great despite all that the war may have accomplished in this respect." W. D. Jones
+ Geog R 34:674 O '44 350w

"Never, since America was discovered, have maps been more interesting for study, for collecting or for making. David Greenhood has directions for cultivating all three hobbies, with explanations on every point. Fresh illustrations are profusely scattered through this arresting book, which will be stimulating to certain young people." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 20:292 Jl '44 110w

"A fascinating book for anyone seriously interested in—excited by maps. Perhaps you just like to study maps—and never has there been more opportunity or more importance. Perhaps you would like to make maps. Perhaps you want to collect maps. For each and everyone of you, this book has something to offer. It is not a primer of maps—far from it. It demands a scientific approach, an honest interest in the technical aspects."
+ Kirkus 12:280 Je 15 '44 210w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:606 Jl '44 40w

"Splendid and very complete book on subject of maps and map-making. A book for amateur, designed to give him an understanding and appreciation of maps, whether his interest be as user, maker or collector." A. H. McGinity
+ Library J 69:655 Ag '44 120w

"'Down to Earth' follows the principle utilized in several English works that, if you learn to make a map of your own neighborhood, you have a sound start in understanding maps. An effort was evidently made to write in a style for everyman. No difficult technical termi-

GREENHOOD, DAVID—Continued
nology is used without clear explanation. The book can be criticized for getting too deep into the preliminary subjects of coordinates, ecliptics, scale, etc., before a general consideration of projections is reached. The discussion of the controversial projections is very intelligently and fairly handled. It is handsomely designed, well indexed, and profusely illustrated with black and white cuts mostly by Ralph Graeter, who shows sound graphic instincts, but whose work could be more precise cartographically." R. E. Harrison
+ — Sat R of Lit 27:5 Jl 1 '44 300w

"This book should have a host of readers. It covers the field completely and in a most interesting and informative manner."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 15:4 Je '44 180w

"Without necessarily succumbing to map-making and map-reading as a hobby, anyone who looks through 'Down to Earth' will recognize it as a skillful and pleasant exposition of the art and craft."
+ Springf'd Republican p6 Je 28 '44 280w
Survey G 33:329 Jl '44 30w

"The book aims to interest the layman and student in the theory, construction and actual drawing of maps, and gives some useful hints for those who like to collect them. Although it goes rather deeply into some technical matters, the writing holds no terrors for the uninitiated. At times, in fact, there is a tendency to descend to the tiny-steps-for-tiny-tots technique. But throughout it successfully avoids the desicated tone of a textbook." R. E. Harrison
Weekly Book Review p5 Jl 9 '44 550w
Wis Lib Bul 40:126 O '44

GREENWOOD, GORDON. Early American-Australian relations from the arrival of the Spaniards in America to the close of 1830. 184p il $3 Stechert [10s 6d Oxford]

327.94 Australia—Relations (general) with America. America—Relations (general) with Australia 44-9078

"Gordon Greenwood's book is a pioneer effort in the field defined by the title. . . Mr. Greenwood uses the word 'American' to include both North and South America, so that he is able to deal with the activities of Spanish explorers operating from South American bases, the influence of our Revolution on the original settlement of Australia, the activities of our whalers in Australian waters, the Pacific phase of the War of 1812 as it touched Australia and early trade relations with the United States, Chile and Brazil." Weekly Book Review

---

"This is a new and interesting picture of a little-known period of Australia's history, well worth the exhaustive research it has required." H. J. S.
+ Christian Science Monitor p13 D 23 '44 500w

Reviewed by C. H. Gratton
Weekly Book Review p20 N 5 '44 200w

GREER, BLANCHE. Thunder's tail; il. by the author. [24p] $1 Coward-McCann 44-4607

Picture story book for young readers, describing the adventures of two Siamese kittens in an art gallery. One kitten had a nice long tail, the other had none, so all the animals and people in the pictures tried to help out.

"What child has not stood before a picture and wished that it might come to life and move and talk? In this charming and imaginative little story that is exactly what happens. . . Blanche Greer's cats are delightful and the story has freshness and humor, as well as a neatly pointed moral. For children from 6 to 8." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p11 My 7 '44 180w

"Charming pictures with action and humor."
+ Kirkus 12:216 My 1 '44 90w

"Fine picture book." M. L. Goodwin
+ Library J 69:505 Je 1 '44 70w

"The last experiment which should be the most convincing, is to me the weakest, but picture-story book readers engrossed in this amusing and original fantasy-fable will never quibble about that. Thunder, as pictured by Blanche Greer, is charming and gay, tail or no tail. So, too, is Lightnin', and two kittens are more than twice as cute as one." E. L. Buell
+ — N Y Times p23 Ap 30 '44 170w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p5 My 14 '44 180w

GREET, WILLIAM CABELL. World words; recommended pronunciations. 402p $3 Columbia univ. press

411.5 English language—Pronunciation. Names, Geographical. Names, Personal. World war, 1939- A44-2039

A revised and enlarged edition of the author's War Words (Book Review Digest, 1943). "Place names furnish many puzzles in pronunciation. Dr. Greet, a professor at Columbia and speech consultant for Columbia Broadcasting Company, lists 400 pages of names and a few other words much used on the air and gives their preferred pronunciations. If a newscaster on the air this morning had referred to this book, he would not have said that the Allied forces have taken 'Buy-you' meaning Bayeux, which is pronounced 'Bah-yö'—as nearly as it can be indicated with the available type." Christian Century

---

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 Ag 6 '44 90w
Booklist 40:391 Jl 15 '44

"The book is designed especially for broadcasters, but its wide use for reference by the laity would have the good effect of forcing broadcasters to be more careful."
+ Christian Century 61:751 Je 21 '44 150w
Cleveland Open Shelf p12 Je '44

"Here is one of the most useful, and at the same time delightful, books that has come across my desk in a long time. . . This book is indispensable for every public speaker." M. S. Enslin
+ Crozer Q 21:269 Jl '44 1000w

Reviewed by E. J. Foscue
Geog R 34:692 O '44 170w
Kirkus 12:247 Je 1 '44 110w

" 'World Words' is a pleasurable and profitable field for browsing. It informs the mind and removes any excuse for falling flat over a diphthong in ordinary conversation. More important, of course, is its function as a standard manual." C. B. Palmer
+ N Y Times p13 S 3 '44 600w

GREGG, CECIL FREEMAN. 2 died at 3. 288p $2 Arcadia [8s 6d Methuen] 44-51106

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p11 Ja 21 '45 50w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p18 D 17 '44 100w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p14 D 10 '44 70w

GREGG, JOSIAH. Diary and letters [bk2] Excursions in Mexico and California, 1847-1850; ed. by Maurice Garland Fulton; with an introd. by Paul Horgan. (Am. exploration and travel ser) 396p $3.50 Univ. of Okla. press

B or 92 Mexico—Description and travel. California—Description and travel (41-13261)

"This volume presents in diaries and letters the story of a great American pioneer who came near being forgotten. Gregg was the author of 'Commerce of the Prairies,' the classic account of the prime days of the overland trade between the Missouri River and New Mexico. He was an explorer who tried to improve on the old routes. He was a physician and, at least in an amateur way, an eager botanist, geologist and geographer. . . What he wrote, both in his formal phase as author of 'Commerce of the Prairies' and informally in letters and diaries, has a lasting fascination. People are real in his pages. The Missouri volunteers are recognizable, the strutting generals, the ambitious politicians, the Mexicans who had not relished being defeated by the Yankee invaders and therefore took out the grievance on more or less innocent travelers." N Y Times

Reviewed by J. P. Pritchett
Ann Am Acad 237:230 Ja '45 500w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 D 10 '44 110w

"Mr. Fulton's editing is competent, helpful and never obtrusive. This volume, like its predecessor, will be treasured by those who love early western history." R. L. Duffus
+ N Y Times p6 S 3 '44 850w

Springf'd Republican p4d S 3 '44 500w

GREGORY, HOLLINGSWORTH FRANKLIN. Anything a horse can do; the story of the helicopter; introd. by Igor Sikorsky. 243p il $3 Reynal

629.13335 Helicopters 44-7878

"Story of the helicopter from its beginning to present models and its future. Also describes the technique of piloting it. Told simply and engagingly, 32 pages of diagrams and photographs. Introduction by Igor Sikorsky." Library J

Reviewed by G. A. Scheuer
Book Week p8 O 1 '44 500w

Booklist 41:54 O 15 '44

Christian Science Monitor p12 D 9 '44 90w

"Told by an expert, who has been a part of this aeronautical history, this is an interesting, if technical, factual study, of flight for the future, important because of its military and specialist background."
+ Kirkus 12:291 Jl 1 '44 150w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:700 S 1 '44 40w

"The book is heavily documented from personal experience. Heavily but not solemnly. There's a breezy Air Corps gusto and familiarity about most of his carefully recorded stories. And he makes an admirably successful attempt to reduce them to language anyone can understand. If you have been planning to use your lawn as an air-strip after the armistice, Colonel Gregory will tell you exactly what you are up against." John Stuart
+ N Y Times p8 O 1 '44 700w

New Yorker 20:82 S 23 '44 90w

"This book is important for any one interested in the history of flight. It is the first book on helicopters written by a man who actually flies them and knows all the angles. It contains several valuable contributions and definitely your money's worth of authoritative information and pictures concerning the strange new craft." Wolfgang Langewiesche
+ Weekly Book Review p6 D 17 '44 650w

Wis Lib Bul 40:144 N '44

GREGORY, HORACE. Shield of Achilles; essays on beliefs in poetry. 211p $2.50 Harcourt

821.04 English poetry—History and criticism 44-3831

Collection of miscellaneous papers, many of them enlarged and revised book reviews, in which the author discusses comparative values in poetry, philosophy, and literature in general. The shield of the title "may be taken to mean the degree of self-knowledge that a work of art contains to protect itself against what has been so often called 'the ravages of time.'" (Nation)

"These 'essays on beliefs in poetry' should perch Horace Gregory the critic on a higher limb than Horace Gregory the poet. They are imaginative, resourceful and thought provoking, a generous contribution to the understanding of a number of difficult English and American literary figures." Leo Kennedy
+ Book Week p8 Ap 23 '44 400w

Booklist 40:337 Je 1 '44

"Though 'neither heavy nor pedantic,' as the notice on the jacket states correctly, it is scarcely notable for its 'coherence,' as the same notice adds. Coherence and comprehensiveness can hardly be expected in a volume, some 200 pages long, which darts forward on such unrelated and fascinating bypaths as the prose of Byron, the verse of Thomas Lovell Beddoes, the editorial career of Henley, the Irish work of George Moore and the connection between Wordsworth's immortality ode and 'Alice in Wonderland.' . . The essay on Wordsworth and Alice was originally delivered as a lecture, and hence suffers in transcription from that arch, allusive and talk-down-to-them idiom which some lecturers feel bound to give to their expositions in belles lettres." Cuthbert Wright
+ — Commonweal 40:21 Ap 21 '44 300w

"The essays are learned and loaded with allusion, they are gracefully turned, they suggest some interesting and unusual facets of the subjects posed. And yet, withal, the volume is elusive and rather dull reading. Truth and clarification seem to glance off the shield of Mr. Gregory's too well filled mind (except in the excellent piece on the Gothic Imagination and Thomas Lovell Beddoes). The creative illumination and definition one derives from the best critical writing seems lacking."
— + Kirkus 12:165 Ap 1 '44 170w

"Mr. Gregory says not a few good things by the way. Sometimes these are offered, as a poet should offer them, in a happy metaphor. . . Sometimes he says simply what has oft been thought but ne'er so well expressed, as when he declares that 'Poe was more frequently the master of artifice than of art.' Again, he introduces shrewd comparisons, such as the seemingly unlikely one of George Moore with Sherwood Anderson, or nice contrasts, such as that of Alice, Lewis Carroll's Alice, with Wordsworth, remarking that the practical little girl, unlike the not impractical poet, 'knew terror, but not grief.' The essay on Alice and Wordsworth is one of the most stimulating in the collection." Babette Deutsch
+ — Nation 158:486 Ap 22 '44 700w

"It may be captious to make any strictures against a volume that contains so many leads for further thought. But sandwiched in among the essays are [some] that have no relation to the subtitle, and still others that bear the mark of obvious hackwork. The total effect is not the solid impact of Achilles' shield, the single impact of constructed wholeness." F. O. Matthiessen

New Repub 110:568 Ap 24 '44 900w

"With these essays, Horace Gregory quits the open fields of poetry for the dark corridors of criticism. What he brings to these corridors is not only the light of a vivid intelligence but also the courage of an independent imagination. He has not only read much poetry but has thought upon what he has read; and he has discovered that the thing he, as reader, has searched for is a quality of self-knowledge obtainable only from the work itself, not from its relation—whatever that may be—to 'semantics, psychology, social science or education.' His insight into poetry is, accordingly, no superficial one." J. G. Fletcher
+ N Y Times p3 Ap 16 '44 850w

Reviewed by David Daiches
Poetry 64:334 S '44 700w

"It is the lack of a central point of view, this uncertainty of intention, which makes these essays, interesting and perceptive as they often are, seem characteristic of much contemporary American criticism. . . The same uncertainty is reflected in the style; at times the overportentous seriousness which has been the unfortunate stylistic legacy to modern criticism of Eliot's 'Sacred Wood' stalks through the sentences; at other times we hear echoes of Virginia Woolf. . . I do not, however, want to give too unfavorable an impression of this book; I have stressed its shortcomings because there is enough—a great deal—that is good in

GREGORY, HORACE—Continued
it to make the reader anxiously want to find out why the book as a whole is not more complete than it is. Mr. Gregory has a really serious concern with literature, he makes us aware of things we had not noticed before, but he has the shortcomings which are shared by nearly all critics who have grown up in a generation whose education has been undisciplined and diffuse." Theodore Spencer

— + Sat R of Lit 27:27 Ap 29 '44 900w

"The immediate topics always expand into larger questions, and it is refreshing to find a critic who accepts nothing without re-examination of the evidence, and who seeks the intrinsic value of every literary experience, apart from matters of fashion and prejudice." Elizabeth Drew

+ Weekly Book Review p3 Ap 23 '44 450w

Wis Lib Bul 40:107 Jl '44

Reviewed by Mark Schorer

Yale R n s 34:163 autumn '44 1200w

GREGORY, THOMAS C., ed. Uses and applications of chemicals and related materials; a guide to their current industrial uses, potential applications, and sales possibilities. v2 459p $9 Reinhold

660.3 Chemistry, Technical—Dictionaries. Chemicals—Manufacture and industry

"This volume is both supplementary and complementary to Volume I, published in 1939 [Book Review Digest, 1939]. It lists not only the uses of 2,642 chemicals not mentioned in the earlier volume, but presents new uses of chemicals which were included in that volume. New features are: an index of chemical uses covering both volumes, a numerical index to the patents cited in the two volumes, and a list of the names and addresses of the patentees. As in Volume I, there is again a separate listing of synonyms and cross-references." N Y New Tech Bks

---

Chem & Eng N 22:2049 N 25 '44 100w

Library J 69:1002 N 15 '44 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:41 Jl '44

GREITZER, SAMUEL L. Elementary topography and map reading. 157p il maps $1.60 McGraw

526.98 Maps 44-879

"The intention has been to prepare a textbook that is self-contained and written in simple non-technical language and that will, at the same time, present a full and complete exposition of the subject. The mathematical portion of the work has been made as easy as possible, so that students with no mathematical training can use it with no undue difficulty. Wherever possible, diagrams have been used to clarify the discussion. The modern advances in the subject, as, for example the theory of contour lines, have been fully developed. Exercises have been placed at the end of each chapter." Pref.

Booklist 40:264 Ap 1 '44

"Excellent text prepared for secondary schools." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 69:205 Mr 1 '44 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:8 Ja '44

Social Studies 35:143 Mr '44 40w

"The material is clearly and suitably written for high school students. Some basic mathematical review work may seem too elementary for secondary students, but if one has tried to teach map reading the inclusion of elementary mathematics is appreciated. If the average student masters fifty per cent of the material presented, he may feel certain that he has a good foundation in elementary map reading. . . This volume is a fine contribution for use in the secondary school and for some of the present armed forces training programs. Its good qualities far outweigh a few typographical errors, use of some non-geographical terms, and maps incorrectly designated as to scale." L. O. Myers

+ — Social Studies 35:237 My '44 480w

Reviewed by James Stokley

Weekly Book Review p19 Ag 13 '44 50w

GREW, JOSEPH CLARK. Ten years in Japan. 554p $3.75 Simon & Schuster

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations—Japan. Japan —Foreign relations—U.S. Japan—Politics and government. World war, 1939—Japan 44-40123

"A contemporary record drawn from the diaries and private and official papers of Joseph C. Grew, United States Ambassador to Japan 1932-1942." (Subtitle) Contains a list of prominent Japanese officials and foreign diplomatic chiefs of mission accredited to Japan; index.

"The volume abounds in bits and chunks of material valuable from innumerable points of view. Much of it is gloomy in outlook; some of it is hopeful; not a little is side-splittingly mirthful; none of it is dull. Many of the statements should be meditated upon during day as well as night watches." H. F. MacNair

+ Am Pol Sci R 38:1018 O '44 800w

Reviewed by Ellery Sedgwick

Atlantic 174:129 Jl '44 700w

" 'Ten Years in Japan' is a great and notable document written by a great American. It answers a great many questions. It answers very definitely the one important question—'Why did Japan attack us?' " Quentin Reynolds

+ Book Week p3 Je 4 '44 800w

Booklist 40:339 Je 1 '44

"It is impossible to exaggerate the importance of 'Ten Years in Japan.' Ambassador Grew has put together, in diary form and from contemporary sources, the full and—so far as he could properly make it—frank account of his long service in Tokio. The result is a public document of immediate usefulness." Ray McPartlin

+ Boston Globe p19 My 17 '44 330w

"A permanently valuable source book." Joseph McSorley

+ Cath World 159:475 Ag '44 270w

Reviewed by T. T. Brumbaugh

Christian Century 61:1137 O 4 '44 1000w

"The record is rich in anecdotes, often most entertaining." R. G.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 My 24 '44 700w

Reviewed by W. F. Sands

Commonweal 40:138 My 26 '44 650w

"The book is not only a contribution to the literature on the war; it is mighty good reading!" Roy Hillbrook

+ Current Hist 7:49 Jl '44 800w

"The long-awaited ten year diary of our Ambassador to Japan bears out the impression given by the abridged material issued last year:—that his was a virtually impossible task of conciliation, not appeasement; that he was rarely blind to what was actually happening, but recurrently hopeful that it might be averted;. that he saw his duty as one of sustaining a ticklish situation, on as nearly an even keel as possible, of interpreting the written word and spirit to a people he understood as different psychologically from his own. . . One finishes with a feeling of respect."

+ Kirkus 12:52 F 1 '44 210w

"Required reading for all Americans. It is a supplement to Report From Tokyo and much longer. Mr. Grew was not infallible. When necessary, he changes his decisions gracefully and with complete integrity. This book is easy to read, rewarding and recommended for general purchase." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 69:402 My 1 '44 80w

"To at least one reviewer this is a profoundly depressing book. Not alone because it forces one to retrace the events of a sorry period, but even more because it will be used to draw a polite veil over a record of which Americans have no reason to be proud. To judge by the encomia of the early reviews, this is happening on an almost universal scale. The few questioning voices that may be raised will have to make themselves heard through a chorus of praise. This is a frightening phenomenon." T. A. Bisson

Nation 158:654 Je 3 '44 1250w

Reviewed by Dorothy Woodman
New Statesman & Nation 28:289 O 28 '44 1200w

"On his own recording of his acts as well as on the official record, Mr. Grew comes off well. No diplomat could have succeeded. Few would have done as well. When the historians come to their mortuary work on the causes of the war in the Pacific, they will have to examine this volume closely, of course. And this can be said with confidence: they will find that America's official representative in Japan, so far from pushing his country's material interest at any cost, fought vigorously and genuinely to keep his country from being plunged into war. And when the verdict is formulated it will be found that he contributed much toward absolving his country of guilt of war. That redounds to the credit of America, and still more, to the credit of Joseph Grew. From the technical diplomatic view, his career ended in defeat. But it was a defeat in which his biographers will find honor." Nathaniel Peffer
+ N Y Times p1 My 14 '44 1300w

"The book holds you sufficiently, it carries you along so steadily on the stream of its even surface, that it is only after you have finished it that you come to reflect how little of the life of a country may be visible to a professional diplomat who has gone straight into the service from college and never known any other occupation. Mr. Grew seems to have observed almost nothing but those elements of the Japanese governing class with which his duties brought him inevitably into contact... The closest you get to the ordinary man is through the letters in bad dictionary English which were sometimes received at the Embassy and which are inserted for comic relief. This is not to say that Mr. Grew does not seem, in his restricted way, a humane and enlightened man. He is friendly and direct and sincere; he is quite free from Metternichian cynicism and scorns the older and more devious school of diplomacy." Edmund Wilson
New Yorker 20:77 Je 3 '44 900w

"His masterly analyses of the Manchurian aggression, the Panay sinking, the 'Chinese incident,' the German-Japanese alliance, and the Russian-Japanese pact clear up many a mystery in the recent history of the Far East. He presents an invaluable interpretation of the Japanese mind, of the un-Occidental psychology behind the evasions and stupidities of Japanese foreign policy, behind the barbarity and treachery of Japan's medieval militarism. But it is Mr. Grew's close-up of the human interest behind Japanese power politics that will charm and fascinate the general reader. 'Ten Years in Japan' is vivid with humorous anecdote, personal experience, incisive portraiture, and the malapropisms of Japanese newspaper English." H. C. Wolfe
+ Sat R of Lit 27:7 My 13 '44 1050w

"As a mine of information, the book can be most highly recommended: those in search of interpretation of Japan must look elsewhere." Peter Black
Spec 173:316 O 6 '44 950w

Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 9 '44 60w

Reviewed by J. P. C. Carey
Survey G 33:469 N '44 320w

Times [London] Lit Sup p462 S 23 '44 2200w

"Mr. Grew's carefully kept diary will long be the source of reference for those who try to determine just how Japan worked herself up to Pearl Harbor. It constitutes an extremely valuable historic document." Rodney Gilbert
+ Weekly Book Review p1 My 14 '44 2400w

"Many reviews of Mr. Grew's book will be written before its interest is exhausted. It is concerned almost entirely with diplomatic and official matters. These, however, were of unusual and tragic importance. Together with the State Department's two massive volumes, it is an indispensable record of the events in Japan which converted the European war of 1939 into a true world war. By long odds it is the most important book on its subject which has yet appeared." Hugh Byas
+ Yale R n s 33:734 summer '44 3500w

GREY, ZANE. Wilderness trek; a novel of Australia. 304p $2.50 Harper 44-5520

"The story of two American cowboys who arrived in Australia in a sailing ship. . . The cowboys hire themselves out to help get an unwieldy herd of cattle to the Kimberleys. On the trek which follows, they encounter floods, aborigines both hostile and friendly, and all the romance and drama of the bush country." (Publisher's note) The book is made from one of the manuscripts, left by the author at his death in 1939.

"I suspect you've got to have a sentimental feeling for Zane Grey that started when you were young. If you haven't, and are over 12, don't try to start now."
— Book Week p6 Jl 9 '44 90w

Kirkus 12:183 Ap 15 '44 80w

Reviewed by Catharine Brody
N Y Times p8 Je 25 '44 650w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p12 Ag 13 '44 50w

GRIFFIN, HAROLD. Alaska and the Canadian Northwest; our new frontier. 221p il $2.75 Norton

917.12 Northwest, Canadian. Alaska—Description and travel 44-2157

Study of the resources and opportunities of Alaska, the "new American frontier," as they have been opened up to us by the building of the new Alaskan highway. Partial contents: Edmonton—air metropolis of the future; Oil from sand; Arctic oil industry; Peace river—it can feed millions; Alaska highway—triumph of American achievement; Whitehorse—new cities from old; Fairbanks—on the road to Asia; Postwar opportunity. Index.

Booklist 40:282 Ap 15 '44

Bookmark 5:12 My '44

Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 20 '44 750w

Commonweal 39:604 Mr 31 '44 140w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:661 Jl '44 10w

"Not a complete coverage of the Alaskan territory—but, within its limits, an excellent foundation book of timely interest."
+ Kirkus 11:569 D 15 '43 200w

"Harold Griffin has produced the first book giving a cogent account of both the Alaska Highway and the Canol project. It is absorbingly written and reasonably reliable." Richard Finnie
+ Nation 158:659 Je 3 '44 450w

Reviewed by R. L. Weaver
New Repub 111:20 Jl 3 '44 150w

"While the book has faults, its author is to be congratulated not only for his vision but also for his grasp of geographical, historical, and economic trends [which] is unusual among exuberant roving newspaper men." E. P. Hanson
+ — N Y Times p5 Mr 5 '44 1250w

Reviewed by Trevor Lloyd
Pacific Affairs 17:361 S '44 210w

"'Alaska and the Canadian Northwest' while fully cognizant of what the airplane has done and will do for the Northwest, still is somewhat more down to earth than previous books about the same subject. Mr Griffin lives on the scene, he has been a part of the changing tempo, and his description of the current status of the Northwest, while definitely a job of reporting with no literary pretensions, has less of the sales talk note than we have been receiving from the new frontier of late." R. F. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p6 Mr 27 '44 500w

"Mr. Griffin's report of Canol is one of the first to appear between the covers of a book. . . Since Canol was considered a military secret,

GRIFFIN, HAROLD—Continued
Mr. Griffin was obviously not permitted to see most of the project. But his report is a good one, and like the rest of the book makes easy reading. Since his book was written, the Canol project has been officially opened. . . Obviously a northern enthusiast, like so many newspapermen who have visited Alaska and the Canadian Northwest since the war, and the statesmen who have been to Siberia, Mr. Griffin visualizes the north as the great frontier of tomorrow, where we can practice as well as preach international co-operation." Ruth Gruber
Weekly Book Review p15 Je 25 '44 650w
Wis Lib Bul 40:68 My '44

GRIFFITH, COLEMAN ROBERTS. Principles of systematic psychology. 718p $4.50 Univ. of Ill.
150.19 Psychology 43-53135

"A book by this title might be expected to be a survey of the leading psychological systems, extinct or extant, or an articulated setting forth of the author's one system to end all systems. Actually it is not either of these and yet is a bit of both. In the first place it is a project based on a faith that 'an orderly pattern of basic points of reference can and must be found which will adequately define the domain of psychological science, identify its indigenous types of data, lay bare the expressed or implied assumptions about the domain, designate the methods to be used, and illuminate the various ways in which resulting facts and generalizations are dynamically related to one another' (p. 9). Midway in this project current psychological systems are to be examined for what they can yield to the quest. Finally, the resulting viewpoint is to be applied in reexaminations of the different conventionally recognized psychological functions." Social Forces

"The fidelity of this portrayal of contemporary opinion in American psychology is guaranteed by Professor Griffith's intimate acquaintance with the literature of systematic discussion. Indeed, the special service he renders is to bring the wealth of scattered exposition within the range of a single volume, thus enabling the reader to gain a comprehensive impression of the psychological drift. And the impression that is conveyed to this reader is that the drift is on the whole negative rather than positive." S. Feldman
+ Am J Psychol 57:596 O '44 1000w

"The style of writing is comparable to Dewey's, with a terminology at times eccentric ('gnomic mind,' 'fractionations,' 'functionally inflected,' etc.), all of which means that the tenor and intent of the subject-matter is not to be grasped by a quick, casual reading. But this survey, containing references to some eight hundred authors, does come to grips with important subject-matter, and will profit the patient reader." V. C. A.
+ — J Philos 41:137 Mr 2 '44 950w

"The elaborateness of thought-trains is reflected in an elaborateness of English style in which the sentences often get involved, and the facility with which one paragraph leads into the next so smoothly that the reader is often quite afield before he realizes the fact. Taken sentence by sentence, or paragraph by paragraph, all is readable and clear; but the lack of summarizing passages, of condensed statements of just what the author's position is, of indeed any clear-cut conclusions, leaves the reader with the feeling that he has been on an interesting and thoughtful excursion, but where is he landed?" J. F. Dashiell
Social Forces 22:354 Mr '44 600w

GRIFFITHS, HAROLD. Mathematics for aircraft engine mechanics. 367p il $2.50 McGraw 629.13435 Airplane engines. Mathematics 44-5692

"Fundamental principles of arithmetic are taught by means of discussions, examples and problems directly related to the work of aircraft mechanics. Incidental information about airplane structure and function accompanies the treatment of mathematics. Answers to the problems are given." (N Y New Tech Bks) Glossary. Index.

Booklist 41:36 O 1 '44
Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:652 Ag '44 50w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:27 Ap '44

GRIGG, SIR EDWARD WILLIAM MACLEAY. British Commonwealth; its place in the service of the world; with an introd. by Lord Halifax. 269p $2.75 Liveright [7s 6d; pa 5s Hutchinson]
354.42 Great Britain—Colonies, dominions, etc. Great Britain—Foreign policy 44-4398

"Explains British Foreign Policy in the past and provides a constructive program for the future. It stresses the relations that post-war Britain should maintain with the free peoples who make up the British Commonwealth, and urges a more intelligent handling among them of foreign problems which concern them and the world alike. . . American criticisms of the working of the British Commonwealth are discussed and answered, including a chapter on India, which is a special case, being by her own choice at this moment a country outside the almost complete autonomy enjoyed by Canada, Australia, South Africa, etc., and the particular difficulties are explained." (Publisher's note). No index.

"This excellent little book will give little comfort to those who are waiting for 'the liquidation of the British Empire.'" E. D. Graper
+ Am Pol Sci R 38:1028 O '44 300w

"Not a book for the uninitiate in government and international affairs, but—for those who have sufficient background to balance his viewpoint with mature judgment, this is a considered, tempered examination of the imperial mission and the problems inherent in building up an Empire system of collective security. The author is a conservative, an imperialist in the better sense."
+ Kirkus 12:37 Ja 15 '44 260w

"This book is a full and interesting survey of the character and problems of the British Empire."
+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 24 '43 230w

"The temptation to debate many of the particular statements in Sir Edward's book is extremely strong, especially his implied views of American affairs, in particular his notion, shared with Professor Carr, that we Americans, like dutiful colonials, still await a British lead in world affairs. But a final observation: books like this one, founded on a point of view definitely oriented around the needs of the United Kingdom, should be balanced by constant reference to views originating in and founded on the needs of the overseas dominions. Only thus can the Commonwealth be seen whole." C. H. Grattan
Nation 159:20 Jl 1 '44 800w
Reviewed by Leonard Barnes
New Statesman & Nation 26:253 O 16 '43 150w

"Sir Edward Grigg resists the logic of his own theme. Many will feel that while he has well and truly laid his bricks of fact and mortar of philosophy, he has built a platform of ideas on which the leaders and thinkers of the Commonwealth will set about rearing still more adventurous structures." L. V. Hodson
+ — Spec 171:244 S 10 '43 1200w
Reviewed by T. P. Peardon
Survey G 33:462 N '44 360w
Times [London] Lit Sup p414 Ag 28 '43 3000w

GRIMES, DAVID. Meet the electron; with pen il. by J. Riegel, jr. 120p $2 Pitman
621.38 Electronics 44-9423

Popular lectures on the electron and its practical application to daily life. Thoroly illustrated in a manner which makes the work available to all types from the executive and electrical engineer to the elementary school student. The author is an American scientist who is at present interested in radar. No index.

"A masterpiece of simplicity and charm, spiced with clever illustrations by J. Riegel Jr. which are unparalleled in making a difficult subject easy. This is an author's dream, something the high school student, the housewife and the alert layman in general needs and wants—the ABC's of a new branch of science. Even the expert will enjoy its refreshing style. . . The book is not always rigorous, calling voltage 'pressure,' and speaking of the ether in pre-Einsteinian terms. Without these simplifications, however, the work would be too long and difficult. Here is something different. You can read it in one sitting with never a dull moment." Rufus Oldenburger

+ Book Week p8 O 29 '44 310w

Booklist 41:103 D 1 '44

Library J 69:1002 N 15 '44 30w

GRIMM, JAKOB LUDWIG KARL, and GRIMM, WILHELM KARL. Fairy tales, complete edition; with 212 illustrations by Josef Scharl. 864p $7.50 Pantheon bks

398.2 Fairy tales 44-40373

Complete edition of the tales of the Brothers Grimm, illustrated by an exiled painter from Munich, Joseph Scharl. "Based on the translation by Margaret Hunt revised, corrected and completed by James Stern." (verso of title page)

"Don't pollute your home with Grimm this Christmas. The news commentators on the radio will bring reports of enough German Schrecklichkeit." Sterling North

— Book Week p12 D 3 '44 1050w

"This new, complete, and lovely Grimm should be in every school, that the teacher may learn anew the magic art of story-telling. It should be in every home to 'set the rhythm of night' as Padriac Colum puts it in his eloquent introduction." B. J. Thompson

+ Cath World 160:376 Ja '45 380w

"The whole book is such an admirable specimen of careful editing, excellent printing and genuine quality that I cannot recommend it too heartily."

+ Commonweal 41:256 D 22 '44 210w

"This book will be welcome news to those who bemoan the going out of print for the duration of the standard complete Grimm—for here is another, also complete, in excellent translation and attractive format. The price is steep, but if a complete Grimm is wanted, and it is essential for all public library collections—this is good value. A beautiful piece of bookmaking."

+ Kirkus 12:519 N 15 '44 170w

"Boys and girls who are lovers of fairy tales and, also (to quote the children) of 'fat' books would take this complete Grimm completely to their hearts. Too expensive, of course, for general library circulation." J. D. Lindquist

+ Library J 70:70 Ja 15 '45 70w

"Because of this book, the bitter end of this bitter year will leave a residual drop of sweetness for children and grown-ups. For, make no mistake, the fairy tales are not to be thought of simply as diversions for children. . . I know of no book more needed at the present time than this new edition of Grimm's; none better calculated to make us look at the face of things as they are. There is death and illusion in the world about us but here we may come to our real selves and wrestle with the angel and not loose him till he blesses. We all, no matter how we deny it, long to turn wishing into will and to find the way to the inner land known as Happy Ever After. Here, then, is the key to that kingdom." P. L. Travers

+ New Repub 111:873 D 25 '44 1700w

"It will be a mistake if this volume is merely bought as a Christmas present for a child; it should be, first and foremost, an educational 'must' for adults, married or single, for the reader who has once come to know and love these tales will never be able again to endure the insipid rubbish of contemporary entertainment." W. H. Auden

+ N Y Times p1 N 12 '44 1400w

"It is the perfect Grimm from which to read aloud to children the well-loved tales. There is an introduction by Padriac Colum and a scholarly appendix by Joseph Campbell."

+ New Yorker 20:83 D 16 '44 90w

Sat R of Lit 27:33 D 9 '44 600w

"The great green Grimm of my childhood with Victorian woodcuts has been—up to now—the standard by which I unconsciously measured all subsequent editions and found them somewhat wanting. Now comes the Pantheon Books masterpiece to take the place, at first sight, of that first favorite, and on continued reading to make a place for itself all its own. It suits me now even better than my original love, and I am now much harder to suit. . . This is of course a collector's item, but should every copy go behind glass doors into a collection of fine printing it would be as tragic as one of those collections of Amati violins locked up and never played upon. This precious book should be within the reach of children who have washed their hands carefully on purpose." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 N 19 '44 700w

GRIMM, JAKOB LUDWIG KARL, and GRIMM, WILHELM KARL. Hansel and Gretel; a story of the forest; music by Engelbert Humperdinck and il. by Warren Chappell. [32p] $2 Knopf

398.2 Fairy tales 44-9580

A newly illustrated edition of a famous old fairy tale. Some of the music from Humperdinck's opera is given in a simple arrangement for piano.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p11 D 17 '44 110w

Booklist 41:127 D 15 '44

Horn Bk 20:471 N '44 40w

Kirkus 12:427 S 15 '44 60w

"Recommended for larger book collections." A. M. Wetherell

+ Library J 70:36 Ja 1 '45 70w

"A gift of enduring value to the whole family."

+ Sat R of Lit 27:47 N 11 '44 30w

Weekly Book Review p7 N 12 '44 200w

GRONOWICZ, ANTONI. Four from the old town; tr. from the Polish by Joseph Vetter; il. by Dwight Logan. 149p $2 Scribner

44-8098

"Four friends from the high school in Lwow have varying experiences when the city is conquered by the Nazis. One of them dies heroically to avenge the family, and the others join the underground and help to free their city." N Y Times

---

Commonweal 41:256 D 22 '44 20w

Horn Bk 20:492 N '44 90w

Kirkus 12:434 S 15 '44 110w

Reviewed by Gertrude Andrus

Library J 69:887 O 15 '44 70w

"The story is loosely constructed, with less feeling of reality than news accounts have given us. The truth of the Polish tragedy is not shown here." M. F.

N Y Times p8 N 12 '44 60w

Springf'd Republican p4d N 22 '44 110w

"Action is far more violent in this absorbing story than we have been finding in books for the teens about our allies in the Second World War. . . If we are to tell our young folks the truth about Poland in this war, it cannot be done without strong measures. Antoni Gronowicz, graduate of the University of Lwow, keeps his story within the facts and his emotions under control; the record is there, and it quickens breath with its bravery."

+ Weekly Book Review p36 N 12 '44 400w

GROOM, A. J. PELHAM. Mohune's nine lives [Eng title: What are your angels now?] 326p $2 Liveright [8s 6d Jarrolds]

A British flyer, forced down in enemy territory, escapes from the Gestapo, and gets to England with the news of a Nazi invasion.

"Peter Etcetera Mohune is a hero who might have made even the great d'Artagnan look to his laurels." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p10 Mr 5 '44 180w

"All out melodrama, with Peter Mohune (pronounced Moon) slugging, shooting, and stabbing way out of perilous fixes. Air stuff is good. Thriller."

+ Sat R of Lit 27:30 F 12 '44 40w

"A parody on super-thriller spy stories which should end all such extravaganzas. . . While the reader can never be quite certain when Mr Groom is serious or spoofing, he'll have few dull moments in this spy-adventure tale." M. L. H.

Springf'd Republican p7e F 27 '44 280w

"Mr. Groom employs R. A. F. terminology and routine to good effect. He's a former squadron leader himself. . . The yarn offers real spinal chills and a nice line of espionage interest throughout." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p12 F 13 '44 140w

GROSS, FRED LOUIS. What is the verdict? 311p $2.50 Macmillan

44-9959

A New York lawyer, a former president of the New York state bar association, attempts to explain some of the vagaries of the law in these hypothetical cases. Each case has good legal precedent.

"Young lawyers will read the book with profit. Older heads will smile a little as they read." F. L. P.

Christian Science Monitor p14 D 11 '44 300w

"Mr. Gross is clearly a lawyer who loves his profession and this affection radiates warmly from every page of his book. There is also an engaging humor that expalins why Mr. Gross's after-dinner oratory has been in demand. The result is a pleasant, entertaining book." Newman Levy

+ Weekly Book Review p12 Ja 21 '45 800w

GROSSMAN, VASILII. No beautiful nights [tr. from the Russian by Elizabeth Donnelly] [Eng title: People immortal; a novel of the Red army in action]. 223p $2.50 Messner [7s 6d Hutchinson]

44-5521

A novel based on the experiences of a unit of the Red Army during the retreat thru White Russia and the Ukraine in the autumn of 1941.

"Next to Wanda Wasilewska's 'The Rainbow,' this is the favorite current novel of the Russian Army. You can take it as a very interesting and human story of men under stress. Or you can read it as a profound portrayal of how the Red Army was seasoned by the setbacks of the early days of the German invasion. Behind this well-told story are hints that when the war is over the whole Soviet people will possess a new self-confidence and power." William Card

+ Book Week p2 Jl 2 '44 320w

Kirkus 12:150 Ap 1 '44 130w

"Mr. Grossman writes simply and directly, his dialogue is racy, and there are some excellent descriptions of landscape." Charles Marriott

+ Manchester Guardian p3 D 10 '43 150w

Reviewed by Marianne Hauser

N Y Times p12 Jl 16 '44 330w

"The book, which starts off with a warm, human picture of the locality just before the Germans arrive, soon sprawls out into a too diffuse narrative of battle and soldiers. No honest account of the fighting in Russia can be wholly uninteresting, but there will be more moving as well as more important chronicles than this one."

+ — New Yorker 20:77 Je 10 '44 90w

"Although it is a very manly story, full of movement and dealing professionally and clearly with military events, there is—I suppose inevitably—a ring of righteousness about it which a little mars its quality as narrative, the rhetoric, hot and honest in praise of personal integrity and valour, running over sometimes into preachings and generalised apostrophies which are out of place. But the book is true at its heart, and it celebrates Russia and Russian soldiers with vitality, and out of knowledge of war conditions." Kate O'Brien

+ — Spec 171:604 D 24 '43 340w

"The very simplicity of 'No Beautiful Nights' makes it a tensely moving document, not a picture of communist selflessness, but a vibrant account of men grimly determined to hold their land against the enemy." L. S. Munn

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Je 18 '44 650w

"The author is a novelist of fine and humane power, a much more gifted writer, one feels, than others who have won an authoritative salute since the start of the great patriotic war, and 'The People Immortal' is an enlightening and sincerely eloquent novel. And this in spite of the obligatory deference to the needs of patriotic and Party propaganda."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p5 Ja 1 '44 900w

" 'No Beautiful Nights' suffers from a certain disconnectedness—it's not always easy, for instance, to keep track of the various detachments deployed in the forest behind the German lines. But its sincerity and authenticity are certain to make the reader feel that he knows the Russian soldier a good deal better than he did before." Herbert Kupferberg

+ — Weekly Book Review p6 Jl 2 '44 750w

GROVES, ERNEST RUTHERFORD. The American woman; the feminine side of a masculine civilization. rev & enl ed 465p $3.50 Emerson

396.0973 Women in the U.S. Woman—Social and moral questions 44-2372

"Some new material has been added, chiefly on changes in woman's status during wartime." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1937. Index.

"Women have a right to be proud of the facts Mr. Groves has assembled, and no one would question either their validity or the author's sincere attempt to point the way to a still more equitable distribution between the sexes of rewards and satisfactions. But the problem is far from being as simple as Mr. Groves would have us believe, and the omission of other facts and trends obscures the depth of confusion which exists today in our feminine role. . . Interesting and rich in detail as the book is—and, indeed, it is both these and much more—it is lacking in a real sense of problem, that prime necessity of all scientific work. . . Yet the book as a whole remains a historical and descriptive treatment of many variables at many times and in many places. Conceptually weak, it fails more often than it succeeds in producing penetrating analyses of this many-sided problem." F. R. Kluckhohn

— + Am J Soc 50:232 N 13 '44 1300w

"The student of 'the social forces' of American social history, or of the history of the American family, will highly appreciate Groves' up-to-the-minute revision and enlargement of his treatise of two years ago. The book embodies the results of painstaking and comprehensive research, and amounts to an almost encyclopedic record of the process by which woman in this country has come as close as she has to equality with man." A. W. Calhoun

+ Am Soc R 9:442 Ag '44 350w

Booklist 40:255 Mr 15 '44

"Dr. Groves' keen insight is reflected not only through his selection of historical events but also through his analyses of the relationships between these events and the various beliefs, feelings, customs, and cultural patterns which have influenced American women. This edition is a valuable, up-to-date record of the American woman's progress." Vera Brandon

+ J Home Econ 36:298 My '44 150w

"In the American Woman Ernest Groves has done a difficult job with courage. . . From the eminence of long experience and wide scholarship he looks back over the way that women have come, to the place where they now are, and through his carefully delineated trends we shall be guided in the way to go forward. The content of the book will be familiar to the student of American history, but it is freshly organized around a lively issue. Its concern is not with Women, however brilliant as individuals, but with Woman, as social partner, as guardian of cultural values, as economic competitor." Gertrude Laws
+ Social Forces 23:109 O '44 1050w

GROVES, ERNEST RUTHERFORD. Conserving marriage and the family; a realistic discussion of the divorce problem. 138p $1.75 Macmillan

173.1 Divorce 44-7785

"The purpose of this book is to help perplexed wives and husbands, who must decide to get or not to get a divorce, to think their problem through and make an intelligent decision." (Pref) The book is written from the point of view of a "domestic counselor", the one who, the author feels, is more likely to be impartial in his advice than a friend, relative, or divorce lawyer.

Booklist 41:71 N 1 '44

Christian Century 61:1231 O 25 '44 90w

Reviewed by R. L. Hightower
Crozer Q 22:88 Ja '45 400w

Kirkus 12:364 Ag 15 '44 130w

"Recommended for any library feeling need of such a book." G. O. Kelley
+ Library J 69:882 O 15 '44 110w

"Here is a book for everybody interested in and concerned with the conservation of marriage and the family. Every social worker, every minister, as well as every marriage counselor—in fact, everyone from whom advice in domestic problems may be sought—should not only be familiar with Conserving Marriage and the Family, but should have it accessible to hand to those who come seeking counsel." Katharine Jocher
+ Social Forces 23:230 D '44 450w

Weekly Book Review p12 O 22 '44 180w

Wis Lib Bul 40:156 D '44

GROVES, HAROLD MARTIN. Production, jobs and taxes. 116p $1.25 McGraw

336.291 Taxation—U.S. Industry and state 44-5484

An attempt to show how the federal tax system should be revised in the postwar period to encourage risk-taking by private business, the object being to expand production and provide a high level of employment. The author is professor of economics at the University of Wisconsin. Index.

Reviewed by D. T. Smith
Am Econ R 34:912 D '44 2000w

Reviewed by Paul Haensel
Ann Am Acad 236:204 N '44 400w

Booklist 41:146 Ja 15 '45

Current Hist 7:134 Ag '44 60w

Reviewed by E. N. Griswold
Harvard Law R 57:927 Jl '44 2000w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:652 Ag '44 40w

"Those who accept Professor Groves's assumptions will regard his program as on the whole well-balanced and sensible, and will quarrel only over its details. Some of his suggestions seem rather intricate and difficult to administer, as he himself admits. But equity, in the field of taxation, often conflicts with simplicity, and compromise is the only way out." G. R. Walker
Nation 159:107 Jl 22 '44 850w

Reviewed by B. B. Seligman
New Repub 111:379 S 25 '44 160w

Reviewed by Jacob Viner
N Y Times p5 S 17 '44 600w

"Professor Groves's little book is challenging and is well worth reading. Many of his conclusions were accepted for adoption in the tax program of the Research Committee of the Committee for Economic Development. On a subject so controversial and so complex as post-war federal taxation, complete agreement is not to be expected among tax students, and the reader may find himself differing with the author at numerous points. Professor Groves, however, has rendered a valuable service in stating his conclusions and the arguments for them, and the reader will find that the volume will help him clarify much of his thinking on needed tax reforms." A. G. Buehler
+ Pol Sci Q 59:628 D '44 950w

"Prof Groves's recommendations are not new—most of them have been made many times before. They are most significant, however, because they are put forward by an outstanding tax expert and are supported in the main by a distinguished group of business leaders (the CED) and economists (the research advisory board of CED). . . The book is hardly more than an outline in many places, with insufficient background material to aid the general reader in understanding the tax proposal. It would be much more valuable for the lay reader and the majority of businessmen if a greater effort had been made to explain the recommendations. On the whole, however, the report is a significant contribution toward the attainment of full employment in postwar America." J. J. O'Leary
+ — Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 16 '44 450w

Wis Lib Bul 40:125 O '44

GRUBER, RUTH. I went to the Soviet Arctic; with a pref. by Vilhjalmur Stefansson. rev ed 285p il $3.50 Viking

919.8 Russia—Description and travel. Arctic regions. Women in Russia 44-8596

New edition of a book first published in 1939 (Book Review Digest, 1939). This edition contains two new chapters on the Arctic at War, and Neighbors Across the Arctic. New photographs. Glossary of words and phrases, names of people and places. Index.

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Book Week p10 O 29 '44 430w

Booklist 41:92 N 15 '44

Commonweal 41:22 O 20 '44 20w

Springf'd Republican p4d D 17 '44 460w

GUERARD, ALBERT JOSEPH. Hunted. 288p $2.50 Knopf

44-788

Psychological novel in which a charming girl from a state home marries a young Englishman, professor at a New England college. John attempts to hide the fact that his wife had questionable antecedents; Claire does her best to live up to John. A small time criminal, called the Bomber, is taken up by some of the college boys, is put in jail, and then escapes. The chase and capture of the Bomber shows Claire that she too is the hunted, and clears the way for a new life for her.

"Those parts of his book born in his own academic background are the best sections of Albert Guerard's novel. He writes with competence and rare insight into psychological struggle. In a better disciplined, better executed novel, his Claire Harcha would be one of the truly memorable characters of modern fiction." Ralph Peterson
+ — Book Week p5 F 13 '44 330w

Kirkus 12:23 Ja 15 '44 160w

"Mr. Guerard's man-hunt overstates his girl-hunt, and the girl-hunt reduces the pure terror of his man-hunt. The doubling of motifs, that is, works out to weaken the impact of each of them. It is also a weakness of Mr. Guerard's book that, for all the author's obvious sympathetic interest in people, its leading characters turn out not to be finally very interesting." Diana Trilling

GUERARD, A. J.—Continued
Nation 158:286 Mr 4 '44 500w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley
New Repub 110:352 Mr 13 '44 500w

"Original and brilliantly written study of evil. That evil here is conceived in the most trivial human terms rather than in the grand, tragic terms of great works inevitably reduces the scope of the novel but hardly its edge." Ruth Page
+ — N Y Times p3 F 13 '44 1000w

"Mr. Guerard writes sound, literate prose, but he is no hand at characterization and its situations seem rather contrived."
+ — New Yorker 20:86 F 19 '44 90w

"Private Guerard, in spite of being an instructor in English at Harvard in civilian life, can write a powerful scene and it is no small tour de force to produce these things and convincing characters on a background of inherent improbabilities. One of the most troublesome of these improbabilities is the college itself. There may be colleges where the professors customarily keep a bottle on the mantel and a blonde on the hearth for the entertainment of their students, but in this reviewer's student and teaching years such diversions were parsimoniously denied us. 'The Hunted' is magnificently written but it is a little too Beautiful and Bedamned." Phil Stong
— + Sat R of Lit 27:21 Mr 11 '44 400w

"'The Hunted' is not a book to bolster up one's faith in human nature, though Claire and a few others stood the test. It is an original and disturbing story which is likely to hold the attention of even those who deny it most angrily." Mary Ross
Weekly Book Review p2 F 13 '44 700w

Reviewed by Orville Prescott
Yale R n s 33:xii spring '44 200w

GUMPERT, MARTIN. You are younger than you think. 244p $2.75 Duell

612.67 Old age SG44-241

A book on old age written by a physician in popular language suitable for the layman. The book is divided into several parts dealing with the biology of old age, normal old age, social problems, and an appendix which treats of specific problems and diseases of old age. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Leonard Bullen
Book Week p4 Ag 27 '44 450w
Booklist 41:55 O 15 '44

"Semi-popular, reassuring material which should appeal to many."
+ Kirkus 12:246 Je 1 '44 110w

"In this excellent little book Dr. Gumpert discusses the nature and problems of aging in a manner both sound and engaging. He somehow manages to convey an enormous amount of information which will be as illuminating and helpful to his readers as it is encouraging." M. F. A. Montagu
+ N Y Times p22 Ag 20 '44 240w

"Under this slightly frivolous title, Dr. Gumpert has written a completely sober and most timely consideration of old age, its symptoms and diseases, its control and the prolongation of life. There have been scientific treatises on longevity and geriatrics, but here is a book for the ordinary individual. As we all grow old from birth, it is safe to say that no other subject could have quite such universal interest."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 15:2 S '44 420w

"Sensible, sound and firmly reassuring, this study of the process of aging is as far as possible from the pep talks usually given to people when they begin to notice that women as well as men get up and give them their seats in the subway. The report by an expert, based on long study and great experience, faces squarely up to the facts of old age and talks as directly as a good doctor does."
+ Weekly Book Review p22 O 1 '44 300w

GUNN, NEIL MILLER. Man goes alone [Eng title: The serpent]. 255p $2.50 Stewart [8s 6d Faber]

44-5773

The scene is a mountain district of Scotland. An old man, called by his neighbors The Philosopher, is having one last climb in his mountains. As he climbs, he finds he must pause to rest, and in his resting periods he reviews his own life. By the time death claims The Philosopher, his whole life is spread out before us.

"There is a Halloween party that's a humdinger. Otherwise it is definitely only for those who like a rarified and mystical atmosphere." F. W. M.
Book Week p10 My 28 '44 70w
Bookmark 5:18 My '44

"Save for one melodramatic incident, this is not a novel of action, but of mental questing, of rebellion and adjustment, told with mellow sympathy."
+ Kirkus 12:223 My 15 '44 170w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott
Manchester Guardian p3 Je 25 '44 110w

"Mr. Gunn is not masterful enough to do full justice to his crucial theme of the reconciliation of intellectual necessity with individual need. Although one does not feel that, as an author, he has assimilated the achievements of the modern novel, yet he has produced a sensitive exploration of the conflicts of personality in flux that have been the subject matter of the better modern English novelists." William Poster
+ — New Repub 111:85 Jl 17 '44 300w

"The book has a few spellbinding moments when the author skirts the supernatural, using symbols that are so universal that even a sophisticated reader would feel a stirring of uneasiness. . . As far as this reader is concerned, the author deserves a vote of thanks for his craftsmanship in conveying so well the local speech and mores of his characters without resorting to dialect. But to a generation reared on fiction saturated with protest against bigotry, 'Man Goes Alone,' with its feeble and diffused plea for tolerance, is a little like wartime whisky—a recognizable flavor watered down, until only the peaty flavor, and little of the bite, remains." Eunice Holsaert
+ — N Y Times p6 Je 18 '44 320w

"This author has the great merit of knowing passionately and imaginatively the beautiful, remote region that he writes of, and many will find a legitimate and helpful escape from our present weary, ugly time in his evocation of natural beauty, and in the matured, gentle thoughts of a detached and sensitive old man, remembering the passions and mistakes of a long life." Kate O'Brien
+ Spec 170:660 Je 25 '43 90w

"It has a homely story, for it is a story of homely folk, but it brings out sharply the passions, the strong emotions which often lie deep in such people. In that respect it reminds one of Emily Bronte's 'Wuthering Heights.'" M. D.
Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 2 '44 550w

"The meditative strain of this somewhat bare story has its graces as well as a taking quietness and ease. Here and there, too, Mr. Gunn unfolds vividly, as he has done before, the commonplaces of the crofter's way of life a couple of generations ago. But he has not fused the various retrospective and cogitative elements of the tale into any sort of significant unity. What he can do in a no less familiar but more deeply considered vein of storytelling is shown in the economical and very moving little scene between Tom and his mother a few days before her death, when after he has been reading Hume, he reads the Bible aloud to her."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p281 Je 12 '43 420w

"The reader of 'Man Goes Alone' will find a sensitive, probing exploration of human relationships in a narrative that unfolds against a background of vividly described natural beauty." William Poster
+ Weekly Book Review p6 My 21 '44 600w

GUNNISON, ROYAL ARCH. So sorry, no peace. 272p $3 Viking

940.547252 World war, 1939—Prisoners and prisons, Japanese. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American. World war, 1939—Philippine islands 44-8595

"First in Manila and then in Shanghai, Mr. Gunnison and his wife lived for twenty-two months in Japanese internment camps. This is the story of their experience, told partly in diary form and partly from memory. The story covers the period from January, 1941, to their return to New York on the Gripsholm in the autumn of 1943, but by far the larger part of it is devoted to their internment, together with some thousands of other Americans, at Santo Tomas in the Philippines and in the Chapei district of Shanghai." Weekly Book Review

"This book encompasses a considerable range of personal experience and political analysis. It deserves to have a large audience of thoughtful readers." W. F. Morse
+ Book Week p3 O 22 '44 300w

Booklist 41:87 N 15 '44

"An exciting, depressing, but extremely informative record." R. G.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 O 13 '44 650w

"A stirring indictment."
+ Kirkus 12:365 Ag 15 '44 130w

"No previous account has given in such meticulous detail, or with equal readability, the story of the life of civilians in Japanese internment camps. . . A few of the points in Gunnison's conclusions, outlining policy toward Japan, are questionable. . . But his concluding chapters are worth reading for their generally realistic and logically hard-boiled views, based on first-hand dealings with the Japanese." T. A. Bisson
+ — Nation 159:622 N 18 '44 450w

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin
+ N Y Times p4 O 8 '44 480w

"The story of internment by the Japanese has been told before, but probably not with such thoroughness, for Mr. Gunnison was a member of the prisoners' committee in both camps and had daily dealings with Jap officials. His most interesting chapters give some insight into the mentality that can plan with a watchmaker's precision to make life in a prison camp as nasty and undignified as possible and then draft a list of rules with a preamble beginning, 'This is your home. It must be loved and cherished. . .' "
+ New Yorker 20:82 O 7 '44 140w

Reviewed by Frederick Rein
Springf'd Republican p4d O 29 '44 650w

Reviewed by Joseph Barnes
Weekly Book Review p5 O 8 '44 1150w

GUNTHER, FRANCES (FINEMAN) (MRS JOHN GUNTHER). Revolution in India. 122p $2; pa $1 Island workshop

954 India—Politics and government 44-5572

"Author's visit to India in 1938 during a 'brief interlude when the leaders of the Indian International Congress were not in jail' gave her much first-hand information for this explosive tract whose theme is independence of India in which she passionately believes. Beginning with attack on English foreign policy and English imperialism, author examines and rejects many familiar arguments against a free India, and warns that United Nations will eventually, if they do not already, face the whole complex problem." Library J

Foreign Affairs 23:15 O '44 20w

"Mrs. John Gunther speaks out bluntly, in an impassioned plea for Indian independence. Its value is somewhat counterbalanced by its violence of denunciation of British misrule; and weakened by a flippant, smart-alecky style."
+ — Kirkus 12:158 Ap 1 '44 130w

"Recommended." F. A. Boyle
+ Library J 69:202 Mr 1 '44 80w

Reviewed by T. A. Bisson
Nation 159:160 Ag 5 '44 150w

Reviewed by Malcolm Pitt
Pacific Affairs 17:499 D '44 150w

" 'Revolution in India' is a rather disjointed denunciation of British imperialism in India. In the preface the author asserts that the line she has taken is pro-Free India and not necessarily anti-English. But Mrs. Gunther's indignation when she contemplates the spectacle of the British in India is of such an intensity that it stimulates even those who fundamentally agree with her to try to muster arguments on the other side." Virginia Thompson
— + Weekly Book Review p12 Jl 23 '44 500w

GUNTHER, JOHN. D day. 276p $3 Harper

940.542 World war, 1939—Mediterranean sea. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American 44-2473

In diary form the author reports his part in sending the news about the Allied landing in Sicily, and his trip to the Near East in the summer of 1943. He includes his impressions of Eisenhower, Montgomery, Alexander, and Tedder, and other high ranking officers, and his own experiences en route.

Reviewed by Quentin Reynolds
Book Week p3 Mr 26 '44 750w

Booklist 40:267 Ap 1 '44

Bookmark 5:12 My '44

"The story is dashing and vivid. The reader feels he is at the scene, witnessing the multi-colored, star-spangled display of pyrotechnics characterizing a night air battle over Malta; on the Catanian battlefield with the men in the shell hole, with the artillery barrage screaming overhead and crashing into the woods. . . Perhaps the greatest weakness of 'D-Day' is that it lacks basic unity. It is potpourri." D. H. J.
+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 My 13 '44 270w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:659 Jl '44 40w

"John Gunther is still unspoiled by success. He still writes with a modesty, almost a naivete, that is very winning. And the result is very enlightening for the average layman, for he does not assume too much knowledge, and gives his readers a sense of discovery at the same time he is discovering for himself. . . Good reading—provocative. Despite the fact that it is not particularly newsworthy, I liked it immensely."
+ Kirkus 12:86 F 15 '44 240w

"Makes pleasant and easy reading, will have wide appeal." H. H. A. Bernt
+ Library J 69:202 Mr 1 '44 70w

Manchester Guardian p3 Je 28 '44 300w

Reviewed by Marcus Duffield
Nation 158:340 Mr 18 '44 300w

"A real difficulty of the personal record is that it tempts the author into setting down his disconnected observations on one subject after another. But unity can be imposed on the book through the mere fact of residence in a certain place during a definite period of time: this is a saving feature of 'Berlin Diary' and 'Twelve Months That Changed the World,' not to mention a dozen similar volumes. 'D-Day,' however, is like a picture without a frame. . . The journey wasn't planned in advance, and it makes the book seem a little aimless. And there is another weakness in this personal narrative. John Gunther is one of the best reporters we have, with a tremendous curiosity about how things work and a tremendous liking for people. They like him in return, and even the commanding generals talk frankly to him, knowing that he won't betray their confidence. He has become, for my taste, a shade too discreet; but he has the good reporter's gift for making everything that happens around him seem interesting." Malcolm Cowley
+ — New Repub 110:383 Mr 20 '44 650w

"Mr. Gunther felt an irresistible urge to write a simple, personal, concrete record of what he saw. The best parts of this book stem from that determination. Unfortunately, Mr.

GUNTHER, JOHN—Continued
Gunther has padded the book considerably with what other persons, mostly fellow-correspondents, told him as he made a quick swing through the Middle East. . . Far too much of it is devoted to telling in which bar he had a drink with old Bill So-and-So. . . So much auld lang syne is of very doubtful interest to anyone but the individuals named and their friends. It detracts from a book that compares, in other respects, with its author's best." F. S. Adams
+ — N Y Times p7 Mr 12 '44 850w

New Yorker 20:94 Mr 18 '44 180w

"What Mr. Gunther saw he records honestly, vividly, and humanly. . . Out of his close association with General Eisenhower Mr. Gunther has drawn a memorable portrait of the Allied Commander-in-Chief. . . This colorful little diary is valuable as an ace reporter's account of the embattled Mediterranean in the summer of 1943. One of its most significant observations is an ancient one: 'The worst thing about war is that so many men like it.'" H. C. Wolfe
+ Sat R of Lit 27:11 Mr 11 '44 1000w

Reviewed by P. D. Pool
Spec 173:64 Jl 21 '44 430w

Reviewed by Alzada Comstock
Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 19 '44 850w

"Mr. Gunther has hitherto been known for his 'Inside Europe' and other books of a similar type. 'D Day' is a piece of straight reportage (as the Americans call it). As such alone it is an outstanding feat of close observation and accurate recording, and on this account calls for the highest praise."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p280 Je 10 '44 1000w

"'D Day' is not a wholly satisfactory title for Mr. Gunther's book, for it implies a comprehensive, unified account of the preparations for and execution of a large-scale invasion such as the descent upon Sicily. Actually, this is a small part of the book; only a few facets of the D Day story could be told now, even if Mr. Gunther knew them all. What he has done instead is to present a vivid and discerning ten-week war travelogue of the Mediterranean war theater as a whole." Marcus Duffield
+ Weekly Book Review p3 Mr 12 '44 1500w

Wis Lib Bul 40:68 My '44

"John Gunther's account of a trip through the Mediterranean and the Middle East, is interesting with certain reservations. First of all, there is too much space devoted to the mechanics of a war correspondent's job—writing copy, filing stories, struggling with censors. Secondly, Mr. Gunther mentions too many important people who contribute little or nothing to the book except their important names. On the credit side are two fine descriptions of transatlantic plane flights. . . There are also good passages on Malta and Sicily." F. W. Bronson
+ — Yale R n s 33:760 summer '44 100w

GUSTAFSON, AXEL FERDINAND, and others. Conservation in the United States. 2d ed 477p il $4 Comstock pub. co.

333.0973 Conservation of resources. U.S.—Economic conditions 44-5015

"A comprehensive treatment for students and others interested in the wise use of the nation's waters, soils, forests, grasslands, wildlife, and minerals, and in the ways in which they can be safeguarded or renewed. The section on forest conservation has been expanded several pages, and elsewhere throughout the text, additions have been made to incorporate new information and practises developed since the previous edition (1939). An extensive bibliography has also been brought up-to-date by the inclusion of more than forty new titles. The authors are members of the faculty of Cornell University [For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1939]." (N Y New Tech Bks) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 41:92 N 15 '44

N Y New Tech Bks 29:42 Jl '44

GUSTAFSON, RALPH. Flight into darkness; poems. 96p $2 Pantheon bks.

811 44-47939

"Ralph Gustafson of New York is a young Canadian poet. . . This beautiful Pantheon book brings together all Gustafson's original poems to date. Unlike the work of his distinguished countrymen, E. J. Pratt, A. J. M. Smith, A. M. Klein and Dorothy Livesay, it does not suggest any especial Canadian consciousness. Gustafson's literary ancestors are Gerard Manley Hopkins and the remote authors of what has come down to us as Anglo-Saxon verse." Book Week

---

"A poet's poet, Ralph Gustafson will be slow to find a popular audience for his delicate and subtle verses. My own taste runs to those poems of his which require neither glossary nor dictionary of classical and personal references." Leo Kennedy
+ Book Week p6 D 24 '44 250w

"Mr. Gustafson, in spite of much that is wordy and derivative, has revealed poetic powers that are quite exceptional." Alan Creighton
+ — Canadian Forum 24:216 D '44 280w

Reviewed by Vivienne Koch
Weekly Book Review p12 Ja 7 '45 700w

GUSTAFSON, RALPH, ed. Little anthology of Canadian poets. (Poets of the year) [31p] $1; pa 50c New directions

811.08 Canadian poetry—Collections 44-4243

"A very brief sampler of contemporary Canadian poetry. The thirty-two page pamphlet contains twenty-four poems by fifteen authors, and is something of a supplement to Gustafson's 1942 Anthology of Canadian Poetry. . . Five of the poems in the Little Anthology and all of the poets—with the exception of the two youngest, Kay Smith and Raymond Souster—appear in The Book of Canadian Poetry [ed. by A. J. M. Smith, Book Review Digest, 1943]." Poetry

---

Canadian Forum 23:263 F '44 100w

"For the reader who wants primarily information about Canadian poets and their work, the Penguin Books anthology, also edited by Mr. Gustafson, is a better buy; but for a book to keep on the shelves, pleasant if not too exciting, this anthology is attractively made and reasonably priced."
New Repub 110:689 My 15 '44 120w

"An interesting selection from modern Canadian verse."
+ New Yorker 20:99 Mr 25 '44 90w

Reviewed by Coleman Rosenberger
Poetry 63:286 F '44 120w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Drew
Weekly Book Review p11 Mr 5 '44 270w

GYORGY, ANDREW. Geopolitics; the new German science. 303p pa $1.50 Univ. of Calif.

320.1 Geopolitics A44-980

"Geopolitics is no longer what it was cracked up to be by its German publicity agents and the horribles simplificateurs everywhere who minister to the intellectual fadism of our age. It can now be calmly examined for what it is. This is precisely the task Dr. Gyorgy has set himself. The result is a historian's impartial analysis of a system of political thought which is neither sensational nor simple. . . An important part of the study is given over to the discussion of those writers whom the German geopolitical writers themselves recognize as their precursors." Ann Am Acad

---

Reviewed by R. H. Wells
Am Pol Sci R 38:1233 D '44 450w

"Dr. Gyorgy's expert study attempts no synthesis—which does not detract from its value. It is definite; besides it may serve as a check list of itinerant ideas." Robert Strausz-Hupé
+ Ann Am Acad 235:146 S '44 600w
Foreign Affairs 23:4 O '44 30w

H

H. D. See Doolittle, H.

HAAS, ROSAMOND. Delay is the song. ltd ed 56p $2 Dutton
811 44-675

Collection of verse by a young American poet. The book won the Avery Hopwood poetry award for 1942-43.

"This young poet shows a rare musical quality in this collection. Recommended." E. H. Crowell
+ Library J 69:158 F 15 '44 40w

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries
+ — N Y Times p24 Ap 23 '44 80w

Reviewed by Marian Castleman
Poetry 64:234 Jl '44 120w

"Miss Haas' lyrics are stiff, contrived, marred by conventional literary mannerisms. A few—'Bomb Shelter,' 'Blackout Lullaby'—indicate contemporary awareness, but the form blurs the intention. It is a book of 'practice' poems, promising and pleasant, but by no means as distinguished as most Hopwood winners have been." Ruth Lechlitner
— + Weekly Book Review p9 Ap 9 '44 80w

HACKH, INGO WALDEMAR DAGOBERT. Chemical dictionary (American and British usage) containing the words generally used in chemistry, and many of the terms used in the related sciences of physics, astrophysics, mineralogy, pharmacy, agriculture, biology, medicine, engineering, etc; 3d ed, completely rev. and ed. by Julius Grant. 925p il $12 Blakiston
540.3 Chemistry—Dictionaries 44-5090

"Although this edition has been revised and brought up-to-date, no change has been made in the general purpose and scope of the work. In spite of the addition of new terms (the total number is now over 57,000), the omission of pronunciation and the rearrangement of the material have resulted in a volume a few pages shorter than the previous edition [Book Review Digest, 1938]." N Y New Tech Bks

---

"Publication of a new edition of a chemical dictionary is an event well worth notice—particularly a new edition of a volume as well-known and as good as Hackh's. It is disappointing, therefore, to have to report that the 1944 offering is practically the same as that of 1937. The main difference is size. The new third edition has nearly 10 percent fewer pages because Dr. Grant and the publishers have eliminated pronunciation from all words and the pronunciation key which appeared on every page of the second edition. Another space-saver was the omission of many illustrations such as blowpipe, clamp, condenser, desiccator and the like. This excision could and should have been carried further to include most of the portraits which still take up space but add little value."
Chem & Met Eng 51:187 Ag '44 250w
Library J 69:462 My 15 '44 60w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:42 Jl '44

HADER, MRS BERTA (HOERNER) and HADER, ELMER. Little stone house; a story of building a house in the country [il. by the authors]. [63p] $2 Macmillan
44-51324

The Doe family got tired of a crowded city apartment, so decided on a house in the country. All the houses they looked at were either too large or too small, so they had to build their own. From the digging of the foundation to the completion of the little stone house the Doe family followed the course of the building. The story ends with Thanksgiving dinner in their own home. For ages six to eight.

"This is a grand picture book for children from 5 to 8—a story of hard work and success, packing into its pages an amazing amount of information about the building of a house." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p11 Ja 21 '45 110w
Booklist 41:156 Ja 15 '45

"Refreshingly casual picturization of the adventures of building a house."
+ Kirkus 12:448 O 1 '44 100w

"The illustrations, many of them in soft pleasing colors, and the rapidly moving text give to 6 to 8 year olds something of the satisfaction children find in watching builders at work." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p12 D 24 '44 100w
Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 7 '45 70w

"The pictures scamper with the story, sparkling with fun." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p5 D 17 '44 150w

HAGEN, PAUL. See Frank, K. B.

HAGGIN, BERNARD H. Music for the man who enjoys "Hamlet." 128p $2.75 Knopf
780.1 Music—Analysis, interpretation, appreciation 44-9973

"Haggin argues that the man who reads Shakespeare for pleasure will find the same kind of satisfaction in music that makes the same kind of demand. The medium of communication differs but not the experience. Therefore he attempts his musical introduction with some of the most 'difficult' of masterpieces, instead of the usual tidbits. The technique is simply listening to live and especially recorded performances following his analyses, comments and music examples." Library J

Reviewed by Fred Brandeis
Book Week p8 N 26 '44 650w
Booklist 41:120 D 15 '44

"A book which enables self acquisition of the fundamentals in a select group of masterpieces, and greater enjoyment thereof, but one which requires serious effort of the student."
+ Kirkus 12:489 N 1 '44 110w

"Here, as in his weekly column in The Nation and in some of his earlier books, Haggin's appraisals of performers must be taken with five or ten pounds of salt. Highly recommended." Leonard Burkat
+ Library J 69:935 N 1 '44 110w

"Mr. Haggin's books on recorded music have been the best of their kind, and by far the best. . . But they are not perfect books. For one thing, Mr. Haggin has as fine a collection of hobby-horses as any good critic may be permitted to have. And for another, and this is important, his pedagogic intentions have always been a cramp on his work, both in its style and its range. The present work has all the good and bad qualities of the preceding books, though fortunately the good qualities have been intensified while the bad ones have been somewhat reduced." Ralph Bates
+ — Nation 159:620 N 18 '44 600w

"Haggin has made no attempt to display his erudition, or ensnare his readers with anecdotes or smartness of style, but has taken to heart, rather, the immediate and genuine needs of an intelligent music-lover, and has brought us a welcome recess from so much empty verbiage published under the guise of so-called 'music-appreciation.' " Arthur Berger
+ New Repub 111:758 D 4 '44 1200w

"As a propagandist for the good and worthy cause of music, Mr. Haggin has obviously made an honest endeavor. It is plain that he wishes his readers to share his pleasure in music. But it is also plain that you can lead a man to a concert but you can't make him listen; that the only way to absorb music is through the ear. Mr. Haggin's man who enjoys 'Hamlet' must find music for himself and must cultivate his own enthusiasm for it. Literary comparisons, analyses of form and content, and musicological data can only be of value when that first all-important step has been taken." M. A. Schubart
+ — N Y Times p40 D 3 '44 650w

HAGGIN, B. H.—Continued

"[One] should remain grateful to Mr. Haggin for his fresh enthusiasm for some of the supreme works of music, and above all for his acknowledgement of the fact that they are supreme human creations which, like great works of literature, demand far more of their devotees than the casual attention and occasional hearings which seem so often to be considered quite adequate. One must be grateful, too, for his comprehension of the too often misunderstood fact that music, or any art whatever, is to be approached directly, and that historical information, or musicological lore, however interesting, belong to a quite different category, and have exactly no bearing whatever on musical essentials." Roger Sessions
+ Sat R of Lit 28:17 Ja 20 '45 2050w

"Decidedly a book for the well informed reader who is interested only in increasing his own musical appreciation." G. W. Johnson
Weekly Book Review p5 N 12 '44 470w

HAGIE, CLARENCE EDWIN. American rifle for hunting and target shooting. 174p il $1.95 Macmillan

623.442 Rifles. Shooting. Hunting 44-7970

Includes study of various types of rifles and ammunition, their suitability for various purposes, a chapter on the care of game in the field, and an introductory chapter on ballistics. Index.

Booklist 41:73 N 1 '44

"A basic book."
Kirkus 12:331 Ag 1 '44 80w

Library J 69:1003 N 15 '44 30w

HAGOPIAN, RICHARD. The dove brings peace; il. by Manuel Tolegian. 210p $2.50 Farrar

44-3159

Series of sketches, or small plotless stories, describing the life of an Armenian family, living in Massachusetts. The sketches show the attitudes of the older members of the family, and the bewilderment of the young ones, as they try to adapt themselves to the ways of a new country.

" 'The Dove Brings Peace' is a book with a different flavor, a book that most readers should find enjoyable, diverting and to some extent informative. There are gentle charm and pleasing fragility in most of the sketches. The author is at home and clearly authoritative in depicting the episodes of the life he knew. He is not so successful when he seeks to write in a deep, philosophic vein. Several of the last stories are of this type and are not convincing." J. H. Wallis
+ — Book Week p3 Ap 16 '44 320w

Booklist 40:283 Ap 15 '44

Reviewed by M. I. Thompson
Canadian Forum 24:95 Jl '44 300w

"All in mellow retrospect, transmuted through the years from pity, anger, discomfort to sympathy, pride and touching gentleness."
Kirkus 12:58 F 1 '44 100w

"Delightful and interesting sketches. . . Although the book is short, it is well written and will appeal to young people as well as adults." Helen Rubin
+ Library J 69:356 Ap 15 '44 70w

"These are stories of sentiment for the young in heart, written with just the right proportion of Old World wisdom and New World wonder." N. B.
+ N Y Times p20 Ap 30 '44 650w

" 'The Dove Brings Peace' is a highly entertaining and, at the same time, a rather wistful series of stories. . . Most of these stories have a note of sadness running through them, and yet, at the end, the author adds some little comment, some little twist in his tale that leaves the reader with a chuckle or a smile of satisfaction. The material has been combined and written with considerable skill, sensitivity and humor." Barbara Woollcott
+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ap 16 '44 550w

Wis Lib Bul 40:86 Je '44

HAGUE, CLIFFORD WILSON. Printing for the schools. 273p il $2.50 Bruce pub.

655 Printing, Practical 43-16459

"A textbook for beginners, with questions and problems with suggestions for shop practice. Part 1 explains the type case, straight composition, the printing press, proofreading, paper cutting, and bindery work. Part 2 deals with display types, layouts, color forms, printing the school newspaper, linoleum-block printing, silk-screen printing, and special operations on the platen press. Part 3 reviews briefly the history of printing, the manufacture of paper and printing inks, and the development of print-shop machinery. Two chapters are devoted to print-shop style and print-shop mathematics. There is a bibliography, also a glossary." N Y New Tech Bks

"Excellent text designed to meet the equipment and needs of the average school."
+ Library J 69:32 Ja 1 '44 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 28:68 O '43

"We must congratulate Mr. Hague for his rapid-fire course in elementary printing. . . The bibliography might have contained more general books on printing, instead of the selection made from technical writing. So often, the student does not realize the power behind the printing press of today, its background history, the struggle of the men who wielded it first and have improved it ever since." Karl Kup
+ Publishers' Weekly 145:1796 My 6 '44 420w

HAHN, EMILY. China to me: a partial autobiography. 429p $3 Doubleday

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. China—History 44-40212

In a "partial autobiography" the author tells of her experiences in China, from 1935, until her return to the United States on the Gripsholm in 1943. During that time she lived in Shanghai, Hong Kong, and Chungking, worked on a newspaper, learned to know many Chinese of all classes, had a baby, and survived the Japanese invasion.

"The style is brilliant though uneven, and very few readers will be able to lay the book aside."
+ — Book Week p2 D 10 '44 250w

Booklist 41:122 D 15 '44

"Miss Hahn admits in this book to being a good gossip. That is a masterpiece of understatement. For not only does she gossip about everyone and everything in China—she is quite unabashed about settling down to a good fireside chat about the life and loves of Emily Hahn. . . She was greedy for experience, catholic in her taste, intelligent. All the surface glitter of the Orient is here, along with all the names. . . No doubt about it, China to Miss Hahn was more whisky than tea. Well, it's a favorite American stimulant." Dorothy Hillyer
Boston Globe p19 D 6 '44 350w

"I feel strongly that the reviews of 'China to Me' are unjust. I suspect that there are political motives for what the secular reviewers have done. The book actually, in nine tenths of its pages, is a vivid and moving account of life on the China Coast from just before the beginning of Japan's present aggression until Miss Hahn's return to America on the Gripsholm, long months after Pearl Harbor. Old China hands of my acquaintance assure me that its veracity and the tone of the picture it paints are genuine—perhaps more genuine than any book of the sort yet to appear. It deserves to be read by any adult who wishes to get the feel of a life we hope the world will never see again—a world of extraterritoriality, of race feeling, of white supremacy, which is vastly responsible for the mess in which we now find ourselves." H. L. Binsse
+ Commonweal 41:281 D 29 '44 650w

"An unusual personal history, generously detailed; an observant report on China."
+ Kirkus 12:472 O 15 '44 260w

"The book will be very valuable for all libraries but its extreme frankness may unfortunately rule it out of school libraries." Katharine Shorey
+ Library J 69:998 N 15 '44 100w

"At times the cleverness of this author overreaches itself. In the middle of her page attacking Snow, Evans, Smedley, et al. is an italicized sentence to the effect that she is not 'running them down'—oh, my, no!—just insinuating that they have deluded the American public about China. Her prejudices—the strongest one is against 'leftists,' a term she much affects—are almost as fascinating as her naivete. God rest her soul! Both China and the leftists may, perhaps, manage to outlive even Emily Hahn's commentary." T. A. Bisson
— Nation 160:108 Ja 27 '45 420w

"This sort of book, especially in wartime, is bound to arouse antagonism. Miss Hahn has been charged with being pro-Japanese, and a political reactionary. From the evidence of this book, at least, such charges seem a way off track. She is not pro or anti any race or political program, because she doesn't think in terms of races or movements, but deals always with specific individuals in concrete situations. She assigns praise and blame with an impartiality colored only by her concern for the welfare of herself and those she befriends." Helen Mears
New Repub 112:92 Ja 15 '45 1150w

"Emily Hahn has not been cut out for martyrdom, for inflexible principle, for anguish, for great roles. Nor, for that matter, good writing. But she's as good as the best over a martini. Nobody will be so dour as to resent her auto-intoxication." Adrienne Koch
N Y Times p5 D 10 '44 1800w
New Yorker 20:106 D 2 '44 90w

"The story of the fall of Hong Kong has been told many times. Except for her personal role in it, Miss Hahn's account of the tragedy contains little that is new. . . The author calls her book an 'egotistical history.' In speaking of a friend she says: 'Like myself, Bob is an exhibitionist and would sell his grandmother if the transaction would make a good story.' Miss Hahn sells herself and the transaction makes a good China—a crazy, pathetic, entertaining whirligig of a China." A. F. Wolfe
Sat R of Lit 27:8 D 9 '44 1000w

"The unimportant conversation, the irrelevant incident may seem to some too trivial for inclusion here. But to this reader they contribute vitally to the well-grounded picture Miss Hahn presents. If she had concentrated on any one phase of her experience, the book would have suffered and the reader would have been cheated. The polyglot company of Eurasians, Chinese, British, Americans and Japanese make the chaotic scene alive, full of conflict and implicit with tragedy. If this is a 'woman's book', women's books can be good." E. M. B.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d D 10 '44 440w
Time 44:99 D 11 '44 1000w

" 'China to Me' is steadily entertaining, occasionally brilliant and illuminating. In spite of all that, the fact remains that it would be twice as good if it were half as long—edited out of copiousness into compactness." F. H. Bullock
+ — Weekly Book Review p2 N 26 '44 1000w

HAILEY, FOSTER BOWMAN. Pacific battle line. 405p il maps $3.50 Macmillan 940.545 World war, 1939—Pacific ocean
44-7206

"Neither war nor reporting is a novelty to Foster Hailey. He served in the Navy during World War I. . . A few hours after the attack upon Pearl Harbor he left New York and for the next two years as a 'New York Times' correspondent, traveled the Pacific, mostly afloat with the Navy, visiting all combat areas except the Philippines and New Guinea and taking part in several engagements. Out of his adventurous experiences he has collected material for a long, comprehensive and absorbing report of the Pacific battlefront." (Weekly Book Review) Chronology.

"I like this book and I respect it, too. It is obviously the work of a sound, brave man who has dared the greatest of dangers to learn at firsthand all that he could of the war in the Pacific so that he might report it simply and effectively to his readers. This he has done in 'Pacific Battle Line.' It is a book that deserves a very, very wide audience." W. H. Fetridge
+ Book Week p6 O 8 '44 230w
Booklist 41:39 O 1 '44

"Mr. Hailey's well-written and almost encyclopedic account of the first 24 months of the war in the Pacific is a sobering book in more ways than one. . . It must be pointed out that much of the ground Mr. Hailey covers has been gone over in detail before, that many of his technical descriptions border on the tedious, and that at least one of his anecdotes is in questionable taste." H. M.
+ — Christian Science Monitor p16 S 13 '44 550w

Reviewed by A. M. Davis
Library J 69:696 S 1 '44 120w

Reviewed by W. H. Chickering
N Y Times p3 S 3 '44 1300w

"This book is several cuts above most of its kind, and although Mr. Hailey manages to employ every newspaperman's cliché there is, this failing is very easy to forgive in such a good reporter, especially since he seems actually to dislike the pronoun 'I.' "
+ New Yorker 20:79 S 9 '44 90w

"It must be recognized that both Mr Hailey and Mr Driscoll labor under two disadvantages compared with the naval historian of the future. . . They lack the perspective which [a Winston Churchill] will have and they are undoubtedly hampered by official restrictions as to what they reveal. Thus while no fault can be found with Mr Hailey's clarity of expression, so far as it goes, there is much that he leaves unexpressed in regard to the disastrous night action of Savo island on August 9, 1942. . . In spite of their limitations, which are partly unavoidable, these two readable books do add to an understanding of the Pacific war." R. H.
+ — Springf'd Republican p4d O 8 '44 300w

" 'Pacific Battle Line' is contemporary history told authentically and with enough vividness to divorce it from library dryness. With the advantage of direct knowledge of several battles and with extensive acquaintance among top and bottom service personnel Hailey has been able to turn out a top-notch record." P. J. Searles
+ Weekly Book Review p2 S 10 '44 100w

HAILEY, MALCOLM HAILEY, 1st baron. Future of colonial peoples. 66p $1 Princeton univ. press [3s 6d Oxford]
325.315 Colonies A44-716

"In his lectures delivered on the Stafford Little Foundation at Princeton early this year, Lord Hailey brings together in succinct form ideas on the colonial problem which he has made familiar in England by writings and addresses at various times during the war." Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by H. F. Angus
Am J Soc 50:158 S '44 240w

Reviewed by H. E. Fried
Am Pol Sci R 38:604 Je '44 230w

"The pamphlet is a masterly work of condensation, and a surprising amount of information is packed into very brief compass. Lord Hailey is both accurate and impartial, and the shrewdness of his comments often exposes the falsity and the dangerous oversimplification of many of the contemporary criticisms of colonial rule." L. A. Mills
+ Ann Am Acad 233:222 My '44 410w
Christian Century 61:1257 N 1 '44 360w

"This is a mighty good book to read by anyone, but especially by those naïve people who think that it is going to be easy for the victorious empires to make and keep a just or stable peace, and by those who suppose that dissolution of empires is a thing to be accomplished by mass meetings at Madison

HAILEY, M. H.—Continued
Square Garden or in Trafalgar Square." B. I. Bell

+ Commonweal 39:628 Ap 7 '44 950w

Current Hist 6:437 My '44 60w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:657 Jl '44 50w

Reviewed by Jean De La Roche
Pacific Affairs 17:247 Je '44 360w

Reviewed by Bryce Wood
Pol Sci Q 59:283 Je '44 1200w

"Whatever Lord Hailey writes on colonial affairs is to be chewed and digested. The task in the present instance should not be beyond the capacity of the attentive reader, even in the hurry of war-time, for the text of his Stafford Little Lectures, delivered at Princeton University in February, 1943, though meaty and compact, is not dehydrated." E. A. Walker

+ Spec 172:36 Ja 14 '44 750w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p568 N 27 '43 850w

HAINES, CHARLES GROVE. Role of the Supreme court in American government and politics, 1789-1835. 679p $6 Univ. of Calif.

347.99 U.S. Supreme court. U.S.—Constitutional history A44-91

"The present work deals primarily with the personal beliefs and political attitudes which influenced the early justices of the Supreme Court of the United States in their decisions and opinions in cases involving governmental policy and individual rights. Recognizing that in the writing of history, as in the administration of justice, a completely non-partizan attitude is impossible, the author frankly avows a belief in the fundamental ideals of self-government. After exhaustive research, he strives to present impartially the arguments of both sides. As the work of the Supreme Court, from the aristocratic and nationalistic viewpoints, has been adequately treated by competent historians, he aims to give more extended consideration to the critics rather than the defenders of the Court." (Am Pol Sci R) Table of cases. Index.

"This volume will take the high rank of the author's earlier works. It will not be easy reading for the layman, but is indispensable for students of law, history, and political science. While it may disturb those who have venerated the Supreme Court as a tribunal which has developed our Constitution uninfluenced by personal, social, or political factors, it affords a much more realistic picture of its great achievement." Isidor Loeb

+ Am Pol Sci R 38:784 Ag '44 750w

Reviewed by E. S. Brown
Columbia Law R 44:940 N '44 850w

"The amazing thing about this book is that its more than 600 pages are eminently readable. Haines keeps clearly in the foreground the dramatic conflicts of the period and their lasting meaning. He draws extensively on authorities and sources, including many decisions of Chief Justice Marshall and others, but he does so with extreme selectivity of what is at once pertinent and vital in itself. Surely seldom has a specialized study been done so well from the point of view of the general reader, or proved so likely to be really helpful in understanding a major element in our national life both in the past and in the present." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p4 Ap 30 '44 230w

"It is based on the facts of record and is of necessity a scholarly, detailed and annotated work, invaluable for students of the subject."

+ Current Hist 7:51 Jl '44 80w

"The total result of Professor Haines' method and industry is a book which will be of great value for any student of the period, particularly if he be concerned with constitutional history and law. The book is less easy to read than it would have been had Professor Haines built it around a clear-cut thesis or interpretation, but it does have the very great merit of providing in a single volume an extensive and carefully selected set of secondary and source materials which are to be found in no other place." B. F. Wright

+ — Harvard Law R 57:1248 O '44 1000w

HALIFAX, CHARLES LINDLEY WOOD, 2d viscount. Lord Halifax's ghost book. 298p $2.75 Didier pubs. [8s 6d Bles]

133.1 Ghost stories 44-5674

A collection of true ghost stories, gathered together by the father of the present English ambassador to the United States.

Reviewed by Sterling North
Book Week p2 Je 25 '44 900w

"A pleasantly different sort of book on ghostly histories."

+ Kirkus 12:220 My 15 '44 90w

Reviewed by Norman Matson
N Y Times p10 Je 25 '44 480w

"The book, a first American edition, has a certain interest as a record of a cross section of the ghostly experience of the great houses and families of England. Lord Halifax does not seem to have examined this testimony in a spirit of scientific inquiry, and it is all the more striking that these narratives should present certain recurring types that seem susceptible of natural explanations: there are poltergeist phenomena of the kind that are known to have been often produced by some mischievous member of a household."

New Yorker 20:66 Jl 1 '44 230w

"A bizarre and fascinating volume. . . The collection will be of chief interest to specialists in the literature of the other world and will have some value to collectors of literary curiosities. It is interesting and entertaining as general reading, but far from hair-raising for a generation of spook-fanciers being lured from clanking chains and gibbering shrieks by the more subtle but harrowing dark corners of the mind and by the stories which profess to find a malevolent and ever-present sub-natural world." R. F. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Je 18 '44 460w

"A more companionable collection of tales to set your hair comfortably on end you could not find."

+ Weekly Book Review p23 Ag 27 '44 430w

HALL, JAMES NORMAN. Lost island. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 212p $2 Little 44-4714

In the summer of 1942 an American engineer is sent to a tiny South Sea island to make preliminary plans for an airfield in advance of the coming of the Seabees. The story concerns chiefly his feelings as he realizes what the coming of war and Industrial Civilization will mean to the inhabitants, native and white.

"As the editor of this book, I am of course wholly partisan; so I shall only say that in his compassionate understanding of the natives and the European refugees, Hall has written a story of impending doom that breaks upon the mind with the accumulating force of a great comber." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 174:127 Jl '44 210w

Reviewed by Wendell Johnson
Book Week p3 My 28 '44 500w

Booklist 40:341 Je 1 '44

Bookmark 5:18 My '44

"The story could be literally true and there is reason to believe that Hall documented the experience himself on a war mission. As he tells it, the story becomes an allegory of the relentless reach of our anguished civilization to destroy the farthest natural beauty of earth's repose. Such a story depends upon its telling. It takes a James Norman Hall to feel the ultimate grimness of war in its corrosion of the soul's peace on this dream speck of coral strand, and to give it the unforgettable quality it has." L. M. Lyons

+ Boston Globe p17 My 24 '44 380w

"Well told and disturbing, the tale weaves a touchingly sad and somber strain into a precise account of work done by a labor battalion at once destructive and constructive. One closes the book with a distressing sense of harmless people wandering aimlessly about the site of their former homes, lacking both the wish and the capacity to resume their shattered lives; and one thinks of the fate in store for a whole vast region as the war gathers intensity."

Cath World 159:380 Jl '44 220w

"The theme is treated without sentimentality, but with fine sensitivity to the human aspects of the situation."
+ Christian Century 61:698 Je 7 '44 90w
Cleveland Open Shelf p12 Je '44

Reviewed by J. C. Cort
Commonweal 40:283 Jl 7 '44 500w

"A slight book, perhaps, but moving."
+ Kirkus 12:147 Ap 1 '44 270w

Reviewed by M. C. Manley
Library J 69:460 My 15 '44 70w

"I think Mr. Hall makes it clear that the tragedy of his island is perhaps only a small tragedy. But it is an absolute one, and it implies a very large tragedy. For what 'Lost Island' is saying—and strongly, too, though its voice is so politely pitched—is that it is a strange world we have contrived in which we have to destroy civilization in order to try to preserve it." Diana Trilling
Nation 158:742 Je 24 '44 390w

"It is a poignant and warmly written little story, representing in miniature the tragedy of all the world's bewildered, uprooted lives. . . Mr. Hall is inclined to place the blame on our industrial civilization, on machines and 'the scope they increasingly demand for their kind of life and activity'—and this is perhaps the book's limitation. For this minor tragedy stems from something older than machines—something that began long ago, when, for better or worse, man first tasted of the tree of knowledge. We've reached the last corner of Eden." Richard Match
+ — N Y Times p6 My 28 '44 490w
New Yorker 20:82 My 27 '44 180w

"James Norman Hall rises to nostalgic heights in delivering his valedictory to Polynesian life as it was lived on a South Pacific atoll before the Seabeès rumbled ashore on a bucking bulldozer. As yet we have read nothing so eloquent of the impact of global war upon native life as Mr Hall's short novel." G. W. B.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d My 28 '44 500w

"The story is told in the first person by Colonel Dodd and it gains in emotional impact from its simple, direct telling and from the narrator's frequent comment. Dodd possesses the necessary imagination to put himself in the people's place and realize what the effect of his mission will be on them. It is a poignant tale of personal tragedy, above all of the incredible wastefulness of war in things more precious and less tangible than wood and stone. The final outcome cannot be reduced to synopsis but must be read in its context to be fully felt. The 'lost island' becomes, in its way, a symbol of civilization uprooted by the horrible exigencies of war." Jennings Rice
+ Weekly Book Review p3 My 28 '44 800w
Wis Lib Bul 40:130 O '44

HALL, LAWRENCE SARGENT. Hawthorne: critic of society. 200p $3 Yale univ. press [15s Oxford]

B or 92 Hawthorne, Nathaniel A44-1637

Critical study of the life and works of Nathaniel Hawthorne which "collects all the evidence on Hawthorne's dealings with the world outside of himself and analyzes his social attitudes. Mr. Hall points out that, in the decade of the fifties, he used his friendship with Pierce to its full practical advantage. In spite of protestation to the contrary, he obviously sought the assignment of the campaign biography and, in contrast to his early failures at making a living, he used his Liverpool consulship as a means of endowing himself and his family. . . Mr. Hall's thesis is that this materialistic side of his character provided a 'productive maladjustment' because 'it contained enough idealism to render him acutely critical of society, but not so much as to make him reject it.'" (Sat R of Lit) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by A. F. Tyler
Ann Am Acad 236:222 N '44 850w

Reviewed by Katherine Brégy
Cath World 160:188 N '44 310w
Christian Science Monitor p12 Jl 15 '44 600w

"One could wish that it were possible to discuss Mr. Hall's book in the usual terms as a contribution to our knowledge both of Hawthorne and of nineteenth-century society. The truth is, however, that Mr. Hall has made no study of social history in Hawthorne's period, not even of American social history, and that for this reason, if for no other, his analysis of Hawthorne's attitudes is quite lacking in a frame or a setting. It is also unfortunately true that no clear view of Hawthorne's own attitudes emerges save that which would be evident to a casual reader of his fiction, his notebooks, and his letters." Newton Arvin
— New Eng Q 17:453 S '44 750w

"A highly intelligent, well-formulated work." Nona Balakian
+ N Y Times p14 Je 25 '44 550w

"Hawthorne's adjustment to what he called reality may have been necessary to his personal sanity and it obviously made his life more nearly tolerable. But he had not the esthetic stamina nor the physical health to enlarge his scope and to remake his art as social analysis. Once he renounced his isolation, his decline as an artist began. Mr. Hall's study is valuable in that it makes that decline more understandable and it gives credit to Hawthorne for achieving in his personal life a degree of adjustment to the world which is not apparent in his fiction and which has been underestimated by most other critics and biographers. It even gives him a limited value as a commentator on his times. But to make the thesis work, one would have to forget the final failures of 'Dr. Grimshawe's Secret' and the other unfinished novels and to move the great romances to the end of his life." R. E. Spiller
+ — Sat R of Lit 27:20 Jl 8 '44 850w

"A thoughtful, scholarly, and original work. 'Hawthorne, Critic of Society' is a volume which deserves the attention of every serious student of American literature. It presents a wholesome corrective of the widely held view of Hawthorne as an impractical, ineffective, and unworldly dreamer." R. J. Conklin
+ Springf'd Republican p4d O 1 '44 500w

Reviewed by Austin Warren
Yale R n s 34:362 winter '45 500w

HALL, MARJORY. After a fashion; il. by Jean Baker. 188p $2 Houghton

44-2720

Vocational story for girls. When Marybeth flunked her nurses' training course she supposed that life held nothing more for her—she'd be her father's housekeeper and an old maid for the rest of her days. Then she got a job in a department store, worked up into the fashion department and solved some personal problems as well.

"Marjory Hall's young people are always real and believable; they speak the vernacular of the day without dropping into jive, and they are as brave and gay and appealing as those boys and girls you know down the street, with very much the same heartaches and problems." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p11 Mr 19 '44 270w

"There is an over-all view of merchandizing which is not as good as in Pennover's Polly Tucker Merchant nor is there as much about clothes as in De Leeuw's Gay Design. Unimportant, but will be considered more than adequate by older girls." F. W. Butler
Library J 69:307 Ap 1 '44 100w

"Some girls will find this book worthwhile, but to more thoughtful readers it seems insufficiently integrated—a characteristic of vocational books in general." B. W. Shaffer
— + Sat R of Lit 27:74 Ap 15 '44 250w

HALL, MARJORY—Continued

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 12 '44 110w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p6 Jl 23 '44 200w

Wis Lib Bul 40:88 Je '44

HALL, RAY OVID. Handbook of tabular presentation; how to design and edit statistical tables; a style manual and case book. 112p $3.50 Ronald

311.26 Graphic methods. Statistics

43-17208

"Part I dissects statistical tables and discusses the anatomical features common to all of them. Part II reproduces selected bad tables, inventories their defects, and supplies a model redraft of each table, showing the possibilities and methods of improvement. Part III is a collection of carefully chosen defective tables, on which to practice the principles of tabular criticism developed in Parts I and II." Pref.

Eng N 133:111 D 14 '44 230w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 68:1006 D 1 '43 10w

N Y New Tech Bks 28:69 O '43

"This 'Handbook for Tabular Presentation' is an interesting and useful source book, but one more likely to attract the attention of students than business men, economists and statisticians." J. D. East

+ N Y Times p18 Ap 30 '44 200w

"Actually, the book does not wholly live up to its title, for the emphasis is chiefly upon editing, with little on design. This lack in turn limits the discussion of editing, for too little is said of the need to be guided by the specific purpose and setting of a table, that is, by consideration for the particular facts to be stressed, the readers for whom it is intended, and the medium through which it will be issued—printing, processing, or typewriting; in a periodical, book, or single release. As a result, some of the author's principles and rules for editing are unduly dogmatic. . . In its enthusiasm, concreteness, and many sensible suggestions, the book is a good beginning in a field with which an increasing number of persons, including many more than the technicians, are or should be increasingly concerned." Mary Ross

+ — Survey 80:142 Ap '44 280w

HALL, WALTER PHELPS. World wars and revolutions; the course of Europe since 1900. lib ed 440p il maps $4.50; students ed $3.50 Appleton-Century

940.5 Europe—History 43-16308

For descriptive note see Annual for 1943.

Am Hist R 49:522 Ap '44 40w

"On the whole, the author's narrative is competent and comparatively objective. Here and there, however, it is marred by biases and errors." P. A. Sorokin

+ — Am J Soc 50:76 Jl '44 380w

"Excellent, up-to-date history. . . Professor Hall's unprejudiced account of the origins of World War I, indicating divided responsibility, is characteristic of the fairness throughout the book. Where the facts are in doubt, he is careful to say so. . . Professor Hall has added much to the value and interest of his book by the many excellent illustrations, maps, and pictorial graphs borrowed with due acknowledgment from other books. The bibliography appears to have been added in some haste; several names are misspelled; several titles might well have been omitted to make room for better books." S. B. Fay

+ — Ann Am Acad 232:202 Mr '44 410w

Booklist 40:249 Mr 15 '44

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 22:490 Ap '44 30w

"A dependable and pleasing text partaking, within shorter compass, of the many virtues of its larger progenitor. The book is well illustrated, has adequate maps and reading lists, and an unusually full index. It deserves and will undoubtedly receive wide usage, especially in the service courses for which it is obviously intended." J. L. G.

+ Social Forces 22:473 My '44 100w

"This volume should be useful as a college textbook in contemporary history and as a reference for pupils in secondary schools. In addition, the layman could read it with much profit." H. E. Wagner

+ Social Studies 35:140 Mr '44 360w

Reviewed by Donald Derby

Springf'd Republican p6 D 19 '44 170w

HALL, WARNER. Even Jericho. 288p $2.50 Macrae Smith co.

44-46610

Espionage in Alaska, in the days just preceding the attack on Dutch Harbor, forms the background of this tale, in which Major Matt Frayne, head of the United States army military intelligence in Alaska, is one of the chief characters.

"Good entertainment value."

+ Kirkus 12:347 Ag 15 '44 90w

"Without in any wise attempting to compose an epic of the Far Northwest, the author has plotted a smooth, well-paced spy-thriller and written it with humor and enthusiasm." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p20 N 26 '44 140w

"Good thriller."

+ Sat R of Lit 27:31 N 18 '44 40w

"A well knit, swiftly told and admirably realistic narrative." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p24 N 19 '44 150w

HALL, SIR WILLIAM REGINALD, and PEASLEE, AMOS JENKINS. Three wars with Germany; ed. and il. by Joseph P. Sims. 309p $3 Putnam

940.48743 European war, 1914-1918—Secret service. European war, 1914-1918—U.S. Sabotage. World war, 1939- 44-5566

"The volume is divided into three parts. In Part I are incidents in the life of Admiral Sir Reginald Hall who directed the British Naval Intelligence from 1914 to 1919. Then come letters of Amos J. Peaslee written while Director of the American Courier Service of World War I, known popularly as the 'Silver Greyhounds.' . . Part II is the correspondence between Admiral Hall and Amos Peaslee during the progress of the Black Tom-Kingsland case. . . Part III contains letters which Admiral Hall and Mr. Peaslee exchanged during this war." Editor's foreword

Reviewed by Ray McPartlin

Boston Globe p19 Jl 5 '44 220w

Commonweal 40:281 Jl 7 '44 350w

"It is a worth-while volume, off the beaten track of the printed word."

+ Current Hist 7:229 S '44 80w

Foreign Affairs 23:5 O '44 30w

"A miscellany, with no continuity, and scant general interest."

Kirkus 12:296 Jl 1 '44 40w

"A book about Hall's career, written by himself or in collaboration, should be an important contribution to the literature of espionage. But it is only fair to warn the reader that this volume does not live up to the promise of its title. The work in the main is a compilation of letters, most of which passed between Hall and Amos J. Peaslee, and its bearing on the admiral's famous technique is of the slightest." W. A. Roberts

Weekly Book Review p10 Jl 30 '44 500w

HALLET, RICHARD MATTHEWS. Foothold of earth. 234p $2.50 Doubleday

44-9412

A story of a seacoast town in Maine, torn by feuds which date back many years. A sailor returning after his ship has been torpedoed and sunk, feels the distress of the home conflict accentuated by world wide events and does what he can to bring about peace.

"It is the abundance of character study that makes the novel worth the reading, for the writing is sometimes tiresome and the developments often so complex that re-reading is necessary to be sure you're still on the beam. But Jason Ripple's Foothold of earth will be an exciting new clime to many readers." Ralph Peterson
+ — Book Week p5 N 26 '44 400w
Booklist 41:89 N 15 '44
Christian Science Monitor p12 O 31 '44 400w

"With humor and unhackneyed use of Maine material, Jason Ripple's problems of love, land, and sea are resolved in a quiet, salty story."
+ Kirkus 12:349 Ag 15 '44 140w

" 'Foothold of Earth' develops a bad list before it clears port. However, we can't urge the reader too strongly to stay with the ship. The wispy, landlubber plot dissolves like a morning fog and Mr. Hallett is off on a fine, salty job of yarn-spinning. The result may not observe the slick-paper rules of pat timing and geometrical answers but it has style, character and humor." Thelma Purtell
+ — N Y Times p29 D 10 '44 240w

" 'Foothold of Earth' is a good sturdy yarn that is full of the sound and smell and strength of Maine. It's the sort of story that men as well as women will enjoy." E. M. B.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d N 5 '44 390w

"A good novel." Lisle Bell
+ Weekly Book Review p24 N 19 '44 100w

HALLIDAY, BRETT, pseud. See Dresser, D.

HALLOWELL, JOHN HAMILTON. Decline of liberalism as an ideology; with particular reference to German politico-legal thought. 145p pa $1.50 Univ. of Calif.
320.1 Liberalism A43-2221

"Instructors in political theory will welcome [this book] for supplementary assignment in advanced courses. In his subtitle, the author indicates that he is making 'particular reference to German politico-legal thought,' but nearly half the volume is an excellent summary of early liberal theory. This is defined as 'integral liberalism,' to contrast it with the 'formal liberalism' of more recent writers. . . With conscience keeping watch to insure obedience, man's conviction of the immutability of natural law provided the link between individual interest and social order. This type of reasoning was in keeping with the intellectual atmosphere of the early modern period; the universe was viewed as a rational, atomistic, mechanical entity, responding to immutable laws. From the thinking of this milieu to the formalism of recent theory, Hallowell follows the decay of liberalism in German thought. The effect of Romanticism, the development of positivism and Realpolitik, the impact of scientific theories of physics and biology, and the influence of scientific methodology are woven into the story of liberalist disintegration." Am Pol Sci R

"Hallowell confines himself to critical analysis and interpretation; he makes few judgments beyond affecting the logical inadequacy of formal liberalism. But the clarity of his insight and the coherence of his interpretation recommend this volume to all students of political theory." A. V. Boerner
+ Am Pol Sci R 37:1140 D '43 400w

"The author of this book has made a notable contribution to the understanding of our times. It is nonetheless possible that he has assigned too much importance to the decay of liberalism as a characteristically German phenomenon. . . Finally, the author appears to overlook certain facts of German history. Is it not strange that from 1871 to 1914, the very period when liberalism was supposed to be decaying rapidly, the voting strength of the conservative and militaristic parties should have declined by 50 per cent?" E. McN. Burns
+ — Christian Century 61:276 Mr 1 '44 550w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:13 Ja '44 10w
Reviewed by H. M. Magid
J Philos 41:362 Je 22 '44 360w
Reviewed by H. J. Morgenthau
J Pol Econ 52:364 D '44 650w

HALSEY, MARGARET (MRS M. R. STERN). Some of my best friends are soldiers. 207p $2.50 Simon & Schuster
44-7915

"This book is in the form of a series of letters written by a young woman to her brother in the Army, and it achieves unity through the extensive attention given the subject of race prejudice. The girl, who is perceptive and has a civilized point of view, advises her brother how to deal with the prejudice against Negroes which he encounters among soldiers from the South and writes him at great length about the anti-Semitism she encounters at the servicemen's canteen where she works." New Yorker

"This chronicle is too rambling and garrulous for much tension. 'As a correspondent,' writes the heroine, 'I seem to have contracted middle-age spread.' Much easier to read the pages for their mischievous and feline observation, and best of all for their peppery comment on a small segment of uptown Manhattan." Edward Weeks
+ — Atlantic 174:127 O '44 360w
Reviewed by Wendell Johnson
Book Week p3 O 1 '44 550w
Booklist 41:41 O 1 '44

" 'Some of My Best Friends Are Soldiers,' is described by its publishers as 'sort of a novel.' Certainly the places and people and the nice little love story originated in Miss Halsey's chic little head. Unfortunately the conditions of prejudice and discrimination are just plain fact available to all of us. It is good to meet them getting a good airing in such sunny weather; novelists have written of them with high ardor and indignation, reporters' emotions have sent them scurrying for statistics, but it has remained for this gay and readable book to present them with wit and answer them with simple common sense, also available to all of us." Dorothy Hillyer
+ Boston Globe p15 O 4 '44 380w
Cath World 160:284 D '44 180w

"The material may not fit the method, but sparkling terms and smooth venom make pleasanter propoganda and this is eligible for enjoyment."
Kirkus 12:308 Jl 15 '44 190w

"Can be recommended as light fiction, amusing in spots." Thelma Brackett
+ Library J 69:762 S 15 '44 70w
Reviewed by Diana Trilling
Nation 159:443 O 14 '44 120w

"This 'kind of novel,' as the publishers call it, is strictly for those who want to be amused and have their serious discussions served with wirecracks, from 4-5 p.m."
New Repub 111:502 O 16 '44 90w

"Although suggestions on inter-racial dealings seem a rather profound undertaking for Miss Halsey's equipment, 'Some of My Best Friends Are Soldiers' is entertaining for those who must have their pocketful of wise-cracks, come hell or high water." Jane Cobb
N Y Times p4 O 1 '44 320w

"Both a timely story about a current evil and a wise and lively discussion of it."
+ New Yorker 20:81 S 23 '44 90w

"A great many people who remember the gaiety, the wit, and the barbed charm of 'With Malice Toward Some' have looked forward with anticipation to more of the same. They will be, I am afraid, rather disappointed, for Miss Halsey, as was remarked of another novelist, has sold her birthright for a pot of message." S. H. Hay
— + Sat R of Lit 27:26 S 30 '44 650w
Springf'd Republican p4d O 8 '44 350w

" 'Some of My Best Friends Are Soldiers' is a light book but not a slight book. Miss Halsey has a gift for puncturing myths and frauds with the frankness and candour of an irrepres-

HALSEY, MARGARET—Continued
sible child. The truth is in her and she gets it across in a fashion that is as engaging as it is prickling." Rose Feld
+ Weekly Book Review p3 S 24 '44 600w

HAMBURG, MERRILL C., and BEDDOW, FREDERIC A. Riding on air. 130p $2 Pitman
629.13334 Airplane models 44-3701

Directions for making model airplanes. Includes theory of flight, questions and answers, and laboratory exercises. For eighth grade or higher.

Booklist 40:352 Je 15 '44

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:205 Mr 1 '44 30w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:28 Ap '44

HAMBURGER, LUDWIG. How Nazi Germany has controlled business. 101p $1 Brookings
338.91 Industry and state—Germany 43-18379

"National Socialism has steadily narrowed the area in which business can make its own decisions. This volume describes the complex ways and progressive steps by which this close regulation has evolved, and shows who it is among the Nazi bureaucracy that does the regulating—and how." Management R

"This book serves as a useful introduction to the involved relationships between government and business in National Socialist Germany. . . A distinctly useful contribution is the collection of thumbnail historical sketches of the various economic controls." K. E. Poole
+ Am Econ R 34:409 Je '44 800w

"In a hundred pages, Dr. Hamburger has supplied one of the most concise, thoughtful, and readable reports on the aims and techniques of National Socialist economic administration." H. E. Fried
+ Am Pol Sci R 38:569 Je '44 900w

Reviewed by Paul Haensel
Ann Am Acad 233:242 My '44 450w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:498 Ap '44 20w
Management R 33:68 F '44 50w

"Younger and less experienced war economies can learn much that is of interest from Hamburger's well organized and reliable report. They may also learn with some horror how unavoidably one step of interference in business leads to the next, in an endless chain." Toni Stolper
+ Survey G 33:259 My '44 180w
Times [London] Lit Sup p540 N 4 '44 300w

HAMLIN, TALBOT FAULKNER. Greek revival architecture in America; being an account of important trends in American architecture and American life prior to the war between the states; together with a list of articles on architecture in some Am. periodicals prior to 1850 by Sarah Hull Jenkins Simpson Hamlin (1887-1930) and an introd. by Dean Leopold Arnaud. 439p pl $7.50 Oxford
724.2735 Architecture, American. Architecture, Greek 44-865

"Study of the development of the first national architectural style which this country created. Mr. Hamlin, an architect as well as the librarian of the Fine Arts Library at Columbia University, traces the beginnings of the Greek Revival, showing that it was not strictly a revival but a genuinely American development, and then follows its course westward with the expanding frontier. Constructing his book along regional lines, he makes it possible for readers in all parts of the country to see exactly how the architectural traditions of their localities were influenced by the Greek Revival. For good measure, he has included short biographies of some of the more important architects." (New Yorker) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Sterling North
Book Week p3 F 13 '44 400w
Booklist 40:247 Mr 15 '44

"In the opinion of this reviewer it is impossible to over-estimate Hamlin's contribution to the understanding of our cultural history. If it's worth our while to find out something about the politicians of the era, its Jacksons, its Calhouns, its Clays, it is surely important for us to know something about the architects who built the capitols in which they orated and the homes to which they retired. A careful reading of 'Greek Revival Architecture in America' deepens our appreciation of our grandfathers' desires." Wayne Andrews
+ Commonweal 39:602 Mr 31 '44 750w

"In American architectural writing the position of Talbot Hamlin is unique. No one else with any such gift of lucidity and such breadth of scholarly knowledge is writing, in these exacerbating times, with such serenity and such friendliness to the whole range of creative architectural effort. Hamlin is as warm to the aims of the youngest designers of our time as he is to the architecture of a hundred years ago which is his special hobby. In his approach he models for the architect as the antithesis of the soldier; wherever harmony and good-will are lost, the architect is defeated. Today any such writing must carry a certain monastic flavor; you withdraw to it when you want to regain touch with that large spirit that must rebuild the world." Douglas Haskell
+ Nation 158:231 F 19 '44 1000w

"For the history of building in this country, Greek Revival Architecture in America is a major work of reference, the only one to appear in more than twenty years. In the range of its subject matter, in the comprehensiveness of its treatment, in the sheer quantity of organized information presented, the book can only be compared with Fiske Kimball's classic, Domestic Architecture of the American Colonies." John Coolidge
+ New Eng Q 17:465 S '44 1000w

Reviewed by F. O. Matthiessen
New Repub 110:353 Mr 13 '44 1450w

"Mr. Hamlin, who is librarian of our leading architectural library, has performed a very considerable feat of compilation in gathering together the information and the many illustrations (some, alas, too small) from many sources, contemporary and modern, and from collections both public and private. Most readers, perhaps, will be chiefly interested in those chapters concerning the regions they know best, while few but scholars will fully appreciate the value of the elaborate bibliographical material in the footnotes and at the end of the book. If one must offer a criticism of this admirable work, it would be that Mr. Hamlin in his sympathy for his subject . . . is somewhat too involved temperamentally and even patriotically to place the American Greek Revival in the larger frame of the architecture of romanticism here and abroad." H. R. Hitchcock
+ — N Y Times p6 Ap 30 '44 1150w

"A sensitive, scholarly, excellently written study."
+ New Yorker 19:87 F 12 '44 170w

"Mr. Hamlin's book is particularly timely, and is fortunately a book which can be read as well as visually enjoyed. As a matter of fact, my one complaint against it is that the illustrations are not sufficiently tied up with the text: as one reads, often is found an allusion or a statement which the architect, at least, would like to confirm by reference to an illustration, and these illustrations are sometimes lacking and sometimes hard to find. But this is one defect in an otherwise perfect and charming book." Aymar Embury II
+ Sat R of Lit 27:42 Je 17 '44 800w
Times [London] Lit Sup p432 S 2 '44 250w

"Obviously Mr. Hamlin is a stout protagonist, and he writes with a calm enthusiasm that invokes acceptance. Three criticisms, however, must be made of his book. It is descriptive at the expense of analysis. It is not sufficiently critical of many of these buildings. . . And although the treatment of the eastern seaboard is admirable, the account becomes more and more sketchy as he journeys westward." W. R. Agard

+ — Weekly Book Review p8 Ap 16 '44 1500w

Reviewed by E. V. Meeks

Yale R n s 33:742 summer '44 1100w

HAMMERSTEIN, OSCAR. Oklahoma! a musical play, by Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein; based on Lynn Riggs' Green grow the lilacs; book and lyrics by Oscar Hammerstein. 146p il $2 Random house

812 44-4995

Dialog and lyrics of the musical play, Oklahoma, which opened on Broadway on April 1, 1943.

Booklist 40:353 Je 15 '44

Kirkus 12:159 Ap 1 '44 50w

New Yorker 20:84 My 27 '44 30w

"A light and happy opera of the American soil, stemming from musical comedy but reaching far above it. It is a more honest, convincing and entertaining work than the so-called American 'grand operas' occasionally produced, and probably far more important for the future." W. P. Eaton

+ Weekly Book Review p20 O 1 '44 220w

HAMMERTON, SIR JOHN ALEXANDER, ed. The second great war, a standard history; military editor, Sir Charles Gwynn. 5v 2096p il maps ea $7 in Canada; no U.S. price information available c1940-43 Waverley book co, ltd, in association with The Amalgamated press, ltd.

940.5497 World war, 1939-. World war, 1939 —Pictorial works (43-13303)

"According to the editors, this set is intended 'to provide the first authoritative history of the Second Great War, which will derive its value less from its pictorial presentation than from the adequacy and considered nature of its literary content. . .' The content of the chapters in the text follows the events of the war chronologically with occasional notes on earlier conditions which explain existing situations. Military, economic and political aspects of the war are discussed, as well as those concerned with production, supply and the home front." Subscription Bks Bul

"The style of the text is clear and popular and presented from the British point of view. The information is accurate. . . Much of the pictorial material will have already been garnered by libraries from the illustrated magazines. The historic documents are the most useful feature for libraries but unless indexed are not easily available. Since the text is of interest primarily to home readers interested in the progress of the war from a British viewpoint, the set is recommended for such readers as can afford it. It is also recommended for libraries with adequate funds wishing as complete war coverage as possible."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 15:34 Jl '44 700w

HAMMOND, C. S. and company. Hammond's new world loose-leaf atlas service. $5 per year Hammond

912 Atlases

"This service consists of correction sheets issued to keep up to date Hammond's New World Loose-Leaf Atlas, reviewed in Subscription Books Bulletin, January 1931. The publishers state that Hammond's New World Loose-Leaf Atlas is now out of print. The service, however, is still offered for sale. The annual charge for the service is $5 for two installments of correction sheets. The number of pages or maps issued annually ranges from sixteen to thirty-two. According to the publishers, the service was first started in 1919 to supplement the original edition of Hammond's New World Loose-Leaf Atlas. Subsequent editions included all correction sheets from 1919 to date of issue. Back issues of maps for the past four years are available to subscribers at the regular charge." Subscription Bks Bul

"Hammond's New World Loose-Leaf Atlas Service is not recommended for purchase because it lacks timeliness and the maps are not significant for the interpretation of current military developments."

— Subscription Bks Bul 15:17 Ap '44 900w

HANDBOOK of airplane maintenance and operation; a practical treatment of the assembly, service, maintenance and overhaul of aircraft, engines and accessories. 502p il $4.50 Nat. aeronautics

629.134 Airplanes—Maintenance and repair 44-6611

"By specialists in the Field of Aeronautics. 19 chapters by specialists written in non-technical style on basic principles and functions, construction and repair of all parts of the airplane including types of engines and accessories. Among the chapters are 'The Internal Combustion Engine'; 'Lubrication'; 'The Carburetor'; 'Supercharging of Aircraft Engine Spark Plugs'; 'Propellers' and 'The Construction and Repair of Flying Boats.'" Library J

Library J 69:1003 N 15 '44 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:40 Jl '44

HANDY, WILLIAM CHRISTOPHER, ed. Unsung Americans sung. 236p il $3.50; de luxe ed $5 Handy bros. music co, inc, 1650 Broadway, N.Y. 19

784.8 Negroes—Songs and music 44-40185

"Tributes to 20 outstanding Negroes by Negro writers and composers, and other music and articles pertinent to Negro culture and history, such as the Aframerican hymn, a musical setting for Lincoln's Gettysburg address, and an editorial on the Negro press. Some of those celebrated in song are Crispus Attucks, who was one of the first casualties of the American revolution, Phyllis Wheatley, Paul Laurence Dunbar, Richard Harrison, and Dorie Miller, killed at Pearl Harbor. Many of the songs are arranged for part singing." Booklist

Booklist 41:73 N 1 '44

"Such a compilation must obviously be uneven in its level. Even a quick perusal indicates that sometimes the words are more stimulating than the music and some of the songs will hardly stimulate the singing impulse."

Theatre Arts 28:749 D '44 200w

HANKINS, GRACE CROYLE. Our global world; a brief geography for the air age. 89p il maps $1.32 Gregg

910 Geography 44-2904

"[This] textbook for use in secondary schools gives an over-all view of the world as a community of interdependent nations. . . As an introduction to the study of global geography, the textbook gives an account of man's struggle to conquer distance and of his great achievement in realizing this objective through the development of air travel. The accomplishments of various pioneers in aviation are noted, culminating in the tremendous advances made under the impetus of war. Finally comparisons are made to show that during the last hundred years the reduction of travel time between various parts of the world has had a profound influence on world relationships." School R

"Though apparently written as a challenge to secondary-school students, the book will have genuine appeal for college students in civilian and military classes and for any other thinking adult." M. I. Cole

+ School & Society 60:14 Jl 1 '44 900w

"The book is effectively illustrated with maps and pictures, and it is extremely well written. Its treatment of the subject is neither technical nor exhaustive; rather the book presents a broad view designed to give a clear understanding of the geographic factors that affect social relationships." T. H. Allen

HANKINS, G. C.—Continued

+ School R 52:571 N '44 650w

"Teachers at the secondary school level will welcome this very useful addition to the growing amount of materials dealing with global geography and ways of teaching it." R. H. McF.

+ Social Studies 35:333 N '44 300w

HANNA, PAUL ROBERT, and KRUG, EDWARD AUGUST. Marketing the things we use. 315p il maps $1.60 Scott

658.8 Marketing—Juvenile literature 43-17418

"The third book in the Social studies series trilogy is concerned with the processes involved in the distribution of useful goods from the producer to the consumer. . . Well illustrated with photographs, drawings, charts, and maps. Visual aids: p.306-308." Booklist

Booklist 40:200 F 1 '44

Reviewed by Carlos and D. M. de Zafra
Social Educ 8:380 D '44 230w

"Its illustrations are good and the index very complete. Useable at the junior high school level."

+ Social Studies 35:143 Mr '44 50w

HANNA, PAUL ROBERT; QUILLEN, ISAAC JAMES, and SEARS, PAUL BIGELOW. Making the goods we need. 295p il $1.60 Scott

600 Manufacture—Juvenile literature. Technology—Juvenile literature 43-13246

A textbook for social studies classes. Simple text with many illustrations explains why and how "goods"—clothing, houses, foods, machines, etc.—were produced in former times and how they are produced today.

Booklist 40:200 F 1 '44

Reviewed by Carlos and D. M. de Zafra
Social Educ 8:380 D '44 230w

Social Studies 35:144 Mr '44 40w

HANSEN, ALVIN HARVEY, and PERLOFF, HARVEY S. State and local finance in the national economy. 310p $3.75 Norton

336.73 Finance—U.S. 44-3978

"It is apparent to everyone that the functions of the federal government, state governments, and local governments are undergoing profound change. The conflict between these different levels of government is frequently presented in unrealistic terms. . . This volume undertakes an analysis of federal responsibilities and intergovernmental relations, demonstrating that only when the higher levels of government play their role vigorously and efficiently are conditions created under which subordinate units of government can effectively carry out the functions appropriate to them. . . A novel feature of the book is a chapter which sets out four alternative postwar federal budgets, and shows how these gear into different levels of private investment activity, and also to the budgets of state and local governments." (Publisher's note) Index.

"This book directs attention to an important field—the financial relationships between the private economy and the public economy. It is the first major work in the field to emphasize state and local finances. This is a contribution. Whether it makes any net contribution to clarifying issues or solving problems is open to question." B. U. Ratchford

+ Am Econ R 34:916 D '44 1600w

Reviewed by William Anderson
Am Pol Sci R 38:788 Ag '44 750w

"Here is an exceedingly valuable book. Would that every citizen who attempts to think about public finance might study it carefully! It provides a great deal of stimulation and a great deal of information. While the points presented are not entirely new, it is an excellent summary of modern thought on governmental finance. It would make an excellent text for an advanced course and good supplementary reading for an elementary course in public finance." H. R. Enslow

+ Ann Am Acad 235:150 S '44 600w

Booklist 40:351 Je 15 '44

Reviewed by George Soule
New Repub 111:108 Jl 24 '44 480w

Reviewed by Paul Studenski
Survey G 34:27 Ja '45 470w

HANSON, EARL, and BECKETT, PAUL. Los Angeles: its people and its homes. 206p il maps $1 Haynes foundation

331.833 Housing—Los Angeles. Los Angeles—Population 44-9724

"This volume is 'derived from the published reports of the United States Bureau of the Census resulting from the 1940 Census of Los Angeles.' The writers' 'exploitation of the source has been exhaustive.' It is offered with an uncomfortable feeling that a lot has happened since, and tentative nonstatistical statements are made about changes that are visible to the naked eye. The elaborate tabular and map presentations are proffered as a 'bench mark,' with the suggestion that whether or not the wartime influx stays, it will be helpful to know the facts of 1940." Ann Am Acad

Am Soc R 9:717 D '44 60w

"The volume is a good working tool for a housing-market analyst of the area; but the deliberate abstention from brushing in a historical backdrop or prognosticating future trends—or even piecing in the readily ascertainable facts about the number and location of priority-aided or publicly financed war houses—limits the value of the book to a student of social forces or housing." C. S. Ascher

Ann Am Acad 236:209 N '44 310w

HANSON, PAUL PHILIP. Military applications of mathematics. 447p $3; text ed $2.40 McGraw

355 Military art and science. Mathematics 44-2828

"This book provides applications in military situations of the mathematics learned in secondary school, and previously. The examples and exercises are practical military problems presented in their natural settings in a manner which will give the student an understanding of the way in which the various activities involved are related to each other in combat operations. In addition to its obvious value in giving direct training for military service, this course of study will assist the student to organize and integrate in his mind the various mathematical subjects he has studied, so that he can call upon any part of his knowledge at will when it is needed. The selection and arrangement of the material presuppose a thorough understanding of arithmetic, plus a knowledge of the fundamental principles of elementary algebra, plane geometry, and plane trigonometry, and the ability to do logarithmic computations." (Pref) Index. Answers.

Booklist 40:296 My 1 '44
Library J 69:118 F 1 '44 20w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:8 Ja '44 70w

HARCOURT-SMITH, SIMON. Cardinal of Spain; the life and strange career of Alberoni [Eng title: Alberoni]. 297p $3.50 Knopf [15s Faber]

B or 92 Alberoni, Giulio, cardinal 44-4829

Life of the gardener's son from Parma, who became first minister of Spain, who "raised Spain from decadence, and created the formidable Spanish fleet which was destroyed by Admiral Byng at Cape Passaro in 1718. Mr. Harcourt-Smith thinks British policy mistaken, and has wistful visions of Italy liberated from Austrian rule by an Anglo-Spanish alliance. But these fancies do not disturb his more serious purpose of re-creating the French Court in the last days of Louis XIV and the Spanish Court in the first days of the Bourbon kings." (Manchester Guardian) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Leo Lerman
Atlantic 174:133 S '44 420w

"With [a single] reservation one can only praise the general effect as well as the details of Harcourt-Smith's admirable study. The author is well documented, unprejudiced, intelligent and lively. His style, barring a few preliminary precosities, seems singularly clear and graceful. I heartily recommend 'Cardinal of Spain' as a model of what this kind of history ought to be, but too seldom is." Arthur Meeker, Jr.
+ — Book Week p4 My 21 '44 700w

"The book, rather rambling and discursive, mixes into the historical narrative a good deal of cheap gossip and backstairs scandal; and in many passages the style is confusing and obscure. The text is generously illustrated and on the whole, it is interesting. What book about Alberoni could be otherwise?"
+ — Cath World 160:94 O '44 230w

"Mr. Harcourt-Smith writes wickedly. He has a keen eye for spice and wit, and he can turn a phrase very neatly himself when he has a mind to. Hence his life of Cardinal Alberoni (1664-1752) is a delight. It is not, however, to be recommended to a reader who does not know French or to a reader who is likely to be disturbed by the franknesses and far from admirable conduct so characteristic of Europe's leading figures during a period when moral standards were scarcely noted for their effectiveness."
+ Commonweal 40:135 My 26 '44 700w
Kirkus 12:133 Mr 15 '44 170w

"Philip V and Elizabeth Farnese have been written about before, but never with more understanding; and the social and aesthetic background completes a book which is in every way mighty well done, a pleasure to read and to ponder over." A. J. P. T.
+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 19 '44 150w

Reviewed by Ralph Bates
New Repub 111:82 Jl 17 '44 420w

"So heavy is the seasoning, so intoxicating the draught, the air so drenched with perfumes, musk, jasmine and Schiaparelli's Shocking, that the reader hardly knows if he is above or below the dinner-table when he has finished the meal. Nevertheless, it is not simply a description of the times. Mr. Harcourt-Smith's main historical contention is that if the English had not thwarted Alberoni's precocious Italian nationalism, Mussolini might never have disturbed us, and we should not now be driving the Germans out of Italy... I wish there had been a touch less gossip and a little more about the nature of politics, of the politicians of the time and their policies. For I am sure Mr. Harcourt-Smith would have written as well about such matters as he does about pictures, scenery, food and the foibles of Court life." Noel Annan
+ — New Statesman & Nation 27:62 Ja 22 '44 1000w

"Mr. Harcourt-Smith has an almost musical talent for re-creating the mood of forgotten eras—the atmosphere of lost emotions and obsolete grandeurs. Yet he neglects none of the implications of literal fact, and is often inspired in his research for corrupt and bizarre detail." Christopher Lazare
+ N Y Times p4 My 14 '44 1100w

"Alberoni, while important in his day, happens to be one of the more obscure figures of European history, and though Mr. Harcourt-Smith has done a creditable job of piecing together the known bits of information about him, the portrait of the Cardinal, both as a person and as a political instrument, never becomes very clear. The author's treatment of the social background is, however, excellent."
+ — New Yorker 20:83 My 20 '44 100w

"A pleasant and entertaining book." Edward Hughes
+ Spec 172:60 Ja 21 '44 900w

"Mr Harcourt-Smith has written a thoroughly interesting book but at the end Alberoni remains as mysterious as ever... It is, furthermore, an entertaining picture of the period. The background and the men and women who peopled it—the Regent of France, the melancholy Philip V, Elisabeth Farnese, the English and French envoys and generals—are a large part of the book and by no means the least interesting. It is a lively account of a lively period and well worth reading on this account alone." W. H. H.
+ — Springf'd Republican p4 My 21 '44 700w
Time 43:99 My 22 '44 950w

"The method of writing adopted by Mr. Harcourt-Smith is to enliven the drabness of diplomatic history with the spice of anecdote and intimate detail. He prefers not to grapple with all the difficult historical problems... He defends Alberoni against his English traducers, but since it is hard for the general reader, for whom the book is intended, to understand the exact charges made against his hero, the picture does not seem complete. Mr. Harcourt-Smith writes in a highly florid style not perhaps unsuited to the baroque age with which he deals; but when he describes 'the granite eye' of Philip V surely he goes too far."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p22 Ja 8 '44 850w

"The writing manages to be both very good and very bad. Mr. Harcourt-Smith is sometimes brighter than Mr. Strachey and almost as bright as Mr. Maurice Baring at his best. Unfortunately he can also be more than a bit worse than some who by reason of a loathing for invidious comparisons shall go unnamed. A malign fate impels him to peer into every princely bedchamber for defunct secrets, and to invent them when evidence is lacking. . . And the result is that a book which one should like to say was as brilliant as its own superior moments is often sheer drivel and dust. But it does afford a glimpse of a delightful and significant figure who gave intellectual and even moral distinction to one of the relatively forgotten eras of human history." G. N. Shuster
— + Weekly Book Review p6 My 14 '44 800w

HARD, MRS MARGARET (STEEL). This is Kate. 213p $2.50 Holt
44-5431

Memories of the narrator's youth, which she spent mainly in a convent in Canada. Much of the story is concerned with Kate's inability to fathom the Catholic point of view and customs, for Kate was an English Protestant.

Reviewed by Marion Strobel
Book Week p6 S 3 '44 270w
Booklist 40:377 Jl 1 '44

"Kate Champion is charming when she is just an alert-minded little convent girl but when she becomes an oracle of wisdom while 'on the carpet' for her innocuous misdemeanors, she's a bit less credible. Completely incredible, however, is the Mother Superior. No school head, in or out of a convent, would talk like Kate's superior or make the same decisions and remain a superior for long."
+ — Cath World 160:92 O '44 130w

"The whole book reads very smoothly, and its formula obviously gives the author plenty of scope for quiet amusement. If this were all to be said about this pleasant and rather innocuous novel it scarcely deserved even this much space. But it happens to be written by someone who is not herself a Catholic; unfortunately it is marred by all kinds of strange lapses and unfaithfulnesses to truth which deserve to be pointed out. This is unfortunate and could easily have been remedied by the publishers, for 'This Is Kate' would have been a better book and a more charming book had it, before publication, been carefully read by someone intimately acquainted with the background with which the author deals. . . The blemishes divide themselves equally between a certain freakishness in describing Catholic practices and a certain naiveté in dealing with the Canadian background."
+ — Commonweal 40:232 Je 23 '44 850w
Kirkus 12:181 Ap 15 '44 170w

HARD, MARGARET—Continued

"An interesting portrayal of the difficulties involved in adjusting wholly to one's environment. Would appeal to a rather limited group of readers, mostly feminine." M. E. Clark

Library J 69:554 Je 15 '44 40w

"Mrs. Hard had previously collaborated with her husband on a book about Vermont, their home, but this is her first attempt at fiction. It is a warm, simple chronicle rather than a novel. It has no plot, no conflicts, no important thinking. Although told in the first person, it employs naïvete, alternating, unexpectedly, with adult insight. . . Were it not for the rather worldly outlook of some of the characters this book would be an excellent morality story for children. For an adult it makes pleasant reading as a far-away tale of an ideal girlhood." J. T. Lloyd

+ — N Y Times p7 Je 25 '44 370w

"Perhaps it is unfair to compare so feeble an effort with Kate O'Brien's beautiful and memorable 'The Land of Spices,' but the similiarity of the themes makes such a comparison unavoidable, and annihilating for 'This Is Kate.'"

— New Yorker 20:78 Je 24 '44 140w

"There is much that is ridiculous, and much more that is pathetic in 'This Is Kate.' The story sounds like the day-dreams of a lonesome, unhappy child. Here is found the normal pattern of adolescent fantasy: wise instruction of the adult, the finding and losing of the one perfect friend and the recognition of the heroine's rare quality by the great." Clare Godfrey

+ — Weekly Book Review p7 Jl 2 '44 250w

Wis Lib Bul 40:130 O '44

HARDING, MRS BERTITA (LEONARZ). Lost waltz; a story of exile. 311p il $3.50 Bobbs

923.2439 Hapsburg, House of 44-40352

Chronicle of a Hapsburg family, that of Archduke Leopold Salvator of Austria. At the close of the first World war the family fled to Spain, the native land of the Archduke's wife, where they lived until the Spanish civil war. The ups and downs of this harassed family are described up to the present, when some members, notably the Archduke Franz Joseph, and his sister Assunta, live in America. Index and genealogy of the Hapsburgs.

Booklist 41:139 Ja 1 '45

"The whole dramatic, Graustarkian story of royalty taking to the road, a road which led eventually to New England, is well and vividly told. Christmas shoppers can't do any better than this one." Elizabeth Watts

+ Boston Globe p15 D 13 '44 330w

"Her reverence for royal rococo, her glamoured, intimate approach to historical personages pads out an otherwise insubstantial story which may be carried on her name and theirs."

Kirkus 12:493 N 1 '44 170w

"Recommended for all public libraries." H. A. Carpenter

+ Library J 69:935 N 1 '44 70w

"How Archduke Franz Josef of Austria won his way from the splendor of his ancestral home to a gardener's cottage in America is a very modern success story which Mrs. Harding tells with customary verve and humor. But even her considerable gifts could hardly give this family history a vivid place in the events of recent years; it is the dark pageant of horror, unfolding across Europe, which points up the significance of royalty in retreat." Jane Martin

N Y Times p10 D 10 '44 400w

"While this vivacious narrative is told in an episodic and incomplete manner, its material is as absorbing as any novel's, with special appeal to a vanishing aristocracy. 'Lost Waltz' will be read for more than plain enjoyment by all who still live in that half-real world." H. B. Kranz

Sat R of Lit 28:29 Ja 13 '45 700w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 7 '45 280w

"'Lost Waltz' is richly illustrated with photographs of the family's past splendor and present security. While the span of the book includes a whole world of tragedy, there is no need to grieve for the Hapsburgs, nor does Miss Harding do so. She skips nimbly back and forth between their personal adventures and their political background. In handling the Spanish conflict she is careful to show both sides, and even achieves a measure of power in describing it. But when she remarks that, although Franco is a dictator, he is not so much of an upstart as Hitler and Mussolini since he has 'a better pedigree,' she gives the clue to her book. For Miss Harding is really fascinated by the pedigrees in the families she sets out to describe." Virgilia Sapieha

Weekly Book Review p4 D 10 '44 850w

HARDY, KAY (MRS DOUGLAS JOHN CONNAH). Sewing for the baby; il. by the author. 293p $1.98 Barrows

646.36 Infants—Clothing. Sewing 44-40162

Directions for making various garments needed by the baby and the young child. Includes knitted and crocheted articles. There are chapters on making bedding, fitting out bassinettes and bathinettes, playthings, etc. Index.

Booklist 41:12 S '44

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 Je '44

"The book would seem to inspire confidence in the beginner's ability to make things for her baby. However, the lists of wardrobe requirements seem both impractical and misleading for one who is looking for a sensible guide." R. F. Hamilton

+ — J Home Econ 36:659 D '44 100w

Weekly Book Review p11 S 3 '44 150w

HARKINS, PHILIP. Bomber pilot. 229p $2 Harcourt

44-40174

Picture of the training of bomber pilots, and their subsequent missions over Europe, as told in a story for grades seven to nine.

Booklist 41:43 O 1 '44

"Excitement, adventure, courage and fortitude—and a vivid picture of what it takes to become an Army Air Pilot. . . Of current interest."

+ Kirkus 12:344 Ag 1 '44 50w

"Serious thinking before going into combat, the excitement of battle, the relief of safe return, and concern for the wounded make this more than a mere story for boys from ten years old and up. It has everything they want vividly told. Recommended." A. M. Anderson

+ Library J 69:938 N 1 '44 70w

"This story which seems to an earthbound reader to contain almost every detail of training and combat flight is to be especially recommended for its over-all view of an aviator's job. Characterization is rudimentary, but the crisp prose and quick tempo carry the reader right along with Hudson from Maxwell Field to Frankfort and back." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p15 S 24 '44 160w

"This is a story that boys have been waiting for since the war began. . . It is all told in the vigorous idiom of our day and hour. It is, perhaps, good journalism rather than good literature. But boys from Maine to California will 'eat it up.' It tells them the truth in terms that they will understand."

+ Sat R of Lit 27:44 N 11 '44 230w

HARKNESS, GEORGIA ELMA. Glory of God; poems and prayers for devotional use. 125p $1 Abingdon-Cokesbury

811 Prayers 43-16205

Collection of fifty poems and prayers. The poems are classed as: poems of assurance and aspiration; nature poems; prayer poems and hymns. The prayers are under the following heading: general prayers for personal and corporate worship; prayers for special occasions and needs; prayers for particular groups.

"Miss Harkness has an authentic gift of poetry combined with intellectual power and a deeply devotional spirit."
+ Christian Century 60:1338 N 17 '43 40w

"[These fifty prayers] by the quality of devotion we expect in Miss Harkness' work and the actuality of theme, offer genuine solace or strength to the reader." A. N. Wilder
+ J Religion 24:229 Jl '44 40w
Kirkus 11:525 D 1 '43 40w

HARLEY, JOHN EUGENE. Woodrow Wilson still lives—his world ideals triumphant. 193p $2 Center for int. understanding, 204 Commercial exchange bldg, 8th & Olive sts, Los Angeles 14

321.041 International cooperation. Wilson, Woodrow 44-4759

"Tributes to Woodrow Wilson—in extenso by the author and in brief statements by some thirty figures in political, business and academic life. In the appendix are the texts of several recent documents of international importance." (Foreign Affairs) Index.

"The book is frankly a eulogy, as no mention is made of Wilson's errors which contributed to the Senate's rejection of the League. However, President Roosevelt's recent announcement of his intention to support the creation of a world organization very similar to the old League of Nations gives Professor Harley's book added importance at this time." R. S. McCordock
Am Pol Sci R 38:1016 O '44 190w

"This is all useful material, convenient to have on file. I am sympathetic with the end which Mr. Harley doubtless has in view. . . But is it good strategy to tie this enterprise so tightly to the League of Nations fiasco? It was a fiasco, wherever the blame may lie for its becoming one. A critical and objective historical study of the cause of the failure of the peace has present practical value. But the apotheosis of President Wilson, the vindication of the league and a demand for penitence from all who ever criticized either are not the best foundation upon which to build a united national sentiment in favor of international cooperation for the building of a better world." W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 61:878 Jl 26 '44 300w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:662 Jl '44 30w

HARMON, THOMAS DUDLEY. Pilots also pray. 181p il $2.50 Crowell

B or 92 World war, 1939—Aerial operations. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American 44-9362

Autobiography of the former University of Michigan football player who became a pilot in the army air forces, and twice has made his way back to civilization when his plane has crashed—the first time in a South American jungle, the second time in China.

"The book is written, his publisher says, 'without benefit of ghost,' and the language is colloquial and unpolished. This does not make for smooth reading, but that is a small handicap. Harmon does not have a craftsman's command of the language, but he has, perhaps unconsciously, picked up the art of creating suspense. His readers will stay with him to the end." W. F. Morse
+ Book Week p3 N 5 '44 270w

"Once in a blue moon you can get a man of action backed into a corner where he'll talk simply, naturally and with truth about a job he has been doing. His talk will be filled with the regular man talk of America. You won't find the polished periods of the Man of Letters or the strained anecdotes and episodic style of the professional biographer. This is that kind of book." R. F. Denvir
+ Boston Globe p19 N 8 '44 440w
Christian Century 61:1355 N 22 '44 80w

"There's no doubt that he really wrote it, for it is in the simple language of an unpretentious young fellow who struggled through the University of Michigan, and then became an Army Air Forces pilot—and a good one." M. W. B.
+ Christian Science Monitor p18 N 8 '44 200w

"Definitely not one of the superior personal stories—though Tom Harmon, with his miraculous hairbreath escapes should be subject for one such. This seems slightly naive and college themeish. But for those who want to read the story of the famous Michigan football hero, now pilot in the Army Air Corps, this is adequate."
+ — Kirkus 12:416 S 15 '44 140w

"No literary style is employed in the narrative: it is as if Harmon were telling the story in an Ann Arbor bull session. It adds up to a refreshing experience in war literature. . . The book is naive, amateurish, without distinction: but it strikes the right note. It is honest; it is without cunning; it contains no artifices." Thomas Haynes
+ N Y Times p16 N 19 '44 480w

Reviewed by Cyril Clemens
Springf'd Republican p6 D 6 '44 350w
Weekly Book Review p24 N 26 '44 200w

HARNED, HERBERT SPENCER, and OWEN, BENTON BROOKS. Physical chemistry of electrolytic solutions. 611p $10 Reinhold

541.37 Solution (chemistry). Electrolytes 44-1151

"This volume discusses purely theoretical aspects of physical chemistry of electrolytic solutions followed by experimental methods and properties of strong and weak electrolytes. Contains many bibliographic footnotes and numerous tables of constants and theoretical functions. Useful in any field involving ions in solutions." Library J

"The most valuable part of the book is the bringing together of experimental work. . . A glossary of symbols at the beginning is very helpful. The convenience as a reference book could have been increased greatly by having the chapter and section numbers at the top of each page. Trivial slips like typographical errors, split infinitives, and stabilization energy from proton resonance have been kept infrequent, though they have not been entirely eliminated." George Scatchard
+ — Am Chem Soc J 66:1043 Je '44 1050w

"The plan of the monograph makes for an excellent organization of the details of the field. The subject index has been carefully prepared, and has one unusual but extremely useful innovation compared to other books on physical chemistry—names of compounds are included. The nomenclature is conventional and follows the original literature as closely as possible; unlike many authors, Harned and Owen spared the reader the memorizing of a new set of hieroglyphics." R. M. Fuoss
+ Chem & Eng N 22:278 F 25 '44 800w

"All in all, your reviewer feels that this is truly a streamlined text, written in clear language (and good English) by critical scientists. Everybody who works in this field should have this text on his bookshelf for ready reference." F. C. Nachod
+ Chem & Met Eng 51:189 Ag '44 250w

"The wealth of material, both theoretical and experimental, contained in this volume will make it invaluable to the physical chemist and the graduate student in chemistry whenever adequate information about electrolytic solutions is desired. Author and subject indexes are satisfactory and, in addition, a detailed table of contents adds greatly to the usefulness of the book." F. H. MacDougall
+ J Phys Chem 48:231 Jl '44 500w
Library J 69:119 F 1 '44 110w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:5 Ja '44

HARPER, WILHELMINA, comp. Uncle Sam's story book; adventures of yesterday's boys and girls; pictured by Grace Paull. 144p $2 McKay

44-47729

Contents: The family who never had a clock, by Hildegard Woodward; Deborah travels alone, by Alice Dalgleish; The blue rocking chair's story, by C. S. Bailey; Chooky, by Lucille Wallower; Bud and Little Cousin, by Elvira Garner; Johnny and his mule, by Ellis Credle; Christmas! Christmas!, by F. C. Sayers; Sah-Mee and the rabbit hunt, by M. H. Fellows; A little bear goes to school, by E. R. Sickels; Oh Susannah, by Ruth and Richard Holberg; Log cabin children, by M. D. Horn; Cowboy Tommy, by Sanford Tousey; On to Oregon, by Margot Austin; Sarah Deborah's day begins, by Charlotte Jackson.

Booklist 41:141 Ja 1 '45

Commonweal 41:257 D 22 '44 10w

"It's wholesome but not insipid, for it is well seasoned with a spicy and savory flavor. All markets."

+ Kirkus 12:509 N 1 '44 70w

"It will be usable as an introduction to stories from which these chapters are taken and for story-hour use with first and second graders. Recommended for third to fifth grades." Elizabeth Burr

+ Library J 70:70 Ja 15 '45 80w

"While these tales are of quite recent publication, they are scattered through so many books that to get them all in one is particularly pleasant. They are newly illustrated in color." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p5 D 24 '44 120w

HARPER, WILHELMINA, comp. Yankee yarns; stories from the northeastern states; il. by Nedda Walker. (Our states in story) 315p $2.50 Dutton

44-3605

The first in a series of anthologies. There are to be five volumes in all, each containing stories about a region of the United States. This volume has stories from: Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New York, Pennsylvania, and New Jersey. Two "tall tales" are included, with a few facts of interest about each state. For older boys and girls.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p10 My 14 '44 210w

Booklist 40:324 My 15 '44

"The stories are nicely balanced between those of past history and those of here and now." F. C. Darling

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 13 '44 120w

"It is difficult to say which of these charming stories will be the best loved among their readers. But it is an unusually fine collection of regional stories and should have a wide appeal."

+ Kirkus 12:173 Ap 1 '44 80w

"Twenty-five charming stories, by well-known and best-loved children's writers." Ethel Reiman

+ Library J 69:404 My 1 '44 80w

"The book is a distinguished collection of regional stories. Pictures of unusual charm by Nedda Walker decorate this book." M. K. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 16 '44 90w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p5 My 21 '44 250w

Wis Lib Bul 40:112 Jl '44

HARPER'S BAZAAR. It's a woman's world; ed. by Mary Louise Aswell. 346p $3 McGraw

Short stories—Collections 44-2899

A collection of short stories by and about women, reprinted from Harper's Bazaar. Among the authors included are Colette, Eudora Welty, Dorothy Baker, Virginia Woolf, Dorothy Parker, Nancy Hale, Kay Boyle, Anita Loos, Janet Flanner, Mary McCarthy.

Reviewed by Sterling North

Book Week p2 Ap 2 '44 320w

Booklist 40:318 My 15 '44

"A collection of literary merit as well as entertainment value, high-styled writing with more than purely contemporary appeal. . . Top names for high grade material with very few omissions from the front line of women writers."

+ Kirkus 12:48 F 1 '44 130w

"The authors of these stories, sketches and novelettes are, most of them, extremely ingenious, knowing and possessed of a sure artistry. Considering that all the material stems from the same publication, the themes, viewpoints and backgrounds portrayed are surprisingly divergent. If there must be anthologies, which invariably bear irrelevant if not misleading labels, an all-female selection makes as sensible a bracket as any other, and the present one proves, at least, that if and when women writers take over the world of literature there will still be good books." Kenneth Fearing

N Y Times p7 Ap 23 '44 750w

"Though the 'Bazaar' chiefly projects a never-never-land of lush materialism and sophisticated modernity whose denizens would infinitely rather be soignée than serene, I think we need not take this fact, so far as it bears on these pieces, too seriously. For not one of the stories is materialistic in its orientation or determinedly 'smart.' Many of the best of our women writers—Kay Boyle and Mary McCarthy, Virginia Woolf and that other able Woolf, Maritta, and Eudora Welty and Edita Morris, for instance—seem to be here present in the full courage of their creative convictions. And in this varied yet astonishingly harmonious collection, they give us their version, fleeting yet deeply revealing, of the worlds they live in." F. H. Bullock

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ap 2 '44 800w

HARRIMAN, MRS MARGARET (CASE). Take them up tenderly; a collection of Profiles. 266p $2.75 Knopf

927.92 Theater—U.S. U.S.—Biography

44-8539

"Author is well known for her profiles in The New Yorker of which this anthology is a sample. She is the daughter of Frank Case, famed boniface of the Algonquin, which has prepared her for face-to-face evaluations of her theatrical subjects. She is shrewd, witty, amusing, occasionally penetrating, frequently catty and rarely inaccurate though this anthology is not without its share of factual errors. Gilbert Miller, Clare Boothe Luce, Moss Hart, Lillian Hellman, Helen Hayes, Cole Porter and Rodgers and Hart are among the subjects grilled à la Harriman." Library J

Booklist 41:76 N 1 '44

Cath World 160:381 Ja '45 110w

"This collection of profiles all of which are about theater people . . . sparkle with wit, facts and stories. Even the essay which is the least interesting basically (the one about John-Frederics) is so divertingly written that it holds one's attention. My favorites were the pieces about Helen Hayes, Gilbert Miller, Clare Boothe and Fanny Holtzmann, the lawyer who made cinema history when Princess Youssoupoff won her case against M-G-M over 'Rasputin and the Empress.'" P. T. Hartung

+ Commonweal 41:283 D 29 '44 420w

"Not an evaluation, but a double-faced mirroring of prominent characteristics and personalities, amusing, sword-edged."

Kirkus 12:390 S 1 '44 130w

"Recommended for general as well as theater collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 69:882 O 15 '44 70w

"If [the book] seems dithery and precious in spots, it is because the people of the theatre happen to be that way. If you don't mind these personal qualities, you will have an excellent time with this book; if impatient of them, even in artists, you will spend a good deal of your time in squirming. Mrs. Harriman avows her love for them in her foreword and, on the whole, she does take them up tenderly, as her title suggests that she does." Jack Alexander

+ — N Y Times p4 O 15 '44 440w

New Yorker 20:99 O 21 '44 50w

Springf'd Republican p6 O 25 '44 330w

" 'Take Them Up Tenderly' does not exactly treat them with care, but it is beautifully informative. Possibly a few truly great souls are above the enjoyment of a bit of low-down on other folks. This bucketful of low-down on so dazzling a concatenation of big shots is pure and heady eggnog to the rest of us." Iris Barry

+ Weekly Book Review p18 D 10 '44 750w

HARRINGTON, FRED HARVEY. God, mammon, and the Japanese; Horace N. Allen and Korean-American relations, 1884-1905. 362p il $3.75 Univ. of Wis. press

B or 92 Korea—Foreign relations. Allen, Horace Newton. Eastern question (Far East). Japanese in Korea 44-2219

"A biography of Dr. Horace N. Allen. Horace Allen was a graduate of Ohio Wesleyan University, and was affected by the zeal for missions characteristic of that institution. . . With his young wife he went to China, then to Korea, arriving at a time of crisis in Korean affairs. . . Allen quickly won the respect of the Koreans and the personal friendship of the emperor. At first the only Protestant missionary in Korea, Allen obtained royal funds for a hospital, opened the way for other missionaries, and laid the foundation for the substantial Christian work ultimately stopped by the Japanese. But Horace Allen was not only a missionary. Harrington shows very clearly how he gradually came to interest himself in American investments in Korea and in the protection of American commercial interests. Eventually his activities were recognized by the State Department and he became our minister to Korea." Book Week

"A sober, scholarly study of American relations with Korea." Tyler Dennett

+ Am Hist R 50:101 O '44 950w

Reviewed by G. N. Steiger

Am Pol Sci R 38:1249 D '44 450w

"A case history of general value to all students of Far Eastern history and of particular value to specialists in Korean affairs." A. W. Griswold

+ Ann Am Acad 234:144 Jl '44 370w

"Harrington's biography is a thoroughly vigorous and readable book. The personality of Allen was far from likable and his public record far from consistent. Harrington reveals him candidly and clearly." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p10 Mr 5 '44 360w

"This book is a readable and astonishing description of how one versatile, dynamic and persistent Yankee influenced the destiny of Korea and modified the course of events in the Far East." J. S. Burgess

+ Christian Century 61:1136 O 4 '44 1100w

"The author, who is chairman of the Department of History and Political Science at the University of Arkansas, has sought with success to bring forth material not previously available in what he rightly terms 'an important and much neglected field.'. . Mr. Harrington notes that he was unable to secure access to the archives of certain missionary boards. . . From State Department archives, however, Mr. Harrington obtained a great deal bearing upon Dr. Allen's period of diplomatic service, including years as Minister of Korea." R. G.

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ap 8 '44 800w

"Professor Harrington has made a fascinating book out of the activities of this early American missionary who mixed business promotion with his religious efforts."

+ Current Hist 6:356 Ap '44 160w

"Mr. Harrington has here given pleasing proof that an academic publication may be scholarly without being dull. This is the story, humanly and historically interesting and typically American, of Dr. Horace N. Allen, who brought the Gospel message and some rudiments of modern medicine to Korea and, in the author's words, 'combined intrigue with soul-saving and became a dollar diplomat.' " W. H. C.

+ N Y Times p22 Jl 30 '44 400w

Reviewed by Tyler Dennett

Pacific Affairs 17:233 Je '44 460w

"This book is not only a fine contribution to history, it is also one that should be regarded as indispensable to the policy-makers who will shape the Far Eastern framework at the close of this war." P. H. Clyde

+ Pol Sci Q 59:289 Je '44 900w

HARRISON, RICHARD EDES. Look at the world; the Fortune atlas for world strategy; text by the editors of Fortune. 60p $3.50 Knopf

912 Atlases Map44-151

A collection of maps, mostly in color, many of them first published in Fortune (magazine). The author's purpose is to give a better idea of relative positions of land masses and to do so he has, in most instances, discarded the Mercator projection and also the convention that north is at the top of the map. Index.

Reviewed by Ernest von Hartz

Book Week p4 Jl 16 '44 170w

"Mr. Harrison's maps do not provide a substitute for a good atlas; the most informative way in which to make use of them is with a good atlas of the traditional sort lying alongside. But as a means of making it clear that the world is round and that every man sees it differently, depending on the spot where he stands, the Harrison maps are invaluable."

+ Christian Century 61:903 Ag 2 '44 220w

Christian Science Monitor p14 Jl 7 '44 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 Je '44

"Highly original and beautifully prepared maps. . . They will be of interest and use to any mentally agile reader who doesn't object to unconventional cartography."

+ Foreign Affairs 23:4 O '44 30w

Reviewed by W. D. Jones

Geog R 34:673 O '44 650w

Kirkus 12:274 Je 15 '44 150w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 69:652 Ag '44 40w

"Atlases with maps that view land masses from unusual angles and perspectives are often more stimulating than informative. I suspect that a good deal of the contemporary attempt to give maps novelty in projection and perspective in the alleged cause of greater understanding approaches intellectual faddism. Certainly it has been greatly overdone." Francis Brown

N Y Times p5 Je 25 '44 280w

Reviewed by R. E. Harrison

Sat R of Lit 27:5 Jl 1 '44 300w

"This slim volume with its over-size pages fully realized our expectations. There are 33 pages of maps in full color, superbly reproduced by offset-lithography, as well as 11 pages of maps in black and white or brown and white. The orthodox geographer may be pardoned for asserting that many of these 'exhibits which you call maps are not maps at all,' but the fact is that they elucidate geography as it has never before been elucidated. They will most assuredly help us free ourselves from 'the geometrical and psychological shackles of conventional maps.' "

+ Scientific Bk Club R 15:2 Jl '44 480w

" 'Look at the World' resulted from Mr. Harrison's collaboration with research experts of Time and Life. The fruits are handsome and no doubt a fine preparation for the aviation age now coming up."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 3 '44 220w

"This is the handsomest atlas this cartographer dilettante has seen." Marcus Duffield

+ Weekly Book Review p1 Je 25 '44 500w

HART, RICHARD. Marching home; complete war and post-war handbook for service men and families. 182p $2.75; pa $1.89 Arco

355.1 U.S.—Armed services—Handbooks, manuals, etc. Veterans 43-17893

"According to its subtitle, this book constitutes a 'Complete War and Postwar Handbook for Servicemen and their Families.' In the first thirty chapters, the author presents, in considerable detail, factual data on two important subjects: 'Problems of Demobilization,' including a statement of government plans for demobilizing and rehabilitating members of the armed forces; and 'Legal Problems' which accompany the period of military service. In the remaining pages, Mr. Hart offers a more generalized discussion, on an interpretive level, of questions which are uppermost in the minds of the serviceman and his family. Such questions range all the way from 'How to Keep the Home Fires Burning' to 'How to Advance in Military Service.'" Survey

Booklist 40:177 Ja 15 '44

"Caseworkers may be uneasy over the rather superficial treatment of such questions as wartime marriages, the 'other woman' situation, and the problems involved in A.W.O.L. Generally speaking, however, social workers, especially those in agencies that are not war-connected, will find the first part of the book a ready and usable source of information on the problems which are created for families and for individuals when a man is inducted into military service." M. J. McCormick

+ — Survey 80:141 Ap '44 700w

HART, W. E. pseud. Hitler's generals. 222p il $2.75 Doubleday [8s 6d Cresset]

923.5 Germany—Army. Generals. World war, 1939—Biography 44-40132

Biographical essays on some of Hitler's army and navy leaders, among them von Fritsch, von Rundstedt, Rommel, Milch, von Brauchitsch, Keitel, von Bock, Doenitz and Raeder. Brief facts about each are given and the contribution of each toward Germany's war effort.

Reviewed by H. L. Reich

Book Week p3 Je 4 '44 550w

Booklist 40:354 Je 15 '44

"Despite the unfluent style this is a book that cannot well be ignored."

+ — Boston Globe p17 My 24 '44 300w

Christian Science Monitor p12 O 21 '44 750w

"These sketches of several generals and two admirals were drawn by a onetime German officer, who more lately fought in the British Army. Though his portraits are fuzzy and lack the corroborative detail necessary to make them convincing, they at least serve to document the moral depravity into which the Prussian officer corps has sunk."

+ — Foreign Affairs 23:12 O '44 50w

"Cleancut, direct coverage of men of power too little known. . . A book for the market interested in thorough background on the enemy we are fighting."

+ Kirkus 12:132 Mr 15 '44 190w

"An interesting book, authoritative and easy to read. Recommended for any library." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 69:402 My 1 '44 100w

"As we enter the crisis of the war against Germany a first-rate book on Hitler's generals would be of great value to the Army and the reading public. Unfortunately, Mr. Hart's book does not measure up to these demands. The author unquestionably knows a great deal about the inner politics of the Nazi army up to 1938, but the many inaccuracies which mar his text undermine confidence in his conclusions." H. A. De Weerd

N Y Times p7 My 21 '44 1150w

Spec 178:460 My 19 '44 210w

"Not a great deal is known even in Germany about the men whose careers and personalities form the subject of this book; in this country, except to students of military affairs, very little. Nor can it be said that Mr. Hart throws very much light on them. He is stated on the jacket to have been an army officer during the German Republic, and he may have drawn for his information on stores of knowledge which are unimpeachable; but he does not reveal what his authorities are. There is no indication throughout the book of the sources from which his statements are taken."

Times [London] Lit Sup p172 Ap 8 '44 360w

"If you believe Mr. Hart's picture, Brauchitsch is really a pleasant, socially minded, well educated aristocrat, a fellow who would invite you to put him on the top of your candidate list for a German Badoglio. . . The book is especially critical about Rommel, the new commander in chief of the anti-invasion front. In the author's opinion, Rommel's greatest gift is a genuine talent for Rommel publicity. . . In spite of the shortcomings 'Hitler's Generals' is a very readable book. It assembles knowledge, hitherto available only in confidential government reports, in quite an impressive group biography of a number of maladjusted egotists, who not so long ago commanded enough power to threaten the freedom of the world." Paul Hagen

+ — Weekly Book Review p8 My 21 '44 1300w

HARTLEY, J. M. The way. 187p $2.50 Crowell 44-40179

Story of Palestine during the days of Roman rule, when Jesus of Nazareth was a youth of twenty. The central character is the Roman centurian Severus, sent by the emperor to spy on Balthazar, the Egyptian priest who was "seeking the nameless lad" whose birth he had celebrated years before. With the stoning and death of Severus' beautiful young Hebrew mistress the novel comes to a close.

"'The Way' is another story of the Gospel era. . . It is a tale of weary men in a weary world, seeking a new leader and a new way of life. With a theme of this kind, 'The Way' should have been an intensely gripping book, but it is not. A really astonishing degree of tedium is achieved and maintained with a fidelity which, under other circumstances, would have been admirable. In view of the scarcity of worthwhile books about the Gospel times, this is regrettable." B. J. Sheil

— Book Week p6 O 22 '44 500w

Booklist 41:58 O 15 '44

"A novel of the time of Christ is always interesting if it is well written and if it avoids the conventional groove. This is and does. . . It is an ingenious tale, fluently told, but the background which should be historical is as imaginative as the frankly fictitious episodes."

+ — Christian Century 61:1140 O 4 '44 380w

"With all the fictionized stories of the period recorded in the Gospels one expects a certain overlapping and repetition. This, surprisingly enough, is wholly fresh and new—and essentially readable."

+ Kirkus 12:307 Jl 15 '44 340w

Reviewed by John Cournos

N Y Times p10 O 22 '44 440w

"Those who have not already become sated with stories of the early Christian era, will find themselves well repaid by reading 'The Way.' . . The author has a story to tell and he tells it exceptionally well." H. J. Sloan

+ Springf'd Republican p4d O 1 '44 330w

HARTOG, MABEL HELENE (KISCH) lady. India in outline. 110p il map $2 Macmillan [6s Cambridge]

915.4 India [A44-2968]

Brief outline of India's political, economic, social and human problems, with enough of Hindu history to explain the background of those problems. Tables. Bibliography. Index.

"A valuable and eminently readable exposition." J. C.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Je 16 '44 150w

"As an analysis of the Indian situation, this book has little that is new to offer to those who have already read any one of its numerous predecessors. No one can quarrel with Lady Hartog's conclusion in which she expresses the hope that Britain and India 'may enter on a new relationship based on greater friendship, better collaboration and truer understanding than ever before.' But she does little to show how this hope can become a reality." K. L. Mitchell

N Y Times p14 S 10 '44 600w

"Readers of Lady Hartog's Living India will not be disappointed with her latest work. India in Outline is a marvel of compression; within the narrow limits of a little more than one hundred pages, she manages to bring together quite an extraordinary amount of information about the country, and yet the result is never dull or bewildering. . . The book contains a number of useful appendices and a bibliography, and a special word must be said with regard to the admirable photographs, which are carefully selected to illustrate the text." H. G. Rawlinson

+ Spec 172:573 Je 23 '44 750w

"The momentous events of the past eight years call for the wider approach Lady Hartog makes in her latest book on India. The war is leaving a profound mark on Indian history, and Britain is irrevocably committed to the completion of Indian self-government after the war on lines to be hammered out by Indians themselves. No one could be better qualified to link these subjects to the Indian background than Lady Hartog, who knows and loves the country, has followed its fortunes closely, and has come into friendly contact with many of its leading personalities."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p232 My 13 '44 240w

HARVESTER, SIMON, pseud. See Gibbs, H.

HARWOOD, PAISLEY BEACH. Control of electric motors. 2d ed 479p il $5 Wiley

621.3174 Electric controllers. Electric motors 44-4471

"Second edition [is] revised to conform to the latest practice. Includes recently developed devices and methods. New chapters on synchronous motor control, single-phase motor control and variable-voltage control." (Library J) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1937. Index.

Booklist 40:391 Jl 15 '44

Reviewed by A. E. Knowlton

Chem & Met Eng 51:203 O '44 70w

Library J 69:462 My 15 '44 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:23 Ap '44

Special Libraries 35:100 Mr '44

HASE, VERN E., and ALLEN, RALPH W. Marine pipefitting. 325p il $3 McGraw

623.85 Marine engineering. Pipe fitting 44-4482

"A practical text for the student of marine pipe-fitting. In addition to general shop-work and installation, it describes tools, valves, ship compartmentation, and gives detailed explanations for carrying out special jobs, such as pipe-bending, silver brazing, lead working and mitering. Several chapters deal with piping systems used for steam, water, oil, gasoline, drainage, and refrigeration. An appendix includes tables of pipe and flange sizes, trigonometric functions, and similar useful information." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Library J 69:462 My 15 '44 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:26 Ap '44

HASKELL, RUTH G. Helmets and lipstick. 207p $2.50 Putnam

940.547573 World war, 1939—Medical and sanitary affairs. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American 44-3563

Account of the experiences of an American army nurse, who went from Camp Forrest in Tennessee, to Scotland, England, and North Africa. She was hurt while on duty in North Africa, was flown back to the United States for an operation, and, fully recovered, was anxious to return to the war zone.

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '44

"Miss Haskell tells the story of these momentous months simply and unaffectedly. Unfortunately she has not the gift of vivid writing. She hasn't made half enough of its excitement and drama. She has overburdened her account with trivial conversations and equally trivial anecdotes, while in her desire to make it informal she has depended too largely on a sort of flip slanginess. But she is obviously a woman of courage and selfless devotion." M. S. Ulrich

+ — Sat R of Lit 27:64 Ap 15 '44 340w

"'Helmets and Lipstick' is an interesting addition to the war's library of personal narrative."

+ Weekly Book Review p10 Ap 2 '44 150w

HASTINGS, DOROTHY GRACE. Death at the depot. 241p $2 Harper

44-9097

Mystery story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p9 N 5 '44 140w

"Short on action, long on conjecture, this is amusing as a parody."

+ Kirkus 12:329 Ag 1 '44 80w

"While no baffler, this is recommended for its accurate and highly amusing rendering of assorted Vermont types."

+ New Repub 111:502 O 16 '44 60w

"This is a novel way of presenting a mystery story and, as the author handles it, a most effective and diverting way." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p20 O 22 '44 140w

"The events are presented chiefly through the conversation of the men and women who eat at Mrs. Barnard's rooming house, as fine a collection of rural eccentrics as you are likely to meet. This method unfortunately slows down an otherwise fine first mystery."

+ — New Yorker 20:100 O 21 '44 60w

"Enjoyable."

+ Sat R of Lit 27:46 O 14 '44 50w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p20 O 15 '44 100w

HATCH, ALDEN. General Ike; a biography of Dwight D. Eisenhower. 288p $2.50 Holt

B or 92 Eisenhower, Dwight David 44-9763

Semi-fictionized biography of General Eisenhower. Illustrated with photographs. Index.

Reviewed by W. F. Morse

Book Week p6 D 10 '44 250w

Booklist 41:151 Ja 15 '45

"One of the most interesting points about 'General Ike' is the clarity with which it shows Eisenhower's character and development to be peculiarly, vitally American."

+ Boston Globe p16 N 15 '44 70w

Christian Science Monitor p12 D 19 '44 500w

"Straight corn, with very little material which has not been accessible before, in an obvious and over-ebullient biography of Dwight Eisenhower."

— Kirkus 12:475 O 15 '44 170w

"An adult book which is timely and suitable for older boys and girls as well. Recommended for public and school libraries." J. S. Cleavinger

+ Library J 69:999 N 15 '44 80w

"Mr. Hatch apparently has had access to sources very close to General Eisenhower's family; at least, he quotes many conversations between General Eisenhower and his wife and son at which it is hardly probable any third person was present. His picture of their family life is oversentimentally presented, but none the less interesting. His chapters on General

HATCH, ALDEN—Continued
Eisenhower's military career contain little information that has not been previously published." Francis Scott
N Y Times p12 N 19 '44 440w

"Mr. Hatch's treatment varies from page to page, ranging from the purely factual to the impurely fictional, and his attempts to set down the inner thoughts and emotions of General Eisenhower are not much more than slapdash literary exercises. He has, however, collected a lot of facts about the Allied Commander-in-Chief . . . and the discussion of some of the more celebrated events in the General's career . . . is valuable for its presentation of Eisenhower's own sound and sensible point of view."
+ — New Yorker 20:98 N 25 '44 140w

"Mr. Hatch features the amiable Kansan's modesty, honesty, democracy, industry, and studiousness. He plays up the great strategist's diplomacy, his skill in choosing his aides, his flair for tactical surprise, his brilliance in playing a long shot against the enemy. Even if these characteristics do not per se explain the military genius of General Eisenhower, they help vitalize and humanize the portrait of an extraordinary leader of men. 'General Ike,' incidentally, serves as a vivid review of the United States' role in the European war." H. C. Wolfe
+ Sat R of Lit 27:62 D 2 '44 550w

"Mr. Hatch has written his biography of Eisenhower in semi-fictionalized form. . . The advantage of this style of biographical writing is that it makes for swift, entertaining reading. The disadvantage is that one is never quite sure what is fiction and what is fact." Marcus Duffield
+ — Weekly Book Review p22 N 19 '44 650w

HATCH, ALDEN. Young Willkie. 224p il $2.50 Harcourt

B or 92 Willkie, Wendell Lewis 44-3549

Biographical sketch of Wendell Willkie, from babyhood to 1917. The book contains some material on Willkie's immediate ancestors.

Reviewed by Sterling North
Book Week p2 Ap 9 '44 350w
Booklist 40:303 My 1 '44

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 27 '44 150w

"One finishes reading this book with a feeling of regret that you couldn't have shared life with the Willkie family, either as a friend or a neighbor. They enjoyed living so hugely. . . An engrossing biography."
+ Kirkus 12:174 Ap 1 '44 140w

"Simply, but very well expressed, this biography is so well handled that it might be that of any American boy. For this reason it will be fine for a high school library and though not a classic it may remain as 'Americana' material." M. L. Goodwin
+ Library J 69:556 Je 15 '44 50w

"It doesn't make dramatic or exciting reading—indeed there seems to be a good deal made of some rather trivial incidents—but it is a human, readable narrative, lightened with humor, which is, rather curiously in this campaign year, addressed to readers not yet of voting age." E. L. Buell
+ — N Y Times p18 Ap 9 '44 280w

"The story is a fast-paced one. But even reading it as rapidly as its readers will, one sees why every photograph in it has practically the same face that Wendell Willkie wears now. It is the story of a permanent personality. He is what he is, and one may be sure he always will be." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ap 9 '44 850w

HATCHER, HARLAN HENTHORNE. The Great Lakes. 384p il maps $3.50 Oxford

977 Great Lakes 44-9419

Comprehensive volume on the history of the Great Lakes from the days of discovery and exploration to the present.

Book Week p44 D 3 '44 130w
Booklist 41:105 D 1 '44

"An unusually successful history of the Great Lakes and the territory surrounding them. Mr. Hatcher has done a fine job of balance and selection."
+ Kirkus 12:416 S 15 '44 250w

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds
N Y Times p6 Ja 28 '45 600w

"Undoubtedly the best up-to-date work on our inland seas in one volume. It would be difficult to gather together the mass of information called for in such an assignment and write it in smoother and more readable form than the author has done. Mr Hatcher has a touch that makes a dry statistic look attractive." G. W. B.
+ Springf'd Republican p8 N 7 '44 440w

"Mr. Hatcher's book is well and carefully written. . . The index is a poor job. And one of the end-paper maps is so distorted it should be ignored." Stewart Holbrook
+ — Weekly Book Review p2 N 5 '44 1150w

HATHAWAY, MRS WINIFRED (PHILLIPS). Education and health of the partially seeing child; pub. for the Nat. soc. for the prevention of blindness, incorporated. 216p il $2.50 Columbia univ. press [12s 6d Oxford]

371.911 Children, Abnormal and backward. Education of children. Children—Care and hygiene. Blindness—Prevention A44-154

"In this book, published for the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, Inc., Mrs. Hathaway explains the principles underlying educational procedures and health services for partially seeing children, and shows how they may be applied to further the education and health of these children. She describes specifically the equipment, mechanical devices, and teaching methods that are available, and discusses the various problems of classification, supervision, and financing involved." (School & Society) Glossary. Bibliography. Index.

"This book may be thought of as an authoritative and essential handbook and guide to all those with professional responsibility for the education, health and general welfare of children." M. E. Rugen
+ Am J Pub Health 34:1192 N '44 500w

"Mrs. Hathaway, who understands her subject so well and can treat it so sympathetically, has given us a volume that expresses in careful detail just how we should go about establishing these classes that are so needed. She considers the subject in all its phases. She does not minimize the problems that are involved; but she no less demonstrates that nearly all these problems are capable of solution. In her book are included a valuable glossary, an explanation of the necessary equipment for the classes, and means of testing children's vision." Harry Best
+ Am Soc R 9:573 O '44 300w
Booklist 40:351 Je 15 '44
School & Society 59:15 Ja 1 '44 80w

HATSCHEK, PAUL. Electron-optics; tr. by Arthur Palme. 161p il $3 Am. photographic pub.

535 Optics, Electronic 44-2315

"A non-mathematical discussion of electrons and electron beams, their production, refraction and application in such devices as television tubes. The German original was published in 1937. The electron microscope and other recent applications are treated briefly in a final chapter by the translator. For lay readers." (N Y New Tech Bks) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 40:321 My 15 '44

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:305 Ap 1 '44 60w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:6 Ja '44

"The book is undoubtedly very stimulating and instructive to the layman who wishes to acquaint himself with devices utilizing electron beams. . . However, the book is of doubtful value to the research physicist or undergraduate student. The reason for this statement is twofold. In the first place, the book contains a large number of errors, some of which may possibly be excused as typographical. Secondly, some of the discussions and analogies used are not only inaccurate, but may be definitely misleading, especially to a student who intends to delve further into the field. . . The purpose of the book is laudable, and this reviewer believes that there is a real need for more books of this type. However, there is no excuse for employing inaccurate analogies and meaningless comparisons." P. H. Miller, Jr.

— + R of Scientific Instruments 15:260 O '44 650w

HAURWITZ, BERNHARD, and AUSTIN, JAMES MURDOCH. Climatology. 410p $4.50 McGraw

551.5 Climatology 44-8852

"General climatology, distribution and variation of the climatic elements and climates of the earth written for meteorologists and the climate of each continent and ocean discussed from the point of view of the weather forecaster." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 41:148 Ja 15 '45
Library J 69:814 O 1 '44 40w

HAUSMAN, LEON AUGUSTUS. Illustrated encyclopedia of American birds; il. by Jacob Bates Abbott. (Halcyon house publication) 541p $1.98 Blue ribbon bks.

598.2 Birds—North America 44-2591

Brief descriptions of fourteen hundred and twenty-two species and subspecies of birds found in North America. The arrangement is alphabetical. Illustrated with line drawings. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 40:297 My 1 '44
Bookmark 5:6 My '44

"A useful work of reference for anyone who does not want to study birds profoundly."
+ New Yorker 20:90 Ap 8 '44 110w

HAUSMANN, ERICH, and SLACK, EDGAR P. Physics; revision by the Physics staff, Dept. of electrical engineering, U.S. naval academy. 2d U S naval acad ed 857p il $5.50 Van Nostrand

530 Physics 44-4068

"A comprehensive and up-to-date text, useful in libraries for its compact treatment of physical principles and for its discussions of applications in such mechanisms as the gyroscopic compass. Includes many problems with answers. This revision of the first Naval Academy edition (1941) contains corrections and important changes." (N Y New Tech Bks) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1936. Answers to problems. Index.

Library J 69:462 My 15 '44 30w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:30 Ap '44

"The Physics Staff of the Naval Academy has accomplished a difficult task in improving on what was already a superior textbook of physics. The revised Naval Academy edition will, without doubt, serve well as a textbook for the general physics courses at Annapolis and elsewhere. In addition it is to be highly recommended to the instructors and students in the V-12 and V-7 programs as an excellent reference on naval applications of physical principles." B. B. Watson
+ R of Scientific Instruments 15:255 O '44 500w

HAVEN, VIOLET SWEET. Gentlemen of Japan; a study in rapist diplomacy. 321p il $3 Ziff-Davis

327.52 Japan—Foreign relations. Japan—Politics and government. World war, 1939—Japan 44-7738

"The meticulous fashion in which the 'gentlemen of Japan' prepared for war is a story that . . . is well told here, mostly on the level of the espionage and fifth column activities so faithfully carried on by Japan from the Aleutians to the Netherlands Indies. As teacher and journalist, the author saw at first hand most of the countries that Japan was 'softening up' for conquest in the decade before Pearl Harbor. Except for Burma—the only notable omission in the author's itinerary and treatment—her summary of Japanese prewar subversive activities is almost encyclopedic in its scope and detail." Sat R of Lit

"The season's most ironic title turns out to be one of the ablest, best documented and most vigorous indictments of Japan yet published in these United States." L. L. Marchand
+ Boston Globe p15 O 4 '44 400w

"Miss Haven is a lively young reporter who covered a good deal of Far East ground in the period immediately before Pearl Harbor. . . She was usually in a hurry and some errors have crept in, but on the whole her volume helps round out the background reasons for the present war." R. G.
Christian Science Monitor p14 S 29 '44 120w

"Written in a chatty, informal style, it should give a pretty good picture of Japanese Fifth Column activities for the general reader and for those who still think Japan had to declare war against us in more or less economic self-defense." Roy Hillbrook
+ Current Hist 7:321 O '44 90w

"On the whole, 'Gentlemen of Japan' adds up to a readable book, although it is a little too weighted with purely personal details and there are occasional loose statements such as 'the Germans took over Tokyo as completely as they did Vichy and Rome.'" W. H. Chamberlin
+ — N Y Times p3 S 3 '44 480w

Reviewed by Randall Gould
Pacific Affairs 17:498 D '44 280w

"For Americans, some of the facts on Japanese activities in Hawaii, Alaska, and the Aleutians will be most startling, although by now they are better known than before the war. The author is unwilling to view the Japanese-American population in Hawaii as anything but a menace, and produces much indisputable evidence for this attitude from her experiences as a teacher in the Island schools. . . The writer effectively captures the local color of the East, as a backdrop to Japanese intrigue, in her vignettes of the port cities of Hongkong, Macao, Shanghai, and Singapore in the days that preceded their fall." T. A. Bisson
+ Sat R of Lit 27:13 S 23 '44 650w

"Japan's national phobia for domination has, of course, been exposed before—and by more informed and capable writers than Miss Haven. But she does manage to assemble in readable form an outline of most of the evidence to prove that Nippon stands high among history's gangster nations." Frederick Reinstein
Springf'd Republican p4d O 15 '44 750w

"A large portion of Miss Haven's book is carefully documented with direct quotations from specified sources. Consequently, it is difficult to understand how a number of obvious errors are included in its pages. . . Some of the errata in 'Gentlemen of Japan' may be due to hasty editing." Victor Keen
+ — Weekly Book Review p12 Ag 27 '44 950w

HAVIGHURST, WALTER. Upper Mississippi; a wilderness saga; il. by David and Lolita Granahan. (Rivers of America) rev ed 305p $2.50 Farrar

917.7 Mississippi valley. Frontier and pioneer life 44-3031

"A 1937 book [Book Review Digest, 1937] has been revised to conform with other volumes in this series by centering attention on the river rather than the Scandinavian settlement of the region." (Booklist) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 40:287 Ap 15 '44
Kirkus 12:38 Ja 15 '44 70w
Wis Lib Bul 40:68 My '44

HAVIGHURST, WALTER, and BOYD, MARION MARGARET (MRS WALTER HAVIGHURST). High prairie; il. by Gertrude Howe. 239p $2 Farrar
44-4613

Dakota and Wisconsin in 1867 is the locality of this story of pioneering days for high school age readers. It is the story of Nils and his sister Guri, who grew up with the settlement of new homes first in Wisconsin and then in Dakota, and experienced all the hopes and disappointments of life on the frontier. The contribution of the sturdy Norwegians to America is brought out in the book.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p11 O 8 '44 180w

"A fine, straightforward story of the call of the West to the pioneer spirit." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 20:207 My '44 80w

"A background rich in color, a story handled with considerable skill."
+ Kirkus 12:118 Mr 1 '44 130w

"An interesting picture of the assimilation of Norwegian customs and traditions into pioner life. Lively style." M. N. Miller
+ Library J 69:555 Je 15 '44 90w

"This is a simple, straightforward story of the trials and rewards of homesteading and of a family's Americanization which grew as naturally as did their crop of winter wheat." A. T. E.
+ N Y Times p24 Je 25 '44 100w
New Yorker 20:58 Jl 8 '44 90w

"The authors know well the background of which they have written. Walter Havighurst is the author of 'Upper Mississippi' in the Rivers of America Series. In the adventure and the settling of this little family they have shown what endurance, vision, leadership, and imagination were necessary to make such an undertaking successful. It is a rare picture of early life in the West." Muriel Gilbert
+ Sat R of Lit 27:23 Jl 8 '44 270w

"A story of self-Americanization, the sort that goes deepest. Mature in feeling, its incidents are so striking they hold the attention of readers in the teens." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p5 My 28 '44 450w
Wis Lib Bul 40:112 Jl '44

HAVILL, EDWARD. Low road. 227p $2.50 Harper
44-2028

Quiet story of a young married couple living in a cabin on the shores of Keuka Lake in northern New York state. Their lives and those of their few neighbors are simple in the extreme. The book is concerned mainly with the few months just before and after the birth of their first son.

"Havill has an impressive flair for nature description, and his prose is dextrous if sometimes lush." Jack Conroy
Book Week p7 F 20 '44 180w
Booklist 40:304 My 1 '44

"A suspiciously autobiographical portrayal which is for a limited market."
Kirkus 11:557 D 15 '43 130w

" 'The Low Road' is a simple, thoughtful, sincere story. . . There are beauty, strength and joy in Havill's story, but little humor. Perhaps this is the leaven Havill needs to lighten a stiff self-consciousness in his story of a young man's sincere effort to find out where man belongs in the nature of things." Beatrice Sherman
+ — N Y Times p19 Mr 12 '44 400w

"Mr. Havill conveys to the reader the beauty which Clay Treman and his wife Karen find in one another, in their child and in the life they lead. . . When it comes to describing his countryside and the people who live in it, Mr. Havill is at his best." Herbert Kupferberg
+ Weekly Book Review p6 F 20 '44 600w
Wis Lib Bul 40:55 Ap '44

HAWKINS, JOHN, and HAWKINS, WARD. Broken river. 212p $2.50 Dutton
43-18844

Story of the Oregon spruce country during the present war. There is rivalry between two logging companies over a government contract; and there is a romance between the very human wood's boss, and the red-haired owner of the timber tract.

Booklist 40:235 Mr 1 '44

"A disappointing second novel from the brothers who wrote an original melodrama in Pilebuck last year."
— Kirkus 12:22 Ja 15 '44 120w

"The book is refreshing on several counts. The hero is not a forest ranger in chokebore pants; the loggers, drunk or sober, are not simply devastators of 'our' forests but are patriotic people who want to aid their government at war. . . Most refreshing of all, and downright daring in a novel of the woods, is the fact that Rack Tinker, the hero of the piece, is not able to pick three men at once. . . If you like stories with plenty of movement, you'll gallop through this one and probably like it." Stewart Holbrook
+ Weekly Book Review p8 Ja 16 '44 650w

HAWKINS, JOHN, and HAWKINS, WARD. Devil on his trail. 255p $2.50 Dutton 44-6706

When the Jap plane machine-gunned the lifeboat, the boy, Joe Chandler, shielded the girl, Mary, a Wac, and suffered two bad wounds in consequence. As one by one their companions slipped over the side, these two kept up the fight for life and sanity until finally they reached safety. And with the story of this struggle, chapter by chapter, is told the story of their lives before they came together in the lifeboat.

Reviewed by Warren Beck
Book Week p3 S 24 '44 360w
Kirkus 12:285 Jl 1 '44 170w

"Absorbing and recommended though not a must book." S. E. Sherman
+ Library J 68:698 S 1 '44 70w

"John and Ward Hawkins, two brothers from Portland, Ore., who are now in the Army, show signs of becoming the smoothest literary doubles team since Nordhoff and Hall. The Hawkins brothers run to muscular heroes —loggers, pilebucks, members of the black gang—and to tough dialogue. But they really know the trades they write about, and there is nothing phony or literary in their toughness." Margaret Wallace
+ N Y Times p28 O 1 '44 350w

Reviewed by George Conrad
Weekly Book Review p6 S 10 '44 400w

HAWKINS, QUAIL. Don't run, Apple! [36p] il $1 Holiday
44-41884

Further adventures of the little girl who was the heroine of the story, Who Wants an Apple (Book Review Digest, 1942). In this tale Apple lets her imagination work too hard and it takes the help of mother's loving wisdom to conquer the fear thus aroused.

Booklist 41:171 F 1 '45

"Perhaps this will remind youngsters of scary times they'd prefer to forget, perhaps they'll think Apple is just silly. It is easy to read, however, and well written. Phyllis Cote's pictures in black and white add humor."
Kirkus 12:509 N 1 '44 100w

"Easy vocabulary and large print make this good reading material for beginners." Olive Brain
+ Library J 70:70 Ja 15 '45 70w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
N Y Times p20 Ja 14 '45 80w

"There is more than you might think in this picture-story-book for little children just beginning to read. It lightly carries an important message about facing fears."
+ Weekly Book Review p39 N 12 '44 250w

HAWKINS, ROBERT MARTYR. Recovery of the historical Paul. 292p $3.50 Vanderbilt univ. press

227 Bible. New Testament—Epistles. Paul, Saint 43-18396

"Professor Robert M. Hawkins of the Vanderbilt University School of Religion joins in the quest for the historical Paul, whom he hopes to 'recover' by the logical criticism of the apostle's letters. Recognizing and properly dismissing the fault of harmonizing the letters and the narrative of Luke-Acts, Hawkins takes as his standpoint the recoverable 'situation' of a given letter and then attempts to distinguish between the genuine and the spurious parts, as accretions were attributed to Paul's letters by representatives of later orthodox theological positions." J Religion

"The validity of the arguments presented in this book must be left for those who are competent to decide. . . But if the thesis of this book is correct it will revolutionize the study of the apostle Paul. . . It is probable that future writers will have to take account of this book. But it is not likely that anyone will acquiesce in all the ideas advanced by Dr. Hawkins. . . Finally, the book does not manifest an especially wide acquaintance with the literature on the subject. But it is a very stimulating book to read." J. D. Martin

+ — Christian Century 61:272 Mr 1 '44 600w

"It would be possible to list dozens of startling reconstructions, but it is fruitless. That Dr. Hawkins is irked by much bad theology is both obvious and commendable, that frequently his emphases on Pauline traits and insights are important and well put is true, and that again and again some of his strictures are worth pondering is to be recorded in gratitude; but to me, at least, the great part of the book appears shallow and unconvincing. To be sure, he reconstructs a Paul, but that that Paul is the first-century apostle I greatly doubt; rather he appears to have been evolved in a Nashville workshop. That a critical text of Paul's letters is sorely needed I am still convinced; but it will have to be produced in a much less jaunty and slapdash manner. Scissors are a valuable tool for any critic, but they are not the only tool. Perhaps this experiment will encourage some more sober and restrained efforts in the same direction. If so, it may be called 'a fruitful failure.'" M. S. Enslin

— + Crozer Q 21:345 O '44 1100w

"Much as the attempt to discover the real Paul is welcome, it does not appear that Hawkins has accomplished his praiseworthy objective. Even though his thesis is admitted, a close perusal of his book does not reveal either a dependable method of procedure or an assured result. This is due to the author's dependence upon the criterion of logical suitability and to his failure to generalize his conclusions." D. W. Riddle

J Religion 24:137 Ap '44 800w

HAY, TIMOTHY, pseud. See Brown, M. W.

HAYCOX, ERNEST. Bugles in the afternoon. 306p $2.50 Little

Custer, George Armstrong—Fiction 44-2029

Novel using Custer's last stand as a background. The central figure is Kern Shafter, who in 1875 enlisted as a private in Custer's command at Fort Lincoln. There he meets an old enemy and a new love. On the day of the battle of the Little Big Horn, Kern is wounded, and "lives to fight another day."

Booklist 40:251 Mr 15 '44

"This is a transvaluation of Western-story values and, as such, encouraging for the future of the genre, which has otherwise run its course like the frontier on which it lives." Isaac Rosenfeld

+ New Repub 110:476 Ap 3 '44 1050w

"Mr. Haycox is very far from having written the novel that an artist will some day find in the tragedy which reached its climax that fearful Sunday afternoon. But by the standards of his school this is a competent work, and seldom a slow one. When you put it down you have a sense, at least, of the atmosphere in which the drama was played out, of the men who took the greater and lesser roles in it, and the causes that led inevitably to the end." J. K. Hutchens

+ N Y Times p6 F 13 '44 420w

"Not the least interesting angle of the tale is Mr Haycox's evaluation of Custer. . . But the main interest lies in the working out of Shafter's problem. This Mr Haycox has done with even more, if possible, than his usual skill and insight in the field of the psychology of men in action." B. I.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 13 '44 250w

"'Bugles in the Afternoon' will appeal to a host of readers who like their heroes to be properly strong and reserved, their heroines beautiful, their action violent—all set against a nicely realized background of loneliness, creaking leather and stars on the desert at midnight." Jennings Rice

Weekly Book Review p6 F 13 '44 600w

HAYEK, FRIEDRICH AUGUST VON. Road to serfdom; with foreword by John Chamberlain. 250p $2.75 Univ. of Chicago press [10s 6d Routledge]

338.91 Economic policy. Totalitarianism A44-4381

"Written by an Austrian, now at the London School of Economics, this is a warning that 'it is Germany whose fate we are in some danger of repeating' by our abandonment of individualism, liberalism, freedom. It is a rebuttal of socialism or socialized planning and of the danger in the removal of competition and laissez faire. [The author] believes that Totalitarianism (whether in Germany or Russia) is not the product of Prussianism, but the product of the socialized thinking of Marx, etc. He believes that economic control prepares the way for totalitarianism, and that security (economic) is not as important as freedom; he believes in a certain type of 'planning'—but a limited one; in Federation, but again a limited one." Kirkus

Reviewed by C. E. Merriam

Am J Soc 50:234 N 13 '44 1500w

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin

Atlantic 174:149 D '44 650w

"Written straightforwardly and clearly, with recognition of the ends that must be sought and of the merit of steps already taken, this book deserves wide and thoughtful reading." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 O 22 '44 550w

Booklist 41:118 D 15 '44

Reviewed by Paul Hutchinson

Christian Century 62:18 Ja 3 '45 950w

Christian Science Monitor p14 S 27 '44 450w

"As things now stand in this country it would seem that the chief usefulness of the volume is academic, for there is today far greater danger that we shall revert to rugged individualism. In England and in Canada however, it may serve as an even more timely warning. Dr. Hayek's power of argument is somewhat attested to by the persuasiveness of his case for regulation of public utilities as opposed to state ownership. Even so, only government so far has succeeded in producing a TVA."

+ Commonweal 40:571 S 29 '44 500w

Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook

Current Hist 7:497 D '44 110w

"Food for thought, argued with logic, clarity and conviction. Controversial."

Kirkus 12:426 S 15 '44 170w

"Many brilliant passages will impress even reader of opposing viewpoint. But due to abstract presentation and poor organization, book will appeal only to intellectual circles. Recommended for scholarly and large public libraries." H. H. A. Bernt

+ — Library J 69:760 S 15 '44 100w

"Will be to most readers an infuriating but salutary book. It ought to be read by all 'planners' for their soul's sake. It will not shift them, but there are enough shrewd thrusts to make them wince and to check their ardours."

HAYEK, F. A. VON—Continued
Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 14 '44 200w

Reviewed by Reinhold Niebuhr
Nation 159:478 O 21 '44 420w

New Repub 111:469 O 9 '44 200w

Reviewed by James Harrington
New Statesman & Nation 27:325 My 13 '44 1050w

"In 'The Road to Serfdom' Friedrich A. Hayek has written one of the most important books of our generation. It restates for our time the issue between liberty and authority with the power and rigor of reasoning that John Stuart Mill stated the issue for his own generation in his great essay, 'On Liberty.' It throws a brilliant light along the direction in which the world has been heading, first slowly, but now at an accelerative rate, for the last half-century. It is an arresting call to all well-intentioned planners and socialists, to all those who are sincere democrats and liberals at heart, to stop, look and listen." Henry Hazlitt
+ N Y Times p1 S 24 '44 1550w

"Cogent in its reasoning, gracious in its presentation, forceful in its plea, this short book deserves the widest reading and the most careful attention. Its thesis will come as a shock to many readers. It would be good if they would not refuse to read the book because it seems to run counter to many of the widely accepted and cherished slogans of the day, but accept the challenge and enter into the discussion. As the issues have become so confused, the book rightly goes back to fundamentals." Hans Kohn
+ Sat R of Lit 27:26 O 21 '44 1100w

Reviewed by Michael Polanyi
Spec 172:293 Mr 31 '44 850w

Reviewed by Alzada Comstock
Springf'd Republican p4d O 8 '44 1000w

"The book has already been widely discussed in England; it should arouse equally keen interest here. It says what it has to say quietly, sensibly, understandably, without preaching or talking down to the reader." Toni Stolper
+ Survey G 33:463 N '44 700w

"Since, in the great stress that is now laid upon planning, the case for liberty may not be receiving sufficient attention, this able and forceful plea is well timed, supported as it is with a good 'individualist' bibliography. By stressing abuses of planning it will help planners themselves to provide against them; and its social proposals will do much to remove evils which made the older individualism so burdensome to many of the workers."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p165 Ap 1 '44 750w

"Mr. Hayek's book is written with austerity and great learning; it is reasoned closely; it is as devoid of passion and special pleading as is a text in geometry. The reader will have to study its pages carefully; but having done so, he will emerge refreshed as from a great intellectual adventure. Indeed, Mr. Hayek has written, in little, the history of the significant intellectual experiences of the Western World of the last century and a half." L. M. Hacker
+ Weekly Book Review p3 O 29 '44 1850w

HAYES, ALFRED. Big time; drawings by Beatrice Tobias. 101p $2.50 Howell, Soskin 811 44-3263

Poems, mainly about cities and the people who live in them, and about city life in the slums. The author is a young American poet, whose work has appeared in Esquire, The New Yorker, Poetry, etc.

"The piece [the Slaughter House] is brilliant and so is the book. It is Hayes' first, though his stuff has been appearing for years and the man has a name. I hope that slaughterhouse business isn't the payoff, but it bothers me like the dickens. Because I think the guy has gone sour." Leo Kennedy
+ — Book Week p6 Mr 5 '44 700w

Kirkus 12:32 Ja 15 '44 70w

"Alfred Hayes has none of Thompson's dexterous technique or flare of sophistication, but he is real, nevertheless. His poems are socially conscious, all about the movies, bars, dance halls, sex, the big time in the big city, no concealed sneering at the poor for being poor. Hayes's structure is lacking in form; his technical equipment is insufficient for a focused presentation of his emotional matter. However, the emotion is pure and forceful and his book, 'The Big Time,' is an American document of importance." Oscar Williams
+ — New Repub 110:581 Ap 24 '44 600w

"It is a vigorous dramatic book but not a very convincing one. This may be because it is written from the point of view of a young man so involved in his own private hell that he has difficulty in seeing the rest of the world clearly. If he had the courage to describe this private hell or to transpose it into symbols or to say simply and directly why he is in distress, he might have some interesting poetic results, but he prefers to drape an extraneous world with his unhappy personal emotions." Ruth Stephan
Poetry 64:292 Ag '44 480w

"His work has drama, sophistication, and bite. It is full of real irony. A tough book but a real one." W. R. Benét
+ Sat R of Lit 27:24 Ap 29 '44 90w

Reviewed by Louis Untermeyer
Yale R n s 34:344 winter '45 170w

HAYES, DORSHA. Chicago: crossroads of American enterprise; introd. by Sterling North; il. by George McVicker. (Cities of America biographies) 317p $2.75 Messner
977.311 Chicago—History 44-3310

Anecdotal, somewhat impressionistic history of Chicago from the early days to the 1930s.

Reviewed by Sterling North
Book Week p2 Ap 2 '44 650w

Booklist 40:315 My 15 '44

"Romantic at times, clearheaded at others, this blends the various faces of Chicago's story from a socially conscious angle, rather than a political one, emphasizing the thought patterns of the periods, and the interlocking growth of the city. . . The lack of emphasis on the murky political aspects of Chicago's checkered history will be sure cause for comment. The omission is quite obvious."
Kirkus 12:18 Ja 1 '44 180w

"Miss Hayes spends so much time on the Indians (approximately a fourth of the volume) and on labor relations that she has scant room for adequate treatment of Chicago's many bold personalities. So enthusiastic is she about Indians at the start of her book and so primer-like is her style at all times that this 'Chicago' is practically a child's history of the city. Even her handling of the otherwise adult questions of sociology, trade unionism and labor strikes is that of an expert talking down to adolescents." Lloyd Lewis
N Y Times p20 Ap 23 '44 1100w

Reviewed by Ernest Poole
Weekly Book Review p8 Ap 23 '44 500w

Wis Lib Bul 40:68 My '44

HAYES, MARJORIE. Homer's hill. 224p $2 Lippincott
44-960

In diary form a Boston librarian tells the story of a summer in New Hampshire, where she went to take charge of Mr Prescott Peabody Lovell's children and his summer home. The time is 1943 and Miss Hamlin has her troubles with rationing, no servants, and the youth problem. But the end of the season finds her happy in the knowledge that she has made a success of her summer and that her future will not be lonely.

"The children are drawn in good photographic style, but the book is marred by a naivete which belongs either to the heroine or to the author—I was not sure which." J. N. North
— + Book Week p8 My 7 '44 150w

Booklist 40:284 Ap 15 '44
Bookmark 5:18 Mr '44
Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 11 '44 90w

"On Homer's Hill in New Hampshire the summer of 1943 was a busy, exciting and, on the whole, a happy one. The account makes delightful reading, for Miss Hamlin's author and creator has an appreciative eye for New England mountains, houses and vegetable gardens, a quick ear for the lingo of the natives and the Bostonian, New Yorkish or foreign refugee tones of summer people, and an instinctive understanding of youngsters of 16 or thereabouts." Charlotte Dean
+ N Y Times p19 F 27 '44 310w

"This is light in tone, extremely slight in plot, and without any real insight into character." Bess Jones
— Sat R of Lit 27:15 Mr 11 '44 1100w

"For those who enjoy a leisurely, informal narrative about country living, Marjorie Hayes's novel, 'Homer's Hill,' will prove a satisfying book." Rose Feld
+ Weekly Book Review p6 Mr 5 '44 500w
Wis Lib Bul 40:55 Ap '44

HAYMAN, ERIC. Worship and the common life. 155p $2.50 Macmillan [7s 6d Cambridge]
264 Worship 44-6019

" 'The basic conviction behind the present study,' says the author, 'is that only a worship which is sacramental in its intention, its expression and its proved effect can be capable of total integration with the common life of man.' The unity of religion with life and the unity of the church within itself are the objectives toward which the argument is directed—and these both as values in themselves and as means to the attainment of 'a world order informed by Christian principles,' which, while something quite different from pure Christianity just because it is a world order, will be the kind of world order we ought to have and the best we can get." Christian Century

---

"This is an English book . . . and not only English but very Anglican. The American reader who begins it should go through it to the end. It gets better all the way, after a beginning which, if reread in the light of the conclusion, will make a more favorable impression than at its first reading." W. E. Garrison
+ Christian Century 61:775 Je 28 '44 450w

"The author pleads for recognition of the similarity between the stages in liturgical worship and those of the Friends' meeting: preparation, offering, intercession, consecration, and communion. But this scarcely meets the real problem, which is whether baptism or any other rite is essential to church membership. So that the engaging personality which shines through the book fails of his purpose for lack of sufficient thoroughness in the treatment of the issues he raises." E. E. Aubrey
+ — Crozer Q 22:91 Ja '45 250w

"Mr. Hayman's argument is impressive by reason of the large sympathy of his outlook, and the insight with which he rejects any attempt to alter the balance of Christian worship by laying all the emphasis on human relationships. His style is sometimes obscure, and there is considerable repetition. But these difficulties arise from the determination and courage with which Mr. Hayman grapples with the problem of bringing the common life of man, destroyed by a community of sinful pride, into a harmony, made not by man but by God."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p250 My 20 '44 550w

HAYS, HOFFMAN REYNOLDS. Lie down in darkness. 216p $2.50 Reynal
44-6936

The chief characters of this psychological horror story are two middle-aged spinsters living together in an ultra-respectable suburban community. One has independent means, the other has not, and the story reveals how the latter worked to ensure her own future.

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Book Week p1 S 10 '44 1200w
Booklist 41:22 S '44
Kirkus 12:125 Mr 15 '44 190w

"Psychology may be sound but characters seem like caricatures. The only normal ones are minor: an elderly anthropologist and refugee family. Not recommended." Margaret Owen
— Library J 69:698 S 1 '44 70w

"One of the strangest books to be published in some time. It purports to be a criticism of the present social order, but achieves only a curious morbidity that leaves one with the feeling that the author prefers sheer unhealth to honest criticism. The book succeeds in damning the small suburban town, but the characters for the most part are so exaggerated that the final impression is one of complete unreality." J. H. Preston
— New Repub 111:573 O 30 '44 90w

"Mr. Hays fails to make the ladies more than types. They are not quite able to support the actions imposed upon them. Even more susceptible to this charge than the two 'ladies in retirement' are some of the secondary characters. . . The total effect is of characters being always manipulated, as if the atmosphere of psychological violence and even the act of murder were used as diversion and not as a revelation of evil—though most of Mr. Hays' material is much more ambitiously undertaken than is the usual sample of melodramatic genre." Ruth Page
— N Y Times p4 S 10 '44 280w

"In both his novels, Mr. Hays has taken us 'behind appearances,' and the results create the suspicion that he thinks human nature is preponderantly foul. It is a belief to which he has, of course, a perfect right."
New Yorker 20:74 S 9 '44 230w
Time 44:102 S 18 '44 550w

"A handful of characters, as horrific as ever surrounded the theater of a small crime, peep from the pages of this tale, which might be classed as a psychological study except that there is so little depth of any sort in it. . . Since the characters are delineated so superficially, with such broad, vague outlines, their sufferings and crimes have no great power to move us." Iris Barry
— Weekly Book Review p6 S 10 '44 400w

HAYSTEAD, LADD. Meet the farmers. 221p $2.50 Putnam
338.1 Farm life. Farmers Agr44-70

"A discerning picture of the farmers, their problems, limitations, and future. Written not from the standpoint of any one group, crop, area, political bias, or sociological hope, but as objectively as a clinician's report. . . The author is a longtime agriculture writer who has spent many years investigating farm affairs and farmers in all our forty-eight states, has himself farmed in many of these states, and today is farm columnist of Fortune." Publisher's note

---

Reviewed by Sterling North
Book Week p2 Ap 2 '44 230w
Booklist 40:296 My 1 '44
Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '44

"A sort of Middletown of agriculture that should help clarify existing confusions."
+ Kirkus 12:40 Ja 15 '44 140w

"Engrossing in its combination of small human details and major economic problems, it is a revealing and stimulating book bound to lead to wider reading and understanding in this fundamental industry. Broader in its treatment yet more specific in its comment on individuals, it has the same ability to hold the reader as Waring's Roots of the Earth. For all libraries." M. C. Manley
+ Library J 69:261 Mr 15 '44 90w

HAYSTEAD, LADD—Continued

"Besides the challengeable things, little and big, there are a lot of acute characterizations and shrewd analyses in this book. It covers the subject in an amazing number of aspects. If a good many of his trees have unrecognizable shapes, he assembles them into a forest of information that is pretty authentic. The book really ought to do something to help bridge that awful chasm that generations of erosion have created between the city mind and the country mind." W. W. Waymack

+ — Weekly Book Review p7 Ap 9 '44 900w

HAYWOOD, CAROLYN. Here's a Penny; il. by the author. 158p $2 Harcourt

44-7329

Stories about a little boy named Penny. Penny's name was William but when Mother and Father picked him out at the Hospital to be their "really truly" adopted baby, his copper colored hair and the tiny freckle on his nose made them think of a bright new penny, so that's what they called him ever after.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p20 N 26 '44 150w

Booklist 41:27 S '44

"The 'chosen baby' theme is well handled, and the language and type of print make this a useable book for those who have learned to read by themselves."

+ Kirkus 12:319 Jl 15 '44 110w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling
Nation 159:443 O 14 '44 60w

"Once again Caroline Haywood, whose 'B Is for Betsy' and other Betsy stories have established a firm popularity among the younger boys and girls, has given us a friendly human book, in which she writes of children with quiet humor and thorough understanding. The many drawings by the author have a lively action and a clarity very satisfying to child readers. 'Here's a Penny' is a book that reads aloud well and one that will be useful with beginners in reading." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p21 S 17 '44 200w

Springf'd Republican p4d O 1 '44 50w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p6 O 1 '44 400w

Wis Lib Bul 40:149 N '44

HAZARD, PAUL. Books, children and men; tr. by Marguerite Mitchell. 176p $3 Horn bk. inc, 264 Boylston st, Boston 16

028.5 Children's literature—History and criticism. Books and reading 44-3460

Translation of a book on children and children's books, which appeared in France in 1932. It is published in America "in the public interest by authority of the Alien Property custodian." The author was formerly professor of comparative literature at Lyons; he taught at the Sorbonne, and received degrees from Harvard and Columbia. "He gives us a discriminating survey of children's books in different lands, through the centuries—beginning when Charles Perrault, in 1697, produced in 'Tales of Mother Goose,' first for French children and later for all the children of the world, 'a book after their own heart, so lovely and so fresh that they were never willing to give it up.'" (N Y Times)

Booklist 40:350 Je 15 '44

"Paul Hazard (whose death was recently reported over the Paris and Berlin radios), a student of history and comparative literature, and former visiting Professor of French at Columbia University, was a member of the French Academy. His book is scholarly and distinguished, which attributes are not lost in the excellent translation by Marguerite MacKellar Mitchell." B. J. Thompson

+ Cath World 159:374 Jl '44 400w

"An engaging thesis of this book is that its young people's bookshelves are the measure of a nation's awareness of the rights of the individual. Appearing in English at a time when children are so unmistakably legatees of the world's future, Professor Hazard's book is as timely in its picture of the child as a citizen of the world as though it had been written in the full perspective of the past five years." E. C. I.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 24 '44 600w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
+ Christian Science Monitor p4 N 16 '44 200w

"This book, written several years ago, but only recently translated into English, will prove a lasting contribution to history and criticism in that field. Its writing was broad-minded and courageous since literary men in France, as a rule, look upon children's books with contempt, as beneath their dignity. . . It is a rare pleasure to encounter so valuable and genuine a work on children's literature, written by a foreign scholar who possesses sympathy and insight." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 19:116 Mr '43 1400w

"Not a text book, but a delightful contribution to better understanding of European children's literature, from the 17th and 18th century, to relatively modern writings. A scholar of distinguished literary achievements surveys the field with clear insight, penetrating understanding and vividness of style which adds to the joy of reading."

+ Kirkus 12:199 Ap 15 '44 110w

"Every reader will acknowledge a debt to Marguerite Mitchell for this distinguished translation, which preserves the full flavor of Paul Hazard's humor and wisdom. On equal level is our gratitude to the publisher, who clothed this production in format suitable to a labor of love, and worthy of its text." Irene Smith

+ Library J 69:505 Je 1 '44 260w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie
Library J 69:869 O 15 '44 70w

"No more important book on literature for children has appeared within the past decade. . . Mrs. Mitchell's translation is admirable, and the format which the book has been given bespeaks the regard with which this publishing venture was undertaken by the Horn Book." F. C. Sayers

+ Library Q 14:351 O '44 950w

"Paul Hazard writes with so much grace and charm that the reader is not only informed but feels the contagion of the author's own enthusiasm." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p7 Ap 16 '44 750w

"It is a book to own, to go back to again and again, to place on the shelves with Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch's 'The Art of Reading' and Horace Scudder's 'Childhood in Literature and Art.' We know that Paul Hazard is, or was, a distinguished French scholar, a teacher of literature who has left his mark on students in both France and America. This book shows him to be a man of keen curiosities, of sympathy and enthusiasm who answers the questions that form in his mind by going directly to the place where they can best be answered. His attitude toward childhood is like that of Kenneth Grahame, who once said that 'children are the only real people.'" M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 27:34 My 13 '44 750w

HEAL, EDITH (MRS GIL MEYNIER). Dogie boy; il. by Armstrong Sperry. 79p $2 Whitman, A.

43-16000

Dogie Boy, a little human waif, was so skillful at taking care of motherless calves that he found himself considered for a job at Thundertop ranch. Contains material on cowboys and ranch life in the Southwest for grades three to five.

Booklist 40:167 Ja 1 '44

"A simply-told story for boys beginning to read easily. Type is large and clear and gay illustrations by Armstrong Sperry eye-catching." K. H. McAlarney

+ Library J 69:73 Ja 15 '44 90w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 12 '44 110w

Wis Lib Bul 40:39 Mr '44

HEAL, EDITH (MRS GIL MEYNIER). This very sun. 144p $1.25 Crown
44-47197

Brief psychological story of a famous news photographer and a man dying of arthritis, who met in an Arizona resort. The news photographer was hunting rest and quiet; the arthritic for a little more life. Neither was successful.

Reviewed by J. A. Brandt
Book Week p24 D 3 '44 450w

"A queer, morbid and rather unpleasant book. . . The story is shot through with a brittle sort of vividness, but it makes strange reading."
Kirkus 12:524 N 15 '44 170w

"The prose of 'This Very Sun' is rich, bold, untouched by cliché. Its people, on the other hand, while they present to the first examination enough surface eccentricity to pass as being freshly and powerfully characterized, are actually stale and unprofitable. Miss Heal's novel might be studied as proof that it takes more than a flashing of the facets of personality to add up to a fully rounded personality, and more than the knowledge of idiosyncracy to excite the response we would give to truly created people." Diana Trilling
+ — Nation 159:808 D 30 '44 600w

" 'This Very Sun' is an interesting and perceptive book. Miss Heal is sufficiently adult to portray neurotic, self-pitying characters without leaving the reader with the uneasy feeling that she shares their point of view. The very fact that she has limited her novel to 144 pages proves this; less disciplined writers might have meandered introspectively three times as long without adding anything to the impact of the story. Miss Heal presents her collection of writhing personalities entirely without posturing. Her style is often brilliant, but it is always controlled. Altogether 'This Very Sun' reveals itself as the work of an unusual and incisive talent." Jane Cobb
+ N Y Times p22 D 3 '44 240w

"Miss Heal has written a curate's-egg affair —interesting and original in spots but not adding up to a good novel. Actually, it is hardly a novel at all but a study in futility which does not quite come off. Just the same, you had better watch Miss Heal and, what's more important, Miss Heal had better watch herself and not give in to her occasional weakness for fine writing."
— + New Yorker 20:91 N 18 '44 100w

"Miss Heal writes uncompromisingly, yet with compassion. This tense brief tale is like a dramatic scene glimpsed from a train window and, pleasant or not, etched on one's memory. Whether one likes 'This Very Sun' or is offended by the force and directness of the telling it will be a hard story to forget." Mary Ross
+ Weekly Book Review p10 N 26 '44 400w

HEALY, LAURIN HALL, and KUTNER, LUIS. The admiral. 338p il $3.50 Ziff-Davis
B or 92 Dewey, George 44-6251

Biography of Admiral Dewey, the first Admiral of the navy to hold that rank. The authors have interwoven the history of the rise of our navy wtih the biography of one of its most famous leaders. Bibliography. Index.

"Laurin Hall Healy and Luis Kutner, two able young Chicagoans, have developed a book of surprisingly current interest in their new biography of Adm. George Dewey, plainly and, I think, arrestingly titled 'The Admiral.' " W. H. Fetridge
+ Book Week p8 Je 2 '44 400w
Booklist 41:20 S '44

"The authors are the first to have access to the Sargent report, covering Dewey's activities in the Spanish War; it is this part of the book in which scholars will be most interested. The general reader will enjoy the accounts of his triumphal return from the Far East, the pageantry and parades, the abundant gifts from a grateful nation. The too sugary accounts of his home and family life are best forgotten." R. A. B.
+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 Jl 26 '44 500w
Kirkus 12:208 My 1 '44 150w

"A very special portion of American history and fine character analysis of one American." A. B. Lindsay
+ Library J 69:459 My 15 '44 140w

"The story is rather prosily told, but there are moments when the sheer interest of the subject-matter makes one forget the manner of its telling." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p21 Je 25 '44 440w

"The least adequate of all the recent contributions to naval biography. One has only to lay it alongside such an excellent work as Elting Morison's life of Admiral Sims to appreciate the difference in concept of the task, thoroughness of research, and artistry of presentation. The bibliography of the Dewey volume is amazingly revealing, both for what it includes and what it omits. It is littered with obvious textbooks and reference works which could have only the most remote bearing on the subject." R. G. Albion
— Sat R of Lit 28:36 Jl 22 '44 700w
Springf'd Republican p6 N 13 '44 360w

" 'The Admiral' is a welcome biography. With access to hitherto unpublished family records and with assistance of surviving relatives the authors have produced a valuable and readable narrative." P. J. Searles
+ Weekly Book Review p4 Jl 30 '44 750w

HEALY, TIM. More lives than one; my days of hazard. 426p $3 Appleton-Century
B or 92 European war, 1914-1918—Personal narratives, Australian 44-5394

Autobiography of Tim Healy, son of a wealthy Australian, whose father and mother died when he was very young, leaving him to the mercy of some very questionable guardians. The greater part of the book covers the youth and war experiences of its subject, the war being the first World war. Mr Healy is now living in America, where he has been a lecturer and radio broadcaster.

"It's an extremely readable book and studded with memorable episodes, although one wonders if now and then he didn't s-t-r-e-t-c-h the facts to make the story memorable." W. F. M.
+ — Book Week p2 My 28 '44 130w
Booklist 40:387 Jl 15 '44
Kirkus 12:207 My 1 '44 230w

Reviewed by C. H. Grattan
N Y Times p24 Jl 9 '44 650w

"A hell-for-leather adventure story that is one of the best of its kind in some time."
+ New Yorker 20:79 Je 17 '44 180w

Reviewed by George Conrad
Weekly Book Review p23 My 28 '44 350w

HEARD, GERALD. Great fog, and other weird tales. 238p $2.50 Vanguard 44-7837

Eight short stories, some of them with supernatural elements, some weird, and one is a straight detective story.

Kirkus 12:261 Je 15 '44 150w

"These are good supernatural stories of science and idea. The ghosts are mold cultures and polar hysteria and the like of that. They raise only the intellectual hair, not the pulling kind, and since it is difficult for us to be really frightened intellectually, they do not have the homely charms of the ghost stories of M. R. James, for instance, which also have their professorial air, with little black devils all covered with hair, besides. Neither have they the buoyant enthusiasm of the early Wells stories. But they have their special fascinations." Eudora Welty
+ N Y Times p5 S 3 '44 600w

HEARD, GERALD—Continued

"Recommended for the fairly special audience which is still talking about the author's 'Taste for Honey.' "
+ New Yorker 20:83 S 16 '44 100w

"A couple of the exhibits are a wee bit poky. Mr. Heard employs polite English, but has a tendency to overwork quotation marks for no reason. This is a 'terrible' habit. Looks 'goofy.' " Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p8 S 3 '44 110w

HEARD, GERALD. Preface to prayer. 250p $2 Harper
264.1 Prayer 44-3299

"Mr. Heard believes that prayer is not opposed to analytical thought, but is complementary to such thought; that prayer has a social value, integrating the individual with himself, with society and with the universe; that prayer provides the basic philosophy of our society with new, progressive, comprehensive ideals and principles, without which society will die; that prayer is the way, and the only way, in which man's evolution can be continued. . . The concluding sections provide specific suggestions and techniques that will prove effective." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

"Here is the most satisfying book on prayer this reviewer has encountered. It is not a series of homiletical discourses or philosophical discussions. It affects one very much as if one were listening to the direct, earnest, convincing conversation of a man who, through personal experience guided by the Master of prayer, has explored the heights and sounded the depths and is telling in modern phraseology what prayer can do for human life. It is as fresh and authentic as the testimony of a lad just returned from the battlefront. It has the winsomeness of a lover's tale, the validity of a scientist's observations, the comprehensiveness of a true scholar's grasp of a field to which he has devoted years of research." A. E. Day
+ Christian Century 61:696 Je 7 '44 900w

"Religion and prayer for Mr. Heard are not sentimental superfluities but facts basic for the health and improvement of human nature and its world. The book may help many to a new interest in and practice of something which they may have put by and are none the happier for having done it." S. L. Riddle
+ Churchman 158:19 My 1 '44 360w

"In spite of a suggestive analysis of three levels of prayer and some interesting observations concerning its psychology, I cannot share the enthusiasm with which some of my good friends have welcomed this book. It impresses me as clever and confident, rather than substantial and true." L. A. Weigle
— Crozer Q 22:93 Ja '45 200w
Kirkus 12:65 F 1 '44 170w
Library J 69:646 Ag '44 20w

"The third level of prayer is, for Mr. Heard, the mystic's flight from selfhood to God, from particular to universal consciousness, from the expression of the ego's will to the complete absorption of that will into the divine. Mr. Heard's third level of prayer is, in short, the classical mystic answer to the problem of human existence. His book is an able and diligent exposition of this answer." Reinhold Niebuhr
+ N Y Times p6 My 7 '44 900w

"This is a remarkable work. It moves in the classic tradition and springs from the great literature of devotion. It penetrates to profound metaphysical depths and scales lofty spiritual heights. It analyzes the factors in the problem with original and creative insight. It teaches the discipline of prayer, its 'aids, exercises and methods.' But the book is vitiated by the fault which has beset so persistently all the writings of Mr. Heard. It is obscure in its thought and difficult in its style. It is a book hard to read, and harder still to understand." J. H. Holmes
+ — Weekly Book Review p20 N 19 '44 500w

HEARD, HENRY FITZGERALD. See Heard, G.

HEARST, JAMES. The sun at noon. 38p pa $1 Prairie
811 43-14195

"Poems of nature and farm life . . . by the author of Country Men [Book Review Digest, 1937]." Booklist

Booklist 40:281 Ap 15 '44

"Verse, sincere and vigorous, with roots in the good soil of Iowa and a feeling for the labors and hopes of the men who till that soil."
+ Christian Century 61:1291 N 8 '44 40w

"These are not mere observations of rural life as seen from a Pullman window but the product of a genuine understanding of farm people and the land on which they live." Charles Alldredge
+ Nation 158:632 My 27 '44 200w

"Remembering that the early volumes of many excellent poets read more like confessions of influence than poetry tempers the severity with which one is inclined to review James Hearst's second book of verse. There are eight poems about Iowa farmers that Frost might have written about New England farmers, five poems William Carlos Williams might have written and discarded, half a dozen poems Masters might have written and printed. In most instances the influences have assimilated the poet." H. C. Webster
— + Poetry 63:99 N '43 240w

HEATH, ELIZABETH ALDEN, pseud. See Holton, E. A.

HEBERDEN, MARY VIOLET (CHARLES L. LEONARD, pseud). Murder of a stuffed shirt. 190p $2 Doubleday
44-8555

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p9 N 5 '44 90w
Kirkus 12:310 Jl 15 '44 50w

"There is no lack of swift and violent action in this story." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p12 O 1 '44 100w

"Tough, honest, and fast."
+ New Yorker 20:80 S 30 '44 70w

"Good grade—in the semi-tough bracket."
+ Sat R of Lit 27:31 S 30 '44 40w

"Whatever has happened to Shannon, you can take him seriously now as a contender for hard-boiled honors." Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p23 O 1 '44 150w

HEBERDEN, MARY VIOLET (CHARLES L. LEONARD, pseud). Secret of the SPA. 184p $2 Doubleday 44-5300

Detective story.

Book Week p10 Je 18 '44 140w

"Good."
+ Boston Globe p19 My 31 '44 50w

"High action—good going."
+ Kirkus 12:155 Ap 1 '44 90w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p14 My 28 '44 100w

"For readers who insist on plenty of activity, even if some of it turns out to be senseless."
New Yorker 20:84 My 20 '44 90w

"Grim and gory."
Sat R of Lit 27:32 My 20 '44 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p15 Je 11 '44 50w

HEBERDEN, MARY VIOLET (CHARLES L. LEONARD, pseud). To what dread end. 200p $2 Doubleday 44-1338

Detective story.

"Mounting emotional tension is set off well by vignettes of Kerry's daily rounds as a doctor for the little community. There are no chills and little high excitement, but your interest in these people will keep you absorbed right up to the end." Elizabeth Bullock

+ Book Week p8 Ja 23 '44 180w

Booklist 40:305 My 1 '44

Bookmark 5:20 My '44

"Besides being a good mystery story, this is an interesting study of the warped minds of three women." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 23 '44 100w

"Very different from the author's 'Desmond Shannon' mysteries, and very satisfying, too."

+ New Yorker 19:68 Ja 22 '44 70w

"Either as full-fledged novel of war-torn emotions or as mystery this beautifully characterized and heart-rending tale ranks high. Top grade!"

+ Sat R of Lit 27:10 Ja 22 '44 40w

"H. V. Heberden takes a decided step up in the world with this sober story of mystery and murder. . . We hope most of the author's followers will like the new and much more reasonable manner, though we can just hear some people yelling for the return of that hard-boiled sleuth, Desmond Shannon." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p22 Ja 23 '44 130w

HEBERT, WALTER H. Fighting Joe Hooker. 366p $3.50 Bobbs

B or 92 Hooker, Joseph. U.S.—History—Civil war 44-9823

Biography of an American general of the Civil war. With the exception of three chapters—at the beginning and end of the volume—the work deals entirely with the Civil war years. The author takes as his text and theme, command of the Army of the Potomac, a letter enumerating most frankly Hooker's virtues and failings.

"'Fighting Joe Hooker' contains many photographs, well drawn maps and a complete bibliography. Hebert has had access to quite a few heretofore unpublished letters and documents, and has made good use of them. It is his first book, but certainly needs no apologies, for few recent contributions to our history have been written with so fine a discrimination or in such exceptional style." Otto Eisenschiml

+ Book Week p3 N 26 '44 400w

Booklist 41:151 Ja 15 '45

"Walter H. Hebert has written a good biography, well documented. . . This is a book for the historian and the student of military affairs. The writer has carefully refrained from jumping to unwarranted conclusions and his book helps round out the bibliography of the Civil War."

+ — Boston Globe p16 N 15 '44 250w

"This is much more than a biography of one of the most colorful Civil War generals; it is a study of the whole nature of command in war—what makes a good general, and why a man can be a good soldier and still fail when placed at the head of an army."

+ Christian Century 62:19 Ja 3 '45 250w

Reviewed by Paul Kiniery

Commonweal 41:238 D 15 '44 350w

Kirkus 12:422 S 15 '44 130w

"Mr. Hebert's book is scholarly, competently written, supplied with excellent maps. It suffers only from its subject's lack of stature." R. A. Brown

+ Nation 159:723 D 9 '44 110w

"What Mr. Hebert has written is a detailed account—scholarly and judicious—of the campaigns in which Hooker participated. It is accurate and penetrating, so clear that strategy and tactics are lifted out of the realm of things which a layman cannot understand. . . Through it all Mr. Hebert manages to keep 'Fighting Joe' constantly in sight, but he never quite catches up with him. If he has solved the riddle of Hooker's strange personality, he does not divulge the solution." J. A. Krout

+ — N Y Times p7 D 24 '44 750w

Reviewed by L. B. Kromer

Springf'd Republican p4d D 24 '44 650w

"Lincoln put a part of himself and all of Hooker into the letter—all that anybody really needs to know about Fighting Joe. However, for the more curious, Mr. Hebert's biography of the general gives interesting detail of a picturesque but relatively unimportant life. . . What emerges is the necessarily somewhat indistinct portrait of a fighter and a fool." Lloyd Lewis

Weekly Book Review p6 N 19 '44 1300w

HECHT, BEN. Guide for the bedevilled. 276p $2.50 Scribner

296 Jews—Political and social conditions 44-2443

Study of anti-Semites and anti-Semitism in all its present manifestations. "Ben Hecht combines this attack and analysis with lively humorous anecdote and wit. Here is no apology for the Jewishness of Jews; rather it is an appreciative explanation of their dynamic quality of life, and their individualism which makes them act, as he says, like the yeast in the bread of civilization." (Publisher's note)

Reviewed by H. M. Kallen

Ann Am Acad 234:157 Jl '44 500w

"Despite his vitriolic and violent approach to the subject, Mr. Hecht has written a sincere book. He takes anti-Semitism personally and emotionally. The result is a stimulating volume, but one, unfortunately, that sheds little new light on the subject." G. W. Joel

+ — Atlantic 173:129 My '44 360w

Reviewed by Gene Fowler

Book Week p4 Mr 19 '44 850w

Booklist 40:295 My 1 '44

"You may have been in church some time when the subject of money has been broached from the pulpit. Rationally, you are prepared to contribute for you know that the church needs support. But the preacher's tone and content may offend, and there develops a resistance against a postulate to which you subscribe. This is the feeling with which one puts down 'A Guide for the Bedevilled.' Any intelligent person today is willing to fight the incubus of racism, but this particular preacher makes it an unsavory duty and tinges one's response with reluctance." J. N. Moody

— Commonweal 39:658 Ap 14 '44 70w

Kirkus 12:40 Ja 15 '44 200w

Reviewed by Isaac Rosenfeld

New Repub 110:507 Ap 10 '44 900w

"A lot of people aren't going to like this book at all. Unfortunately, most of those who should read it won't even open its covers. But here it is, timely, fiery, full of tart truth, for those who do read, do care, and want to see the world get back up on the plane of humanity one of these days." Hal Borland

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 26 '44 1500w

Reviewed by Elmer Rice

Sat R of Lit 27:4 Mr 25 '44 2750w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 16 '44 330w

Time 43:102 Ap 10 '44 500w

"Whatever the faults of Mr. Hecht's book, he succeeds in giving a portrait of his own mind, and it is a highly interesting one. It is a portrait of Ben Hecht, the American, who is jealous of the traditions of his country and proclaims in no gentle terms the dangers which threaten them. And he has enough of the reporter's flair for finding and pointing up facts to show that the dangers are not imaginary." Rose Feld

+ — Weekly Book Review p8 Ap 9 '44 800w

HECHT, BEN. I hate actors! 221p $2.50 Crown 44-7255

"Orlando Higgens, an actors' agent, undergoes one nonsensical experience after another when several of his Hollywood clients are murdered during the remake of a picture called 'Sons of Destiny.'" New Yorker

---

Reviewed by Sterling North

Book Week p2 S 10 '44 450w

HECHT, BEN—Continued

"Fast and Funny."

Boston Globe p15 S 20 '44 40w

"Lots of horror features, love and sex all over the place, cockeyed humor, whooping it up—but in final analysis, a cheated sense on the part of the reader of the solution being not quite fair."

Kirkus 12:384 S 1 '44 80w

"Occasionally the fun flags and the reader can catch his breath and wonder what he's doing here—but these occasions are rare. As a whodunit, 'I Hate Actors!' is strictly jerry-built. Any journeyman addict will spot the killer in advance, and the motive, which stems from lunacy, is germane only to Mr. Hecht's milieu. None of this matters much while the laughs are coming. Veteran mystery fans will certainly have none of it, but the audience that welcomed Thorne Smith's japeries and Elliot Paul's hugger-mugger should take to this one as Mr. Hecht's second victim took to arsenic." William Du Bois

N Y Times p13 Ag 27 '44 360w

"This mystery is supposed to be light-hearted rather than logical, so the incoherencies of the plot are probably unimportant, but some readers may find the whole thing very trying, since they are asked to assume that Hollywood is inhabited almost entirely by lunatics, yogis, and young women who take off their clothes, an idea which seems outmoded and not very funny."

New Yorker 20:68 S 2 '44 100w

Springf'd Republican p4d S 24 '44 280w

"Mr. Hecht is resourceful in plot and serves up studio chatter by the platter. From time to time, there is a murder—homicide being a necessary part of the strenuous life of Hollywood. Disclosure of the perpetrator is postponed until there are three victims on the agenda, but so far as most readers are concerned it is crime without shudders." Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p6 S 10 '44 300w

HEDDEN, WORTH TUTTLE. Wives of High Pasture. 285p $2.75 Doubleday

44-6751

Fictionized account of life in a branch of the Oneida community, here called "communistic Christianity." One young girl's awakening is pictured and her final revolt from the institution of "complex marriage." The whole is seen largely thru the reactions of a young Englishman, traveling in America, who is a guest at High Pasture for a time. The date is 1857.

"A gossipy, homely, sufficiently philosophic chronicle, telling in a casual manner about doings and opinions which a heavier-minded writer might have rendered sensational. But Miss Hedden is a sophisticated author writing for a sophisticated audience; she knows the supreme value of keeping the light touch." Edith Roberts

Book Week p4 Ag 13 '44 400w

Kirkus 12:237 Je 1 '44 280w

"Although I cannot recommend it for any special literary interest, I found very entertaining its slant on what the Oneida disciples called 'amativeness.'" Diana Trilling

Nation 159:219 Ag 19 '44 60w

"Miss Hedden tells a good story well, catching correctly the prudish circumlocution of the epoch. Perversely, this very factualness—coupled with what should be commendable brevity—gives the book its only fault. Not having the benefit of the author's immersion in her subject, the reader is struggling to orient himself when he should be getting on with the story. He needs a little breathing space now and then to take more for granted a strange tale about, of all people, nice American girls who make strawberry jam and hot biscuits, recite James Russell Lowell, and never miss their evening prayers." Thelma Purtell

+ — N Y Times p6 Jl 23 '44 360w

New Yorker 20:60 Ag 5 '44 100w

"Detached and slightly acidulous, it sets forth the doctrine and practical application of complex marriage harnessed to Communism and hampered by human nature. It is entertaining from several angles, but primarily because of the odd assortment of females sharing sex and security under one roof." Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p14 Jl 23 '44 100w

HEDRICK, ULYSSES PRENTISS. Fruits for the home garden. 171p il $3 Oxford

634 Fruit culture Agr44-214

Handbook for the amateur gardener and fruit grower. Covers many varieties of tree and bush fruits and grapes. Partial contents: Propagating fruits; Planting plans; The first year; The art of pruning; Controlling orchard pests; The apple; The pear; The peach; The plum, The cherry; The grape; The bush fruits; The bramble fruits; The strawberry. Illustrated. Index.

Booklist 41:37 O 1 '44

"Authority and winner of the highest horticultural award in the country, Dr. Hedrick gives clear definition and advice on the raising of fruits whether on the tree, bush or plant. . . Well ordered, simply handled information, with text diagrams and 16 pages of halftones in a very pretty piece of bookmaking."

+ Kirkus 12:338 Ag 1 '44 90w

Springf'd Republican p8 O 6 '44 220w

"The author has contrived a work that is of marked value to three classes of fruit growers: the small home gardener, the amateur with largish space and opportunity, and the frankly commercial man. It's not light reading, but if you are interested in the subject you'll like it for its lucid information, simplicity and excellent planning." R. S. Lemmon

+ Weekly Book Review p17 Ja 7 '45 250w

HEERING, GERRIT JAN. Fall of Christianity; a study of Christianity, the state and war; tr. from the Dutch by J. W. Thompson; with a foreword by E. Stanley Jones. 243p $1.50; to libs gratis Fellowship publications

261.7 War and religion. Christianity

"A professor in the Remonstrant Seminary of the University of Leyden wrote this book in 1928, and Stanley Jones in the Foreword rejoices that it was written before the war, so that the writer could view the problem clearly, and could begin at the basis of Christian faith and work out to the problem of war. . . The book is a thorough study of the entire problem from a Christian basis. The church 'fell' of course when under Constantine she allied herself with the state. There is a full account of the positions of the Lutherans and the Calvinists, and a complete rebuttal of the arguments for war from the Bible and from ethical principles. He agrees that coercion is necessary to preserve order, but insists that war destroys all that is best in a nation, that all war is excused as 'defensive,' that under conditions of modern warfare it is practically impossible for a nation to defend itself." (Churchman) Index.

"Written with characteristic European thoroughness this book is a valuable compendium on the historical relationships between the Christian Church, the State and the war system." J. F. Davidson

+ Canadian Forum 24:69 Je '44 700w

Reviewed by R. H. Bainton

+ Christian Century 61:559 My 3 '44 2200w

"Practically everything the writer says is true, and would be helpful in a world in which the church could control the policies of all the nations at the same time. But the reviewer can find little in the book that is relevant to the situation in which both Holland and the United States find themselves." W. L. Caswell

Churchman 158:16 F 15 '44 240w

Reviewed by C. H. Moehlman

— Crozer Q 21:179 Ap '44 800w

HEGARTY, EDWARD J. How to run a sales meeting. 237p $2 McGraw

658.8 Salesmanship 44-6060

"Practical book on how to run a sales meeting and how to get results by good methods. Author is with the Westinghouse Electric and Mfg. Co., and has had many years of experience." Library J

Library J 69:1003 N 15 '44 40w

"What business man does not like to pick up a book and find it an operating manual that covers a subject thoroughly by citing time-tested practices and detailed procedures? While Mr. Hegarty's work might be criticized as slighting the theory of sales management, there are many books that fill this need, and the very specificity of this one makes it an excellent supplement to the more theoretical texts. It contains an uncommon amount of common sense, and is easy to read, logically organized, and well indexed." A. A. Hood

+ Management R 33:466 D '44 400w

HEIDEN, KONRAD. Der Fuehrer; Hitler's rise to power; tr. by Ralph Manheim. 788p $3 Houghton

943.086 Germany—Nazi movement. Hitler, Adolf 44-449

"This book has tried to show the roots of Hitlerism and the growth of that sinister philosophy of force. . . There is a double question this book has tried to answer: What sort of people were they who were capable of committing the crimes here described; and (even more urgently) what sort of people were capable of submitting to them?" (Postscript) The biography of Hitler is traced from his Austrian childhood, up to the blood purge of 1934. Index.

Reviewed by Halvdan Koht

Am Hist R 50:118 O '44 1200w

"To this reviewer the great merit of Mr. Heiden's book, apart from the many interesting historical details . . . lies in this socio-psychological analysis. In giving this slant to his historical account, which frequently reads like a personal history, the author has happily steered clear of the currently favorite pastime of applying specifically psychoanalytic concepts to social movements in the apparent belief that this will yield greater knowledge. Mr. Heiden has apparently no need for theoretical exposition; yet a good deal may be learned from his bold use of psychological analysis, which is obviously based on a knowledge of the literature but which is presented in an independent, almost artistic manner." Reinhard Bendix

+ Am J Soc 50:75 Jl '44 1000w

Reviewed by H. E. Fried

Am Pol Sci R 38:566 Je '44 1500w

Reviewed by Albert Salomon

Am Soc R 9:586 O '44 150w

"As far as the reviewer is concerned, the lack of documentation is the only weak aspect of the publication, which also has no bibliography. Otherwise, there is little to quarrel with in Heiden's narrative. An astonishing amount of research has gone into its making. More important, it is proof of a real understanding of the period which gave a chance to Hitler to rise to power." J. S. Roucek

+ — Ann Am Acad 232:190 Mr '44 700w

" 'Der Fuehrer' is a 'must' book which every layman should read in order to understand how Hitler worked himself to the top and how he involved the world in a second world war." M. W. Fodor

+ Book Week p1 Ja 30 '44 1150w

Booklist 40:195 F 1 '44

Bookmark 5:16 Mr '44

"It must be said without qualification that among the hundreds of books on the mystery of Hitler's rise and Germany's fall, none comes quite up to, and many lag far behind, Heiden's work. It is unique in its abundance of details and it ranks beside the classics of historical writing, as far as lucid arrangement of material, clarity of expression, dispassionate scholarliness and spiritual approach are concerned. . . Some readers will be disappointed. Some will miss flaming tirades against Hitler and his henchmen. Some will miss sensational backstairs revelations and unsavory, though true, stories about German leaders. Heiden goes so far in his reluctance to judge on incomplete evidence that he charges 'incendiaries who were close to the National Socialists' with having set fire to the Reichstag. A more serious reason for disappointment is that the book does not go beyond the blood purge of June, 1934." E. S. P.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p12 F 5 '44 600w

"The greatest asset of this book seems to be its pioneering work for future historians who will have to verify its controversial details, and who will discover a great many signposts to follow for deeper exploration. If you have time to spare, read it, it will stimulate thought and correct the clichés of our press, radio and movies. But as I have said: let Mr. Heiden buy himself a pair of scissors. And please, no playing to the galleries!" H. A. Reinhold

Commonweal 39:428 F 11 '44 700w

"Here is a lengthy but never monotonous study of Hitler's career, beginning with his family antecedents, his early life of frustration, his complete lack of success in earning a livelihood for himself and his existence in flophouses and on the charity of a few friends while still a youth. Heiden does not state the bald facts about this period; he gives the picture in narrative form, which is not only more interesting, but leaves the deductions to the reader." Roy Hillbrook

+ Current Hist 6:256 Mr '44 1200w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 22:498 Ap '44 180w

"The book is enlightening as history; it is sharply incisive in the analysis of Hitler as a man, as a power."

+ Kirkus 11:562 D 15 '43 360w

"Author, exiled former staff member of liberal Frankfurter Zeitung, told story of Nazi leader twice before, in Hitler, a Biography and A History of National Socialism, both published in early days of Third Reich. Present work far superior piece of writing. . . Book throws also interesting sidelights on Hitler's collaborators such as Goering, Goebbels, Himmler, Alfred Rosenberg, von Papen, etc. . . Essential for all libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 69:70 Ja 15 '44 110w

"Heiden conducts the reader on many explorations into the depths of Hitler's soul. On page after page he describes the reflections, the sensations, the conflicts, and the illuminations which at times of stress are supposed to have agitated Hitler's consciousness and subconsciousness. But even if these psychological vignettes were jewels of art and logic, they would still lack convincingness. They are entirely synthetic. Despite vague hints to the contrary, Heiden has had no more access than anyone else to documents or other evidence that would afford a glimpse of Hitler's soul. . . The evening that I finished reading this book President Roosevelt, just back from Teheran, spoke over the radio of the fifteen-year-long 'pathetic whining' of the Germans after 1918, by which the other nations, 'full of the milk of human kindness,' were induced to undertake 'well-intentioned but ill-fated experiments.' . . I think that the President's ideas not only are closer to the truth than those of 'The Führer' but have a better prospect of being carried out." Leopold Schwarzschild

Nation 158:281 Mr 4 '44 1800w

"I hope that a great many people will read 'Der Führer,' and read it carefully in spite of its faults. The book is sometimes confusing, not seldom repetitious, and it is padded out with familiar material until it is too long by at least a third. In the rest of the volume, however, the author has something new to say: that Hitler was not the creator, not even the guide of Nazism." Malcolm Cowley

+ — New Repub 110:152 Ja 31 '44 1300w

"Incomparably the most brilliant and comprehensive treatise yet written about the master of the Third Reich." G. N. Shuster

+ N Y Times p1 Ja 30 '44 2150w

HEIDEN, KONRAD—Continued

"It is the most complete study in the field and will probably have lasting value; but there is not much in it that is new for the general reader, who may already have seen the same author's earlier book on Hitler or his history of National Socialism. The narrative is easily readable; but it is somehow disgusting and stifling to retrace at this moment the quarrels and plots of the trolls of the Nazi party."

New Yorker 19:82 F 12 '44 160w

"Heiden's book is . . . refreshingly free of propagandistic guesswork, and is in every respect worthy of serious consideration." G. N. Shuster

+ Pol Sci Q 59:104 Mr '44 1050w

"Not only the most notable book to be written about National Socialism, but one of the most remarkable books ever to be written by a contemporary about his own times. In this it has perhaps but one parallel—Trotsky's 'History of the Russian Revolution.'" Dorothy Thompson

+ Sat R of Lit 27:5 F 5 '44 3350w

"This book is a source book and should be a great boon to scholars studying the career of Hitler."

+ Social Studies 35:144 Mr '44 40w

Reviewed by R. H. McFeely

Social Studies 35:188 Ap '44 650w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 30 '44 650w

"Heiden's [book] fills in every imaginable detail and succeeds in amplifying not only a colossal and formidable portrait but the pandemonium of our apocalyptic age." Ernest Jackh

+ Survey G 33:260 My '44 450w

Time 43:99 F 7 '44 1350w

Times [London] Lit Sup p18 Ja 13 '45 2200w

"A book that is truly history. For one thing, there is much new material in 'Der Fuehrer.' For another thing, this book is remarkably well written, in the classical tradition of good historical writing. 'Der Fuehrer,' in fact, is so well written, with the kind of art that conceals art, that most readers may never realize what a colossal labor of research and writing must have gone into the making of it. For another thing, this book is a book that has been long and deeply thought over and matured, both in substance and in form, the author reflecting on his facts and his choice of words, searching, selecting, sifting, rejecting, contrasting, matching and polishing, and not resting until he was finally resolved that this, and only this, was what he meant to say." W. R. Deuel

+ Weekly Book Review p1 Ja 30 '44 2700w

Wis Lib Bul 40:68 My '44

Reviewed by Sigmund Neumann

Yale R n s 33:567 spring '44 650w

HEIMER, MELVIN LEIGHTON. World ends at Hoboken; with il. by Bill Pause. (Whittlesey house publication) 179p $2 McGraw

817 44-8227

Sketches of New York life and celebrities by a newspaper writer.

Reviewed by Russell Maloney

Book Week p4 O 22 '44 230w

Boston Globe p29 N 29 '44 100w

"This has famous names . . . as well as unknown, has some entertaining trivia, as well as some annoying approaches, and is—or would be—comparable to Low Man on a Totem Pole in its medley of unique encounters. A kind of humor not all may enjoy."

Kirkus 12:332 Ag 1 '44 130w

"As they say, Mr. Heimer met the 'interesting people' and tells about his experience at length if with little perception. In fact, in each case, it works out in 'The World Ends at Hoboken' that Mr. Heimer is the story rather than the interesting people. Mel perhaps has forgotten a cardinal rule for a reporter, even in the field of humor. Like a child, the reporter often is better off if he just listens, at least in print." Jack Gould

N Y Times p28 O 15 '44 200w

Reviewed by N. L. Rothman

Sat R of Lit 27:14 N 18 '44 200w

Reviewed by M. C. Abrams

Springf'd Republican p4d O 29 '44 440w

Weekly Book Review p18 S 24 '44 350w

HEIMSATH, CHARLES HERMAN. Genius of public worship. 204p $2.50 Scribner

264 Public worship 44-47471

"The purpose of this book is to explain in simple and nontechnical language the meaning and usage of public as distinguished from private worship. This affords an opportunity to retell briefly the fascinating story of the origin and development of ancient religious observance. I shall trace back to their sources the historic differences in formal practice among the Protestant churches, and I shall explain the cleavage between the Protestant and Catholic ceremonials, with a sympathetic appraisal of the values in both these mighty systems of worship." (Foreword) Bibliography. Index.

"Dr. Heimsath's name carries great authority and those who have delighted in his published sermons will welcome this clear, compact, wise and not too long book on public worship. It is a real comfort to review a book on worship which is not overwritten, nor excessively psychological, nor too technical in its vocabulary." G. G. Atkins

+ Christian Century 62:16 Ja 3 '45 950w

"In reading this book one is impressed by its independence of thought, knowledge of sources as indicated in the bibliography, reverent yet daring outlook, vigorous style, and a democratic inclusiveness which embraces the values of worship services in Texas cowboy churches as well as in city temples. Such a book strengthens the conviction that worship abides because it is rooted in finite man's need of God. 'The traffic in God's house may be modest but it is indispensable.' The reader soon discovers for himself that this is a book with a mission. The time has indeed come to reestablish worship at the centre of the church, as the author insists. Ministers should read and ponder this book and put it in the hands of their people." Vaughan Dabney

+ Crozer Q 22:86 Ja '45 600w

"This book is intended for the general reader, Catholic, Protestant or Jewish, and is designed to enrich the meaning of public worship to those who now participate in it and to lead those now outside the church to a true evaluation of worship as ceremonial art."

+ Kirkus 12:504 N 1 '44 120w

"While serving the needs of inter-faith understanding, Dr. Heimsath's book is especially an inspiration to other Protestants to make their public worship ever more satisfying. It has certain incidental weaknesses; the remarks on Quaker pacifism are an unnecessary digression, the chapters on church architecture and music are less profound than the rest, and rather too many quotations from other sources are included. Nevertheless, the book is generally excellent." C. D. Kean

+ — Springf'd Republican p8 O 26 '44 800w

HEINE, HEINRICH. Germany, a winter's tale, 1844; English version by Herman Salinger; introd. by Herman Kesten. 156p $2.75 Fischer, L.B.

831

A new translation of Heine's satirical poem: Germany: 1844. "What happened a century ago is that Heine, after thirteen years of political exile in France, felt homesick, journeyed at some personal risk to Hamburg, where his mother and his publisher dwelt, and on his return to Paris wrote a travelogue in ballad form, full of personalities, politics and clever rhymes. The autobiographical portions are the best; his own mixed feelings of patriotism and his reunion with his mother are touching and brilliant examples of Heine's self-strangled lyricism. The politics show him in rebellion against censorship, tyranny and doctrinaire dullness, like many writers contemporary with him." (N Y Times)

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Book Week p9 Ja 21 '45 700w
Booklist 41:167 F 1 '45
Reviewed by Jacques Barzun
N Y Times p4 Ja 14 '45 950w

"Mr. Salinger prepared the entire English version while on service with the United States Army Air Corps, a fact which adds to our respect for his fine achievement. The one-volume Insel edition was the only one available to him. That explains sufficiently the omission of a few stanzas—especially those about the 'Prussian eagle that ugly black winged toad'—which fell victim to the censorship in 1844 and were exiled into the appendices of the scientific complete editions even in the time of the Weimar Republic. Perhaps Mr. Salinger will have an opportunity to add these verses to a second edition of his truly distinguished English version of Heine's immortal Winter's Tale." F. C. Weiskopf
+ Sat R of Lit 27:13 D 9 '44 1550w

HEINER, JESSIE MARGARETHE. Beckoning paths. 64p $1.50 Wings
811 44-7152

"Contains many simply written lyrics dealing with homey and near-at-hand things. . . This collection includes poems of many moods, and the thought is transparently clear on a first reading." Springf'd Republican

"On her last page the poet mentions 'sad, muted strings,' and on the preceding page she speaks of 'the little wistful songs that haunt me night and day.' These phrases suggest the twilight mood of her verse, which shows sensitive feeling and a competent use of words."
Christian Century 61:1079 S 20 '44 40w

"Readers of light lyrical verse such as may be found in the most popular women's magazines will like these poems." C. M. S.
Springf'd Republican p8 S 13 '44 140w

HEINMULLER, JOHN PAUL VIRGIL. Man's fight to fly; famous world-record flights and a chronology of aviation; foreword by Eddie Rickenbacker; designed and il. by Adolphe Bernasconi. 366p maps $6 Funk
629.1309 Aeronautics—Flights. Aeronautics—History 44-6692

"Complete story of aviation from Da Vinci to today. Eyewitness human-interest account of the world's outstanding record flights. Comprehensive chronology with brief sketches and drawings of the inventions. Reproductions of rare airmail covers and stamps. Numerous illustrations from the collection of the author, who is chief timer of the National Aeronautical Association and Féderation Aéronautique Internationale." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by G. A. Scheuer
Book Week p4 Ag 20 '44 310w
Booklist 41:55 O 15 '44
Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:700 S 1 '44 70w

"From Heinmuller's 'Man's Fight to Fly' you can learn almost anything of the thrust into the air from Leonardo da Vinci on. But he specializes particularly and pleasantly in the great record flights of the Twenties and Thirties. These Mr. Heinmuller knew well as official timer for the Fédération Aéronautique Internationale and our own National Aeronautic Association. He writes of them warmly and intimately, from Igor Sikorsky to Howard Hughes." John Stuart
+ N Y Times p16 S 24 '44 360w

"Through his close contact and personal friendship with such men and women as Admiral Byrd, Sikorsky, Lindbergh, De Pinedo, Wiley Post, Clyde Pangborn, Amelia Earhart and Howard Hughes, the author has been able to inject into his accounts a wealth of human incidents and understanding of the many elements which invariably influence the outcome of any great flight." Cecile Hamilton
+ Weekly Book Review p36 N 26 '44 450w

HELLER, ANNIE WILLIAMS-. See Williams-Heller, A. W.

HELLER, FRANK, pseud. See Serner, G.

HELLMAN, LILLIAN. North Star. 118p $2 Viking
792 Moving picture plays. World war, 1939—Drama 43-17688

Film script of the author's moving picture about a group of Russians during the first days of the Russian invasion.

"Highly recommended for all drama collections."
+ Library J 69:72 Ja 15 '44 40w
Reviewed by Manny Farber
New Repub 110:53 Ja 10 '44 70w

HELLMAN, LILLIAN. Searching wind; a play in two acts. 96p $2 Viking 812 44-5838

Text of a play which opened in New York, April 12, 1944. It begins in the Washington home of a former American ambassador; the time is the spring of 1944. In a series of flashbacks three important moments in the lives of the ambassador and his family are shown: Rome, 1922; Berlin, 1923; and Paris, 1938. One character in the present day section of the play is the ambassador's embittered young son, wounded in the fighting in Italy in the present war.

Booklist 41:14 S '44
Cleveland Open Shelf p11 Je '44
Kirkus 12:209 My 1 '44 80w

"While not top-drawer Hellman it is head and shoulders above most recent plays. . . Recommended."
+ Library J 69:762 S 15 '44 30w

"Another demonstration of the dramatic talent and sincere artistic purpose of Lillian Hellman. . . Her characters are literate and alive and their drama is charged with emotional overtones which makes it rich and rewarding." W. P. Eaton
+ Weekly Book Review p11 Ag 6 '44 150w

HELMERICKS, MRS CONSTANCE. We live in Alaska. 266p il $3 Little 917.98 Alaska—Description and travel 44-6627

"When seven-year-old Connie was asked what she was going to be when she grew up, she answered: 'Explorer.' Later, at the University of Arizona in 1941, she met, and later married, adventurous, 23-year-old Bud Helmericks, an Arizona hunter who could handle a boat as smartly as he could bring down a wild duck. He wanted his new wife to become 'a killer of bears.' One hour after their wedding, Bud and Connie boarded a ship for Alaska, bent on a canoe trip down the Yukon, third longest river in North America. We live in Alaska is Connie's lively and well-told tale of their honeymoon." (Time) Maps on end papers.

Book Week p8 Ag 13 '44 120w
Booklist 41:18 S '44
Cath World 160:286 D '44 30w
Christian Century 61:1201 O 18 '44 110w
Christian Science Monitor p14 S 1 '44 400w

"A record full of human interest."
+ Kirkus 12:269 Je 15 '44 130w

"Recommended as a desirable addition to the books about Alaska, for adventure and outdoor life, for interest to young people.

HELMERICKS, CONSTANCE—Continued
Realistic, including the mosquitoes and the smells, yet with a zest for frontier living." H. A. Wooster

+ Library J 69:649 Ag '44 110w

Reviewed by Kathrene Pinkerton

N Y Times p6 Ag 6 '44 450w

"Mrs. Helmericks writes simply and entertainingly and tells some good stories, but old armchair explorers who have mushed through the North Country in other literary dog sleds will probably feel that they have been through most of this before."

New Yorker 20:64 Ag 12 '44 60w

"While inevitably this fine adventure deals with only a small part of Alaska, it covers an extremely important region—its two great rivers—and all the way touches life that is unique, peculiar to the localities, and lacked, hitherto, sympathetic and vivid recording." Ernest Gruening

+ Sat R of Lit 27:58 O 14 '44 600w

"Constance and her young husband, married at 23, went to Alaska, with adventure in their hearts. At 26 she has written her first book. It is capable, sympathetic, and descriptive of the country she saw, but we'd like to see her write another book 10 years from now, telling of adventures in living in Alaska rather than an account of canoeing down the Yukon." Edrie Van Dore

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 13 '44 440w

Time 44:90 Ag 7 '44 800w

"Mrs. Helmericks succeeds measurably in conveying a graphic impression, in spite of a social worker's vocabulary which crops out in such distressing phrases as this description of intelligent Eskimo or Indian children: 'There are many cases who are definitely college material if given the proper guidance.' Throughout the narrative, the factual content is enhanced, sometimes with unintentional humor, by reflections on the problems and possibilities of the country. . . One can say truthfully that reading this book is almost as good as making the trip or maybe better." Isabel Paterson

+ — Weekly Book Review p4 Ag 6 '44 1150w

Wis Lib Bul 40:128 O '44

HEMINGWAY, ERNEST. Hemingway; ed. by Malcolm Cowley. (Viking portable lib) 642p $2 Viking

44-8271

Contents: The novels: The Sun Also Rises; A Farewell to Arms; To Have and Have Not; For Whom the Bell Tolls. The stories: In our time; Men without women; Winner take nothing; The short happy life of Francis Macomber; The snows of Kilimanjaro; Death in the afternoon.

Booklist 41:60 O 15 '44

Reviewed by W. W. E. Ross

Canadian Forum 24:212 D '44 750w

"A brilliant piece of editing, which should serve to widen the Hemingway audience, and to crystallize for many the emotional values, the many-faceted talent that is his."

+ Kirkus 12:347 Ag 15 '44 150w

"The selection is in some ways a strange one, but presumably it was dictated in part by practical considerations of publishing. The important thing is that there is nothing here that is not worth reading or rereading, and nothing has been omitted that is conspicuously better than what is here," Granville Hicks

New Repub 111:524 O 23 '44 1750w

"In 'The Portable Hemingway' (the latest in a series of unpretentious, inexpensive, well-printed books, small in size but big in contents) Malcolm Cowley has made what the publisher describes as a comprehensive selection, an anthology that shows the interrelationship of Hemingway's major works. It does not do so, although it is a good collection. With the short stories Mr. Cowley does very well. . . The problem of the novels, however, is more difficult. Mr. Cowley could have rejected 'To Have and Have Not' because it is rather poor novel, and 'For Whom the Bell Tolls' because it is too long to be included. He might then have used 'The Sun Also Rises' and 'A Farewell to Arms'; this selection would have been good, if not comprehensive, but it would have added more than two hundred pages to the book. Perhaps because he lacked space to do otherwise he has reprinted 'The Sun Also Rises' and excerpts from the other novels—a selection that may look comprehensive but isn't." D. S. Norton

N Y Times p3 O 8 '44 1400w

Springf'd Republican p6 O 14 '44 600w

Weekly Book Review p23 O 8 '44 130w

HENDERSON, ALGO DONMYER. Vitalizing liberal education; a study of the liberal arts program. 202p $2.50 Harper

378 Education, Higher. Colleges and universities 44-1449

Discussion of programs for liberal arts colleges, their aims and purposes; and instructional methods, personnel procedures, and community relationships. The author is president of Antioch college.

Reviewed by Walter Hendricks

Book Week p7 Ap 16 '44 650w

Booklist 40:278 Ap 15 '44

Bookmark 5:4 Mr '44

"Authoritative and interesting. Recommended for any reader concerned with values in higher education." J. S. Cleavinger

+ Library J 69:116 F 1 '44 90w

"What makes this book distinctive is its uncommon sense in a field marked by wild and strident claims. It is a modest but effective statement, against a broad background of educational experience, of one variant of the progressive educational philosophy." Sidney Hook

+ Nation 158:312 Mr 11 '44 1450w

"The detailed treatment of method will be of less interest to laymen, but they too can find here the scope and plan of an educational scheme by which a college designs to prepare its students for contemporary living—to counsel them as well as instruct, to prepare as specifically as possible for democratic participation. That the plan works we have the reputation of Antioch to prove." W. S. Lynch

+ Sat R of Lit 27:13 Ap 1 '44 340w

School & Society 59:144 F 19 '44 20w

"'Vitalizing Liberal Education' is a thoughtful and virtuous book, but it is not a practical aid. Consequently, it contradicts in some measure its own pragmatic philosophy." G. L. Joughin

+ — Springf'd Republican p8 Mr 22 '44 390w

Reviewed by L. W. Jones

Survey G 33:258 My '44 270w

Wis Lib Bul 40:82 Je '44

HENDERSON, DANIEL MACINTYRE. From the Volga to the Yukon. 256p $3 Hastings house

957 Russia—Territorial expansion. Siberia—History 44-47318

In part fiction, in part based on historical documents, this book relates in popular style the story of Russian expansion across Siberia, and by way of Bering Strait and Alaska the temporary invasion of our own Pacific coast.

Booklist 41:168 F 1 '45

"This book makes grand reading as a saga of adventure, romance, intrigue, and imperial aspirations. . . [The author's] style is annoyingly mannered, but his sources—frequently contemporary records—and the stuff of which his book is made override its form."

+ — Kirkus 12:473 O 15 '44 300w

"This is grand material. But, unfortunately, Mr. Henderson handles it in a sort of Sunday-supplement manner. He tends to over-popularize. Quite unnecessarily the author introduces three or four fictional characters into his narrative; puts words into the mouths of his real characters which savor strangely of Hollywood." I. D. W. Talmadge

— + Sat R of Lit 28:31 Ja 13 '45 360w

"With all its faults, the book should be read with interest by many people, for it deals with a romantic and too-little-known segment of history. Our new awareness of the importance and the potentialities of our northern possessions has quickened interest in the exciting early history of Alaska, and Mr Henderson's book covers adequately enough not only this period, but the events leading up to it." W. H. H.
+ — Springf'd Republican p10 D 8 '44 440w

HENDERSON, DONALD LANDELS. Mr Bowling buys a newspaper. 215p $2 Random house [8s 6d Constable]
44-2026

Murder story in which the central figure is a mild-mannered little Englishman who becomes a psychopathic case and embarks on a career of murder, after he finds out how easily it can be done.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p5 Ja 30 '44 550w

"A decidedly out-of-the-way item which is recommended to readers who are more interested in people than in how the murderer got out of the sealed room."
+ New Repub 110:326 Mr 6 '44 70w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p12 F 6 '44 220w

"Lovely mess of carnage, utterly unmoral up to faintly silly end. Very queer dish, excellently written . . . but not for squeamish."
Sat R of Lit 27:26 Ja 29 '44 40w

"This seems to be Mr. Henderson's first novel. His characters do not move us to feelings of pity and terror, but evoke instead a mild disgust." John Hampson
— Spec 170:106 Ja 29 '43 300w

Time 43:104 F 7 '44 40w

"It is a pity in the circumstances that Mr. Henderson, who provides a neat little ending, has not kept a firmer grip on the middle part of the story. Ida's liquidation is intelligible, so is the swift impulse to liquidate Mr. Watson, but the remaining trio, after all, needed something more than comic mannerisms to move Mr. Bowling to repeat himself so nonchalantly."
Times [London] Lit Sup p41 Ja 23 '43 420w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p14 Ja 30 '44 200w

HENDERSON, LE GRAND (LE GRAND, pseud). Augustus drives a jeep; il. by the author. 125p $2 Bobbs
44-5034

Augustus helps his country once more. This time he drives a jeep, containing a black box with a military secret in it, all the way from Florida to South Carolina, and wins the thanks of a very worried colonel, and, eventually of his country.

"Recommended." S. J. Johnson
+ Library J 69:555 Je 15 '44 90w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell
N Y Times p20 Ag 13 '44 120w

"This is a fascinating, amusing yarn; not perhaps the 'best' reading but not harmful either." E. C. T.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Je 11 '44 100w

"Just as I determine that the Augustus stories have grown too, too incredible to read, Le Grand slips over this one, just as incredible, that no boy—nor any one who recommends stories to boys—could help reading." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p5 Jl 9 '44 200w

HENDERSON, LE GRAND (LE GRAND, pseud). Augustus flies; il. by the author. 133p $2 Bobbs 44-8829

This time Augustus and his family are in Nashville, where his father has a job in the airplane factory. Augustus and his friends take up gliders in a big way, solve a mystery, and rescue an inventor and save his plans.

"Healthy—humorous—mild mystery."
+ Kirkus 12:402 S 1 '44 100w

Reviewed by E. M. Gordon
Library J 70:71 Ja 15 '45 60w

"The story will appeal to sense of humor and love of adventure of young boys." M. C. F.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d N 5 '44 80w

HENDRICKS, WILLIAM C., ed. Bundle of troubles. See Writers' program, North Carolina

HENIUS, FRANK, comp. and tr. Stories from the Americas; with illustrations by Leo Politi. 115p $2 Scribner

398 Folklore—Latin America 44-7131

Twenty stories from as many Latin American countries. Will be useful for story-tellers.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p15 O 22 '44 200w

Booklist 41:27 S '44

Horn Bk 20:477 N '44 80w

"The stories are short—pungent—with a very special humor and imaginative quality. Leo Politi has made full page stylized illustrations and delightful spot drawings."
+ Kirkus 12:430 S 15 '44 110w

"[A] book every storyteller would like to own. Tales for most part in traditional fairytale vein but with Latin-American flavor. For instance, though wicked witch and beautiful princess may bear kinship to fairy lore of other lands, stories quite patently did not spring from the Brothers Grimms' Germany or Mr. Jacob's England. Recommended for school and public libraries and all story-tellers." S. J. Johnson
+ Library J 69:763 S 15 '44 70w

Sat R of Lit 27:30 N 11 '44 270w

Springf'd Republican p4d S 24 '44 140w

"Here is a collection of importance professional story-tellers at once will realize, chosen with discrimination and put into English that does not sound like a translation." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p5 O 8 '44 250w

HENKLE, HENRIETTA (MRS P. J. STEPHENS) (HENRIETTA BUCKMASTER, pseud). Deep river. 481p $3 Harcourt 44-8472

An historical novel of Georgia during the last two years before the Civil war. The chief characters are Simon Bliss, an educated mountaineer who leads in the fight against slavery and for the Union, and Savanna, his wife, a gently reared daughter of the plantations.

Reviewed by E. R. Embree
Book Week p1 O 8 '44 1550w

Booklist 41:108 D 1 '44

Christian Science Monitor p14 O 25 '44 550w

"Miss Buckmaster has given pace and interest to troubled, confusing political issues; her human drama, her relation between whites and blacks, her picture of the issues at stake are better done, perhaps, than her psychological aspects in the relations between Savanna and Simon. But it is a holding tale, beautifully told, and well worth reading. It fits into the current interest in the Negro problem."
+ Kirkus 12:380 S 1 '44 250w

Reviewed by Ernestine Rose
Library J 69:813 O 1 '44 80w

"One cannot help feeling that Miss Buckmaster would have had a more convincing story if she had again written non-fiction. Simon Bliss, the leader of the anti-slavery movement, repeats his convictions so often that one becomes bored, in spite of one's sympathy with his point of view. Miss Buck-

HENKLE, HENRIETTA—Continued
master botches the essential meaning of the novel by making Bliss too incredibly admirable and self-sacrificing. His marriage to Savanna does not seem real, mainly because his protestations of love are countered by his curious neglect of their marriage relationship. It is a book that one admires, but it is strangely hard to read." J. H. Preston

+ — New Repub 111:573 O 30 '44 180w

"On the level of story telling alone, this narrative is very accomplished. It manages, for instance, a stream of dialect which, rather than being offensive, is delightful even to one who does not care for dialect in fiction. It is, furthermore, full of a continuous excitement. Yet one can hardly speak of it as story alone, since it is that rare thing, a historical novel in which events have moral values and are in themselves founded on ideas." Ruth Page

+ N Y Times p6 O 8 '44 500w

"Miss Buckmaster writes pseudo-poetic prose with a touch of rhetoric, and the various parts of the book seem rather awkwardly glued together, yet some of her scenes, especially those of middle-class domestic life, are warm and vivid."

+ — New Yorker 20:82 O 7 '44 200w

"It is a stirring tale of drama and passion and high aspiration, told in terms of human relationships. The love and confidence that came to exist between Simon and Savanna are beautifully realized. It is also a thoughtful, if controversial, interpretation of the pre-war South. It makes no pretense at being unbiased; it is the story of the struggle of the poor, including the slaves, against the rich planter class, which receives rough handling. Michael Alston, its representative, is the least rounded of the major characters. Finally, it is necessarily an oversimplification of a highly complicated movement." Jennings Rice

+ Weekly Book Review p3 O 8 '44 1100w

Wis Lib Bul 40:160 D '44

"Deep River is long, filled with exciting action, a broad and objective panorama of an important crisis in our past. It is written with beauty, with expert dialogue always in dialect. It is prolix and repetitious, but it is a superior performance." Orville Prescott

+ Yale R n s 34:384 winter '45 240w

HENRY, MARGUERITE. Boy and a dog; il. by Diana Thorne and Ottilie Foy. [42p] $1 Follett

Dogs—Legends and stories 44-8300

Story of a small boy and his beloved pet, a trick dog. When the dog was stolen and taken to a circus, Benjamin did not rest until Whiskers was once more at home.

"Boys and girls from 7 to 10 will love both the story and Diana Thorne's endearing pictures of Benjamin and Whiskers." P. A. Whitney

+ Book Week p5 N 12 '44 180w

"Simple, unpretentious tale, yet with enough action to satisfy third- and fourth-grade children." M. F. Cox

+ Library J 69:1049 D 1 '44 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p6 Ja 7 '45 100w

HENRY, ROBERT SELPH. "First with the most" Forrest. 558p il maps $4 Bobbs

B or 92 Forrest, Nathan Bedford 44-9824

Biography of that effective and much quoted Confederate fighting man, Lieutenant General Nathan Bedford Forrest, who began his military career at the age of forty, as a private; rose from the ranks to be a lieutenant general; and surrendered the last Confederate force in arms east of the Mississippi. Index.

Booklist 41:139 Ja 1 '45

Reviewed by Paul Kiniery

Commonweal 41:260 D 22 '44 210w

"A vigorous, virile biography of one of the few really great captains of men, Nathan Bedford Forrest, Confederate Cavalry leader still deified in the South."

+ Kirkus 12:418 S 15 '44 300w

"Bold yet cautious, impetuous yet careful, profane but deeply religious, callous and sympathetic, 'Old Bedford' was a legend while he yet lived. He lives and rides again in this fascinating military biography, which is as scholarly and as well written as it is interesting." R. A. Brown

+ Nation 159:695 D 2 '44 240w

"A comprehensive and masterful biography." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p36 N 12 '44 850w

"Mr. Henry writes with more earnestness than skill and, in his determination to be definitive, has filled his book with so much historical lumber that there are times when it's hard to see the Forrest for the trees. Forrest, however, has long needed just such sober treatment as this, and Mr. Henry is to be complimented for recording the facts of his hero's life instead of romanticizing about them."

+ — New Yorker 20:93 N 18 '44 130w

"This well written study is recommended to the military minded reader and to every one else who admires courage, character and resourcefulness in action." L. B. Kromer

+ Springf'd Republican p4d N 19 '44 750w

"It is a magnificent story, admirably told. Mr. Henry, who has already given us the most satisfactory history of the Confederacy, has done a signal service in recreating for us the most colorful of the western commanders and in reminding us—what we are likely to forget—that the campaigns in the West were neither less important nor less exciting than those in the East. This is a more lucid, if less comprehensive, biography than Wyeth's; it is more critical and better written than the biographies of Captain Mathes or the British Captain Sheppard." H. S. Commager

+ Weekly Book Review p5 N 12 '44 1300w

HENSON, HERBERT HENSLEY, bp. Retrospect of an unimportant life; v.2, 1920-1939. 426p il $6.50 (21s) Oxford

B or 92 (42-51083)

"The second volume of Dr. Henson's 'Retrospect'—the first was reviewed in this journal on July 25, 1942—covers the years between the summer of 1920, when the first Lambeth Conference after the Four Years' War was held, and the bishop's retirement from the see of Durham on the last day of January, 1939. It was a period which included the rejection of the Revised Prayer-book by the House of Commons, the General Strike, two Lambeth Conferences, the death of one King, the abdication of another, and the coronation of a third, and many events and incidents which gave evidence of a growing sense of frustration and futility both in Church and State." Times [London] Lit Sup

"A document of real historical importance." W. R. Inge

+ Hibbert J 42:277 Ap '44 1850w

"By far the greater part of this second volume of the last Bishop of Durham's autobiography consists of extracts from the author's private diary—or journal, as, in his characteristically eighteenth-century manner, he prefers to call it. This gives to the reader every advantage. Though published after the event the story is contemporary all the way through. It is honest, authentic, untrimmed, uncensored. Dr. Henson could not write badly if he tried, and his prose here is as much a pleasure as in, for example, his carefully written Gifford Lectures." R. L.

+ Manchester Guardian p5 Ja 15 '44 250w

"Though very few readers can be expected to share all Dr. Henson's dislikes, his character is so vehement and his book so candid that he never fails to interest. He is a notable exception to the rule that only saintly or cynical ecclesiastics are free from cant. And there is something agreeably enigmatic in a man whose intellect has been so little affected by his environment." Raymond Mortimer

+ New Statesman & Nation 27:97 F 5 '44 650w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson
N Y Times p18 Je 11 '44 800w

"Few readers will fail to find plenty of opportunity of disagreement with Dr. Henson: in a different review I could have made that plain for myself. But the worth of the volume lies in the revelation of personality rather than of opinions, and with the personality it would not be easy to find oneself at variance." J. K. Mozley
+ Spec 172:14 Ja 7 '44 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p610 D 18 '43 1300w

HERBERT, FREDERICK HUGH. Kiss and tell; a comedy in three acts. 157p $2 Coward-McCann 812 43-16410

A comedy about a very young girl with her own ideas about growing up and being held back by one's parents. The scene is an American suburban town; the time the present.

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '44

"Recommended."
+ Library J 68:959 N 15 '43 50w

HERBERT, FREDERICK HUGH. Meet Corliss Archer. 275p $2 Random house
44-4876

Episodes in the life of a sub-deb, Corliss Archer, daughter of a well-to-do lawyer in a small American city. Corliss is well-known already to many as the heroine of a series of Good Housekeeping stories, a radio program, and the play Kiss and Tell.

Booklist 40:356 Je 15 '44

Kirkus 12:124 Mr 15 '44 130w

"All the stories have freshness and appeal, but 'The Private Affair' and 'Growing Pains' are particularly pleasing. The author is usually content to let adolescent emotion shape his patterns. In contrast, 'Dear Diary' and 'Blood Is Thicker Than Tulips' are examples where manipulation and plotting rob the stories of their naturally convincing qualities. But the writing is always bright and easy, the characterizations deft and shatteringly of this world." Andrea Parke
+ N Y Times p27 My 28 '44 260w

Weekly Book Review p6 My 21 '44 150w

HERBERT, J. M., pseud. G—for Genevieve. 254p $2.50 Roy pubs.
940.544 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, Polish. World war, 1939—Aerial operations 44-5444

"This is the story of a Polish fighter pilot who, after vainly battling the Luftwaffe over his native land, escaped to internment in Rumania; made his way in disguise to France, where he fought again with a Polish squadron during the tragic month of June, 1940, and then fled once more to England, where he became the rear gunner of a RAF bomber, nicknamed by her Polish crew the 'G—for Genevieve.'. . The book is in part autobiographical although the author frankly admits that some of the experiences chronicled in the first person were not his own." N Y Times

"It seems to me that while the story is exciting, its lack of technical accuracy lowers its quality to a great extent. . . The author fails signally in characterizing his brother officers and crew. The fighting Poles of my acquaintance were wild, pugnacious, and devoted to but one ideal. To kill Germans was their one aim in life. . . To me, Herbert's narrative is most interesting up to the time that he arrives in England. In addition to its very real excitement, the story assumes humorous turns at times, that provide a further diversion." J. J. Ryan
+ — Book Week p6 Je 11 '44 400w

Boston Globe p17 Je 14 '44 220w

"Based on true incidents of the Polish air force, this is an unaffected, spare account of diehard resistance and a log of actual fighting detail."
+ Kirkus 12:178 Ap 15 '44 170w

"'G—for Genevieve,' a thoroughly beguiling book, should be read for entertainment rather than for information." Marcus Duffield
+ Nation 158:739 Je 24 '44 240w

"'G—for Genevieve' has within it the material for an absorbing book, but unfortunately it has been told in a dull and uninteresting fashion." F. S. Adams
N Y Times p20 Je 4 '44 450w

Spec 173:584 D 22 '44 300w

Reviewed by R. S. Scott
Springf'd Republican p6 Je 24 '44 400w

"The book has the liveliness and artistry of fiction and it also has the ring of truth: a highly satisfactory combination." Marcus Duffield
+ Weekly Book Review p2 Je 4 '44 950w

HERBERT, VICTOR. Songs for children; sel. and ed. by Ella Herbert Bartlett; specially arr. and simplified for young people by Margaret Bush; il. by Guy Edgar Fry. (Whittlesey house publication) 48p $1.75 McGraw 784 Children's songs 44-388

Twelve of Victor Herbert's songs for children, with music, and a short biographical sketch, written by his daughter. Illustrated in color.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p9 Mr 5 '44 90w

"Charming illustrations by Guy Edgar Fry in shades of brown and gray make this an unusually attractive book. A marvelous way to introduce boys and girls to the melodies of Victor Herbert." M. F. Cox
+ Library J 69:120 F 1 '44 70w

"This is a delightful book for the whole family to enjoy together. The older members will find a reminiscent pleasure in 'I Can't Do This Sum,' in 'Toyland,' in 'Never Mind, Bo-Peep' and the rest, and will enjoy introducing the younger members of the household to these charming melodies." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p17 Ap 2 '44 120w

"It is a book which will be enjoyed in the home by adults who remember the productions of the operettas as well as by their children. The arrangements are simple, retaining all the character of the original compositions." Maria Cimino
+ Sat R of Lit 27:26 Ag 19 '44 110w

"Now that it is done, and done so well, the wonder grows that it was never done before." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ja 30 '44 170w

HERMAN, LEWIS, and HERMAN, MRS MARGUERITE SHALETT. Manual of foreign dialects for radio, stage and screen. (Alliance bk) 416p il $6 Ziff-Davis
427.9 English language—Dialects. U.S.—Foreign population 43-8556

"The aim here is to get public performers on a plane of verisimilitude—if not total accuracy—when they imitate Greeks, Italians, Frenchmen, Chinese, Australian Bushmen, Hungarians or Bermudians. All these, and more, ways of speech are presented in careful analysis. Each section is introduced by a brief, perceptive discussion of the people involved, an admission that in many countries—Italy, China, Britain, etc.—no single dialect can be truly representative, a discussion of the distinctive 'lilt' that may apply. Thereafter it is a highly technical presentation of each tongue in the form generally used in drama. Phonetic rendering and musical notation are employed as basic aids." N Y Times

HERMAN, L. and M. S.—Continued
"Comprehensive, readable, if rather slangy, this volume fills vast gap in theatrical literature. Immensely practical for writers, actors, and directors alike." George Freedley
+ Library J 68:81 Ja 15 '43 70w

"The Hermans are long-time radio professionals: an acting, writing and teaching team. Their work here reflects—and imposes—high standards. Students and practitioners of the dramatic arts should profit greatly from it." C. B. Palmer
+ N Y Times p22 Ag 13 '44 160w

HERMENS, FERDINAND ALOYS. Tyrants' war and the peoples' peace; with an introd. by Robert M. MacIver. 250p $2.75 Univ. of Chicago press

940.531 World war, 1939—Peace. Germany—History A44-3208

"One of the wisest and best informed treatises on the German problem to appear in many months. Written by former member of Catholic Center party, who is now American citizen and teaches political science at Notre Dame University. Analyzes critically Vansittart's version of German history, examines Versailles treaty and political developments under the Weimar republic realistically and tries to show how various sectors of the German public reacted to Hitler's rule of terror. Author then proceeds to giving outline of peace to come. His suggestions for a lasting settlement may be controversial at times, but are always thought-provoking." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by G. S. McClellan
Am Pol Sci R 38:1232 D '44 550w

Reviewed by C. W. Shull
Ann Am Acad 237:204 Ja '45 360w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 O 1 '44 550w

Booklist 41:75 N 1 '44

"This is an essay of remarkable clarity and force. Well documented, starkly realistic, and long-sighted, it is worth a dozen of the more highly publicized treatises on war and peace." J. S. Kennedy
+ Cath World 160:182 N '44 400w

Reviewed by E. M. Burns
Christian Century 61:1415 D 6 '44 600w

Kirkus 12:366 Ag 15 '44 110w

"Recommended for college and larger public libraries." F. E. Hirsch
+ Library J 69:649 Ag '44 130w

Reviewed by Rustem Vambery
Nation 159:750 D 16 '44 420w

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin
N Y Times p25 S 10 '44 380w

"Dr. Hermens has written of the past and the future, in a Christian spirit. The book is his contribution to the vexing question of the future of Germany. On the whole, it is a sharp and explicit rebuttal of Vansittartism and the views of the large group of writers and propagandists who believe that drastic measures of punishment are the most promising method for preventing World War III. The author makes a laudable effort to stick to factual evidence in answering the statements of those he combats." C. J. Friedrich
+ Pol Sci Q 59:610 D '44 1200w

Reviewed by H. B. Parkes
Weekly Book Review p12 S 24 '44 650w

HERRING, HUBERT CLINTON. America and the Americas; an appraisal and a forecast; foreword by E. Wilson Lyon. 84p $2 Claremont colleges

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations—Latin America. Latin America—Foreign relations—U.S. 44-8533

Two lectures given in Los Angeles as the fifth of an annual series sponsored by the Associated colleges in Claremont. These lectures outline the earlier relations with Latin America, they weigh the achievements and deficiencies of the good neighbor policy, and call attention to a number of unsolved problems.

Booklist 41:71 N 1 '44

"This small book, containing two lectures, has substance enough for a volume of thrice its size. There are no extensive statistics, but the most significant data have been selected for presentation. The author's view is realistic, not romantic, but he arrives at hopeful conclusions."
+ Christian Century 61:1320 N 15 '44 150w

"Not for the body of fact presented, nor for the concrete utility of its results, is this book valuable, but for its candid and brisk address." Ralph Bates
+ Nation 159:658 N 25 '44 240w

Reviewed by Carleton Beals
Sat R of Lit 27:7 D 23 '44 550w

"The whole is done with a sense of selection, a knowingness and a wry and skeptical humor which make of this Claremont lecture the best brief introduction to the whole subject now available." B. D. Wolfe
+ Weekly Book Review p4 N 12 '44 950w

HERSEY, HAROLD BRAINERD. ed. G.I. laughs; real U.S. army humour; il. with 200 drawings by the boys themselves. 255p $2.75 Sheridan

940.5496 World war, 1939—Humor, caricatures, etc. 44-40015

Collection of jokes, sketches, verses and cartoons selected from the magazines published by the soldiers in Army camps.

Booklist 40:232 Mr 1 '44
Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '44
Kirkus 11:565 D 15 '43 80w

" 'G. I. Laughs' is a good book to laugh over, and then to keep for several decades. When G. I. Joe is graying and thick in the middle it will bring back to him the flavor of these days as nothing else can. And his sons and grandsons will find here an aspect that the textbooks of 1965 won't adequately present!"
Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 9 '44 300w

"This collection of rowdy prose and ragged verse, appropriately illustrated by men in uniform who have zest if not finesse, is broad and uninhibited. There are jokes in it which you will recall from your high-school days, though not the ones your teachers told. And there are fragments of verse and prose and gay drawings which reflect the lighter side of soldier life."
Weekly Book Review p19 Mr 12 '44 190w

HERSEY, JOHN RICHARD. Bell for Adano. 269p $2.50 Knopf

44-164

Adano is a Sicilian village, presided over by the A. M. G. officer, Major Victor Joppolo, U. S. A., an Italian-American with a love of justice. The major's biggest problem, after gaining the respect and love of the natives, is to find a bell for the town, to replace the seven-hundred-year-old town bell melted down for bullets by the Fascists. He is successful in his quest, but he himself is sent back to North Africa, because he disobeyed the orders of a dictatorlike general.

"The whole thing adds up to a study in the crucible of experience of 'what America can and cannot do in Europe.' As such it is very interesting and very good. It is even good as a novel with dozens of amusing characters, some of them stylized, some of them real. Hersey is concerned with concrete observation rather than with theory, but if a credo does emerge from his book, it is one that is apt to be forgotten in the struggle of abstract slogans—that government, whatever its professions, can only be as good as the men who govern." Milton Hindus
+ Atlantic 173:131 Mr '44 360w

"As is always the case in morality stories, the chief characters are oversimplified. They are all black, or all white, and so you must accept them. The humanity, the rich humor, and the occasional pathos in A Bell for Adano are to be found in the lower ranks, in men like Sergeant Borth and Captain Purvis, and in the Italians like the obsequious Zito, the stubborn fisherman Tomasino, and the painter Lojacono. These people are as real to us as an Italian fruit stand, and to watch them react to the ruthless and destructive impersonality of the war machine is to realize what a long, tortuous road lies ahead of us in Europe." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 173:127 Ap '44 500w

Reviewed by A. C. Spectorsky

+ — Book Week p1 F 6 '44 1700w

Booklist 40:213 F 15 '44

Bookmark 5:18 My '44

"Though the book is rich in incident, the story lacks direction and the characters are made too 'quaint' to appear to be genuine. The best one can say of it is that it is good reporting." N. E. Monroe

+ — Cath World 159:92 Ap '44 110w

"The pictures of the place and the people are masterly, rich in humor and humanity and utter conviction. . . Some readers will be offended, and quite naturally, by the language spoken by these service-men; for it is strong and blasphemous and far from acceptable to fastidious people. Presumably, it is the sort of language which Mr. Hersey's characters would speak; hence his habit of permitting them to be themselves through the pages of his book. It is a regrettable defect in a book which is all color and warm humanity." M. W.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 22 '44 700w

"This is a good book that is also a good deed. I would say that the fiction form of 'A Bell for Adano' is fictitious. This is not fiction, it is a first rate job of war reporting. . . This is a real newspaper story that Hersey has brought back from Europe—the biggest and most fundamental of all. To tell it, he could not have used any other medium than a pseudo-fiction form. Certainly the consolidation of our victory in this war, the avoidance of similar wars in the foreseeable future depends on the Joppolos—the men who can help the liberated peoples to get on their feet and help themselves." Max Ascoli

+ Commonweal 39:522 Mr 10 '44 650w

"Though the book as a whole reflects the fineness of Joppolo's character, it is studded with language and incident to which some may take exception." M. C. Scoggin

+ — Horn Bk 20:400 S '44 110w

"The story has much to recommend it; I question whether it is as important as the probable excitement about it would seem to indicate."

Kirkus 12:21 Ja 15 '44 280w

"First novel by author of Into the Valley is excellent; only possible drawback is frank soldier-language. Recommended for adults." H. G. Kelley

+ Library J 69:71 Ja 15 '44 80w

"Our first fiction of the American government of Italy. . . But the very speed of composition of Mr. Hersey's book gives it what interest it has, because, writing quickly, Mr. Hersey wrote out of a deep reservoir of folk-idealisms and popular assumptions. This is not to say that 'A Bell for Adano' is an unconscious book any more than most movies, also created out of popular assumptions are unconscious. . . There seems to me to be a great deal of truth in Mr. Hersey's picture of an American. In fact, 'A Bell for Adano' might accurately be described as the Platonic ideal of Americanism, of which the American reality is an active approximation. . . There is very little writing talent in 'A Bell for Adano,' just by the way." Diana Trilling

+ — Nation 158:194 F 12 '44 600w

" 'A Bell for Adano' makes very good reading in its capable and wholly unpretentious fashion. . . [It] is an entertaining story, a candid report from behind the lines and an effective tract. To demand that it be a soundly constructed novel as well would be asking too much." Malcolm Cowley

+ — New Repub 110:216 F 14 '44 480w

"Mr. Hersey has made the most of his observations as a war correspondent during the Sicilian invasion. His novel is not a great one, and there will undoubtedly be more profound novels written about the war. But what Mr. Hersey has to say in 'A Bell for Adano' should make the reading public and the Army sit up, take notice and possibly profit from the lessons he has so adroitly woven into his narrative." Jerre Mangione

+ N Y Times p5 F 6 '44 750w

"A well-written, funny, and, at times, serious and deeply disturbing story of the American invasion of Italy. . . Dogmatically recommended."

+ New Yorker 19:86 F 12 '44 160w

"John Hersey has delivered his message well, written his story delightfully. And in the process, inconspicuously, perhaps even with contradictory implications, he has written a sentence that should be held steadily before the eyes of all post-war planners. That sentence reads: 'The war aim of most men is to go home.' " B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 27:8 F 12 '44 900w

" 'A Bell for Adano,' has all the vigor and homely detail and unsparing realism of the young author's previous books. The defect of the work as a piece of fiction lies in its lack of depth, which no amount of surface brillance can conceal. In a novel we look for insight and understanding of character. To some extent Mr Hersey presents this, but usually crudely and with too great simplification. This is because he is a reporter—a recorder of the life he sees around him." R. J. Conklin

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e F 6 '44 550w

Time 43:99 F 21 '44 700w

"Mr. Hersey has sprinkled his tale with Italians and Americans both good and bad and just plain foolish, a lifelike mixture, and has drawn quite an accurate distinction between the primitive traits of the Italian townsfolk and the neo-primitive traits of the American boys. Besides the youthful horseplay which is surely an integral part of the 'civilian army' of a nation addicted to horseplay, there are many counterbalancing episodes to tug the heartstrings. Beneath the story flows a genuine love of justice, scorn of pettiness, and faith in mankind, ideals as implicit in the book as they are fundamental in America. As the author plainly shows, these are the only sure signposts which point the way through the tangles of today to the open highway of tomorrow." Virgilia Sapieha

+ Weekly Book Review p1 F 6 '44 800w

Wis Lib Bul 40:70 My '44

"In this war we do not have to wait until peace for a mature, moving, engrossing and important book about it. We can read A Bell for Adano and be thankful for so enormously gifted a young writer as Mr. Hersey. There's no telling how far he may go." Orville Prescott

+ Yale R n s 33:viii spring '44 320w

HERSHOLT, JEAN, tr. See Andersen, H. C. Fairy tales

HERTZ, FRIEDRICH OTTO. Nationality in history and politics; a study of the psychology and sociology of national sentiment and character. (Int. lib. of sociology and social reconstruction) 417p $6.50 Oxford [25s Routledge]

320.15 Nationalism and nationality 44-5058

"Dr. Hertz is a veteran Austrian scholar who brings the learning of a lifetime and a long Continental experience to bear on the problem of which he treats. . . His present work deals, in successive chapters, with the relation of nationality to language, to religion, to the national territory, to the social background, and to political thought and national ideology; it also discusses the nature of national consciousness and of national will and character." Springf'd Republican

---

Reviewed by John Lindberg

Ann Am Acad 237:236 Ja '45 650w

Reviewed by Simon Harcourt-Smith

Spec 172:598 Je 30 '44 650w

HERTZ, F. O.—Continued

"It is an academic work, based on wide general reading; and the veteran scholar has allowed himself to be overmastered by his material; it is difficult to find a guiding thread or a dominant theme. Dr. Hertz has traversed a wide territory in the course of his study; he deposits in his book many fruits of his reading, but he hardly achieves a synthesis or elucidates a conclusion. He knows so much history, so many books, so many countries, that he has ended by packing a portmanteau. . . Yet his book is a general storehouse of sociological 'pansophy'; it is just and generous in its references to Britain; it is just and level-headed in its discussion (for example) of the relation between nationalism and capitalism." Ernest Barker

Springf'd Republican p3 Ap 5 '44 440w

"This is not perhaps the best of times for reflecting calmly on the nature and properties of nationality in general when we are engaged in a passionate defence of our own; but Dr. Hertz's lengthy and painstaking survey of the whole field, historical and theoretical, is both of immediate interest and of permanent value; and if in the end he arrives at no particular conclusion, that is perhaps the most important conclusion of all."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p278 Je 10 '44 850w

HEUSER, EMIL. Chemistry of cellulose. 660p il $7.50 Wiley

668 Cellulose 44-2977

"This volume is, first, a compendium and critical digest of the literature of the chemistry of cellulose with due consideration of the microscopic and submicroscopic structure of the cellulose fiber. Emphasis has been laid on the scientific aspect rather than on the practical application of cellulose chemistry. . . Secondly, the book may be regarded as a textbook, inasmuch as it has been written from the point of view of presenting the subject matter in a systematic and simple manner to the student who is looking for guidance in his studies and who expects to find an unbroken and coherent treatise, rather than a number of individual and loosely connected chapters." (Pref) Author and subject indexes.

"The worker in chemistry who is unfamiliar with cellulose will find in this book a thorough introduction to the subject, while to those familiar with cellulose chemistry it should be a useful summary of the literature to date. The excellent index will facilitate use as a reference text. However, it would be helpful if chapter sub-headings had been included in the table of contents. The topography is excellent and the binding and paper are in accordance with wartime standards." G. J. Esselen

+ Chem & Eng N 22:660 Ap 25 '44 270w

Reviewed by M. L. Wolfrom

Chem & Met Eng 51:199 O '44 170w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 Je '44

"Useful both to the practicing chemist in industrial and other research laboratories and to students."

+ Library J 69:32 Ja 1 '44 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:4 Ja '44

HEWES, MRS AGNES (DANFORTH). Two oceans to Canton; the story of the old China trade; il. by Harry Roth. 184p maps $2 Knopf

382 U.S.—Commerce—China. China—Commerce—U.S. 44-8986

Stories of America's share in the opening of the trade routes to the Orient, and the parts played by such men as Samuel Shaw, John Jacob Astor, John Ledyard, and Donald McKay who built clipper ships, and Nathaniel Bowditch, who wrote a book on navigation. For boys and girls in the early teens. Index.

"Tops in reading for the teens." P. A. Whitney

+ Book Week p24 N 12 '44 230w

Booklist 41:111 D 1 '44

Cath World 160:282 D '44 10w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p10 N 30 '44 150w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 41:128 N 17 '44 20w

"An informed account of the old China trade. . . Miss Hewes gives names of famous ships, Empress of China and Experiment, the Grand Turk, out of Salem. She writes of famous men, Samuel Shaw, John Ledyard, Stephen Girard, John Jacob Astor. Her story of the warm friendships between the hong merchants and the Americans, of Houqua in particular, is one of unique generosity. There are striking maps and an excellent index."

+ Horn Bk 20:491 N '44 120w

Kirkus 12:480 O 15 '44 160w

Reviewed by A. H. McGinity

+ Library J 70:36 Ja 1 '45 70w

N Y Times p7 N 12 '44 80w

"This book has such spirit, such appreciation of the history of trading that no one who reads it can fail to feel confidence in the future, knowing how America, faced once with the struggle for existence, met it with trade—and won. It is especially good to have boys and girls hear the story from Agnes Hewes and her rich background. . . The book is well indexed. It can be read both for pleasure and for profit." E. B. Spring

+ Sat R of Lit 27:48 N 11 '44 230w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 14 '45 390w

HEWLETT, JOHN HENRY. Thunder beats the drum! 340p $3 McBride

918.4 Bolivia—Description and travel 44-9008

Account of the author's experiences in South America, where he went as a one-man expedition to hunt for the lost explorer, Colonel Fawcett. He found in La Paz, Bolivia, an old man who had once served as guide to Colonel Fawcett, but the explorer himself he did not find.

"Here's a thumping, walloping, two-fisted narrative about the adventures of a brash young man in civilized and uncivilized Bolivia. This is no delicate club-ladies' tour of quaint and picturesque South America. Hewlett lustily fills his pages with raw jokes, grim descriptions of disease and a natural history of the Bolivian prostitute. This should not, however, scare off the squeamish. The writing is punchy, but never offensive, and Hewlett shows enough intelligent interest in Bolivia's social and political past to make his effort a worthwhile report on current conditions in a relatively unpublicized country." George Wiswell

+ — Book Week p4 O 22 '44 400w

"There's a husky chest-beating maleness here which combines with fabulous experiences to make this the complete escape book—with a touch of salt."

Kirkus 12:360 Ag 15 '44 190w

"Some of these tales are told on the authority of Tom Donegal, and these should be taken with liberal quantities of salt. As for Hewlett's own stories of what he saw and heard and did—well, let us be charitable and withhold judgment." I. A.

N Y Times p25 O 22 '44 260w

"Here is a pleasantly unpleasant tale of a plunge into the Bolivian jungle by a young man who obviously enjoys himself immensely."

Weekly Book Review p12 O 8 '44 130w

HEWSON, EDGAR WENDELL, and LONGLEY, RICHMOND WILBERFORCE. Meteorology, theoretical and applied. 468p il $4.75 Wiley

551.5 Meteorology 44-2589

"The aim of the book is to give a well-rounded view of the essentials of the science of meteorology at the present time, as shown by the inclusion of chapters on instruments and observations, climatology, map analysis and forecasting procedure, the applications of meteorology to other specialized fields, and the statistical analysis of meteorological data.

So far as the authors know the last-named subject is treated here for the first time in any textbook. The problems and exercises provide a means for the student to clarify his ideas on the topics discussed." (Pref) Tephigram in pocket at back of book. Index.

Booklist 40:298 My 1 '44
Library J 69:119 F 1 '44 20w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:9 Ja '44

"The book is primarily for beginners in meteorology, whether they be students to whom the whole science is new or practicing forecasters who wish to brush up on the modern scientific developments in the field. It supposes nothing but an understanding of courses in calculus and college physics. . . In using this text rather than a set of texts, each on one branch of the science, the beginner will avoid deadly repetition of basic subjects such as statics which all texts cover, and he will gain a much better sense of the interrelatedness of the science. From the foundation of knowledge this book provides he can study specialized books with greater understanding." J. T. Tate, Jr.
R of Scientific Instruments 15:265 O '44 350w

HEYL, BERNARD CHAPMAN. New bearings in esthetics and art criticism; a study in semantics and evaluation. (Wellesley college publication) 172p $2.50 Yale univ. press

701.18 Art criticism. Esthetics A43-3701

Study in esthetic semanticism of art criticism, written primarily for students. Part one seeks "to show in what ways and to what degree linguistic confusion is responsible for the inadequacy of contemporary art criticism and esthetics." Part two outlines a theory of esthetic value. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 40:248 Mr 15 '44

"Within the modest limits of its aims, the volume makes a valuable contribution to esthetic theory." C. L. Stevenson
+ J Philos 41:360 Je 22 '44 900w

HEYLIGER, WILLIAM. Top lineman; il. by Scott Lusby. 198p $2 Appleton-Century

43-16939

Larry Kane, a top lineman, rejected for army duty because of a bad eye, does his part in the war by uncovering a spy ring. For boys twelve to fourteen.

Booklist 40:200 F 1 '44
Cath World 158:317 D '43 50w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 13 '44 70w

Reviewed by E. T. Dobbins
Library J 69:74 Ja 15 '44 40w

"Larry, not quite as acute as most of Mr. Heyliger's heroes, had a strenuous and suspicious time. If the reader guesses where the guilt lies before he did, the former nevertheless balances on the edge of his chair worrying over how much damage is going to be done before the saboteurs are tagged by the FBI. And, as always in Mr. Heyliger's stories of vocations, there is the stimulating sense of men at work, this time on something of vital importance to all of us." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p6 Mr 12 '44 240w
Springf'd Republican p7e F 27 '44 80w

HEYM, STEFAN. Of smiling peace. 363p $2.50 Little

44-8712

Novel based on the war in Africa, by a soldier now overseas with the United States army. The story is largely a psychological study of two men, representing the opposing forces: Bert Wolff, American Intelligence officer, and Major Ludwig von Liszt, a high ranking German staff officer, the embodiment of the Junker class.

"Perhaps the author of 'Hostages' won't like this, but he has written an intriguing adventure story in the best John Buchan tradition. His plot moves as fast as that of 'Greenmantle,' and while Buchan is a greater virtuoso of melodramatic effects, Stefan Heym gives his figures a more complicated nervous system, a psychological depth which the old master of 'The Thirty-Nine Steps' considered unnecessary." R. R. Plant
+ Book Week p8 O 29 '44 550w

"Cynical—illuminating."
Kirkus 12:351 Ag 15 '44 190w

"Though several of the characters verge on the bizarre, it still is a fast-moving credible war story, so handled that it says something new on a much author-ridden theme. Recommended." A. M. Davis
+ Library J 69:883 O 15 '44 60w

"A tumultuous novel that some will find hard to digest except in small doses. . . It would be possible to dismiss 'Of Smiling Peace' as melodrama a shade higher than Hollywood level, were it not that Mr. Heym gives more than an occasional hint of his interest in the psychological and moral problems involved." Nona Balakian
N Y Times p22 O 29 '44 650w

"Unfortunately, the Nazi is so much more effectively presented than the American that the forces of democracy don't come off as creditably as Mr. Heym obviously intends. Altogether, Mr. Heym's second try is not anything like as good as his 'Hostages,' either as straight narrative or as political reporting."
— New Yorker 20:97 N 11 '44 180w

Reviewed by Thomas McEnore
Springf'd Republican p4d N 12 '44 470w

" 'Of Smiling Peace' is an immensely likable and intelligent study of spies, slaves and men of honor. It makes the best of the two worlds of ideas and of adventure." James Gray
+ Weekly Book Review p8 O 22 '44 800w

HICHENS, ROBERT SMYTHE. Young Mrs. Brand [Eng title: Veils]. 506p $2.75 Macrae Smith co. [9s 6d Hutchinson]

44-8682

"Dorothea Sutton was summed up, at a first meeting, by Sir Erik Meredyth—the single flash of intuition attributed to him—as 'A noble creature. But, my boy, she's no angel.'. . Nicholas Brand, to whom the diagnosis was made, married her without a qualm, spent a three days' honeymoon with her, and returned to France in 1918 to receive a wound and a mutilation that put an end to him as a lover. Dorothea, still noble, . . . determined upon a life of devotion to her suffering husband. But after Nicholas committed suicide in Italy, she surrendered to the Marchese Scaletta, married and for religious reasons undivorceable, an affair that was revived at regular intervals until the daughter of her marriage, Cynthia, was thirteen. After that . . . a young American, eight years her junior . . . was responsible for a further lapse into the unangelic, and the Nemesis that followed led her, against her inclinations, to a final marriage with Scaletta, now a widower." Times [London] Lit Sup

"A novel of original sin, pursued at great length, with understanding limited by moral censure."
Kirkus 12:328 Ag 1 '44 170w

"In 'Young Mrs. Brand' Mr. Hichens has posed the same problem which D. H. Lawrence advanced in 'Lady Chatterley's Lover.'. . In this case Dorothea Brand is drawn as a woman whose calm, placid exterior conceals volcanic passion. . . To a degree she seems real. But as much cannot be said for most of the other people in this overlong, tortuous novel. . . These people might have stepped out of a motion-picture screen at the wrong end of a double feature. It is too bad, because Dorothea's problem, with more compelling treatment, could have been genuinely dramatic." A. D. H. Smith
— N Y Times p16 O 29 '44 200w

"This story must speak for itself. It exhibits the tireless patience of Mr. Hichens, devotedly entering into the fullest detail of every scene and conversation of his long, elaborate story. It is forty-nine years since the publication of his first book 'The Green Carnation,' but he is still a very able entertainer."

HICHENS, R. S.—Continued
Times [London] Lit Sup p533 N 6 '43 300w

HICKS, GRANVILLE. Behold trouble. 340p $2.75 Macmillan 44-47607

"The story of a difficult, neurotic young pacifist who holds out against the draft, with results that are tragic to all concerned." New Yorker

Reviewed by Warren Beck
Book Week p10 D 17 '44 500w

Booklist 41:153 Ja 15 '45

"A queer, unconvincing tale."
Kirkus 12:328 Ag 1 '44 170w

"Mr. Hicks' skillful characterization makes his story convincing—and depressing. There was more hope in his Only One Storm. Excellent novel, vital theme; recommended for small library purchase." F. A. Boyle
+ Library J 69:813 O 1 '44 80w

Reviewed by William Poster
New Repub 112:28 Ja 1 '45 240w

"The present book is at its best when it illumines the hard-headed types of Mr. Hicks' beloved Berkshires—and at its worst when it pokes a Freudian left hook at its jittering theme. When you have turned the final page you may not be at all sure what the sparring was about—or even if the author was pro or con." William Du Bois
N Y Times p6 D 3 '44 460w

"The oddly assorted, rather unpleasant characters who are affected in one way or another by the hero's intransigeance are all credible enough, and the young man's suffering is made acutely real, but it is hard to see what point Mr. Hicks is trying to prove or how he himself feels about his disgruntled, self-conscious hero."
— + New Yorker 20:97 N 25 '44 90w

"Whether or not Mason understands the necessities of the world in which he lives, it is true that he might have been presented with more logical consistency. . . Despite [its] mounting weight of action 'Behold Trouble' remains a novel of ideas, and fails because its central idea has not been examined with dispassion or thoroughness." N. L. Rothman
— + Sat R of Lit 27:13 N 25 '44 450w

"To say that in our living today all of us are aware as perhaps never before of inner tensions and outer pressures is to state a truism; yet it takes a writer of exceptional ability to portray such conditions in a novel that will be at once highly readable and thought-provoking. He must have perceptivity, compassion, a feeling for drama—combined with a deep sense of the complexity of modern civilization on which war has now been superimposed. Granville Hicks displays all these qualities in 'Behold Trouble,' a novel that manages to be as timely as the morning newspaper, as charged with violence as a crime thriller and, at the same time, to present disturbing problems." Jennings Rice
+ Weekly Book Review p4 D 17 '44 1050w

HICKS, JOHN DONALD. Short history of American democracy. 859p il maps $5.50; text ed $4 Houghton
973 U.S. History 43-14006

This college textbook on American history begins with a chapter on The old world and the new, and brings the whole course of American democracy up to the second World war. It closes with June, 1942. Index.

"This volume, as must be the case with any history claiming the attention of the present-day reader, covers not only political and diplomatic developments but also the great social and economic changes that have transformed the United States from a small nation of British-descended farmers to an industrial empire of polyglot origin. To blend all these and other phases of American history into an integrated narrative is an undertaking that calls for real powers of synthesis. Prof. Hicks has not only achieved it; he has achieved it with distinction." P. M. Angle
+ Book Week p3 Ja 23 '44 470w

Current Hist 6:162 F '44 50w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:661 Jl '44 10w

"A readable, scholarly textbook of United States history from the earliest times to the invasion of Sicily."
+ New Repub 110:253 F 21 '44 120w

"In a sense, it is the brilliant offspring of the marriage of two earlier and notable books by the same author—'The Federal Union' and 'The American Nation.' It continues the good features of both parents and adds several new ones of its own. The whole is enlivened by colored maps, line drawings, well-selected cartoons and photographs, and pleasing type faces." G. H. E. Smith
+ N Y Times p21 F 13 '44 900w

"Much space is well devoted to recent history both at home and abroad from 1914 to 1943. This is a work of real merit; it is dynamic and inspiring; it glows with vitality which is unusual in college textbooks. And it is teachable; it is unified and well organized; there are headings and subheadings. . . The chief merit of this noble history lies in the fact that it gives the student, in a concise manner, a good taste of what America has contributed to modern culture and throws much light on present problems which confront American statesmen." R. A. Mackie
+ School & Society 59:63 Ja 22 '44 500w

HIETT, HELEN. No matter where. 316p $3 Dutton
914 Europe—Description and travel. Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc.
44-2978

An American girl, just out of college, went to Geneva on a summer scholarship, in 1934, and spent the next two years working there. From 1936 until the outbreak of the war she studied and traveled in England, France, Germany, Spain, Italy, and the Balkans, returning annually to the United States to lecture. In 1940 she was on the foreign staff of the NBC as correspondent in France, and later held the same position in Spain. This is an account of her experiences during these years.

"Illinoisan Helen Hiett has written a most important book about tomorrow. With a political science degree she won from the University of Chicago for background, and just crowding her 21st birthday, she went on a search for something that took her through the fever spots of Europe on a 10-year odyssey. This long, studious, and strangely moving book is the story of her search and findings." Alan Browne
+ Book Week p4 Ap 30 '44 500w

Booklist 40:316 My 15 '44

"An observant outlook, a fresh and generous approach to places and peoples, and a disturbed awareness of the steps toward a world at war, all [are] reflected in this autobiography of a young woman who spent her post-college, pre-war years on the continent, with representative young people of several countries."
+ Kirkus 12:165 Ap 1 '44 200w

Reviewed by Richard Match
New Repub 110:857 Je 26 '44 60w

"Miss Hiett is an intelligent young woman who reports facts extremely well. Her book is a mixture of shrewdness and sentiment, but parts of it are fine reporting. . . Miss Hiett's courageous, clear-headed grasp of the fact that the Germans are the most tragic people in our world—and that for good or ill they are in that world to stay—is worth everything else in her book." Catherine Maher
+ N Y Times p8 Ap 30 '44 500w

"The style is informal, completely sincere and frequently amusing. . . [The author] adores Europe, and seeing it through her eyes is a delightful experience, for she not only gets pleasure from breathlessly beautiful scenery, but from little things as well—good food, odd little restaurants, funny local habits, colloquialisms—all the things that make traveling fun. . . Miss Hiett gives some timely thoughts and excellent advice, and if one only had the authority to say the book is a 'must,' one would hastily add that it is the most readable must-book yet." Eleanor Marindin

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 10 '44 420w

Reviewed by Frances Witherspoon
Weekly Book Review p16 Ap 2 '44 450w

HIGHET, MRS HELEN (MACINNES). See MacInnes, H.

HILL, ERNESTINE. My love must wait; the story of Matthew Flinders. 410p $2.75 Doubleday

Flinders, Matthew—Fiction 44-1895

Fictionized biography of Matthew Flinders, son of an English physician, who first charted the coast of Australia and named the continent.

Booklist 40:235 Mr 1 '44

"The adventure material is compelling enough to stand on its own. Among many, there are vivid pictures of Port Jackson, seething with lust and corruption; of Flinders and his friend George Bass mapping coastlines in an eight-foot boat; of rotting ships and scurvy-weakened men; of London in the day of Nelson and Emma Hamilton. Ernestine Hill has a nice feeling for words. You'll remember Matthew Flinders, whose maps and charts shaped the destiny of a continent." Andrea Parke
+ N Y Times p7 Ja 30 '44 500w

"An inept title for an ineptly fictionized biography of Matthew Flinders, who named the continent of Australia and charted its coastline and its islands. His life was one of such varied interests and accomplishments that the book makes rewarding reading in spite of its lack of style."
— + New Yorker 19:78 Ja 29 '44 50w

Reviewed by C. H. Grattan
Sat R of Lit 27:20 F 19 '44 800w

"Although Ernestine Hill has tried hard, in this carefully documented work of biographical fiction, to convey her sympathy and admiration for Flinders in convincing artistic terms, he remains for the greater part of the book a prim, starched paragon of last-century virtues. He does not emerge as real and human until he begins to fail. . . The other characters, too, are little more than shadowy figures in a historical sideshow." T. L. Collins
Weekly Book Review p8 Ja 30 '44 550w
Wis Lib Bul 40:55 Ap '44

HILL, KATHARINE. Dear dead mother-in-law. 224p $2 Dutton 44-1709

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p11 Ap 16 '44 80w

"Tiresome."
— Kirkus 12:107 Mr 1 '44 40w

"A story well worth your while." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p8 Mr 12 '44 100w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p16 Mr 5 '44 100w

HILL, MABEL BETSY. Roddy meets the circus; pictures by [the author]. (Stokes bk) 72p $1.50 Lippincott 44-6028

A lonely small boy meets a little girl acrobat and spends a wonderful day with her at the circus. He comes home with a drum major hat and baton, and after that he has plenty of company to play with.

"Quiet entertainment for boys and girls with a love of the circus."
+ Kirkus 12:341 Ag 1 '44 70w

"The type of story that has great appeal for children in grades two and three. Print is large and illustrations in black and white are attractive. Recommended." J. E. Wooster
+ Library J 69:763 S 15 '44 60w

HINDER, ELEANOR M. Life and labour in Shanghai. 2d ed 143p pa $1.50 Inst. of Pacific relations

331.8 Labor and laboring classes—Shanghai. Shanghai—Social conditions 44-5893

"A factual study of the labor and social problems in the International Settlement, by a former employee of the Shanghai Municipal Council." Foreign Affairs

"Miss Hinder has made a contribution to the story of man's long struggle to improve living conditions for all." A. E. Nuquist
+ Am Pol Sci R 38:818 Ag '44 300w

Reviewed by H. F. MacNair
Ann Am Acad 236:181 N '44 600w
Foreign Affairs 23:16 O '44 20w

HINKEL, RALPH E., and BARON, LEO. Educational guide in air transportation. 140p il 75c Transcontinental & western air, inc, Public information dept, 101 W. 11th st, Kansas City 6, Mo.

629.1382 Aeronautics, Commercial 44-138

"Vocational data for students, counsellors and teachers on fifty jobs in air transportation, of which a number is open to women as well as to men. Duties, qualifications and training are described, along with work conditions, rate of pay and promotion. An orientation course in aviation is outlined, with references to suggested readings in the accompanying bibliography of about 240 books and periodical articles. A list of films available to the classroom instructor is included." N Y New Tech Bks

"Well-organized vocational and reading guide." L. A. Eales
+ Library J 69:700 S 1 '44 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:39 Jl '44

HINKSON, PAMELA. Golden rose. 371p $2.50 Knopf [9s 6d Collins]
44-7514

The love stories of two women are told in this novel set against a background of a model hospital in India. Clare, beautiful Mrs John Charters, wife of the British Resident, is slowly recovering from a serious operation. Little by little, she and her nurse, Sister Françoise, reveal to each other their secret stories and from Sister Françoise, Clare acquires the strength to take up life again.

Book Week p8 S 24 '44 180w
Booklist 41:58 O 15 '44
Cath World 160:378 Ja '45 180w

"This is one of those occasions where the plot of a novel is so simple that it can be fully told in two brisk sentences and yet it is so overlaid with color and ideas that it supports a novel of nearly four hundred pages. Mother India supplies the color. . . The ideas, on the contrary, come from the nuns of the Order of Notre Dame de la Guérison in general and Sister Françoise, Mother Rectress of the State Hospital of Mholpur, in particular. They could hardly be more edifying."
+ Commonweal 40:572 S 29 '44 420w
Kirkus 12:286 Jl 1 '44 210w

"Sister Françoise is a capable and noble woman, a little too large for the book, reducing to insignificance the affair of the Resident's wife. . . Indian non-political problems are touched upon and Americans, apt to take mental short cuts about India, might find illumination in this honest and well-phrased novel." Harold Brighouse
+ Manchester Guardian p3 Je 2 '44 100w

Reviewed by Marguerite Young
N Y Times p20 Ja 21 '45 500w

HINKSON, PAMELA—Continued

"The author, daughter of the Irish poet, Katherine Tynan Hinkson, writes calmly and with deep understanding of enduring religious truths. Her characters exhibit carefully disciplined emotions and she emphasizes through them the values of loyalty and fidelity in marriage. 'Golden Rose' is a serious and thoughtful novel dealing with a common problem." C. M. Sauer

+ Springf'd Republican p4d O 22 '44 250w

"Slow-moving though the tale is, its romantic quality is smoothly maintained, while the philosophy or the spiritual wisdom which proceeds from Sister Françoise in the end is all that a romantic reader could desire. All the same, anybody but the devourer of two or three novels weekly may read in a critical temper."

Times [London] Lit Sup p269 Je 3 '44 480w

"The author is the daughter of Katharine Tynan, the Irish poet. A lyricism of her own and of Ireland light her quiet story. It is not a novel of world events—and still less of empire—but a thoughtful and intelligent study in conquest of one's spirit, of the art and the mortality of religion." Mary Ross

+ Weekly Book Review p6 S 17 '44 650w

HISS, PHILIP HANSON. Selective guide to the English literature on the Netherlands West Indies; with a suppl. on British Guiana. 129p pa 75c; to libs & school 50c Netherlands information bur, 10 Rockefeller plaza, N.Y. 20

016.917298 West Indies, Netherlands—Bibliography 44-2779

"This bibliography, compiled by a Brooklynite who has resided in the area and who is currently turning out numerous works on it, is designed to acquaint the American public with the economic value of the Dutch Caribbean to the mother country and the numerous economic, social, and political problems attending its exploitation." Am Hist R

Reviewed by Lowell Ragatz

Am Hist R 49:556 Ap '44 100w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 22:17 Ja '44 10w

HITCHENS, MRS DOLORES (BIRK) (DOLAN BIRKLEY, NOEL BURKE, D. B. OLSEN, pseuds). Cat wears a noose. 177p $2 Doubleday

44-3967

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p11 Ap 30 '44 90w

Kirkus 12:86 F 15 '44 80w

"It would be well if writers of detective stories would take the trouble to look up the precise meanings of the words 'bullet,' 'cartridge' and 'shell.' The author of this book uses these terms interchangeably, and the result is utter confusion." Isaac Anderson

— N Y Times p12 Ap 23 '44 120w

"Begins well, with Dracula touch highly promising. Chronicle of deaths in unpleasant family then gets confused, with too many surprises at finish. Disappointing."

+ — Sat R of Lit 27:33 Ap 22 '44 40w

"Here's a simple, soft-boiled item featuring that lovable old deducer, Rachel Murdock, and Samantha, her feline attendant." Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p14 Ap 23 '44 140w

HITLER, ADOLF. Hitler's words; with an introd. by Frederick Schuman; ed. by Gordon W. Prange. 400p $3.75 Am. council on public affairs

943.086 Germany—Nazi movement 44-40142

"Selected speeches and excerpts that contain Hitler's ideas and opinions after he wrote Mein kampf. Arrangement is by 20 topics, such as France, mortal enemy, Culture politics, Woodrow Wilson's fourteen points, and Unrighteous England. Most of the text of the speeches is translated from the Voelkischer Beobachter; each speech is identified as to time and place but there is no commentary or historical background as in the selection My new order, edited by Raoul de Roussy de Sales." Booklist

"This volume and the study by Heiden are an excellent foundation for the study of Hitler and Nazi ideology."

+ Am Hist R 50:174 O '44 90w

"Frederick L. Schuman's introduction is well worth reading for his sensible observations on the larger aspects of the problem of Hitlerism." Gerhard Krebs

+ Am Pol Sci R 38:1245 D '44 250w

Booklist 40:374 Jl 1 '44

"Mr. Prange has done a useful job in assembling a popular-priced compilation of the Führer's frenzied prose. It includes a good bit of material, mostly from the Völkischer Beobachter, which is new in English translation. Although the two-volume translation of Hitler speeches, issued in 1941 under the auspices of the Royal Institute of International Affairs, will remain the standard English version, Mr. Prange's work is competent and his rendition free from distortion."

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Jl 29 '44 420w

Foreign Affairs 23:12 O '44 20w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn

N Y Times p7 Jl 2 '44 350w

HOAGLAND, DENNIS ROBERT. Lectures on the inorganic nutrition of plants. 226p il pl $4 Chronica botanica [24s Dawson]

581.13 Plants—Nutrition 44-4290

"This is Volume XIV of 'A New Series of Plant Science Books'. The first five lectures, designed to provide a general perspective of the field of plant nutrition, were given at Harvard University, under the Prather Lectureship. These were revised in preparation for publication, and two more lectures were added. Most of the illustrative material was drawn from experiments in the author's laboratory and greenhouse, and from those of his associates, at the University of California. The subjects dealt with are: a survey of the problems of plant nutrition, micronutrient chemical elements and plant growth, absorption and accumulation of salts by plant cells, upward movement and distribution of inorganic solutes in the plant, growth of plants in artificial media, biochemical problems associated with salt absorption and certain aspects of the potassium nutrition of plants." Chem & Eng N

"Students of the plant sciences and biochemists in general have reason to be grateful for this concise summary of the work of Professor Hoagland and his associates, and it is to be hoped that it may serve to attract attention to the innumerable problems awaiting solution and description in the 'precise terms of the physical scientist.'" H. B. Vickery

+ Am Chem Soc J 66:1614 S '44 450w

"This book will find a permanent place in the literature of this field of endeavor. Every plant chemist and physiologist will want a copy for ready reference, as well as every soil chemist who is concerned with the primary problems in crop production." F. E. Bear

+ Chem & Eng N 22:1509 S 10 '44 380w

HOAGLAND, MRS KATHLEEN. Fiddler in the sky. 294p $2.50 Harper

44-4500

Story of an upper middle-class Irish family, living in a small town during and just after the first World war. Thru the eyes of the oldest daughter the decline of the Brendan family is pictured, as political unrest and family feuds lead to one come-down after another, until Elizabeth Brendan makes a bold decision and takes her children to America.

"In 12 years of book reviewing I have seldom been so lost in the magic of a novel." Sterling North

+ Book Week p1 Ap 30 '44 800w

"If we regard the book simply as a novel it is an exciting and amazing piece of creative work. It is exciting because Mrs. Hoagland has great power both of characterization and of narrative. That is why it is a pity that she has not learned wisdom. It is amazing because she sees detail with the same curious and observing eyes as does Zola, Balzac or Jane Austen. And she is wonderfully aware of the ambivalences that contest in the soul of a young girl; of the torture of learning maturity, of the anxiety that enforced allegiance to one parent brings where a household is divided. . . This is a first novel. But it is not a novel of promise. It is the finished work of a mature writer. It is as full of bias as a sectarian sermon." Francis Downing

+ — Commonweal 40:138 My 26 '44 650w

"An evocative story, with many holding moments and characters."

+ Kirkus 12:78 F 15 '44 210w

"Despite many ineptitudes of style, this is a surprisingly good first novel, in which the disintegration of an upper-class Irish family in 1916 coincides with the breakdown of a society." Marjorie Farber

+ New Repub 110:793 Je 12 '44 120w

Reviewed by Thomas Haynes

N Y Times p14 My 14 '44 550w

"A sympathetic, shapely first novel. . . When Mrs. Hoagland is picturing the home life of the Brendans or when she is concerned with the moral disequilibrium of the Irish in the transition period of which she writes, she shows a perception that has considerable depth as well as sharpness. When she attempts to analyze the disintegration of the hero, her hand is less sure, and she is so downright inept at dialogue that the novel is most alive when the characters keep their mouths shut. In spite of these weaknesses, however, Mrs. Hoagland is well worth reading, and watching."

+ — New Yorker 20:86 Ap 22 '44 140w

"The tension and turmoil of Ireland in the throes of the transitional period from 1916 to the early 20's is graphically and unforgettably brought out in Kathleen Hoagland's 'Fiddler in the Sky.' . . There is much power in this first novel by Miss Hoagland. Events are grimly portrayed, and people mercilessly and realistically drawn with accurate detail and telling effect. Having read 'Fiddler in the Sky' one will not soon forget its dramatic and tragic impact." C. M. Sauer

+ Springf'd Republican p4d My 7 '44 440w

"The best study in the book is of James Brendan. . . Mrs Hoagland is at her best in her pictures of the movement and feel of the town at various seasons and various times of the day. She has a keen eye and a sensitive mind for the natural aspects of landscapes and a gift for capturing the moods and movements of crowds." Clare Godfrey

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ap 30 '44 400w

HOBBS, FRANKLYN. Gold, the real ruler of the world. 271p $3.50 Business foundation, 210 E. Ohio st, Chicago 11

332.422 Gold. Money 44-443

"As a standard of international exchange gold has of course a long history behind it, and it is the most acceptable and accepted standard up to now. Hobbs doesn't think anything could be substituted for it. He has some definite ideas too for the use of our gold, such as buying up all surplus stocks of raw materials abroad after the war, paying in gold, which will give us the goods and foreign countries the gold with which in turn to pay us for other things. He believes gold is the real ruler of the world." Current Hist

"There are many economists who will disagree with [the author], and there are many more, not economists, who feel that while gold has its place in the world, it is not the enshrined deity Hobbs makes it nor a panacea for all commercial ills."

Current Hist 6:356 Ap '44 210w

Foreign Affairs 23:5 O '44 10w

HOCKETT, HOMER CAREY, and SCHLESINGER, ARTHUR MEIER. Land of the free; a short history of the American people. 765p il maps $5.50; college ed $4 Macmillan

973 U.S.—History 44-8256

Short history of the development of the United States from colonial times to the second World war, closing with 1943. The authors are emeritus professor of history at the Ohio State university, and Francis Lee Higginson professor of history at Harvard university. "The present volume is based upon, but does not supersede, the 'Political and social growth of the American people,' of which Homer C. Hockett wrote the first volume and Arthur M. Schlesinger the second." (Foreword) Bibliographies. Index

"The book is a crowded affair. Some subjects which are to be found in regular schoolbooks could here have been shortened. On the other hand, science is treated as a stepchild and cited mainly in connection with such popular items as automobiles, vitamins, movies or radio. Most of our important inventions are omitted entirely; patents and the patent system are not mentioned at all. No one, of course, can compress the entire story of our people into one volume and do full justice to each chapter. On the whole, however, the authors have done exceedingly well, and their work, adorned with many fine pictures and maps, is unique in scope, purpose and performance." Otto Eisenschiml

+ — Book Week p8 O 15 '44 360w

Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook

Current Hist 7:497 D '44 90w

"This is a book which, while unfailingly readable, relies for its appeal upon solidity of substance rather than stylistic sparkle; which, while well enough stocked with ideas, depends upon scholarship rather than striking but untested hypotheses. It is objective throughout. . . Mr. Hockett and Mr. Schlesinger have opinions of their own, and they are opinions which show study and judgment. Nobody will read this book in a sitting, or even in several; but anyone who has it on his shelves has about as sound, complete, and up-to-date a summary of American history as he could wish." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 27:12 O 21 '44 600w

Springf'd Republican p8 N 10 '44 350w

HOCKING, WILLIAM ERNEST. Science and the idea of God. 124p $1.50 Univ. of N.C. press

215 Religion and science. God 44-8718

"This is an examination—for the general reader—of the present position of scientific thought in relation to religious faith." Book Week

"It has very definite virtues—of clarity of expression and charity of attitude. Its thinking is honest, and the expression of it forthright." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 D 31 '44 50w

"Dr Hocking has effectively criticized the relations of science and religion today, and has shown the weak points in the theories of substitute scientific gods. He has not, however, given us the positive side of his own dialectic. Those who are familiar with the author's previous works, and his 'critical, intuitive idealism,' will know something of the basis of Dr Hocking's own faith. He has not made it very clear in this volume. 'Science and the Idea of God,' however, is a valuable little volume." C. D. Kean

+ — Springf'd Republican p6 D 28 '44 550w

HODGSON, LEONARD. Doctrine of the Trinity. 237p $2.50 Scribner [15s Nisbet]

231 Trinity 44-5605

"In this series of Croall Lectures delivered at Edinburgh in 1943, the Regius Professor of Divinity in the University of Oxford offers us a brilliant exposition and defense of the Christian doctrine of the Trinity. Contending that Christianity is 'the message that God has entered into the history of this world for the purpose of restoring the image, of re-making our human nature after the pattern of the divine, of changing us beyond our capacity to change ourselves,' he presents a life-centred interpretation of the Trinity." Crozer Q

HODGSON, LEONARD—Continued

"This is a volume for the mature student in Christian theology. It presupposes an acquaintance with the development of Christian doctrine down through the centuries. For all advanced students it will remain a treatise warranting consideration for many years to come." G. W. Davis
Crozer Q 21:346 O '44 900w

"This is definitely a theological book, profound in its scholarship, stimulating to those willing and able to apply their minds to Christian truth."
+ Kirkus 12:371 Ag 15 '44 80w

Reviewed by H. G. Wood
Spec 171:536 D 3 '43 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p488 O 9 '43 600w

HOELLERING, FRANZ. Furlough. 251p $2.50 Viking
44-6672

In the story of the two-weeks' furlough of a Nazi soldier, home from the Russian front, the author portrays life in Germany after four years of war. The gradual awakening of Hans, once a loyal Nazi, takes place thruout his short leave, until in the end he becomes a deserter.

"'Furlough' is not as strong as Segher's 'Seventh Cross,' but it is more human and doesn't try to win the reader by sheer strength. Hoellering's novel will remain one of the most powerful and impressive descriptions of the Germany of today even if one doesn't accept his picture of the German people as a kind of Sorcerer's Apprentice who can't exorcise the demons they have conjured." Richard Plant
+ Book Week p3 Ag 20 '44 650w

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 31 '44 550w

Kirkus 12:238 Je 1 '44 190w

"Recommended for all public libraries." J. E. Cross
+ Library J 69:650 Ag '44 80w

Nation 159:304 S 9 '44 240w

"Although the soldier is a creditable portrait of a die-hard Nazi, one feels that the environment in which he moves has been completely wrenched away from reality to provide leverage for his final, dubious reformation." William Poster
New Repub 111:468 O 9 '44 180w

"The novel probably presents no details of German wartime life not already known to readers of American newspapers, but its value lies in the fact that so many of these details are here available in one place, as a compendium and a reminder, the novel is worth while, especially since the reporting is done by an expert who knows the people of whom he writes. If we find interest in the book as current history, we also see appeal in it as a work of fiction." Michael Ravenna
+ N Y Times p5 Ag 20 '44 550w

New Yorker 20:74 S 30 '44 250w

"A swift-moving, action-packed, and at times poignant story which keeps the reader well in suspense and is likely to satisfy his hope for a de-Nazification of Germany's killers." Robert Pick
+ Sat R of Lit 27:10 Ag 19 '44 600w

"Unfortunately, 'Furlough' is such a surface piece of writing, so carelessly put together, that it loses much of its potential value either as an artistic or a sociological document. It is peopled with a succession of types and shadows who dart in and out of the soldier's ten days on the home front like wraiths with no substance of their own. No character, not even the hero's, is clearly formulated." Renee Forbes
— Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 20 '44 440w

Time 44:96 Ag 28 '44 60w

"'Furlough,' appearing just as the rift inside Germany has become public knowledge, is well timed. But the real novel of Germany's disintegration has yet to be written—either now, by a German who dares to voice it, or years hence, by a German who has lived it down." Virgilia Sapieha
Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 27 '44 800w

HOERBER, ROBERT GEORGE. Theme of Plato's Republic. 119p $2.75 Eden pub. house

184.1 Plato

"Without the Aristotelian separation of ethics and politics, even more literally understood than in Aristotle's usage, Mr. Hoerber's problem of Platonic interpretation would quite vanish. His question is whether the theme of the Republic is the state or justice in the individual; and he goes conscientiously through the Republic and other relevant literature to prove that the ethical, not the political, subject is the main theme." Ethics

---

Reviewed by A. F. Saunders
Am Pol Sci R 38:1039 O '44 260w

Reviewed by Marjorie Grene
Ethics 55:72 O '44 1100w

"It is difficult to see what can be gained by writing a book which, with the flimsiest of arguments, tries to prove that Plato's political ideas must not be taken seriously. In fairness to Dr. Hoerber's teachers, one must say that, according to the preface, they seem not to have agreed with his results. But one still wonders why they did not point out to him the absolute inadequacy of his arguments." Kurt von Fritz
— Pol Sci Q 59:464 S '44 1250w

HOFF, SYDNEY. Feeling no pain. 128p $2.50 Dial press

741.5 Humor, Pictorial. Caricatures and cartoons 44-47345

"This is the first album of Hoff drawings, most of them from The New Yorker. Nearly two hundred views of his Bronx and Rockaway people, usually portly, generally domestic or romantic, and often clad in underwear or dotted dresses." New Yorker

---

Boston Globe p32 N 29 '44 30w

"Nothing unkind here—rather improvisations on the themes of family, romantic and social life, with their moments of substantial humor."
Kirkus 12:529 N 15 '44 90w

"When Mr. Hoff gets away from the overcrowded flat, from leering studies in embonpoint as seen through open slum-district windows, and from ill-lighted city streets, he becomes truly amusing. His work seems easier to take when he stops probing for laughs amid misery and squalor." Meyer Berger
N Y Times p7 N 19 '44 220w

New Yorker 20:94 N 18 '44 50w

Reviewed by W. R. Benet
Sat R of Lit 27:17 D 9 '44 70w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p5 D 3 '44 110w

HOFFMAN, ROSS JOHN SWARTZ. Durable peace; a study in American national policy. 120p $1.75 Oxford

327.73 U.S.—Foreign policy. World war, 1939—Peace 44-4141

"The book is an effort to define an American foreign policy that is at once an expression of our national tradition and a contribution to the organization of a secure and durable peace." (Pref. p vi) The author is associate professor of European history in the graduate school of Fordham university. Index.

"Professor Hoffman's book is an extremely able analysis of the problems which will face the postwar world. . . His chapter on 'The West and Russia' should be read by all who are apprehensive about our future relations with the Soviets." R. S. McCordock
+ Am Pol Sci R 38:1017 O '44 340w

"Space precludes full treatment of this brilliant book. Multum in parvo defies analysis. But the reader who is surfeited with the pseudo liberalism of today's reactionaries will delight in this pungent presentation of a conservatism that is both enlightened and intelligent." L. M. Sears

+ Ann Am Acad 236:172 N '44 450w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 Ag 27 '44 50w

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley
Cath World 160:377 Ja '45 230w

Reviewed by Edward Skillin, Jr.
Commonweal 40:164 Je 2 '44 420w

Foreign Affairs 23:9 O '44 30w

Reviewed by S. R. Chow
Pacific Affairs 17:363 S '44 750w

Reviewed by R. W. Van Alstyne
Pol Sci Q 59:603 D '44 700w

"This book—a good one—is a straw in the wind; that changing wind which has blown for some years so strongly from the Left . . . but which now shows such clear signs of veering round and of coming from the Right. . . Professor Hoffman's chapter on 'The West and Russia' is particularly interesting as coming from a somewhat 'Rightist' author. He starts and ends with the proposition that understanding with Russia is absolutely indispensable to stability and peace. . . Professor Hoffman has written a book which will in places infuriate Radical Perfectionists; infuriate them largely because he raises very competently—particularly by his historical analysis—points they have too often culpably ignored." Norman Angell

Sat R of Lit 27:44 Je 17 '44 1600w

Reviewed by R. B. Pease
Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 13 '44 650w

"Professor Hoffman almost ignores economic questions; and his emphasis on the need for order and tradition will not please the more ardent apostles of global democracy. But his book exhibits both a detailed knowledge of the European past and—what is more important—an understanding of the processes of historic development. It is realistic without a trace of cynicism; and it is animated by a sober confidence in the good sense of the American people." H. B. Parkes

+ — Weekly Book Review p8 Ag 27 '44 850w

HOFFMAN, SYLVAN, ed. News of the nation; a newspaper history of the United States; with a foreword by Allan Nevins. [168p] $3.49 Garden City pub. co.

973 U.S.—History 44-40058

"Presents our past in digestible, tabloid form. What looks like a newspaper turns out, reassuringly, to be solid history, endorsed by such prominent historians and educators as Charles A. Beard, Allan Nevins, George S. Counts and George N. Shuster. It can be read by students and adults, by the youngster in high school and his parents in the library. In format, the book, with its spiral binding, resembles a bound volume of tabloid-size newspapers. It is divided into forty-one issues, each one of which is a four-page newspaper in itself. These 'papers' are to be published individually as well as in bound volumes, so that in the classroom the instructor can use one issue a week to cover the entire academic year." N Y Times

---

"It's corny, it's sacrilege, it's wonderful. It's the best idea, the most original and one of the most striking in recent publishing history and it should cause a revolution in education." A. C. Spectorsky

+ Book Week p1 F 27 '44 360w

Booklist 40:267 Ap 1 '44

"As a device for making the learning of history attractive, this is one that depends overwhelmingly on its execution. Fortunately the ingenuity, intelligence, and accuracy with which the project has been carried out are fully equal to the objective."

+ Nation 158:344 Mr 18 '44 250w

"Despite the praises of Time (a case of the pot calling the kettle white) and Charles A. Beard—clarum et venerabile nomen—the most that I can find to say for 'News of the Nation' is that it has faced the problems squarely and sought boldly for the technical solutions. But the regrettable answer has been something like the lowest common denominator, the format, treatment and almost the style of The New York Daily News." George Mayberry

— New Repub 110:386 Mr 20 '44 600w

"The editorial pages of the newspaper-book are exceptionally fine. Here significant events are interpreted. As in the traditional newspaper, cartoons, pointed and sometimes sarcastic, give force and vigor to the text. Every issue contains a dozen or more pictures, lending authenticity to the news articles and further strengthening the newspaper theme. . . In a foreword Prof. Allan Nevins, whose crusade for a better appreciation of American history has been conducted for many years, observes that 'This Newspaper history of the United States should appeal to the imagination of every youngster and his parents.' Dr. Nevins is right." Benjamin Fine

+ N Y Times p3 F 27 '44 800w

School & Society 59:256 Ap 8 '44 30w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 5 '44 470w

Time 43:99 Mr 6 '44 550w

"On the whole the editors have succeeded admirably in re-creating the living reality of the past, in rescuing historical figures from their pedestals and presenting them as familiar men and women, and in exciting the imagination and provoking the interest of children." H. S. Commager

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Mr 5 '44 1200w

HOFFMANN, ELEANOR. Sierra Sally. 139p il $2 Nelson

44-3343

Story of a cow pony who hated cows, but wanted to become an explorer. When Red Mike rode Sally into the high Sierras, the little horse proved to be a fine climber, and when Red's eye was injured, Sally brought him back, blindfolded but safe. For ages nine to twelve.

"Exciting reading for children who love nothing better than a horse story."

+ Kirkus 12:171 Ap 1 '44 130w

"Lovers of horse stories will enjoy this for its excitement of roundup time, a forest fire and other adventures. The size and format make it easy reading for nine- to twelve-year-olds." Elizabeth Johnson

+ Library J 69:405 My 1 '44 70w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
N Y Times p10 Je 4 '44 80w

HOFSTADTER, RICHARD. Social Darwinism in American thought, 1860-1915. (Am. hist. assn. Albert J. Beveridge memorial fund. Publication) 191p $2.50 Univ. of Pa. press [15s 6d Oxford]

301 Evolution. Sociology 44-8078

Historical survey of the efforts of Herbert Spencer and others to apply the theories of Darwin to human society. "He shows how the doctrine of 'survival of the fittest' was first used to justify rugged individualism and the excesses of predatory capitalism, and later as a defense of imperialistic war, and gives very interesting accounts of such leading American figures in the controversy as William Graham Sumner and Lester Ward." (Book Week) Bibliography. Index.

"This is a critical and discriminating study. One might wish that the author had more frequently related the ideas he examines to the earlier American rationalist tradition, but this does not detract from the value of what he has chosen to include." J. D. Lewis

+ Am Pol Sci R 38:1252 D '44 370w

"Though not very long, it is remarkably meaty, and very well written. An informed reader may take exception to some of the author's interpretations and there may even be a few errors of fact, but hardly any interested person will deny that the book is profitable reading." F. N. House

+ Am Soc R 9:711 D '44 420w

HOFSTADTER, RICHARD—Continued

"As it stands, this volume contains excellent orientation material for younger students of the social sciences. It would have lost none of its value and would have been more of a contribution had its author fitted his materials into the postulates of the sociological theory of knowledge. The author seems aware of the parallelism between the shifts from the rough-and-tumble, atomistic free-for-all of the frontier to the regulated integrations of a technological culture, but he makes no use of this approach." F. H. Hankins
+ — Ann Am Acad 237:229 Ja '45 550w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 S 24 '44 90w

"Mr. Hofstadter is compact, lucid, informed, vigorous. He makes no concessions to popular taste, and if you are not prepared to struggle manfully with adult material, you had better not buy his book. But if you really want to know why and how some of the contradictions in American social thought came into being, 'Social Darwinism' is as excellent a study as you can hope to find." H. M. Jones
+ N Y Times p19 Ja 21 '45 750w

"Subject matter of this sort is not very easy reading, despite the author's rich vocabulary and graceful style. Darwin's theories were susceptible of quite contrary interpretations, and to keep straight in one's mind the lineup of leading thinkers on any one of the points at issue is no mean task. Mr Hofstadter has kept his grip on the winding strands admirably, nonetheless; the reader who is willing to apply the necessary mental elbow grease will be richly rewarded. And not only in the enjoyment of first rate scholarship and general coherence, but because the author interprets the ideas and relates them to the total social environment." S. L. Jackson
+ Springf'd Republican p6 N 22 '44 470w

HOGAN, INEZ (MRS RANDOLPH BOWERS). Nappy planted a garden. [49p] il $1 Dutton 44-2719

Story of a small boy's efforts to make a garden and keep it in order, with the help of an understanding older sister. For ages five to eight.

Booklist 40:306 My 1 '44

"There is no attempt to make this a primer garden book, but Inez Hogan has simplified, down to the level of second grade readers, enough about what happens in a garden to make this a useful first book."
+ Kirkus 12:117 Mr 1 '44 90w

"Every child who has been eager to share in the war effort will see how he, too, may become a soldier of the soil and follow Nappy in his battle on the home front." L. R. S.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 2 '44 110w
Wis Lib Bul 40:112 Jl '44

HOGAN, INEZ (MRS RANDOLPH BOWERS). Twin colts; il. by the author. [49]p il $1 Dutton 44-6371

The Corey twins Christine and Christopher, share their summer adventures with twin colts, born on the farm. Illustrated in black and white.

"Friendly story, with the author's excellent black and white pictures."
+ Kirkus 12:321 Jl 15 '44 70w

"In typical Hogan hand printing, this will be fine for reading aloud or for a precocious beginner." M. L. Goodwin
+ Library J 69:816 O 1 '44 70w
Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 27 '44 80w

HOGEBOOM, AMY. Dogs and how to draw them. 39p il $1 Vanguard

743.6 Dogs. Dogs—Pictures, illustrations. Animal painting and illustration 44-9480

Simple text, pictures and diagrams, showing the six to ten-year-old how to draw nine breeds of dogs. Contents: Wire-haired fox terrier; French poodle; Irish setter; Cocker spaniel; Dachshund; Police dog; Scottish terrier; Collie; Bulldog.

"There have been many books on drawing for teen-age boys and girls, but this is one of the first I've seen intended for 6-to-10-year-olds. And very good it is for this age." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p22 N 12 '44 70w
Booklist 41:111 D 1 '44
Cath World 160:280 D '44 20w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 41:127 N 17 '44 10w

"Recommended." A. M. Anderson
+ Library J 69:1104 D 15 '44 50w

HOGG, GEORGE A. I see a new China. 210p $2.50 Little 334.64 Chinese industrial cooperatives

44-5547

Story of the Chinese industrial cooperatives, written by a young Oxford-educated Englishman, who has spent five years as a teacher and organizer with the cooperatives in the interior of China. He includes statistics and a great many anecdotes. Maps on end papers. No index.

"Simply as a travel book and a war book this one should be rated high, but as an account of a potentially very important economic development it should be rated higher still." Margedant Peters
+ Book Week p4 Jl 2 '44 280w
Booklist 40:385 Jl 15 '44

Reviewed by Francis McCullagh
Cath World 159:570 S '44 600w

"Mr. Hogg packs almost too many facts into his story at times, since some of his work was propagandistic and he acquired a world of information which he is anxious to give out. But balance is maintained by his unfailing humor and his eye for picturesque, telling details, without which the tale might become a little heavy." R. G.
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Je 28 '44 500w
Current Hist 7:133 Ag '44 100w
Foreign Affairs 23:16 O '44 20w

Reviewed by M. S. Stewart
Nation 159:414 O 7 '44 420w
New Repub 111:110 Jl 24 '44 120w

"'I See a New China' has defects. The material is nearly two years old; fresher data would show further deterioration in affairs. Though Mr. Hogg obviously refers to Communists at a number of points, he has diplomatically left the word itself out. There is a painful eagerness to name no names in dealing with the Chungking foes of the co-ops, though the accusing finger is pointed sternly and unmistakably in that direction. But these defects are unimportant in that Mr. Hogg has written a vigorous, honest, at times profoundly moving book. His people are real people, lousy, sweaty, and completely unpretentious, but with that inner metal of which heroism is forged." Mark Gayn
+ — N Y Times p4 Jl 2 '44 1250w

"The author, who has worked for five years as a teacher and organizer in the Chinese cooperative movement, doesn't make anything like full use of the material that has come his way and seems to think that the only skill involved in writing is the ability to set down one word after another, but his book nonetheless is a close-up view of a development that will probably play a large part in determining the social shape of postwar China."
New Yorker 20:79 Je 24 '44 130w

Reviewed by Frederick Reinstein
Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 2 '44 500w

"The story of the Chinese Industrial Cooperatives has been told many times but usually by people living far from their scene of operations, or rewritten from publicity handouts with slick and glowing adjectives. . . Mr.

Hogg's book is the best and most vivid description of the movement I have read. Its one fault lies beyond its own structure—the fact that the audience to which it is addressed lacks the background to assess the picture presented." T. H. White

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Je 25 '44 850w

Wis Lib Bul 40:143 N '44

HOGNER, DOROTHY (CHILDS) (MRS NILS HOGNER). Bible story; il. by Nils Hogner. 438p $2.50 Oxford

220.52 Bible. Whole—Selections 43-17258

"The narrative portions of both Old and New Testaments are covered in this volume of Bible stories, which, with some condensation and re-writing where the text would be obscure, follows the wording of the King James version quite faithfully." Wis Lib Bul

"Nils Hogner's pictures, dramatic in concept, are drawn with a faithful and intelligent attention to authentic detail. To a sometime Sunday school teacher who remembers her own harried and sometimes embarrassed moments this book seems a stupendous task successfully achieved." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 26 '44 360w

"Easy to read, invigorating to look at, the volume might lead to lifelong friendship with Holy Writ." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 D 19 '43 330w

Wis Lib Bul 40:11 Ja '44

HOGNER, DOROTHY (CHILDS) (MRS NILS HOGNER). Our American horse; pictures by Nils Hogner. 114p $2.50 Nelson

636.1 Horses Agr44-196

A history of the horse in America from the days of Eohippus, the Dawn Horse who lived in Wyoming in the Eocene Age, down to the present. For young readers.

Booklist 40:379 Jl 1 '44

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 20:291 Jl '44 80w

"Anyone above 12 who likes horses will be fascinated by this splendid and informative book with its precise illustrations in black and white."

+ Kirkus 12:280 Je 15 '44 210w

"The book is well done but will have a limited appeal. For junior high school age, or older, interested in horses. Recommended." J. E. Wooster

+ Library J 69:654 Ag '44 70w

Wis Lib Bul 40:107 Jl '44

HOGNER, DOROTHY (CHILDS) (MRS NILS HOGNER). Reward for Brownie; pictures by Nils Hogner. [28p] $1 Oxford

44-7472

Picture-story book for ages five to eight, describing the love of a city policeman for his horse, Brownie, and what happened when Brownie was retired from active service.

Booklist 41:44 O 1 '44

Kirkus 12:398 S 1 '44 80w

"Illustrations, although in black and white, rank with outstanding pictures of horses for children." V. W. Schott

+ Library J 69:816 O 1 '44 50w

"The pictures are guaranteed accurate, and many a little boy will be sure that his own curbstone favorite has been immortalized on these pages." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 O 15 '44 100w

HOKE, MRS HELEN L. Doctor, the puppy who learned; pictures by Diana Thorne. [18p] $1 Messner

Dogs—Legends and stories 44-8548

Story of a dachshund puppy, destructive but lovable, who was reformed by a present of a rubber bone. For very small children.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p23 N 12 '44 50w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p10 N 27 '44 30w

"Children will like it. Recommended for picture book collections, if prebound." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 69:886 O 15 '44 70w

HOKE, MRS HELEN L. Shep and the baby; pictures by Diana Thorne. [17p] $1 Messner

Dogs—Legends and stories 44-8549

Picture-story book about a faithful collie dog and the baby whose life he saved.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p23 N 12 '44 50w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p10 N 27 '44 30w

"A slight, but appealing, story. . . Lovely, realistic pictures in the usual style of Diana Thorne." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 69:886 O 15 '44 50w

HOKE, HENRY REED. Black mail. 89p il maps pa $1 Reader's bk. service, inc, 220 5th av, N.Y. 1

940.5488743 Propaganda, German. Fascism—U.S. 44-7395

"Henry Hoke's book describes, with no soft pedal, the insidious propaganda campaign launched in the United States prior to Pearl Harbor and still going on despite imprisonment of some of its leaders and indictments on charges of sedition against others. The author, who has been active in direct-mail advertising for 20 years, accidentally discovered in 1939 that this modern American selling tool had been adopted by enemies of democracy to spread disruption throughout the United States. Most of Mr. Hoke's time for the next five years was spent in tracing the pattern of propaganda which is so clearly set forth in the book." Christian Science Monitor

Reviewed by Sterling North

Book Week p2 Ag 13 '44 360w

Booklist 41:9 S '44

"This book will help its readers to recognize enemy propaganda and to distinguish between truth, normal dispute, intolerant prejudice, and planned disruption. Certainly such an awareness is needed if democracy's victories on the fields of battle are to be worth the sacrifice." J. B.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 S 7 '44 300w

Kirkus 12:338 Ag 1 '44 80w

Reviewed by Victor Riesel

Nation 159:275 S 2 '44 550w

"Belonging strictly to the Walter Winchell school of anti-fascism, 'Black Mail,' like its predecessors, fails to explain either the origins of native fascism or the reasons for its strength in our democracy."

— New Repub 111:501 O 16 '44 100w

"'Black Mail' is a challenging book. Its message is that our security must be insured by our thought." Charles Hurd

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 13 '44 650w

Reviewed by Alfred Werner

Survey G 33:467 N '44 130w

HOLBERG, MRS RUTH (LANGLAND). Michael and the captain; il. by Sandra James. 114p $2 Crowell

Smith, John, 1580-1631—Juvenile literature 44-7925

The story of a young Serbian boy of the early seventeenth century. When his family learn that Michael may be taken by the Turks to be trained as a Janizary, they send him away from home. In the course of his travels he meets Captain John Smith and the lives of these two freedom-loving souls are intertwined until in time Michael is returned safely to his home.

HOLBERG, RUTH—Continued

Commonweal 41:256 D 22 '44 10w

Horn Bk 20:490 N '44 100w

"Stirring adventure story for ten and up."
+ Kirkus 12:373 Ag 15 '44 130w

"Children over ten with a decided bent toward the historical may like this story of Serbia in the early seventeenth century. . . Not an essential book for schools or libraries." Dorotha Dawson
Library J 69:939 N 1 '44 70w

School & Society 60:208 S 23 '44 50w

Springf'd Republican p4d D 24 '44 130w

HOLISHER, DESIDER. The eternal city; Rome of the popes; phot. by [the author] introd. by James M. Gillis. 160p il $3 Ungar

914.56 Rome (city)—Description 43-18477

"There is just enough text to explain the 228 photographs which constitute most of the volume. Aside from the religious angle itself, the pictures are most interesting and give a glimpse of the Vatican both without and within." Current Hist

Current Hist 6:437 My '44 40w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:497 Ap '44 30w

HOLME, BRYAN, ed. Master drawings. 15p 129pl $3.50 Studio

741.9 Drawings 44-291

One hundred and twenty-nine drawings, each one reproduced on a full page, ranging in time from Pisanello and Botticelli to Picasso. "One of the chief purposes of this book being to review drawings as works of art comparable in interest to any other medium of art expression, the selection has been made with this in mind." (Introd) Index gives artist, his dates, and the collection in which the drawing is found.

"Such astonishing oversimplification might possibly be forgiven were the reproductions of higher quality. Unfortunately, though many of the original drawings are marvelously beautiful, much of their subtlety and delicacy is lost here, due to poor reproduction. The drawings selected are mainly European and date from the era of Michelangelo until the present."
— + Book Week p8 F 6 '44 140w

Booklist 40:299 My 1 '44

Bookmark 5:9 Mr '44

"The book will suitably assist the student far from the metropolitan centers to consider achievements in the Western tradition of draughtsmanship." Jerome Mellquist
+ Commonweal 39:657 Ap 14 '44 500w

Kirkus 12:32 Ja 15 '44 120w

HOLMES, FREDERICK LIONEL. Old World Wisconsin: around Europe in the Badger state; il. with phot. and sketches by Max Fernekes. 368p $2.50 Hale, E.M.

917.75 Wisconsin—Description and travel 44-5011

"The third volume of the author's trilogy about Wisconsin is devoted to the old world groups who have settled here and to the survival, even into this modern day, of their folk customs. Even those who think they know the state will be surprised at the colorful pageantry revealed in both text and pictures. A colored frontispiece and many black and white sketches . . . illustrate the book, in addition to a wide selection of photographs by Arthur Vinje and others." (Wis Lib Bul) Index.

" 'Old World Wisconsin' follows 'Alluring Wisconsin' and 'Badger Saints and Sinners' to complete a long-planned trilogy about the state. It should be read and owned not only as a delightfully informative travelogue, but also as a record of customs for the most part soon destined to fade from the American scene." August Derleth
+ Book Week p9 Je 4 '44 400w

Booklist 41:102 D 1 '44

"Librarians will be grateful to the author many times over for this addition to their store of Wisconsin material."
+ Wis Lib Bul 40:109 Jl '44

HOLMES, OLIVER WENDELL, 1809-1894. Psychiatric novels. 268p $3 Columbia univ. press [20s Oxford]

43-15139

This volume contains abridged versions of Elsie Venner, The Guardian Angel, and A Mortal Antipathy, together with an introduction and extended notes by Dr Clarence P. Oberndorf, clinical professor of psychiatry at Columbia university. Bibliographical references. Index.

Christian Century 61:20 Ja 5 '44 300w

"Although intended primarily for medical students, the book will be valuable to students of literature, for whom an understanding of psychiatry may be as important as a knowledge of Anglo-Saxon.'" C. C. Walcutt
+ New Eng Q 17:324 Je '44 490w

"A most ingenious psychological study of Oliver Wendell Holmes' three novels, Dr. Oberndorf proves—to the complete satisfaction of this reviewer—that Dr. Holmes was far in advance of his time in his conception of the causes and progress of the neuroses and even of some of the more severe forms of mental illness." E. H. Johnson
+ Survey 80:175 My '44 450w

HOLTON, EDITH AUSTIN (ELIZABETH ALDEN HEATH, pseud). Silver crescent. 194p $2.50 Putnam

44-2705

When Hilda Marshall's father was killed in an accident Hilda found herself penniless except for a tiny sum from insurance and an old house in a Massachusetts village which once had been run as an antique shop. How Hilda and her faithful friend Hattie set up housekeeping there and how they and a mysterious young man started in the antique business is told in this old-fashioned tale of the present day.

Booklist 40:270 Ap 1 '44

"Ingenuous, wholesome light romance."
Kirkus 12:47 F 1 '44 90w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 19 '44 170w

"If you have ever rambled through New England . . . and rummaged in rural antique shops, this novel will stir memories and emotions. It's like stumbling on a solid walnut whatnot—or what not? The story is unabashed in sentiment, pleasantly mystifying in plot, spiced with authentic native ingredients." Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p16 My 14 '44 90w

HOLTON, EDITH AUSTIN (ELIZABETH ALDEN HEATH, pseud). Yankees were like this; with drawings by Marie Royle. 268p $3 Harper

B or 92 Massachusetts—Social life and customs. Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 44-8012

Reminiscences of the author's childhood in a Cape Cod village fifty to sixty years ago.

"Rich, humorous, memorable . . . it is not overdone, and it's full of biographical surprises. If you want to take a momentary holiday from the communiques, nothing could be more delightful or harmless than an excursion into [this book]." Ralph Peterson
+ Book Week p10 O 22 '44 270w

Booklist 41:57 O 15 '44

Boston Globe p17 S 27 '44 220w

"Yankees Were Like This is one of the 'do-you-remember' books that gratify nostalgia and help to preserve Americana." W. K. R.
Christian Science Monitor p18 S 14 '44 500w

"Dry—and salty—and effortless reading."
+ Kirkus 12:294 Jl 1 '44 130w

"Material is the warp and woof of life itself and intriguing enough, but in the telling there is forced spontaneity and lack of distinction and originality in style. Miss Holton drops her good material with one inane cliché after another until the whole fabric of her book resembles bit of poor knitting. Not recommended." J. M. Brittan
— Library J 69:696 S 1 '44 70w

"Miss Holton describes with considerable charm the days of the Eighties in Wellshaven but surrounds them with no sentimental aura. Some were good, some bad. . . The picture of the little Yankee girl's early years is full of authentic color but a little on the grim side, perhaps partly because she was an only child with quite a parcel of elderly relatives. And Miss Holton deliberately omits some interesting details because 'these are familiar enough to you.' . . This lofty attitude is characteristic of the Cape Codder's commonsensical stand. What is everyday stuff to them should be so to the rest of us non-elect." Beatrice Sherman
+ — N Y Times p10 O 15 '44 240w

"It is the sunny side of life that Miss Holton recalls, without shadows and without profundity, but good reading withal." George Genzmer
+ Sat R of Lit 27:27 O 14 '44 360w
Springf'd Republican p6 O 23 '44 600w

"Much of what she tells about is over and done with, gone forever; but on the other hand, if you like the flavor, a great many things she presents with relish could be introduced as novelties even in the brave new world." Ernestine Evans
+ Weekly Book Review p2 S 24 '44 800w
Wis Lib Bul 40:146 N '44

HOLZNER, JOSEF. Paul of Tarsus; tr. by Frederic C. Eckhoff. 502p $5 Herder
225.92 Paul, Saint 44-29984

"Monsignor Holzner's book is an attempt to set the life and writings of St. Paul against the intellectual and social background of his time." N Y Times

"Scholars will not give unqualified approval to this biography now translated out of the German. For one thing, what Ropes used to call 'the singular problem of the Epistle to the Galatians' has hardly been faced; for another, the closing years of Paul's life are reconstructed as though all difficulties had vanished. Yet, in the main, one cannot help but be pleased. For those who this year have been reading Asch or Klausner, there is now available another interpretation of the Great Apostle wherein the vision on the road to Damascus becomes not a re-routing but rather a restating of the message first set forth by the Christ of God." H. G. J. Beck
+ — Commonweal 40:331 Jl 21 '44 550w

"While it is obviously dependent on Harnack, Schweitzer and others, this biographical commentary has notable qualities of style and feeling which the translator has caught and to a considerable extent accurately reflected. Though not a work of Catholic scholarship in the strict sense, it succeeds better than does any other treatise in making available to a wide audience the principal conclusions to which that scholarship has arrived." G. N. Shuster
+ N Y Times p24 Jl 16 '44 240w

HOME university encyclopedia; an illustrated treasury of knowledge; prepared under the editorship of C. Ralph Taylor; advisory editor, Carl Van Doren; with special articles . . . by 462 leading editors. rev ed 15v c1905, c1934-41 $39.50 University soc.
031 Encyclopedias and dictionaries

"According to the verso of the title page this work was originally published and copyrighted in 1905 as Nelson New Loose-Leaf Encyclopedia, and revised in 1934. Since then it has been abridged, revised and recopyrighted annually by Books, Inc., Boston, Mass. Published in 1938 under the title University Illustrated Encyclopedia, the set under review was at that time, according to the publisher, printed from revised plates for the World Wide Illustrated Encyclopedia. A review of the latter title, published in two volumes by Blue Ribbon Books at $5.98, appeared in Subscription Books Bulletin, July 1935 [Book Review Digest, 1935]." Subscription Bks Bul

"Specific criticisms indicated in the review of the World Wide Illustrated Encyclopedia still hold true, with the exception that population figures given for towns in the United States are those of the 1940 census, although this fact is nowhere stated. Errors noted in the earlier review remain uncorrected. Biographical entries still omit names of current importance. Wendell Willkie is not included except in an article under the entry United States. . . The Home University Encyclopedia also contains numerous examples of hasty and incomplete revision. . . While the print is clear, the reproduction of illustrations is inadequate. The imitation leather binding is not suitable for library use. The set is not recommended."
— Subscription Bks Bul 15:32 Jl '44 600w

HOMER. Iliad; a line-for-line translation in dactylic hexameters by William Benjamin Smith and Walter Miller; il. with the classical designs of John Flaxman. 565p $3.75 Macmillan 883.1 44-8254

"Professor Smith, who died in 1934 at the age of 84, worked on this translation for many years and left it to be completed by his friend and colleague, Professor Miller, who is now 80." Christian Century

"Prof. Rand of Harvard, a paramount Greek scholar by international standards, has observed of the translation: 'Prof. Smith and Prof. Miller have done the impossible. They have set forth Matthew Arnold's principles with amazing success in the whole stretch of Homer's poem. There is no letup in its quality. There is nothing pompous or archaistic; the writers have maintained Homeric simplicity.' " Leo Kennedy
+ Book Week p3 O 15 '44 380w
Booklist 41:74 N 1 '44
Boston Globe p30 N 29 '44 30w

Reviewed by H. H. Yeames
Cath World 160:276 D '44 500w

"This is a work of mature scholarship. It is also, in the opinion of this reviewer, the most attractive English rendering of the Iliad for the modern reader. It furnishes an easier path than Chapman to the summit of that 'peak in Darien' to which both lead. The 'line for line' feature is a convenience in comparing the translation with the original, but otherwise is chiefly valuable in making impossible any rhetorical inflation in the hope of reproducing the majesty of the Homeric Greek. It can't be done. . . The style is of epic dignity, though not stilted, with only an occasional lapse into an incongruous colloquialism."
+ Christian Century 61:1170 O 11 '44 380w
Christian Science Monitor p16 O 4 '44 450w

"There is a good brief introduction and an index by which one can really find things. And it is surprising how well Flaxman's drawings go with this text. Obviously they have a great deal more force and imaginative vitality than recent critical fashion would have us believe. I fear that today only a reading club would read through so long a poem as the 'Iliad,' but there are worse things a reading club might choose to do than read aloud this vigorous translation." E. P. Richardson
+ Commonweal 41:177 D 1 '44 420w

Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook
Current Hist 7:500 D '44 90w
Nation 159:535 O 28 '44 120w

"Although I regard the Smith-Miller 'Iliad' as an extraordinary achievement, I feel that

HOMER—Continued
it merits this designation more as a tour de force, or as a triumph of ingenuity, than as an esthetically valid work of literature." Eugene O'Neill, Jr.
+ — N Y Times p3 N 5 '44 1650w

"Whether or not one cares for the all-over effect of the Greek narrative put into a metre not native to English, this work by two American professors has interest because of Professor Smith's real feeling for and skill with the hexameter line. Illustrated with charming classical designs by John Flaxman."
+ New Yorker 20:87 O 14 '44 50w

"A new and distinguished translation of the world's greatest poem is a momentous event. I am inclined to believe that this is the best translation of the 'Iliad' to date, but obviously one must live with it for a considerable period, as in the case of a new symphony. . . It seems to me that Smith and Miller have caught the meaning and spirit of Homer, the vigor and noble majesty and simplicity of his language." C. A. Robinson, Jr.
+ Sat R of Lit 27:25 O 21 '44 550w

"Every reviewer must begin with admiration for the courage of the authors of this translation and amazement at the success that has rewarded it. . . It is a spirited poem characterized by accuracy, variety, dignity, and (usually) simplicity. . . There is a very little padding, hardly any added ornament (a tendency to alliteration not found in the original is the most striking), little archaism, and few of those strange formations into which translators are betrayed in an attempt to reproduce the effect of Homer's compounds." F. A. Gragg
+ Springf'd Republican p8 N 15 '44 600w

Time 44:99 D 11 '44 700w

Reviewed by A. G. Keller
Yale R n s 34:363 winter '45 700w

HOMES, GEOFFREY, pseud. See Mainwaring, D.

HONIG, EDWIN. Garcia Lorca. (Makers of modern literature) 232p $1.50 New directions

B or 92 García Lorca, Federico 44-3382

"The first detailed survey in English of this modern Spanish poet and playwright. The analysis of Lorca's background, the relation of his talent to both folk and formal art, and the account of his work as director-playwright are particularly full and interesting." New Yorker

Booklist 40:338 Je 1 '44

"Edwin Honig's book on García Lorca is conscientious, systematic, scholarly, and not a little pedestrian. But Lorca's own brilliance is sufficiently intense to offset considerable dullness on the part of his interpreters; moreover, Mr. Honig quotes him copiously, both in the original and in his own translations, which while not exactly inspired are accurate enough and adequate to give the general idea." Rolfe Humphries
+ — Nation 158:281 Mr 4 '44 800w

"One is grateful to Mr. Honig for his book. It is not the last word on García Lorca, but it is a vigorous and keen-tempered approach. In it things are sometimes so well said that one puts the book down for a moment to let a remark work upon one's appreciation of the poet. In particular, the last chapter, 'Image into Action,' is fine and suggestive. His choice of extracts, too, is good, while the translations are luminous and secure." Ralph Bates
+ New Repub 110:570 Ap 24 '44 1450w

"On the whole, the criticism is dry and not very deep."
+ — New Yorker 20:99 Mr 25 '44 70w

"There are, of course, many facets to this great poet's work and much remains to be said about him. Mr. Honig has written a useful guide, particularly for those who have not read the Spanish originals. Though the book does not make any particularly profound contribution to critical thinking about García Lorca, it does touch on many provocative matters and opens up avenues to further discussion." H. R. Hays
Poetry 64:225 Jl '44 480w

HONNESS, ELIZABETH (HOFFMAN) (MRS J. A. MCKAUGHAN). Great gold piece mystery; pictures by Eloise Wilkin. 122p $2 Oxford 44-7836

Mystery story for young readers.

Booklist 41:111 D 1 '44

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 41:128 N 17 '44 10w

"Tree robbers—a fire—a cache of gold combine to supply excitement and fun, credibly presented."
+ Kirkus 12:432 S 15 '44 90w

"The story is acceptable but not at all significant. The plot bogs down at intervals; the mystery is plausible, however, and the book may be wanted by libraries having a great demand for mystery stories for younger children from nine to eleven. Satisfactory wartime format." Claire Nolte
+ Library J 69:886 O 15 '44 50w

"A story with convincing outdoor atmosphere, fine family relationships and a mystery that is solved in a perfectly credible manner by three unspoiled, natural young people." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p28 N 19 '44 120w

HOOL, GEORGE ALBERT, and KINNE, WILLIAM SPAULDING, eds. Movable and long-span steel bridges; comp. by a staff of specialists; rev. by R. R. Zipprodt, and H. E. Langley. (Structural engineers' handbook lib) 2d ed 497p il $5 McGraw

624.5 Bridges, Iron and steel. Bridges, Movable 43-18139

"New material on bascule, vertical-lift, continuous swing and suspension bridges, with descriptions of new examples of such bridges, has been added." (Booklist) Index. For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1924.

Booklist 40:215 F 15 '44
N Y New Tech Bks 29:21 Ap '44

HOOL, GEORGE ALBERT, and KINNE, WILLIAM SPAULDING, eds. Reinforced concrete and masonry structures; comp. by a staff of specialists; rev. by R. R. Zipprodt. (Structural engineers' handbook lib) 2d ed 835p il $6 McGraw

693.5 Concrete, Reinforced. Concrete construction 44-7534

"A handbook for engineers and students. The treatment is detailed and practical and is designed for study with or without the assistance of an instructor. Compared to the first edition [Book Review Digest, 1924], there are forty-nine additional pages of text. The most extensive revisions have been made in the sections dealing with preparation and placing of concrete forms, reinforced concrete buildings, slab and girder bridges, and estimating." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:652 Ag '44 50w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:42 Jl '44

HOOPER, ALFRED. Arithmetic refresher. 119p $1.50 Holt

511 Arithmetic 44-5519

This book by the author of A Mathematics Refresher (Book Review Digest, 1942) "develops the basic arithmetical skills which every person young or old should have in order to make the right change, to make a batch of biscuits, to get to work on time, or to tackle any everyday problem involving numbers. Each section includes appropriate exercises and problems to test whether the pupil knows the mathematics involved and understands how to apply it in situations of daily life." (Publisher's note)

"Although the style of this book is simple and direct, it does not make you feel the author is talking down to you. After a few effortless hours you will suddenly find that the rules you have forgotten are once again part of you. Author of the best seller 'A Mathematics Refresher,' Hooper has scored again." Rufus Oldenburger

+ Book Week p3 Jl 16 '44 270w
Booklist 40:385 Jl 15 '44

"An excellent book for even the non-mathematically minded layman."
+ Kirkus 12:89 F 15 '44 60w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:45 Jl '44

"The little book has throughout a strong practical trend in its hints on short cuts, the nature of its problems, and in cautions with examples to work out, such as that a small percentage of profit or loss may involve a large sum of money while a large one may only involve a small sum."
+ Weekly Book Review p8 Ag 6 '44 150w

HOPE, BOB. I never left home; il. by Carl Rose. 207p $2; 99p pa $1 Simon & Schuster

940.5496 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American. World war, 1939—Humor, caricatures, etc. 44-40146

The comedian of screen and radio has here described his 80,000 mile trip to the army camps abroad—England, North Africa, Sicily, and Alaska. With typical good humor and wise cracks he records his trials and his shows, and the reactions of the boys to his brand of humor.

Reviewed by Sterling North
+ Book Week p2 Je 18 '44 320w
Booklist 40:374 Jl 1 '44

"The book is funny; those corn-fed eggs laid end to end make a spoor of jokes to follow from LaGuardia Field to Ireland, England, Bizerte, Palermo and back, and you won't need a bomb-proof shelter the way Hope did. Flying repartee is the nearest you'll get to flak. But there's more than humor, more than local color in this book. It is a sincerely moving account of the hard way our men are winning this war. Bob Hope never left home because all over the world American boys have kept home with them." Dorothy Hillyer
+ Boston Globe p15 Je 21 '44 300w

"Told with easy humor and smooth timing, with gags and routines, as Bob 'ad glibs' through the rigors of war."
+ Kirkus 12:235 My 15 '44 90w

Reviewed by Marcus Duffield
Nation 159:104 Jl 22 '44 270w

"It is a zany, staccato, but honest and often touching account of how Mr. Hope and the soldiers reacted to each other, and how the troupe withstood war conditions, done in the same style that has made the comedian famous on the airwaves. In fact, it is practically a Hope broadcast before a newsreel backdrop with a refreshing lack of commercials, the only plugs being for the boys on the fighting fronts." Tom O'Reilly
+ N Y Times p4 Je 18 '44 550w

"Hope is the closest nature could get to a personification of corn without growing silk from his ears. Other comedians now and then aspire to subtlety, devise switches on the old gags which smack of adventures in thinking. Hope, like Dryden's hero, never deviates. His is the loud laugh that bespeaks the vacant mind, the tremendous exaggeration that splits the britches of imagination, the Einsteinian parallel that sends reason reeling. His stuff is familiar, but it's also fresh, and it includes the latest of its kind—G.I. corn the soldier's own humor." Thomas Sugrue
+ Sat R of Lit 27:22 Ag 19 '44 750w

"Bob Hope has what the boys in the services need and want. He dishes it out with a lavish hand, and someone ought to pin a medal on him before the war is over. The brashness and cockiness which are his trademarks are all here, but there is also a blessed kindliness and friendliness which warms every page. Send it to the boys in camp who haven't had the good luck to meet up with this tireless troubadour. It's lightweight for easy mailing and amusingly illustrated by Carl Rose." E. M. B.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Je 18 '44 180w

Theatre Arts 28:620 O '44 360w
Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p2 Je 25 '44 360w

HOPKINS, STANLEY, jr, pseud. Parchment key. 218p $2 Harcourt 44-3684

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p10 My 21 '44 140w
Booklist 40:342 Je 1 '44

"Tops for those who like 'em deep."
+ Boston Globe p17 My 10 '44 40w

"Good entertainment, with fair chances for the reader and a plush setting."
+ Kirkus 12:107 Mr 1 '44 80w

"The characterization in this story is in complete keeping with the ingenuity of the plot." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p12 Ap 16 '44 160w

"Good hunting."
+ Sat R of Lit 27:78 Ap 15 '44 40w

"This guessing game provides a generous number of honest clews, all the problems you could ask and a climax adorned with certain profundities which may be a part of the youth movement. Satisfactory teaser and a necessity for dog lovers." Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p18 Ap 16 '44 130w
Wis Lib Bul 40:86 Je '44

HOPKIRK, HOWARD W. Institutions serving children. 244p il $2 Russell Sage

362.7 Children—Charities, protection, etc. 44-5333

"The major topical headings include the place of the institution in the community—its relationship to foster home services and other children's agencies; the staff—its size, composition, and qualifications; the organization, structure, and physical aspects of the institution; and, most important, the care of the child, with special emphasis on the significance of his relationship to other children and adults, and his education and training." Survey

---

Reviewed by L. V. Ballard
Am Soc R 9:712 D '44 600w
Reviewed by Elsa Castendyck
Ann Am Acad 236:216 N '44 500w
Booklist 41:53 O 15 '44
Reviewed by B. H. Rafferty
J Home Econ 36:595 N '44 250w

"Institutions Serving Children makes such interesting and helpful reading, it is difficult to lay it aside long enough to write a brief review. Unlike many books of this nature, [it] combines facts and material in such a way as to make it sparkle with style. The book is being released to the public at a time when it can be most helpful, not only to institutional employees, but to all who are interested in welfare work." I. G. Greer
+ Social Forces 23:117 O '44 330w

"This is a book about children's institutions by a man who probably knows more about such institutions, their good and bad features, than any other single individual living in this country today. . . In this book, which was written as a research study for the Russell Sage Foundation, he is able to incorporate much of the rich knowledge he has acquired." Herschel Alt
+ Survey 80:269 S '44 500w

HORAN, MRS KENNETH (O'DONNELL). Bashful woman. 299p $2.50 Doubleday 44-7325

Saga of a Michigan family from the 1890's to the present. Sally Evans came to America with her father from Wales, and all her childhood was darkened by the knowledge that they were called "those Welsh." But as the years went by Evan Evans became wealthy, Sally married well, and her husband's wagon business merged into the automobile business, which Sally carried on after his death. Wealth

HORAN, KENNETH—Continued
came to them, but human relationships became more and more involved for Sally, until, as an old woman, things became more clear to the "bashful woman."

Booklist 41:77 N 1 '44

"The historical sidelights tend to be more interesting than the actual problems of Sally and her family and there are occasions when you wish Mrs. Horan were less familiar with the obvious. It's a story that manages to keep you pursuing the bashful Sally right to the last page though."
Boston Globe p15 S 20 '44 110w

Kirkus 12:262 Je 15 '44 150w

"Most entertaining—will be popular in all libraries." Lena Ruppert
+ Library J 69:650 Ag '44 80w

"The author, expertly detailing the social, political and business life from 1890 to the present, never really stirs the heart with the story of the Vinnedges, although Evan Evans, Sally's father, does emerge refreshingly human in contrast to the other characters, who seem, most of the time, to be giving glowing recitations from a handbook on the history of the automobile." Andrea Parke
+ — N Y Times p4 S 10 '44 280w

"The novel is very unevenly written. Although it is quite readable and we view with considerable interest, if no real concern, the adventures of these rich folk who have only a slight talent for wealth, some readers will deplore its sentimental lapses, its frequent bookish talk, its occasional trite phrasing (there is, for example, too much 'sighing with relief'), its worshipful attitude toward General Motors and Big Business in general." R. A. Cordell
+ — Sat R of Lit 27:15 S 30 '44 450w

"A detailed character study and an accurate factual background make this book mildly interesting evening's entertainment." Ander Hartshorn
Springf'd Republican p4d O 15 '44 80w

"All the stuff of a novel is here. The story, however, is weighed down by its trappings. It does not surmount or animate its unoriginal formula." David Tilden
Weekly Book Review p6 S 24 '44 350w

HORNE, VIRGINIA LEE. Stunts and tumbling for girls; a text-book for high schools and colleges; phot. by Freeman Brown; sketches by Emilie Draves. 219p $3 Barnes, A.S.

796.47 Acrobats and acrobatism 43-16925

"This book has been prepared as a teaching manual to aid the physical education teacher or prospective teacher in enriching her knowledge of stunts and tumbling. The book has been designed to provide teaching materials suitable for beginning, intermediate, and advanced tumblers in individual, dual and group activities." Pref.

Booklist 40:160 Ja 1 '44

"Each stunt is clearly explained step by step, and the photographs and sketches are complete and satisfying. The sketches are in addition very clear and gay. A bibliography adds to the book's usefulness. Miss Horne is instructor of physical education at Wellesley College."
+ Christian Science Monitor p5 F 5 '44 180w

Reviewed by E. D. Frary
Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 26 '44 330w
Wis Lib Bul 40:67 My '44

HORTON, MARION LOUISE, ed. See A. L. A. catalog

HOSTER, GRACE. Trial by murder. 280p $2 Farrar

Mystery story. 44-3318

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
— Book Week p10 Je 4 '44 120w

"Unethical on all counts, but readable if you're not fussy."
+ — Kirkus 12:108 Mr 1 '44 70w

"The author's writing is marred by frequent excursions into fields not pertinent to the matter in hand." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p12 My 14 '44 100w

"Entertaining."
+ Sat R of Lit 27:40 My 13 '44 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p16 My 21 '44 90w

HOUGH, DONALD. Captain Retread. 218p $2.50 Norton

355.12 U.S.—Army—Military life 44-4773

Personal narrative of a veteran of the First World war who after Pearl Harbor, again joined the army, and, as a captain in the Signal corps serving on the home front, became what is known in army slang as a "retread."

"It is a lucid and satisfying work." W. F. Morse
+ Book Week p11 My 28 '44 70w
Booklist 40:351 Je 15 '44
Commonweal 40:212 Je 16 '44 280w

"The author's experiences as a Captain of an air squadron in preliminary training over here bring to bear the same modest, leisurely, perhaps gentler qualities that characterized his Snow Above Town. Removed from action, viewed with affection and a certain paternalism, this is pleasant, casual reading. . . Ingratiating."
+ Kirkus 12:129 Mr 15 '44 150w

"A 'Retread'—in case you may not know—is an officer of the last war, recommissioned in the present one. Captain Hough is one of them and he has written a grand book about it." Edward Streeter
+ N Y Times p7 My 28 '44 600w

"An honest, simple, winning book, a pleasant relief from some of those that have come out of this war."
+ New Yorker 20:91 My 13 '44 90w

"Unpretentious and delightful little book." Donald Armstrong
+ Sat R of Lit 27:10 Je 10 '44 1350w

"Like 'Snow Above Town' Capt Hough's new book is notable for a constantly delightful and disarming style, and a quiet humor that makes its points without recourse to gags or wisecracks. His writing verges on the colloquial just enough to be thoroughly enjoyable and he has that ingratiatingly smooth humor apparently inherent in Anglo-Saxons but which has only recently come to full flower in America. Capt Hough is much quieter than Mark Twain, but his humor has the same insinuating appeal and the same touch of humanity." R. F. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d My 21 '44 600w

"To the heroic annals of fighting, 'Captain Retread' is not what you could call an outstanding contribution. On the contrary, and quite intentionally, it is no such contribution at all. But it is a wise book—a book in which a man has done a lot of quiet thinking and presented his thoughts in lucid prose, garnished with humor." Lisle Bell
+ Weekly Book Review p14 My 28 '44 300w

HOUSELANDER, FRANCES CARYLL. Reed of God. 177p $2 Sheed

232.931 Mary, Virgin 44-4406

"The Reed is Our Lady. The clean void necessary for the reception of God's grace is the emptiness of the hollow pipe ready for the song of the Piper. This idea, the fiat of the spiritual life, is elaborated in the meditations for the feast of the Annunciation and for Advent. The purpose of the book is to show how Our Lady may become the pattern for our daily life." Commonweal

---

"It is impossible adequately to report on this book in a short space. The only suitable review would be the gift of the book, itself. . . The effect of the book is sacramental. It effects what it signifies. You will not only read this book, you will pray it." J. S. Middleton

+ Cath World 159:278 Je '44 450w

"Miss Houselander seems to understand how to make spiritual truth palatable to a large public. She writes colloquially in the sense of reiterating the same idea in many different guises, which is a practical method for a spoken conference, since it catches up with minds which may have been wandering; it is a profuse style and it doesn't make it easier reading for me to have paragraphs too often broken up into sentences. A personal literary reaction, however, is unimportant compared to the sound spirituality contained in this small volume." E. V. R. Wyatt

+ Commonweal 40:210 Je 16 '44 600w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p479 S 30 '44 240w

HOUSMAN, LOUISE. On stage! 227p $1.75 Harper

812 44-3381

Eight non-royalty plays, with directions, diagrams, and costs for simple staging. Contents: The moor's legacy; Ricky Tufty; The merchant of Bagdad; The prince and the puppet; The lady or the tiger; Adventure in Sherwood; The sunbonnet; Directions for staging; Costumes. For junior high schools.

Booklist 40:288 Ap 15 '44

"The author of Footlights Up! has done another likeable and worthwhile job in writing eight non-royalty short plays for production by twelve to sixteen-year-olds. Good plays in this field are hard to find. Recommended."

+ Library J 69:460 My 15 '44 30w

"All of the plays have been tested by actual performance. Though the text, when read, seems somewhat pedestrian, the book will be helpful when groups cannot make their own dramatizations." A. T. Eaton

N Y Times p23 Jl 23 '44 160w

Wis Lib Bul 40:112 Jl '44

HOW to end the German menace; a political proposal by five Hollanders. 92p $1.25 Querido, inc, 381 4th av, N.Y. 16

940.5314443 Reconstruction (1939-)—Germany 44-6461

"The authors advocate the partition of Germany. They want to see the country broken up into three, or, possibly, four parts—an eastern, predominantly Prussian, part; a southern part, including Thuringia in the North and the Palatinate in the West; a western part, stretching from Leipzig to the Rhine, and a Hanseatic state, embracing Hannover and the northern districts from Mecklenburg to Holland. . . The authors contend that it will prove impossible to weaken Germany permanently either biologically or economically. Yet they think German power can be curtailed effectively by a permanent political weakening of the German nation." Christian Science Monitor

Reviewed by M. W. Fodor

Book Week p10 Ag 13 '44 200w

"These five Hollanders do not sign their names because their families live under Nazi rule. This is a little symbolic. The Hollanders will not write the peace and their plan is reason enough why [neither] they nor the other conquered peoples could write it. For theirs is really no plan at all but only an expression of their fear of Germany."

Boston Globe p15 Ag 9 '44 280w

"Notwithstanding objections that may be raised, the plan is a serious, realistic, and humane presentation of the problem, deserving to be widely read and discussed." E. S. P.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 19 '44 450w

Reviewed by Klaus Dohrn

Commonweal 40:474 S 1 '44 700w

Foreign Affairs 23:3 O '44 20w

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin

N Y Times p25 S 10 '44 240w

Reviewed by V. M. Dean

Sat R of Lit 27:11 O 7 '44 650w

"Some readers, remembering how other partitions (that of Poland, for instance) have fanned nationalist determination to reunite, may wonder if this book properly weighs that factor. In any case, these Hollanders, who know something about German nature and aggression, have offered a painstaking proposal. It deserves study in the same sober spirit." R. S. Scott

Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 12 '44 280w

"The authors have written a short book—only ninety-two pages long—but a good one." W. R. Deuel

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Ag 13 '44 750w

HOWARD, ELIZABETH. Dorinda; il. by Leonard Weisgard. 303p $2 Lothrop

44-3686

"When Dorinda went to visit her aunt in Chicago in 1843, wolves still came into the bustling town occasionally. But there were already the beginnings of great industries and trade, there were schools and a seminary for young ladies, which Dorinda attended. It was a very exciting place for a girl who had driven there in a covered wagon from an Indiana farm. The interest of the story lies in the detailed picture of social life and manners one hundred years ago." Horn Bk

"While the characters are attractive and fairly well drawn, the plot which motivates them is slight and obvious. Most girls today, I think, prefer stronger meat in their reading diet." P. A. Whitney

Book Week p11 Ap 30 '44 130w

Booklist 40:343 Je 1 '44

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 20:207 My '44 100w

"A good pioneer story for older girls, with a fascinating background of Chicago and the farm country of Indiana, one hundred years ago."

+ Kirkus 12:145 Mr 15 '44 130w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p23 Ap 30 '44 200w

"This is a fascinating story written in an easy and graceful style." E. C. T.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 16 '44 70w

"The story is completely and gracefully feminine, with lots of fascinating clothes, which Mr. Weisgard further displays in many outline drawings. The prettiest part of the book, however, is the impression it leaves of a girls' 'finishing school' for the daughters of prairie pioneers, a school in which the social amenities bloom like garden flowers sheltered from native weather." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Je 4 '44 450w

HOWARD, GUY. Walkin' preacher of the Ozarks. 273p $2.50 Harper

B or 92 Clergy—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 44-9804

The experiences of a country preacher, who in several years as a pastor in the Ozarks has walked an average of four thousand miles a year. His salary in all that time has averaged fourteen dollars per month. The book abounds in anecdotes of the people and their customs.

Booklist 41:122 D 15 '44

"The author has told his life story with no pretense of fine literary expression. But he does make the rural Iowa in which he was brought up and the mountain people among whom he labored as a minister come alive. Few Americans realize how diverse a civilization is ours. But a reading of this book would reveal to those living in the more sophisticated parts of our country that many 100% Americans have a way of life, patterns of thought and conduct very different from theirs."

+ Kirkus 12:499 N 1 '44 120w

"As a handbook on Ozarks customs, 'Walkin' Preacher of the Ozarks' is an intimate and valuable addition to Americana." P. I. Wellman

+ Sat R of Lit 27:21 D 9 '44 400w

HOWARD, GUY—Continued

"This biography is utterly unpretentious. But it is well written and is as full of personal adventures and anecdotes as a nut of meat. Mr. Howard knows his people and makes them live. A novelist might well envy him the characters and episodes with which he has crowded his attractive pages." J. H. Holmes

+ Weekly Book Review p4 D 10 '44 650w

HOWARD, MRS JANE GRANT (GILMOR). Fifty years in a Maryland kitchen: completely rev. by Florence Brobeck. 234p $2.50 Barrows

641.5 Cookery 44-40126

A guide to Maryland cooking, based on a book first published seventy years ago, and now revised and modernized. "The author says that even when simplified these recipes are not meant for daily fare. They make a special item for an extensive cookery collection, but they are not practical for the inexperienced cook nor for rationed foods." (Booklist)

Booklist 40:357 Je 15 '44

J Home Econ 36:659 D '44 30w

"For anyone brought up near Baltimore, with Baltimore traditions and legends of terrapin, game, Baltimore oyster pies, hot breads and so on, this book will prove a refreshing stimulus to memory and appetite. But it is not a basic cookbook—rather a book for the collector of cookbooks."

+ Kirkus 12:230 My 15 '44 110w

HOWARD, LAWRENCE VAUGHAN, and BONE, HUGH ALVIN. Current American government; wartime developments. 357p $2.75 Appleton-Century

354.73 U.S.—Politics and government—20th century 43-15913

"The purpose of this book is to describe briefly the principal developments which the war has brought about in the American system of government. . . This book is intended primarily for the student of government." Pref

"This attempt at a faithful record of the course of government in contemporary wartime leaves the discipline of political science under a large obligation to the authors. The book is not a great one. But it is a good one, with possibilities of useful service as a reference work for some time to come, and as a text in courses in contemporary national administration. Finally, it is a joy once more to behold a book accoutered with footnote citations and an adequate index." C. W. Shull

+ Am Pol Sci R 38:156 F '44 600w

"The book is well organized and fully documented, and there is an adequate index." L. W. Lancaster

+ Ann Am Acad 232:208 Mr '44 360w

Booklist 40:226 Mr 1 '44

"A well organized body of data for study or reference."

+ Christian Century 60:1370 N 24 '43 130w

Current Hist 6:67 Ja '44 80w

HOWE, WILL DAVID. Charles Lamb and his friends. 364p $3.50 Bobbs

B or 92 Lamb, Charles 44-2818

A life and critical study of the works of Charles Lamb, largely told thru his relations with his many friends, and his letters to them. There is considerable material, also, on Lamb's long years of tender care of his afflicted sister, Mary Lamb. Bibliography. Index.

"Though advertised as 'a labor of love,' Charles Lamb and His Friends is a professorial product, didactic and pedestrian. . . It is hard to understand why so experienced a writer, critic, editor, and publisher has offered us adulterated scholarship geared to the general public, instead of evoking the spirit of 'Elia' in the round. . . What are the redeeming features? Sister Mary emerges a personality more vivid than Charles. We catch glimpses of irresistible eccentrics. . . Frequent quotations from Lamb, judiciously pointed up, are inevitably the chief source of pleasure in the book, especially in the chapters on 'His Letters' and 'The Theatre.'" C. J. Furness

— + Atlantic 173:127 Je '44 700w

"Prof. Howe has added considerable new material to the record. He has been sympathetic in his attitude, painstaking in his presentation." Walter Hendricks

+ Book Week p6 My 7 '44 310w

Booklist 40:269 Ap 1 '44

"Scholarly and entertaining study of Charles Lamb." A. McC. Sholl

+ Cath World 159:282 Je '44 310w

"The biographer has moved easily among the uncommonly rich stores of his material and has worked out a clear arrangement of it." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 22 '44 450w

"The book is well organized, and presents a useful picture of Lamb and his era for anyone much interested in either. There will always be people to enjoy Lamb, just as there will always be those to deify his master, Montaigne. Such is not the case of this reviewer. One could sometimes wish that Professor Howe's personal style were as evocative as the period he celebrates." Cuthbert Wright

+ — Commonweal 39:601 Mr 31 '44 500w

Kirkus 12:15 Ja 1 '44 80w

New Repub 110:541 Ap 17 '44 150w

"Although the late E. V. Lucas may be said to have written the definitive Lamb, there can be no such thing as the last word on one of the best-loved of English authors. Reviving Lamb's story from the standpoint of his friendships, as Mr. Howe does so entertainingly, is not a bad idea. Lamb lived in and for his friends. . . At the same time it affords rare glimpses of the literary society of England in the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries." Philip Brooks

+ N Y Times p7 Ap 2 '44 700w

"Mr. Howe has done a creditable job of research and deserves thanks for assembling the more important of Lamb's letters, but his hop-skip-and-jump method of writing prevent him from making anything like full use of the material he has collected. A good introduction to Lamb, if any such introduction is still needed, but otherwise rather superficial."

+ — New Yorker 20:98 Mr 25 '44 90w

"It is good to have this book, this record of Lamb revisited. It would be pleasant to add that the book is a work of art in its own right, but such is hardly the case. Mr. Howe provides the facts, and he modestly expresses his love of Lamb, man and writer. He offers no special interpretation. Perhaps it is just as well; for every reader of Lamb is a jealous reader and would resent any writer who seemed to wish to appropriate Lamb to himself. Mr. Howe has written a faithful book and presented it without pretentiousness. Lamb would have liked that." Alexander Cowie

+ Sat R of Lit 27:7 Ap 1 '44 700w

Time 43:99 Mr 20 '44 650w

"Of the many books about Charles Lamb, this one is distinguished by its maturity and balance. . . Without haste or parade of erudition [the author] has condensed his wide knowledge within the compass of a small volume admirably adapted either to be read for its own sake or to be consulted as a guide by readers of Lamb's writings." G. F. Whicher

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Mr 19 '44 850w

"It seems doubtful whether Mary Lamb's story should be subjected to the artifice of separation from that of her brother; certainly her chapter in this book is an account of pain and pathos almost unmitigated. In the rest of the essays, the effect is one of pure delight in Mr. Howe's deft and loving care for his subjects. Although there was perhaps no crying need for this book, he has presented the 'essence' of Lamb in attractive and authentic form." H. W. Randall

+ — Yale R n s 34:174 autumn '44 350w

HOWELLS, WILLIAM WHITE. Mankind so far. (Am. museum of natural hist. Science ser) 319p il maps $4.50 Doubleday

573.2 Man—Origin. Evolution 44-40082

"Mr Howells starts with a brief chapter on the meaning of evolution, and then considers in order the stages through which we have developed from primitive fishes. This completes part 1, and part 2 is a delightfully clear and concise statement of what is known regarding extinct types of human beings. Part 3 is devoted to the nature and origin of races and their distribution over the world as we see them today, while the book ends with a rather optimistic forecast of our future." Springf'd Republican

---

"The first two parts of Mankind So Far are excellent and cannot be too highly recommended for use in introductory anthropology courses. The racial section [the third part] might be quite misleading, unless supplemented by other material." S. L. Washburn

+ — Am Anthropol 46:548 O '44 430w

"In addition to the knowledge which makes him a specialist in his field, Dr. Howells possesses a fortunate and genuine gift of simplicity in writing for others not equally well trained. From the first sentence on, there is a tacit assumption that the reader has a lively and intelligent interest in a subject which in itself is not only fascinating but worth learning about." L. C. Eiseley

+ Am Soc R 9:573 O '44 400w

Reviewed by Ralph Peterson

Book Week p9 Ap 16 '44 600w

Booklist 40:298 My 1 '44

Bookmark 5:6 My '44

"In style the book is conversational; it resembles a series of lectures, with ramblings, asides, pleasantries, and witticisms included. This is not the most efficient manner of presenting a large and complex subject. On the other hand, if the book is intended for popular reading, one wonders whether anyone interested enough to tackle such a subject might not still be interested even if the tone were more scholarly. Also, if the book is intended for the lay reader, one wonders whether it is the proper place for presenting poorly developed and highly controversial ideas about the origin and dispersal of races." G. F. Carter

Geog R 34:681 O '44 470w

"For students—specialists—etc.; strictly scientific interest."

Kirkus 12:17 Ja 1 '44 80w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 69:652 Ag '44 50w

Reviewed by Carey McWilliams

New Repub 110:852 Je 26 '44 270w

"In the discussion of the causes leading to racial differentiation no use is made of the findings of modern genetics, and the importance of genetic isolation in the creation of new varieties is nowhere stressed. . . The author also shows a curious unwillingness to grant the possibility of convergent evolution for modern human varieties, although quite willing to accept it at the subhuman level. . . In spite of these minor criticisms the book can be heartily recommended to all those who are interested in man's beginnings." Ralph Linton

+ — N Y Times p8 Ap 16 '44 1600w

"The book is one of the best of its kind I have read in any field of science. It is well written and on just the right scale, and it appeals to the imagination while sticking scrupulously to the actual findings." Edmund Wilson

+ New Yorker 20:77 S 16 '44 850w

School & Society 59:352 My 13 '44 10w

"Dr. Howells has a fresh and informal style of writing that is bound to etch the story of man's development with deepened incision for the layman. In a day when men's minds are seeking a solution for peaceful living, the homogeneity of man and his common ancestry, as seen by the anthropologist, should have added import. This particular scientist, erstwhile student of Professor Earnest Hooton of Harvard, has some of his chief's zest of expression and gift of humor—valuable traits in tracing so complex a subject as man's remote ancestry." A. H. Compton & others

+ Scientific Bk Club R 15:1 Mr '44 1200w

"'Mankind So Far' is one of those rare books which the reading public so much want and need, a scientifically correct account of an important and complex subject written with real charm. It is so good, so complete and up-to-date that it supplants all previous attempts to tell anyone except the specialist, the story of man's origin and development." W. B. Kirkham

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 5 '44 300w

Reviewed by H. M. Parshley

Weekly Book Review p6 Je 25 '44 200w

HOWENSTINE, EMANUEL JAY. Economics of demobilization; with an introd. by Alvin H. Hansen. 336p $3.75; pa $3.25 Am. council on public affairs

330.973 U.S.—Economic policy. Veterans. Reconstruction (1939-)—U.S. 44-7860

"[An] exposition of the situation during and after World War I, with especial reference to policies and procedures and their applicability to today's problems. It lays bare the struggle of the Wilson Administration with problems of unemployment, relaxation of controls, cost of living, military demobilization, contract cancellations, surpluses, strikes, and public works programs." Christian Science Monitor

---

Booklist 41:102 D 1 '44

"Dr. Howenstine offers some excellent ideas on how to proceed with demobilization, chief of which is that it should be carried out on the basis of military considerations. He assumes a good deal when he postulates the continuation of a war-swollen national income of $150 billion, and his discussion of taxation is rather skimpy. But one can agree that a dangerous period lies ahead unless a firm, consistent policy is pursued." G. R. E.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p12 D 9 '44 550w

Reviewed by B. B. Seligman

New Repub 111:379 S 25 '44 160w

Reviewed by E. Z. Palmer

Social Studies 36:40 Ja '45 300w

HOWIE, EDITH. Cry murder. 272p $2 Mill 44-47772

Detective story.

"Enjoyable."

+ Boston Globe p15 Ja 3 '45 60w

Kirkus 12:413 S 15 '44 50w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p35 N 26 '44 100w

"Entertaining."

+ Sat R of Lit 27:31 N 18 '44 40w

Springf'd Republican p4d D 10 '44 170w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p29 N 19 '44 120w

HOYLAND, JOHN SOMERVELL. Indian crisis: the background. 193p $2 Macmillan [7s 6d; pa 6s Allen, G]

915.4 India 43-17947

For descriptive note see Annual for 1943.

"It is a rambling book but is written objectively and with sincerity supported by indubitable facts. But it will not be enjoyed by the Col. Blimps who expect to be in India indefinitely." Sudhindra Bose

+ Am Pol Sci R 38:406 Ap '44 230w

"Never was a publishers' claim in their blurb so true as this: 'It would be hard to think of a book that gave in a brief space so great a sense of firsthand knowledge of actual conditions.' Highly recommended." S. Chandrasekhar

+ Ann Am Acad 233:221 My '44 350w

Booklist 40:316 My 15 '44

HOYLAND, J. S.—Continued
"The author of the miniature encyclopedia, entitled 'Indian Crisis,' is a Fellow of the Royal Historical Society and he has intimate personal acquaintance with his subject. He spent more than 15 years in India as educationist and social and religious worker. Facts are the basis of his book, and from the facts conclusions are drawn lucidly and with cool courage never thrown off balance by crusading fervor." R. G.
+ Christian Science Monitor p8 Mr 4 '44 450w
Current Hist 6:164 F '44 80w
Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:501 Ap '44 20w
Reviewed by B. T. McCully
Pol Sci Q 59:291 Je '44 1100w
Reviewed by H. W. Cross
Springf'd Republican p8 Je 22 '44 330w
Wis Lib Bul 40:53 Ap '44

"The obvious merit of Mr. Hoyland's 'Indian Crisis' is its vividly sympathetic presentation of Indian social problems. But the treatment of political and constitutional matters is thoroughly inadequate; and, in spite of the title, the book entirely evades the crucial issues which have arisen since 1939." C. H. Driver
— + Yale R n s 33:566 spring '44 120w

HOYT, JOHN ROBERT. Safety after solo; how to fly 10,000 hours. 356p il $3 McGraw
629.13252 Airplanes—Piloting 44-5637
"A clear and readable exposition of the principles of safe flight. The book has sound practical advice on such matters as: sharpening the senses; checking the plane; the right mental attitude; what to do in a forced landing. It has also explicit directions for carrying out five difficult manoeuvers and a mathematical discussion of good—and safe—turns." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 41:12 S '44
Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:652 Ag '44 30w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:19 Ap '44

HSI YU CHI. See Wu Ch'êng (supposed author). Adventures of Monkey

HUBBARD, GILBERT ERNEST. British Far Eastern policy. rev & enl ed 97p $1.25; to members $1 Inst. of Pacific relations
327.42 Great Britain—Foreign relations—East (Far East) 43-16447
Attempts to define the principal motives governing British policy in the Orient. The first and longer section of the text is a historical interpretation of England's Far Eastern policy, from the opium wars to the Manchurian crisis; the remainder of the book is devoted to the time since the Manchurian affair. Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Mills
Am Pol Sci R 38:580 Je '44 450w
"The layman will find Mr. Hubbard's summary both clear and concise and the expert will profit by his intelligent and not uncritical presentation of the British case." A. W. Griswold
+ Ann Am Acad 233:223 My '44 500w
Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:502 Ap '44 20w
Reviewed by C. L. Hsia
Pacific Affairs 17:104 Mr '44 750w
Reviewed by M. T. Price
Social Forces 22:471 My '44 450w

HUBBARD, ROLLA, and DILWORTH, AUGUSTIN. Airplane engine mechanics; questions and answers. 260p $3; text ed $2.25 McGraw 629.13435 Airplane engines. Aeronautics—Examinations, questions, etc. 44-4791
"This manual is prepared for the thousands of aircraft employees, mechanics, pilots, machinists, and all others in the vast army of production and operation workers in the aircraft industry today. . . The questions in this manual assume that the reader is familiar with the fundamental principles of internal-combustion engines and their various accessories. . . The questions are designed principally to aid in the preparation for obtaining a Civil Aeronautics Administration airplane-engine license." (Pref) Index.

Library J 69:463 My 15 '44 50w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:20 Ap '44

HUBBART, HENRY CLYDE. Ohio Wesleyan's first hundred years. 358p $2 Ohio Wesleyan univ, Delaware, Ohio
378 Ohio Wesleyan university 44-1190
"The first twelve chapters tell the narrative story through a hundred years; later chapters deal with various aspects of college activity and campus life." School & Society

"Hubbart has told the story so well that the book has real interest for the general reader." J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p7 Ja 23 '44 120w
"Mr. Hubbart tells the stirring story with fine appreciation of the dramatic and the humorous, the serious and the picturesque aspects of the process by which a frontier academy grows up with the country and becomes a great university. This makes a lasting record for the university's centennial."
+ Christian Century 61:50 Ja 12 '44 130w
School & Society 59:32 Ja 8 '44 20w

HUBLER, RICHARD GIBSON, and DECHANT, JOHN A. Flying leathernecks. 225p il $2.50 Doubleday
940.544 U.S. Marine corps. World war, 1939—Aerial operations 44-9173
Account of the aircraft engagements of the marines from the first battle of Wake in December, 1941, to the raids on New Britain in February, 1944. The authors are both captains in the USMCR.

Reviewed by W. F. Morse
Book Week p12 O 29 '44 190w
Booklist 41:105 D 1 '44
"From December 8, 1942 to January 1944, this is an honorable, terrible, bitter and brave record of the pace over the Pacific to which Marine aviation contributed its valuable share."
+ Kirkus 12:333 Ag 1 '44 90w
"Authors' equipment with first-hand information and a smooth, well-paced, journalistic style enables them to present a living record of exploits in the Pacific area and to convey spirit of courage and excitement without sensationalism or melodrama. One of the better-written war books. Ephemeral in its popular appeal. Recommended for public libraries." Rice Estes
+ Library J 69:761 S 15 '44 120w
"The main fault of the book is that by its very nature—telling of only one phase of a combined operation—it gives a distorted picture, as would a camera delicately focused on one object. All the rest comes out blurred. Navy men and Army men also fought against great odds in the Solomons campaign. They also served. Something more than occasional passing reference to them should be made in any book about the war in the Pacific." Foster Hailey
N Y Times p20 D 10 '44 500w
"Unfortunately, the book is a little too much official history for the average reader. Although most civilians know that a B-17 is a Flying Fortress, or that a P-38 is a Lightning, this book abounds with terms such as SB2U's and VMSB241, and not until page 124 does the reader find out what VMSB131 actually means. Possibly the authors had to bow to higher officials in writing this book, but if the Marine Corps can absorb such excellent writers as Jim Lucas, author of 'Combat Correspondent,' perhaps the combat correspondents should write the books for the general public." Beach Conger
+ — Weekly Book Review p7 D 24 '44 350w

HUDSON, DEREK. Thomas Barnes of the Times; with selections from his critical essays never before reprinted, ed. by Harold Child. 196p il $3.25 Macmillan [10s 6d Cambridge]

B or 92 Barnes, Thomas. The Times, London [A44-1109]

"He was neither a hero nor a politcian, neither a Rockefeller nor a John L. Lewis, but he was known as the most powerful man in England. In an age which had its Robert Peel, its Robert Owen and its Shelley, he was counted as the greatest single force for effecting reforms. Thomas Barnes was his name and at 32 he was, among other things, a Bohemian, a scholar, dramatic critic, political essayist, friend of Charles Lamb, Leigh Hunt and company—and newly appointed editor of an inconspicuous newspaper, The Times. In the remaining twenty-four years up to his death in 1841 he was one of England's best loved and best hated men." N Y Times

Reviewed by H. D. Jordan
Am Hist R 49:711 Jl '44 480w

"Mr. Hudson's work is thoroughly worthy of its subject, being alive, vigorous, and entertaining." Harold Hobson
+ Christian Science Monitor p9 My 20 '44 360w

"Barnes was celebrated for the first time in the first volume of the 'History of the "Times,"' published in 1935. Partly he was himself to blame for his own obscurity; he always clung to an obstinate anonymity as part of his own conception of the duty of an editor. Mr. Derek Hudson thus found little material to his hand when he came to write his biography, but he has used the whole of the material to admirable purpose in the lucid and sympathetic pages of biography (pp. 1-127) which form the first part of this volume." Ernest Barker
+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 14 '44 330w

"In a slight but fact-crammed book Derek Hudson tells the whole story for the first time, and we skip no words as we read how Thomas Barnes turned The Times from a four-page partisan newspaper into the country's leading journal." Nona Balakian
+ N Y Times p14 Mr 19 '44 500w

"This book is very welcome. Mr. Hudson has done his work cleanly and well." Wilson Harris
+ Spec 171:532 D 3 '43 550w

"So much more of Barnes, the work that he did, and the circle of friends and acquaintances through which he moved, is seen in Mr. Hudson's book than elsewhere in a separate volume, that the publication is an event in biography. Without some extensive find of private papers, there must still be a feeling of imperfect knowledge here and there, and the impression of Barnes's personality which Mr. Hudson has made by many fine strokes and transitions sharpens the desire to know yet more. We come under the spell not only of an especially able but a truly fascinating man."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p558 N 20 '43 2300w

Weekly Book Review p10 Ap 9 '44 330w

HUDSON, HOLLAND, and FISH, MARJORIE. Occupational therapy in the treatment of the tuberculous patient. 317p $3 Nat. tuberculosis assn, 1790 Broadway, N.Y. 19

616.246 Occupational therapy. Tuberculosis SG44-208

"A text and reference manual for undergraduate students of occupational therapy, planned to give a 'wide, general preview of tuberculosis treatment and of the role of occupational therapy in that treatment. Considerable space is given to usual difficulties encountered in such service.' (Foreword) Partial contents: The modern tuberculosis hospital; Therapist and staff; Mental hygiene and recreational programs; Library service; Therapeutic uses of music; Woodworking; Household and homemaking arts." (Booklist)

Booklist 41:37 O 1 '44

Reviewed by R. R. Shaw
Library J 69:1098 D 15 '44 550w

HUDSON, WILBUR G. Conveyors and related equipment. 341p il $5 Wiley

621.867 Conveying machinery. Hoisting machinery 44-4559

"In addition to conveyors, such devices and topics as aerial tramways, bins and bunkers, crushers and pulverizers, weighing, and the unloading of cars and vessels are discussed. Brief historical facts and considerable engineering data are included. The book is designed for engineering students and for engineers, plant designers and others who need information about types and applications of material handling equipment." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 41:12 S '44

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:305 Ap 1 '44 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:23 Ap '44

Special Libraries 35:100 Mr '44

HUESTON, ETHEL (POWELSON) (MRS E. J. BEST). Mother went mad on Monday. 213p $2.50 Bobbs 44-7515

Tho Dad and the girls thought mother really had gone insane, it developed that there was method in it. When mother's treatment took effect a family that had been rapidly disintegrating under the pressure of war conditions, regained its poise and in time could face heartache and emotional crises as a loving and united whole.

Book Week p8 O 8 '44 140w

Booklist 41:58 O 15 '44

"A modicum of saccharinity and sentimentality, this is an everyday story of an everyday American family of these times."
Kirkus 12:325 Ag 1 '44 170w

Reviewed by Andrea Parke
N Y Times p24 S 17 '44 240w

"After [a] deceptively normal beginning Mrs. Hueston seems to have conscientiously striven for and achieved a new high in sentimentality." Katharine Simonds
— Sat R of Lit 27:14 O 21 '44 400w

"Mrs. Hueston touches off the domestic scene in war time with humor and moral intent." Lisle Bell
+ Weekly Book Review p14 S 10 '44 110w

HUETTIG, MAE DENA. Economic control of the motion picture industry; a study in industrial organization. 163p $2 Univ. of Pa. press [12s Oxford]

791.4 Moving picture industry 44-2990

A study of the early development of the film industry, followed by a detailed account of its organization and economic conditions today. "The study was undertaken in conjunction with the Motion Picture Research Project and made possible by a research fellowship from the Rockefeller Foundation. . . The work was conducted in Hollywood over a period of two years from April 1939 to April 1941." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"The book is stimulating and can well serve as a model for the economics seminar. The sections on intercorporate relationships and financial policy, for instance, will be refreshing to those who seek clear exposition free from the bloodless semantics of double-entry bookkeeping." M. L. Hoch
+ Am Econ R 34:624 S '44 950w

"This is an interestingly written and often engrossing recital of one of the most fascinating chapters in America's economic and cultural history."
+ New Repub 111:110 Jl 24 '44 150w

"Required reading for any serious student of the films."
+ Theatre Arts 28:558 S '44 200w

HUFF, DARRELL. Pictures by Pete. 264p pl $2 Dodd

44-3556

"The career story of a seventeen-year-old photographer with a Chicago commercial photographic studio until he is old enough to join the army. Various vocational possibilities in this field are discussed. Events give him broad experience and much responsibility for a beginner. The book is loaded with descriptions of technical processes and information that would appeal only to those with some experience in photography. . . For high school age. Photographic illustrations." Library J

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p4 Je 4 '44 200w

Booklist 40:324 My 15 '44

"This is the story of a year in a Chicago studio, a good yarn, and a practical career book in commercial photography, with enough romance and enough adventure to carry the factual content. Girls will like it as well as boys—particularly camera fans."
+ Kirkus 12:119 Mr 1 '44 80w

"Plot and characterization are subordinate although the style is readable. Use will be strictly vocational. Demand for this kind of material will determine purchase." Eleanor Kidder
Library J 69:405 My 1 '44 100w

"It is a grand story for a camera fan, one that will pick up his own personal experience and show how it might lead to professional success as commercial photographer." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p6 Jl 2 '44 250w

Wis Lib Bul 40:133 O '44

HUGHES, MRS DOROTHY BELLE (FLANAGAN). Delicate ape. 252p $2.50 Duell

44-40089

A tale of international intrigue set in a period sometime in the future, specifically twelve years after the close of the second (or as it is then called, the Last) World war.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p11 F 27 '44 150w

Booklist 40:342 Je 1 '44

Bookmark 5:20 My '44

Kirkus 12:8 Ja 1 '44 120w

"Mrs. Hughes's idea is better than her execution, but her originality is to be commended. Plenty of suspense and fast action, with some interesting sidelights on diplomacy—the delicate ape." Elizabeth Huling
+ — New Repub 110:294 F 28 '44 100w

"Hunt's adventures follow the usual pattern of novels of international intrigue, but the author's passionate conviction that it must not happen again gives the story a meaning, and makes it a portent of the direction history may take in the future—if the aggressor nations of today are not carefully watched and controlled. The hero's adventures, thrilling as they are in themselves, are but the outward embellishments of a tale that is intended to make us think." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p22 F 27 '44 300w

"An interesting idea, which deserves a more careful and detailed treatment."
New Yorker 20:84 Mr 4 '44 110w

"An unusually effective tour de force."
+ Time 43:104 Mr 6 '44 50w

"Miss Hughes offers an exciting story wrapped in an idea that is certainly on the side of the angels. Complete with murder, valuable papers, problems to solve and not one scrap of nonsense. A necessity for Grade A addicts." Will Cuppy
+ Weekly Book Review p10 F 27 '44 220w

HUGHES, MRS DOROTHY BELLE (FLANAGAN). Johnnie. 219p $2.50 Duell

44-7073

A farcical spy-and-adventure tale with Graustark echoes. The story relates the events which ensued when Pfc. Johnnie Brown—of Texas—followed two "possible" Nazis as they left a New York subway train.

"Mrs. Hughes is in her usual fine form. Johnnie is as endearing, as engaging and as ingratiating a young man as you could ask for. And the author's gentle spoofing of her own tale in the final half of the book is something nice to see." Elizabeth Bullock
+ Book Week p7 Jl 9 '44 180w

Booklist 41:24 S '44

"Free for all—bordering on farce—but not quite as successful as it should be."
+ — Kirkus 12:223 My 15 '44 100w

"The whole thing is a comedy and a highly diverting one." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p16 Je 18 '44 110w

"Mrs. Hughes' admirers will probably wonder whether she is burlesquing her own style or trying to evolve a new one. Either way, the results are not very successful."
— New Yorker 20:80 Je 17 '44 100w

Sat R of Lit 27:38 Je 24 '44 40w

"[Mrs] Hughes has written some splendid yarns, but we regard this as her best to date, not forgetting even 'The So Blue Marble.' 'Johnnie' is an all-out lark for connoisseurs and in line for 1944 honors." Will Cuppy
+ Weekly Book Review p15 Je 18 '44 130w

HUGHES, EMMET JOHN. Church and the liberal society. 307p $3 Princeton univ. press

301.15 Roman Catholic church—Doctrinal and controversial works. Liberalism. Sociology, Christian A44-797

"A philosophical treatise from the Catholic viewpoint on the rise of the Liberal Society, its years of flourishing and gradual decline. In well-documented study, author outlines reasons for decline of Christianity during period of the Reformation and French Revolution, the beginnings of the Anti-Christ movement in France, Germany and England, the displacement of religion by science and economics, both in Europe and in America." Library J

Reviewed by W. R. Dennes
Am Econ R 34:941 D '44 1400w

"This book is appropriately date-lined from Madrid, Spain. No reviewer with an adequate sense of responsibility could recommend it to readers in quest of information or enlightenment, and no presumption whatever is implied by the statement. Such persons should turn, instead, to the Roman Catholic Catechism or to any representative missionary tract put out by the same organization. This will require a fraction of the time and labor and will yield a clearer view of the author's position, in equal—i.e., reciprocal—ratio." F. H. Knight
— Am J Soc 50:74 Jl '44 1000w

"This kind of violent and passionate criticism of liberalism and of Western man is not new (Dr. Hughes relies mostly on secondary sources); it is characteristic of a certain trend of thought which the non-Catholic Western man sincerely hopes is not shared by many Catholics in the United States, Britain, and France, but which is in no way, even not predominantly, confined to Catholics." Hans Kohn
— Am Pol Sci R 38:1021 O '44 340w

"Much reading is evident, and the style is easy to read, even as the book is attractive to the eye. But a student of history wonders at the ease with which four centuries of human thought is put into the neat categories that must have made the book a natural selection of the Catholic Book Club." Conrad Bergendoff
Ann Am Acad 233:249 My '44 500w

Booklist 40:261 Ap 1 '44

"This book, rich in ideas, comes as the fruit of wide reading and patient thinking by its author. . . Unfortunately, however, the style leaves much to be desired. Translated into more readable form with much of the supporting, or illustrating, material relegated to notes or appendices, the work would be far more useful—an occasion for regret that must be measured by the substantial value of this badly-needed, wisdom-imparting message."

+ — Cath World 159:188 My '44 220w

"Emmet John Hughes tends to make things a little too black and white; the positions he takes, though basically sound, are a little too ironclad. The result is that this book, 'The Church and the Liberal Society,' is not a winning book. It will bring great comfort and ease of mind to those who have thought along the same lines as its author, for here they will find powerful reinforcement of their own thinking. But unhappily it is scarcely likely to convince those whom it attacks—Marxists, capitalists, fascists and non-Christian democrats."
— + Commonweal 39:568 Mr 24 '44 850w

"In the light of recent history, it is not very difficult to see how a black picture of the growth of modern society can be painted. Mr. Hughes, writing from the Roman Catholic viewpoint, makes the most of the failures of the modern age. His picture is accurate as far as it goes, but it is incomplete. Basing one's notions on this book alone, one would feel that all that has been contributed to modern civilization by scientific research is better weapons of war. He fails to show that each of the trends he mentions had a positive side; each contributed something to civilization." H. M. Magid
J Philos 41:277 My 11 '44 550w

Reviewed by L. R. Etzkorn
Library J 69:261 Mr 15 '44 100w

Library J 69:646 Ag '44 20w

Reviewed by A. P. Levack
Pol Sci Q 59:467 S '44 800w

HUGHES, PHILIP, ed. Popes' new order. 331p $2.50 Macmillan [9s Burns]

261 Sociology, Christian. Roman Catholic church A44-2015

"A systematic summary of the social encyclicals and addresses, from Leo XIII to Pius XII." (Subtitle) The materials are arranged under such headings as: The fundamental causes of world unrest; The State and its powers; The Catholic attitude to the modern state; Family life the basis of national well-being; Ideals in education; The capitalist system and the worker; The international problem.

Cath World 158:508 F '44 130w

"Papal utterances must not be neglected, yet, because they now form a considerable literature in themselves, their study is limited to research specialists. This volume attempts to make them available to a wider reading and thinking public, presenting them in a carefully abstracted and annotated form with selective chapter divisions and both a topical and chronological index." W. H. Melish
+ Churchman 158:16 Mr 15 '44 150w

Commonweal 39:428 F 11 '44 40w

Reviewed by R. L. Hightower
Crozer Q 21:359 O '44 700w

"In view of the powerful influence exerted by the Catholic Church, not only in Europe, but in the United States, everyone interested in permanent peace should know along what lines the Catholic Church would move. To all readers this clear exposition of the Catholic position will be revealing; to many it will be disturbing. In any case, this is a most important book."
+ Kirkus 12:66 F 1 '44 240w

Library J 69:646 Ag '44 20w

HUGHES, RILEY. Our Coast guard academy; a history and guide; foreword by Rear Admiral James Pine. 213p il $2 Devin-Adair

351.792 U.S. Coast guard academy, New London, Connecticut 44-5120

"Riley Hughes, member of the faculty at Providence College and long-time student of marine affairs, tells the story of our Coast Guard Academy from its inception until the present day. . . The entire four years of academy life are reviewed in detail by Professor Hughes. . . From reveille to taps, studies, drills, indoctrination, discipline, not even the most major part of a cadet's life is overlooked." Weekly Book Review

Booklist 40:351 Je 15 '44

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:700 S 1 '44 50w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown
Social Studies 35:375 D '44 240w

Springf'd Republican p4d My 14 '44 380w

"A splendid book for all who want to learn about one of our three great service schools." P. J. Searles
+ Weekly Book Review p12 Je 11 '44 500w

Wis Lib Bul 40:143 N '44

HUIE, WILLIAM BRADFORD. Can do!; the story of the Seabees; with an introd. by Ben Moreell. 250p il $2.75 Dutton

359.982 U.S. Navy. Construction battalions. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American 44-7370

The story of the Navy's Construction battalions and their achievements in the Aleutians, the South Sea islands, in Europe and in Africa. Much of the story is told in their own words by Seabees themselves. Appendixes give lists of officers and men receiving awards, casualty lists, and some poems written by Seabees. At the end of the volume are photographs showing typical Seabee activities. Index.

"One of the best of the war books." W. F. Morse
+ Book Week p9 S 24 '44 270w

Booklist 41:35 O 1 '44

"It is unfortunate that the makeup segregates all illustrations in the back of the book. A narrative so vivid and a work of such value for historical reference should have had the dignity in format attending distribution of the excellent pictures throughout the book."
+ — Eng N 133:98 N 2 '44 360w

Kirkus 12:295 Jl 1 '44 170w

Reviewed by M. E. Clark
Library J 69:761 S 15 '44 70w

Library J 69:1003 N 15 '44 60w

"When it comes to Seabees, William Bradford Huie, formerly of The American Mercury and now a lieutenant (j.g.) in the Navy's Construction Battalions, makes no pretence of being unbiased. . . Huie is a passionate advocate, and a convincing one." Philip Hamburger
+ N Y Times p6 S 24 '44 700w

"Lieutenant Huie is a Seabee who has worked and fought at the front. His book is made up largely of narratives of action in the Solomons, Italy, the Aleutians and a score of other areas, gathered from direct participants. It is perhaps overly exuberant and there is quite a bit of strutting (though it contains not a word about the author's own doings), yet the exhilaration is welcome because it illustrates the spirit and dash of American fighting men." P. J. Searles
+ — Weekly Book Review p5 O 1 '44 800w

Wis Lib Bul 40:143 N '44

HULL, CLARK LEONARD. Principles of behavior; an introduction to behavior theory. 422p il $4 Appleton-Century

150 Behaviorism (psychology) 43-13698

"This book brings together experimental and theoretical analyses of learning and habit formation which have been made during the past third of a century, and presents in a systematic way fundamental principles of molar behavior which can be elicited from such studies. Sixteen primary principles together with a large number of corollaries are formulated, and are illustrated and supported by a variety of experimental, quantitative determinations." (J Philos) Glossary of symbols. Index.

Reviewed by B. F. Skinner
Am J Psychol 57:276 Ap '44 2500w

HULL, C. L.—Continued

"Although Professor Hull believes that 'all behavior, individual and social, moral and immoral, normal and psychopathic, is generated from the same primary laws'. . . the present book covers only a small fraction of the types of behavior he mentions. Moreover, some of his principles are simply rough empirical formulae, with only meager experimental and theoretical warrant, and in general the principles lack the unified coherence which primary principles in better established sciences possess; and Professor Hull frankly admits the 'system' presented to be very tentative. None the less, the volume should prove of extraordinary interest to students of applied logic, and certainly merits their attention. It is written with an unusually mature methodological self-consciousness; and it distinguishes with unusual care between matters of public observation and matters of hypothetical inference, while at the same time it indicates the empirical grounds for accepting the latter." E. N.

+ — J Philos 40:558 S 30 '43 430w

HULL, ERIC TRAVISS. Murder lays a golden egg. 214p $2 Doubleday

44-3530

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p11 Ap 16 '44 150w

Kirkus 12:85 F 15 '44 50w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p14 Mr 26 '44 80w

"Chiefly for the reader who likes to mull over lists detailing the whereabouts of A, B, and C when D was getting her skull cleft by a hatchet."

New Yorker 20:100 Mr 25 '44 70w

"Mr Hull has plenty of gore in his story, and two corpses, but he relies more on character development and continuity than on bare excitement. Although the solution to the murder is slightly obvious to the seasoned whodunit fan, the reasons are well concealed and the story builds up well. Altogether 'Murder Lays a Golden Egg' is readable and Mr. Hull is a welcome addition to Crime Club authors." L. S. M.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 2 '44 250w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p15 Mr 26 '44 80w

HUMPHREYS, DENA. On wings of song; the story of Mendelssohn; il. by Phyllis Coté. 285p $2.50 Holt

B or 92 Mendelssohn-Bartholdy, Felix—Juvenile literature 44-3056

Fictionized, but authentic biography of Felix Mendelssohn, German composer, pianist, and conductor. Bibliography, glossary of musical terms, index. For junior and senior high schools.

"Like its predecessors, it is not only an account of the life of a great composer, but it also presents a lively picture of the time in which he lived." P. A. Whitney

+ Book Week p7 Jl 2 '44 300w

Booklist 40:324 My 15 '44

"Older boys and girls with a taste for music will enjoy Miss Humphreys' account of this happy honored, productive life." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 20:291 Jl '44 120w

"An excellent handling of fictionized biography of the musician, Felix Mendelssohn, which moves as easily as a good novel."

+ Kirkus 12:99 F 15 '44 130w

"An unusual biography portraying the life of Felix Mendelssohn written in a charming and fascinating manner by an authoress, whose love and understanding of her subject make it delightful reading." S. J. Robinson

+ Library J 69:506 Je 1 '44 110w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell
N Y Times p14 Jl 30 '44 150w

"The writing is good enough to carry the reader into Mendelssohn's intense family life and into the pressures of his crowded career, and to convey a real sense of his ebullient charm. A list of his works, a list of recordings, a chart of contemporary events in the world of his time, and pleasing illustrations add to the value of the book."

+ New Yorker 20:60 Jl 8 '44 110w

Springf'd Republican p4d My 14 '44 80w

Wis Lib Bul 40:112 Jl '44

HUMPHRIES, ROLFE. Summer landscape. 50p $1.75 Scribner

811 44-8204

"A new collection of verse by a sensitive and gifted lyric poet. Mr. Humphries moves back and forth easily and perceptively between the actual world and the action of dreams, the recurring seasons, and the troubled weather of the mind. About half of the poems have appeared in this magazine." New Yorker

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Book Week p4 O 29 '44 300w

"The Summer Landscape is not for devotees of bizarre technique or worshipers of 'message.' It is the pure grave intensity of a mature spirit who, traversing modern experimentation, avoids cerebrality and trick. The forms are often novel and always new; the perfect music, the ore-freighted brevity of imagery, are ultra-modern; but there is no ghost-Catholicism of an Eliot, no nihilism of a Jeffers invoking mineral Nirvana, no subjective nightmares of an Aiken. It says yes to life, with a beauty stern but rich." E. M. Root

+ Christian Century 61:1417 D 6 '44 750w

"In a season when the quality of published verse is not of the best, this stands out far above the general level."

+ Kirkus 12:468 O 1 '44 90w

Reviewed by Conrad Aiken
New Repub 111:530 O 23 '44 120w

New Yorker 20:88 O 14 '44 50w

Reviewed by A. M. Jakeman
Springf'd Republican p6 S 27 '44 330w

"Several poems in this third small, but excellent, collection, by Rolfe Humphries, voice the feelings of an honest, sensitive man who has experienced what he considers a demoralization, through fear and pressure, amounting to spiritual exile, on the part of persons with whom he once stood in common cause against reaction. . . 'The Summer Landscape' is work by a mind both disciplined and honest, set forth with clarity and insight, and with a structural precision all too rare in contemporary poetry." Ruth Lechlitner

+ Weekly Book Review p3 D 31 '44 280w

HUNT, EDWARD EYRE, ed. See Twentieth century fund. Power industry and the public interest

HUNT, FRAZIER. MacArthur and the war against Japan. 182p maps $2.50 Scribner

940.542 MacArthur, Douglas. World war, 1939—Pacific ocean 44-6879

A summary of the Pacific war written in terms of General MacArthur's own acts and plans. The story begins in July 1941 when MacArthur received command of the Philippine forces and ends in the spring of 1944 when he was well on his "way back." Index.

Reviewed by W. F. Morse
Book Week p6 Ag 27 '44 280w

Booklist 41:16 S '44

"The book does clarify and give meaning to campaigns that probably have not been very clear to the American public. There is too much laudation, however, and there are too many omissions of unpleasant facts to make this the definitive history of General MacArthur's part up to now in the War against Japan." Foster Hailey

+ — N Y Times p21 Ag 27 '44 400w

"People to whom the handsome and austere general is anathema—and there are unreasonably far too many—will not like this book where all the main actors are 'immortal,' 'fabulous,' and 'magnificent.' Mr. Hunt's all-out style is unfortunate. On the other hand, if you will overlook the slavering and tail wagging in the presence of the Great Hunter, the military commentating is competent, and the brief, well-mapped study of each strategic step is fascinating. The New Guinea campaign will undoubtedly become a military classic, and MacArthur deserves great praise indeed for its conception and planning." W. H. Chickering

+ — Sat R of Lit 27:31 O 7 '44 700w

Reviewed by G. K. Moriarty

Springf'd Republican p6 S 16 '44 390w

"Surely General MacArthur himself will be amused or appalled at such lavish application of flattery. Frazier Hunt has over-exerted himself and diminished the value of an otherwise worth-while book." P. J. Searles

— + Weekly Book Review p14 S 17 '44 900w

HUNT, HOWARD. Limit of darkness. 227p $2.50 Random house

44-4917

Records the experiences of a group of United States aviators at Henderson Field, during one twenty-four hour period. It is a story of tropical heat, insects, rats, and other physical discomforts encountered in the line of duty.

"Mr. Hunt writes without ever raising his voice, and his narrative is as natural and straightforward as a clock ticking. . . A book like this will stretch your imagination." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 174:127 Jl '44 360w

"The reader will find this book strangely simple and satisfying." Herman Reinstein

+ Book Week p8 My 21 '44 320w

Booklist 40:341 Je 1 '44

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 20:400 S '44 40w

"Not as powerful a book as East Of Farewell [Book Review Digest, 1942] (to my mind one of the finest and most neglected books which the war has produced). There the destroyer is the focus of the tale—its complement of men are seen in relation to the ship; here the focus is on the men rather than the unit, a less original project, but one which again gives Hunt scope for a very distinguished talent."

+ Kirkus 12:80 F 15 '44 170w

"Recommended for larger libraries which are buying most of the war books, fiction and nonfiction." E. S. Brown

+ Library J 69:304 Ap 1 '44 50w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling

Nation 158:687 Je 10 '44 40w

"As an apologia and explanation, 'Limit of Darkness' does not come off. As a story of men in movement it is meticulous in its detail, sharp in its description. The raid on Kahili, the last section of the book, is fine descriptive writing. But detail can be overdone. It must illumine and not obscure, animate and not deaden, validate and not weaken the real subject, and in this book men are the subject. But they are often hidden behind a scrupulously woven screen of detail. When they show through, they are quite plausibly alive, and these moments of aliveness are worth the reading for. Howard Hunt can write. I think his next book will prove it." J. S. Redding

+ — New Repub 110:769 Je 5 '44 600w

"'Limit of Darkness' is listed as fiction. It will read very close to fact for those who have lived for a time on Guadalcanal, or at other front-line bases in the South Pacific, and seen brave men fly out by day and night and not come back. . . There are some technical errors in the book, such as Mr. Hunt's estimate of the time it requires for a surface force to steam back to Tulagi after a night bombardment of Munda, but most of his plane and base talk is authentic Guadalcanal." Foster Hailey

+ — N Y Times p5 My 21 '44 650w

"The technical details of flying are clear and exciting and, except when the author attempts to disguise his reporting as fiction, the story is forthright and stirring."

+ New Yorker 20:81 My 20 '44 120w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman

Sat R of Lit 27:9 Je 10 '44 800w

"The author of 'Limit of Darkness' has seen a great deal of service. . . As a result he has come to know the serviceman thoroughly. He knows how he talks and how he acts and what he feels. The result is a book full of quiet, sustained drama and realism." G. K. Moriarty

+ Springf'd Republican p4d My 21 '44 500w

"Howard Hunt has written a disturbingly accurate novel. . . Mr. Hunt has not been concerned with aviation psychiatry directly; but his understanding of a pilot's inner feelings and reactions might well be used by flight surgeons studying pilot fatigue. 'Limit of Darkness' is disturbingly accurate." George Polk

+ Weekly Book Review p4 My 21 '44 700w

Reviewed by Orville Prescott

Yale R n s 33:767 summer '44 200w

HUNT, JOSEPH MCVICKER, ed. Personality and the behavior disorders; a handbook based on experimental and clinical research. 2v il $10 Ronald

137 Psychology. Psychology, Pathological. Personality 44-2163

"This work brings together forty contributors representing the life sciences and seeks to present the major portion of theory, investigative fact, and clinical practice from all those scientific fields that have contributed to the study of personality and its development. . . Each author has endeavored to survey his field with technical jargon minimized or defined immediately, and with ample documentation to serve as a bridge to the original literature, so that his expositions may serve both as a text for students beyond the elementary level and as a reference work for mature clinicians, investigators, and teachers." (Editor's pref) Indexes at end of volume two.

"Highly recommended investment for college, university and large public libraries." A. I. Bryan

+ Library J 68:1005 D 1 '43 110w

"There are thirty-five chapters each written by a well known authority and each of these presentations is brief, factual, and revealing, providing a source of insight into human behavior nowhere excelled. The two volumes emphasize the complexity of human personality and the difficulty of interpreting the individual because there is such a quantity of causations influencing character formation." E. R. Groves

+ Social Forces 23:217 D '44 170w

"A most valuable reference work." L. G. Lowrey

+ Survey 80:270 S '44 300w

HUNT, MABEL LEIGH. Young man of the house; drawings by Louis Slobodkin. (Stokes bk) 170p $1.75 Lippincott

44-4874

When Eben's doctor father went to war he appointed nine-year-old Eben to take his place. Eben was solemnly mindful of his responsibility, but he often forgot. Then he took to wearing an old collar and tie of his father's and that helped. But even collars and ties could not be effective all the time on a very human little boy. The story of Eben's struggles is told for eight to ten year olds.

"'Young Man-of-the-House' is funny and heart-warming and thoroughly satisfying. It is concerned with the humor and drama which is to be found in everyday events and it is especially good for reading aloud because grown-ups will enjoy it as much as will the children." P. A. Whitney

+ Book Week p7 Jl 2 '44 300w

Booklist 40:359 Je 15 '44

HUNT, M. L.—Continued

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 28 '44 240w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 20:286 Jl '44 70w

"Good natural true boy stuff—small town mid-west setting—credible incidents and characters—and not a goody-goody in the lot. The 'while Dad is in the Army' angle gives it a contemporary feel."
+ Kirkus 12:232 My 15 '44 90w
N Y Times p20 Ag 6 '44 120w

"The book has considerable feeling and a certain amount of humor."
New Yorker 20:57 Jl 8 '44 50w

"Full of a quiet strength and security, the story is a refreshing affirmation of the things in life that are essential to childhood." B. W. Shaffer
+ Sat R of Lit 27:30 S 23 '44 230w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p10 Je 4 '44 300w
Wis Lib Bul 40:132 O '44

HUNT, WALTER BERNARD. Whittling book. 111p il $2.50 Bruce pub.

736.4 Wood carving 44-6910

"Directions easy to follow and a choice of subjects give a beginner not only an impulse to whittle but a manual that will last a long time. After advice on the choice and care of a pocketknife, and on woods used, projects begin with bark whittling, go to miniature birds, wooden jewelry, katcina dolls and totem poles and on to figures." Weekly Book Review

Booklist 41:13 S '44
Weekly Book Review p10 S 10 '44 60w
Wis Lib Bul 40:126 O '44

HUNTER, ALLAN ARMSTRONG. Say yes to the light. 150p $1.50 Harper

248 Christian life 44-6183

"To the practical guidance which he offers concerning the meaning of the teaching of Jesus for individual lives and the reasons for following it, Dr. Hunter adds a spirit of high hope which furnishes the motive for courageous endeavor. The title itself implies faith that there is a Light, and that man can see it, and that he has within him the power to go the way it beckons. The book is conceived in concrete terms, with little analysis of presuppositions which might be, and in another kind of book should be, defined in terms of theology or philosophy. The pacifist argument in the closing chapter shows the author wrestling with the dilemma produced by the interplay of absolutes and the lesser imperatives of human society." (Christian Century) The author is minister of the Mt Hollywood Congregational church, Los Angeles.

Christian Century 61:1053 S 13 '44 150w

"The book is more than a conventional statement of Christian principles; it is a convincing argument for the deepening of the spiritual life, together with some practical suggestions as to the technique of attaining such deepening. Interestingly written the book has stirred in the heart of at least one reviewer a desire to hear Dr. Hunter in his pulpit. It would seem that he has a vital message for our time." H. C. Newell
+ Crozer Q 21:368 O '44 250w

"Too theological in tone for more than a narrow appeal." H. F. McGaw
Library J 69:602 Jl '44 90w
Wis Lib Bul 40:124 O '44

HUNTER, ROBERT. Quebec to Carolina in 1785-1786; ed. by Louis B. Wright and Marion Tinling. 393p $5 Huntington lib.

917.3 U.S.—Description and travel. Canada —Description and travel 43-16537

"The travel diary and observations of Robert Hunter Jr., a young merchant of London." (Subtitle) "Parts of Hunter's diary have been published before, but in historical magazines and learned journals not easily accessible to the public, so its presentation now complete in one volume is almost the equivalent of making a new document available." (Weekly Book Review)

"The narrative provides invaluable material for social and economic historians. The young writer described only what he saw, which was a great deal, for he had an insatiable curiosity and evidently was not at all bashful. . . The editorial work is adequate and there is a good index." J. J. Talman
+ Canadian Hist R 25:207 Je '44 310w

Reviewed by Frances Gaither
N Y Times p19 Je 25 '44 600w

"The young man was no De Tocqueville, but he was no fool, either, except, perhaps, in his love affairs—and at twenty, who isn't? He had a keen eye, boundless curiosity and a stern sense of duty that made him keep the diary faithfully because his father had demanded it. Fine editing makes the narrative run smoothly; and the result is a vivid picture of the country and an equally good picture of a young man who may have been no genius, but who is extremely human and likable." G. W. Johnson
+ Weekly Book Review p13 Je 25 '44 300w

HUNTINGTON, HELEN (H. H. LYNDE, pseud). Remember Matt Boyer. 301p $2.50 Crown

44-9742

Three women give their different impressions of Matt Boyer, United States senator, defender of the underdog, and isolationist. The women are: his sister, his wife, and the young secretary who fell in love with him; and each pictures him as a different man.

"Miss Lynde's earnest attempt to vivify and explain the character of Matt Boyer through a somewhat ingenious technical device is praiseworthy, but she just doesn't make the grade. The Senator's convictions and motivations—whether as champion of the underprivileged or as isolationist statesman—are never more than vaguely and sketchily illuminated." Jack Conroy
Book Week p2 O 29 '44 500w
Kirkus 12:470 O 15 '44 170w

Reviewed by Thelma Purtell
N Y Times p21 D 17 '44 340w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn
Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 14 '45 240w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p12 D 17 '44 100w

HURD, LOUIS MERWIN. Modern poultry farming. 599p il $4 Macmillan

636.5 Poultry Agr44-53

"This book is prepared as a practical guide for both large and small poultry keepers and those interested in starting a poultry enterprise. The practices and methods are those most commonly used by successful poultry keepers and are based on scientific principles." (Pref) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1928. Index.

"The most complete and authoritative discussion of its field I have ever seen. It is broad in scope and generously illustrated, and presents the results of the most recent investigations in feeding and breeding and all other branches of poultry culture. It is intended, however, for the man who is really going into the poultry business; a simpler and less expensive book will suffice for those who merely want to raise a few fowls for meat and eggs." J .T. Frederick
+ Book Week p2 My 7 '44 70w
Booklist 40:287 Ap 15 '44

HURLEY, GENE. Have you seen this man? 268p $2 Bobbs

44-8333

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week O 15 '44 90w

"Fast and tough."
Boston Globe p17 O 11 '44 40w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p12 O 1 '44 80w

"Practically everybody wisecracks in every other sentence and after a while it gets a bit exhausting to keep up with them. To tell more would be to tell all, but you'll probably jog along through the improbable mazes of the plot comfortably enough if you favor the roughie-toughie school." B. I.
Springf'd Republican p4d O 1 '44 160w

"Unless we err, Mr. Hurley has turned the heat on some old-fashioned material with amusing results, often of a burlesque turn, with ribald cadenzas. His denouement is astounding, to put it mildly." Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p23 O 1 '44 150w

HURLOCK, ELIZABETH BERGNER (MRS I. M. BECKMAN). Modern ways with children. (Whittlesey house publication) 393p $2.75 McGraw

649.1 Children—Management. Child study
43-18412

Chapters on child development and child guidance for modern parents. Partial contents: Physical growth; Eating problems; Sleep problems; Motor skills; Childhood emotions; Becoming socialized; Childhood play; Intellectual development; Habits, good and bad; Discipline; The child's domain; What clothes mean to a child; Childhood mysteries; Sick personalities. The author is a member of the department of psychology, Columbia university. Bibliography. Index.

"We should be grateful indeed to Mrs. Hurlock for writing so practical and readable a book." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p3 Ja 23 '44 430w

"The discussion is apparently concerned with young children but the author does not always make clear to what age child she is referring. Also there is a tendency to make categorical statements regarding matters which are actually unsettled. In spite of these criticisms every library should make this book available to its patrons." A. I. Bryan
+ — Library J 68:890 N 1 '43 110w

Social Forces 23:237 D '44 30w

HURST, FANNIE (MRS J. S. DANIELSON). Hallelujah. 431p $2.50 Harper

44-379

The story of Lily Brown, born of humble parents in a small Missouri town. She possessed a gentleness and sympathy, an instinct for humanity, that was irresistible to the struggling and confused.

"Fannie Hurst's writing flows a little like the Mississippi—wide, deep and rather muddy. She is an uneven artisan, unaware when she has dealt too long upon a subject. For instance, there is no possible excuse for retelling the story of the murder committed by Lily's mother some dozen times in this book, the sadism of Sweetland is overdone and overemphasized, and the first eight chapters need shortening and rewriting. But the total effect of this story is good, strong and I hesitate to add, 'wholesome.' It deserves a good sale, which it will get, and a kindly reception from the critics which is doubtful." Sterling North
+ — Book Week p3 Ja 9 '44 380w

"Well-told, interesting story. Suggest reading before purchasing. Will be in demand by author's followers." E. F. Kelly
Library J 68:725 S 15 '43 50w

"Frankly, there are scenes in this novel which come close to the repulsive—nor do I think that much excuse for them exists. In her own florid, undisciplined fashion, Miss Hurst in the past has written some good stories. All the less reason why she should be forgiven for 'Hallelujah'—which is really very bad indeed." E. H. Walton
— N Y Times p5 Ja 9 '44 550w

"The novel, in case anyone really wants to know, is a glorified True Confessions story." K. S. Rosin
— Sat R of Lit 27:23 F 5 '44 310w

Time 43:103 Ja 31 '44 500w

"Unreal or even distasteful as it may seem to some readers, there is no denying the vigor or interest of Miss Hurst's appeal for recognition of the qualities of a good woman." Mary Ross
Weekly Book Review p6 Ja 9 '44 700w

HURWITZ, HOWARD LAWRENCE. Theodore Roosevelt and labor in New York state, 1880-1900. 316p $3.75 Columbia univ. press

331.8 Labor and laboring classes—New York (state). Roosevelt, Theodore, 1858-1919
43-12745

During the years 1880 to 1900 the labor movement in New York state was striving toward a higher standard of living for the workingman. Theodore Roosevelt was actively engaged in New York politics at that time. In this study the author attempts to answer some of these questions: "Did he help or hinder labor organizations in their attempts to improve working conditions? How strong was the labor movement in the Empire State? How did Roosevelt's actions compare with his public statements? Did labor regard him as a friend? Was Roosevelt concerned with labor's attitude toward him? To what extent did his ideas change before he became President of the United States?" (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"Dr. Hurwitz has handled with intelligence and zeal the Roosevelt Manuscripts, the labor press, and the general sources." F. L. Paxson
+ Am Hist R 49:512 Ap '44 480w

"Hurwitz has analyzed a mass of correspondence and other unpublished material and welded it into a compact, well-written history of organized labor in New York State. The study is primarily a scholarly effort to evaluate the relationships between Roosevelt and labor during his political career from assemblyman to the governorship." H. W. Davey
+ Am Pol Sci R 38:589 Je '44 380w

Reviewed by M. F. Wells
Crozer Q 21:84 Ja '44 700w

Reviewed by Philip Taft
J Pol Econ 52:384 D '44 500w

HUSSEY, RUSSELL CLAUDIUS. Historical geology; the geologic history of North America. 491p il maps $3.50 McGraw

551.7 Geology—North America. Paleontology —North America
44-8700

A college textbook written with a minimum of technical phraseology so as to be interesting to the general reader as well. The author is associate professor of geology at the University of Michigan.

Booklist 41:148 Ja 15 '45

Library J 69:1003 N 15 '44 60w

HUSZAR, GEORGE BERNARD DE, ed. New perspectives on peace. 261p $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press

341 Peace. International cooperation
A44-5394

Eleven faculty members of the University of Chicago consider the prospects for world peace in terms of their specialties. Contents: The problems in perspective, by G. B. de Huszar; The geographical problem, by C. C. Colby; The historical problem, by Avery Craven; The ethnological problem, by Robert Redfield; The economic problem, by Jacob Viner; The sociological problem, by W. F. Ogburn; The legal problem, by Quincy Wright; The educational problem, by R. J. Havighurst; The psychological problem, by David Slight; The philosophic problem, by Richard McKeon; The religious problem, by J. L. Adams. Index.

HUSZAR, G. B. DE—Continued

"One of the most valuable essays in the book is Avery Craven's deeply thoughtful analysis of The Historical Problem. First presented as lectures on the Charles R. Walgreen Foundation, these discussions are nontechnical in language and are fully accessible—and richly rewarding—to the general reader." J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p4 N 19 '44 170w

Booklist 41:121 D 15 '44

Current Hist 8:70 Ja '45 80w

Reviewed by Norman Angell
Sat R of Lit 27:8 N 18 '44 400w

Reviewed by Norman Angell
Sat R of Lit 27:5 N 25 '44 90w

HUTCHINS, MARGARET. Introduction to reference work. 214p $3.50 A.L.A.

025.5 Libraries—Reference department. Reference books 44-5262

"This book aims to describe and interpret reference work as the reference librarian sees it for the information of administrators of libraries and other librarians and library school students. . . Although the book covers the same field as the previous American Library Association publication on Reference Work, written by James I. Wyer, it is not a revision of that work. . . Because it is an attempt to interpret the essence of reference work in its universal aspects, it deals more with the principles and methods of reference work in general than with routines and practices of individual libraries or even types of libraries." Pref

Booklist 40:350 Je 15 '44

"Unfortunately, at times Miss Hutchins' presentation is impeded by a needlessly complex and difficult style. On numerous occasions one has to re-read a sentence several times to comprehend its full meaning. But this matter of style—or rather the lack of it—characterizes most library-school textbooks. Lucidity of expression and readability would be welcome additions to this group. Withal, this is a useful book and one that should be kept on the shelves of every alert reference department." Homer Halvorson
+ — Library Q 14:357 O '44 1300w

HUTCHINSON, WALTER, ed. Pictorial history of the war; a complete and authentic record in text and pictures. 21v il maps [ea 9s 6d; $3.25 in the U.S. c1939-44 Hutchinson]

940.53 World war, 1939-. World war, 1939—Pictorial works

"The plan of this history is chronological and with the exception of Volume 1, volumes are identified by dates covered, not by volume numbers. The text is composed of general articles of current interest for the period included. For example, Volume 1 opens with 'Germany between the Wars,' unsigned, followed by 'Why Britain Came In,' by Sir Philip Gibbs; a page entitled 'Hitler Told the World,' which contains excerpts from his speeches between February 1933 and January 1939; 'The Story of Poland,' unsigned; 'H. M. The King's Speech (3rd September 1939),' etc. In addition to articles of this type, each volume contains brief running commentaries on the incidents of each week of the period covered as well as dated summaries of the chief events of those weeks. The 21 volumes published to date carry the chronology from September 6, 1939, to August 3, 1943. The accompanying illustrations, which constitute perhaps the most important feature of the set, are varied and include photographs, drawings, portraits, designs of insignia and maps. . . Each volume is prefaced by a table of contents to the text, commentaries, chronologies and maps, as well as by a list of illustrations arranged under subjects and names of important persons. As an index to the illustrations the list has limitations." Subscription Bks Bul

"The maps, some of which are colored, serve well the purpose of illustrating strategic moves or showing the geography of a given area. Some of the names in small type are faint but this fault is not common to all the maps. . . Since the set has been compiled from the British point of view with emphasis on localities where British Commonwealth troops are in service, it is of particular interest to Canadian libraries. The volume ending August 3, 1943, was received in April 1944. Although this time lag detracts from the usefulness of the set for current information, it still remains a useful source of contemporary opinion, period chronology, authentic pictures and useful maps dealing with the war. Much of this material can be found elsewhere, but these compact volumes arranged by date are timesavers for chronological information and as such are recommended for purchase."
+ — Subscription Bks Bul 15:33 Jl '44 600w

"This new volume of the record edited by Mr. Walter Hutchinson maintains the high all-round standard of those that have already appeared. Outstanding features that attract the eye immediately are again the beautifully printed photographs—more than a thousand of them, in completely satisfying variety—the fine typography and the excellent quality of the paper."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p388 Ag 12 '44 120w (Review of vol Oct. 1943-Ap, 1944)

HUTCHISON, BRUCE. Hollow men. 280p $2.75 Coward-McCann 44-8825

Character study of a Canadian newspaperman, from a farming district in British Columbia, who goes to Ottawa, to Washington, and New York, in his quest for the meaning of his country's unrest and his own. Leslie's understanding wife stands behind him loyally; because she is less complex, life is not so serious to Nancy. The time is the present.

"For its insight into the workings of political machinery and machinations in Canada or anywhere else Bruce Hutchison's novel is worth the shot. And for its intelligent handling of a complex personal problem, terribly germane to our time, its merits the widest circulation." Leo Kennedy
+ Book Week p8 O 22 '44 450w

Booklist 41:124 D 15 '44

Kirkus 12:411 S 15 '44 170w

"The whole thing is written dead-pan. There are no laughs, no lesser comics to relieve the tedium of the main buffoons. As such it is strong medicine. The people are too recognizable, too familiar, and their sins are too much our own—arrogance, atheism, anemia of the spirit. The book should be read, but for instruction rather than pleasure. It has the clammy uncomfortableness that exudes from association with men who are wrong, soiled and dull." Thomas Haynes
— + N Y Times p18 O 8 '44 440w

"A singularly unsuccessful novel."
— New Yorker 20:78 S 30 '44 90w

"Whether it vexes you or not by its attempt to simplify the unsimplifiable, this is a novel very much worth reading." A. D. H. Smith
+ — Sat R of Lit 27:27 O 7 '44 600w

Reviewed by H. L. Mitchell
Springf'd Republican p4d N 12 '44 500w

"A novel that is likely to prove one of the most sincere and thought-provoking of the season. . . Leslie never found any final answers to his questions. For Mr. Hutchison has offered something better than that finality. He has written a book that stimulates the reader to do his own questioning and seek his own answers. Moreover, he has written a book that poses many problems, yet escapes all suggestion of pessimism; for it is a book informed throughout with an abiding faith in human nature." Jennings Rice
+ Weekly Book Review p4 O 1 '44 950w

HUTTER, CATHERINE. Outnumbered. 355p $2.75 Dodd

44-40048

This story of Austria in the decade prior to 1938 centers around the orphaned Fehge, who was born of Jewish parents, reared a devout Catholic, and who reached maturity at the period of the German Anschluss.

"The sweet and simple character of Fehge is well drawn and the atmosphere of democratic Austrian politics between the two World Wars is caught, but in spots Miss Hutter leans heavily on coincidence, and the final burden of her message to a confused world seems, at least to one reader, just a trifle obscure." Milton Hindus

— + Atlantic 173:133 My '44 240w

"Reading 'The Outnumbered' is like viewing a group of people from a great height: we see them clearly—they are born, work, love, die. But the whole view is superficial, and we see only the surface activities. We learn little of the vital relationship of their activities to life." B. J. Sheil

Book Week p1 Mr 12 '44 1050w

Booklist 40:251 Mr 15 '44

"Though the narrative is sincere and moving, the propaganda is too self-conscious, some of the discussions of religion and politics are shallow and immature, and the comparisons of Jew and Gentile are hardly objective. On the other hand Miss Hutter's interpretation of the present world conflict as a struggle between those who hate for the sake of hating and those who honestly desire to live in peace is authentic and well illustrated by the course of the novel." N. E. Monroe

— + Cath World 159:185 My '44 180w

"Introduces some good writing, and a strange and provocative subject, but it falls short in not realizing the spiritual potentialities of its heroine."

+ — Kirkus 12:45 F 1 '44 180w

"Extraordinarily fine novel of life in Austria during prewar years. . . Recommended for adults." Katharine Shorey

+ Library J 69:160 F 15 '44 70w

" 'The Outnumbered' introduces to the American public a novelist of mature stature and purpose. . . Even when it falls short of the mark she has set for it—where it does, and by how much, is a matter of opinion in any case—it remains a surprisingly good try. She has the scope and intention, if not yet the grasp and certainty, of a major novelist." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 19 '44 700w

"The book, for the most part, is so interesting and the characters are so freshly portrayed that I regret to tell you that the heroine finally turns up with the stigmata usually associated with sainthood. This makes a fuzzy ending, which, however, does not ruin the novel."

+ — New Yorker 20:93 Mr 18 '44 160w

Reviewed by Emily Schossberger

Sat R of Lit 27:25 Mr 25 '44 550w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 2 '44 400w

" 'The Outnumbered' is both an absorbing and a sobering novel. Absorbing because Miss Hutter gives substance and appeal to the people she pictures in a setting and atmosphere which inevitably evoke Thomas Mann's 'The Magic Mountain.' Sobering because through them one cannot help feeling a part of the currents and counter-currents in a world from which one cannot resign. What happened to these people cannot be without concern to one's self. This book is no diatribe against Nazism; it is without didacticism or hysteria. It gets under your skin because, despite the differences in setting, you feel, with the outnumbered, the seepage of the malevolence which is dramatized by the swastika." Mary Ross

+ Weekly Book Review p2 Mr 19 '44 950w

"Miss Hutter has made her imaginary protagonist more credible, at least to me, than did Franz Werfel his real one, Bernadette. In fact her entire novel is better constructed than his and better written (the advantage of fiction over fact?) although it lacks the zeal and fervor of The Song of Bernadette." Orville Prescott

+ Yale R n s 33:766 summer '44 180w

HUTTON, BUD, and ROONEY, ANDREW A. Air gunner. 236p $2.50 Farrar

940.544 World war, 1939—Aerial operations

44-9622

Series of short sketches about different aspects of the lives of the American boys, stationed in England, who man the guns on the flying fortresses and liberators over Europe. Partial contents: Nissen huts; Night before a mission; Sweating; Morale; Rest; Quitter; Leave; Freaks; Average; Combat; Letter home.

"Their manner of handling the material highlights the blood and sorrow, but it is sincere and effective. In a very real sense they open the minds and hearts of the men of the big bomber crews to the reader, and they tell some stark tales of events in action over Europe and on leave in London. The book can add a great deal to your understanding of our fighting men." W. F. Morse

+ Book Week p12 O 29 '44 110w

Booklist 41:150 Ja 15 '45

"Here is the humor and lovableness of boys doing a grueling job—told with love and insight. The book is a bit too long—saturation point comes three quarters through."

+ — Kirkus 12:363 Ag 15 '44 130w

Nation 159:534 O 28 '44 120w

"It is done factually, without slobbering. The writers, former newspaper men, flew with their subjects and lived with them on the ground. They figure, happily, that the wings the gunners earn in combat are enough to sustain them. They do not try to superimpose additional wings of literary gauze and wordy tinsel." Meyer Berger

+ N Y Times p3 O 29 '44 440w

"The book is an excellent piece of reporting and ought to be read by everybody who really wants to know what it is like to live in a camp in England. . . Sergeants Hutton and Rooney are making here an original contribution to the history of man's invasion of space, a new realm of human experience." Edmund Wilson

+ New Yorker 20:87 O 21 '44 480w

"The authors, who know their subject and write well, have given a fine description of a gunner's life. . . But the book has been written for the reader who has stayed at home. Those who have followed the war from afar will not be happier for reading this story, but they will understand better the life that is an airman's lot. The chapter on the quitter is an excellent account of the strain that motivates a man's sudden refusal to fly again. . . The simplicity, the humor and the lack of heroics which mark the many anecdotes that form the book give it a very human quality. Many readers will recognize in the Air Gunner the boy who lived next door." George Polk

+ Weekly Book Review p22 O 22 '44 360w

HUXLEY, ALDOUS LEONARD. Time must have a stop. 311p $2.75 Harper

44-7463

"Sebastian Barnack, seventeen, an exquisite and poet, is thwarted in his desire for a dress suit by his puritanical, politically radical father. From London Sebastian journeys to Florence where his Uncle Eustace, the antithesis of his father, promises the boy the evening clothes and presents him with a Degas drawing. Abruptly Uncle Eustace dies. . . Sebastian, with no clear title to the drawing, sells it and orders the clothes. . . The complications that follow, due chiefly to Sebastian's lies, are witnessed by Eustace in limbo, where consciousness expanding in time permits him to see the present war which for mortal Sebastian is still more than a decade in the future. Sebastian's troubles are resolved by a Florentine bookseller, an anti-fascist lay saint, whose ideas apparently parallel Huxley's current beliefs and prepare us for the post-

HUXLEY, A. L.—Continued
script, in which Sebastian, at thirty-two in the year 1943, makes Huxleyan reflections upon the notes in his journal." New Repub

---

"No more than in Eyeless in Gaza and in After Many a Summer Dies the Swan has Mr. Huxley in this book discovered how to fuse the form of the novel with the material of the didactic essay. The narrative, to be sure, is never dull: some of the characters, especially Uncle Eustace, are very well done, and the sequence of events concerning Sebastian is cleverly manipulated; but for the most part the people move on strings, against a backdrop we can hardly believe in. The major weakness of the book, as a novel, is that Mr. Huxley has neglected to write the essential part of it." Theodore Spencer
+ — Atlantic 174:129 S '44 650w

Reviewed by A. C. Spectorsky
Book Week p1 Ag 27 '44 2100w

Reviewed by Dorothy Hillyer
Boston Globe p17 S 13 '44 500w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 61:1025 S 6 '44 1200w

"Mr. Huxley's theology is not the most important thing, and if the young Sebastian is so beautiful and so intelligent and so loved that he ought to be spanked, that is not important either. If Mrs. Thwale is too British an idea of the 'evil woman,' that is merely amusing. And if the dead Eustace is appalled by the mistakes made by the medium who spoils all his jokes and messages, that is only part of the technique of not boring the reader. What is vastly important is that there are few novels in English in which the basic theme is as serious as it is in 'Time Must Have a Stop.' "
Commonweal 40:448 Ag 25 '44 420w

"Moving and articulate from the spiritual viewpoint as they may be, from the purely technical, writer's angle, Mr. Huxley is ill-advised in attempting to describe what goes on when Uncle Eustace meets the Trinity. . . By describing as the experiences of Eustace Barnack after death what are much more likely those of Aldous Huxley very much alive, the latter detracts from their verisimilitude, and by thus deliberately paraphrasing his own experiences, he needlessly denigrates them. Technically again, he should not draw his moral from Sebastian's note-book nor from Bruno's sayings. . . Thus this is a bad novel, because the moral, which stems magnificently out of the story of the Degas drawing, is rubbed through a hair-sieve both in the middle and at the end of the tale. Sebastian's dinner-jackets would have made a superb short story, à la hauteur of de Maupassant or even Dostoyevsky, if only Mr. Huxley could have let well alone and allowed the story itself to point its own ghastly truth, which is made amply clear by the inevitable sequence which follows on the boy's heartless, selfish, but unthinking act." Anne Freemantle
— + Commonweal 40:519 S 15 '44 1400w

"As an artisan with words as tools, Huxley has turned out a book which is of value as a literary piece, interesting for the mature, but lacking in convincing story or characters. There is pleasure in the smooth writing, the particular care with which each phrase is turned." Roy Hillbrook
+ — Current Hist 7:324 O '44 220w

"Extraordinary erudition, nasty wit, nihilism, for a prime performance which will have only a critical, intellectual audience."
Kirkus 12:263 Je 15 '44 250w

" 'Crome-ish yellow' novel will not be read by rank and file." K. T. Willis
— Library J 69:650 Ag '44 80w

"It is pleasant to be able to report that for more than a third of its way Aldous Huxley's new novel, 'Time Must Have a Stop,' is wonderful serious comedy—the liveliest, wittiest writing Huxley has done since 'Antic Hay.' But in Chapter XII the book swerves off its worldly course to become the argument for religious faith that we have learned to expect from a Huxley novel. . . But it is deeply disappointing to have once again been promised the consummation of Huxley's art and be given, instead, the consummation of his religion." Diana Trilling
+ — Nation 159:270 S 2 '44 1300w

Reviewed by George Mayberry
New Repub 111:313 S 11 '44 420w

"Though this is the first novel Aldous Huxley has published in nearly five years . . . 'Time Must Have a Stop' is cut from the same die as its predecessors, is the same wonderful and disappointing mixture of horror, erudition and farce. Highly readable and highly instructive, as most of Huxley's thirty-odd volumes have been, and with some distinctive minor triumphs in it, as there were in 'After Many a Summer Dies the Swan,' the present novel is still, it seems to me, on the road down from 'Point Counter Point.' " R. G. Davis
N Y Times p1 Ag 27 '44 1100w

"In its essentially rather dismal and dark-brown way, 'Time Must Have a Stop' is quite a brilliant performance. It is difficult, however, for Huxley to celebrate convincingly in a novel his present ideals of abnegation and withdrawal from the things of the world, just as it was for T. S. Eliot, in 'Murder in the Cathedral,' to celebrate the ideal of humility." Edmund Wilson
+ — New Yorker 20:64 S 2 '44 1950w

"In 'Time Must Have A Stop' the author makes explicit through fiction a number of the lessons that he himself has gradually been learning, and in the history of his hero, Sebastian Barnack, he roughly parallels certain stages of his own progress. But those who read for entertainment rather than edification must be informed hurriedly that Mr. Huxley's new novel is full of entertainment, and some of the carnal kind." B. R. Redman
Sat R of Lit 27:7 S 2 '44 2250w

"The book itself will certainly have a vogue. Short, pithy, with a direct and brilliant narrative line and another of those incredible Huxley women whose sensual appetites are equaled only by their beauty. It is undoubtedly one of the best works of fiction to appear this season. The fact that it is also a piece of mystical claptrap should not deter the seeker after worth while literary art." Renee Forbes
+ — Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 27 '44 650w

"The mixture of deplorable characters and homiletic essays is deliberately artificial, packed with wit, rarely dull. Its basic theme is the Huxleyan conviction that world reform must begin in the individual soul, and that men may enter 'the Divine Ground' of eternity only by a regime of selflessness and contemplation. Nor should man imagine that death will save him the trouble of choosing between flesh and spirit. Author Huxley's alarming notion is that the same choice will confront all men in the hereafter."
Time 44:90 Ag 28 '44 1150w

"Aldous Huxley's personal plan for world betterment, like many before it, can hardly achieve immediate results. But it is here sincerely and eloquently stated, and this book is guaranteed not only to give pleasure but to stimulate much thought and discussion." Jennings Rice
+ Weekly Book Review p3 Ag 27 '44 1300w

Wis Lib Bul 40:147 N '44

"Time Must Have a Stop is a clumsy failure as fiction; and much of its mystic message is incomprehensible and even a little bit silly. Aldous Huxley has found his own peculiar path to paradise, but most readers who may try to follow him will be certain to lose their way." Orville Prescott
— Yale R n s 34:189 autumn '44 180w

HUXLEY, JULIAN SORELL. On living in a revolution. 242p map $2.50 Harper [12s 6d Chatto]

304 Social sciences 44-4866

"The essays which Julian Huxley has published in this volume fall into two groups: those dealing with his special subject, biology, and those which tackle the question of the meaning of the upheaval of our time. All were composed during the war and all but two have previously been published. The papers of a specialized nature, 'Darwinism Today,' 'Animal Pests in Wartime,' and so on, written in Professor Huxley's remarkable lucid style and related constantly to his picture of a whole world in process of evolution, are timely and most readable." N Y Times

---

"A brilliant and brief summary of progress in scientific thought on evolution since Darwin's day." Sterling North

+ Book Week p2 Je 4 '44 360w
Booklist 40:371 Jl 1 '44
Foreign Affairs 23:6 O '44 20w
Kirkus 12:160 Ap 1 '44 170w

"Needed only in libraries that buy liberally." K. T. Willis

Library J 69:402 My 1 '44 70w

"His thought, as always, is clear, compressed, and stimulating. Some lighter pieces, like that which explodes the 'racial' myth, enliven the more serious argument." A. S. W.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 My 17 '44 200w
Nation 159:305 S 9 '44 270w

Reviewed by H. W. Ehrmann

New Repub 111:140 Jl 31 '44 300w

"Professor Huxley's picture of the new world is a genial and cheerful one, presented always with moderation and good temper. But his reflections on democracy and revolution would provide a greater stimulus to the hard thinking he desires had he shown a greater awareness of the existence of the hard questions." Byron Dexter

+ N Y Times p7 Je 4 '44 1200w

Reviewed by Edmund Wilson

New Yorker 20:77 S 16 '44 850w
Scientific Bk Club R 15:3 Jl '44 420w
Time 43:100 Je 19 '44 280w
Times [London] Lit Sup p217 My 6 '44 1300w

Reviewed by H. M. Parshley

Weekly Book Review p6 Je 25 '44 850w
Wis Lib Bul 40:125 O '44

HYATT, DELWYN, and DODSON, BENNETT M. Mathematics for navigators. 106p $1.25 McGraw

510 Mathematics. Navigation 44-3135

Reviews arithmetic, algebra, logarithms, geometry and trigonometry with a view to aiding students of navigation. Index.

Booklist 40:336 Je 1 '44
Library J 69:463 My 15 '44 20w

HYDE, MRS NINA (VERHOVSKOY), and HYDE, FILLMORE. Russia, then and always. 331p maps $3 Coward-McCann

947 Russia—History 44-6878

A popular history of Russia from earliest times to the present, written with the object of explaining Russia and Russians to American readers. Index.

"The earliest chapters are the least distorted. Heavy retouching and prettifying begin after Peter the Great. But from 1917 on, the book becomes a travesty of historical writing, abounding in misstatements of fact and detail, substituting for the historian's balance only hatred of Lenin and admiration for Stalin, without any understanding of either. . . The style is pleasant and interesting—evidently the product of a good deal of care. We need a popular and readable interpretation of Russian history, and even from this one the average reader could learn a good deal—for example on the background of the Polish question. Apparently the authors intended to make a contribution to American understanding of our great neighbor and ally. It's a pity their historical method was not as good as their motives." William Card

— + Book Week p8 Ag 13 '44 320w

"To discern the part which each of the authors has had in the writing, is not difficult. Mrs. Hyde, who came to this country from her native Russia at the age of 21, brings to the collaboration her knowledge and understanding of the Russian land and people, while her husband leaves on the book his mark as a skillful and experienced editor. Thanks to this happy combination, 'Russia Then and Always' avoids a number of pitfalls that usually beset books of this kind." J. J.

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ag 11 '44 400w

"This is a book for youth, easy to read and authoritative enough to give the right impressions. There is an Appendix giving the pronunciation of Russian names and an index. Not in the least scholarly, but useful for quick survey." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 69:602 Jl '44 80w

"Because it is inevitably selective in its choice of material and because it is animated by a very definite and controversial viewpoint, it would be a dangerous book to recommend as an authoritative guide to Russia's national story. Yet it is a useful book in so far as it corrects and counterbalances some exaggerated negative impressions of Russia before the revolution." W. H. Chamberlin

+ — N Y Times p16 Ag 13 '44 750w
Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 8 '44 750w

"Some very curious interpretations of history result from hewing so closely to the line that Russia has always been the innocent victim of the wiles of her enemies. As the record is brought down to the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, moreover, this interpretation is sometimes based on omissions and a misreading of the facts that result in a highly colored account of what actually took place. Such an approach to the history of Russia—or to that of any country—seems doubly unfortunate at a time when a more realistic appraisal would actually be so much more conducive to real understanding. . . As already suggested the most valid contribution which this book does make to our understanding of modern Russia is found in those chapters which tell of the persistent military campaigns. . . From this point of view 'Russia Then and Always' succeeds in large measure in substantiating the interpretation of Russian history implicit in its title." F. R. Dulles

+ — Weekly Book Review p11 Ag 6 '44 950w

HYLAND, JAMES ALOYSIUS. The dove flies South. 274p $2.50 Bruce pub.

43-17235

"Behind 'race riots' there is often deliberate propaganda, behind the propaganda, prejudice, and behind the prejudice, deep-rooted misunderstanding. In order to get at the radical evil, Father Hyland has spent a long period in the preparation and the writing of a story which brings the reader face to face with one of our gravest social problems—the Negro question—and also suggests an approach to the solution." Cath World

---

Boston Globe p17 Je 7 '44 80w

"It is a fast-moving, honest tale, and it may well help many a reader to attain a viewpoint more wise and just than he held before."

+ Cath World 158:411 Ja '44 90w

"Once George becomes black, both his experiences and his reactions are furnished with the utmost validity. A scene at a Negro bar is written so perfectly that it deserves separate publication as a story or vignette. Having said this, however, I am compelled to add that what we have is a fairy tale which we are asked to take seriously. Not the least of the remarkable things about this book is that a Catholic author, implicitly pleading for justice based on ethics and morality, sees strangely fit to make his Catholic priest just and good, but his Protestant minister a hypocrite and a scoundrel." Francis Downing

+ — Commonweal 40:234 Je 23 '44 430w

I

IDELL, ALBERT EDWARD. Bridge to Brooklyn. 385p $2.75 Holt
44-9751

Further chronicles of the Rogers family, first met in Centennial Summer. In this volume they move from Philadelphia to Brooklyn and the climax of the tale is reached with the opening of Brooklyn Bridge in 1883.

Reviewed by J. N. North
Book Week p17 N 19 '44 550w

Booklist 41:140 Ja 1 '45

"Without the help of plot or suspense Mr. Idell has contrived to make both events and characters engrossing; in some ways the narrative is more real than that of Life With Father, because the author has veered away from successive climaxes and the too bright remark."
+ Cath World 160:379 Ja '45 140w

"The plot is tenuous—the characters are real enough—but it isn't as appealing as the earlier book."
Kirkus 12:411 S 15 '44 190w

Reviewed by E. F. Walbridge
Library J 69:935 N 1 '44 80w

"'Bridge to Brooklyn' has as much plot and unity as an eighteenth-century English novel. Its incidents are not always played for what they're worth, and the main love story is curiously without flavor. But whatever its faults, it is a genuine and happy book that many a war-wearied reader will take to his heart." Nona Balakian
+ — N Y Times p7 N 5 '44 650w

"A sequel to 'Centennial Summer' which will undoubtedly warm the hearts of thousands of readers who love a novel that combines gentle nostalgia with a lively chronicle of family life and at the same time offers no strain on the mind."
+ New Yorker 20:98 N 11 '44 140w

Springf'd Republican p4d N 19 '44 390w

"What you get in 'Bridge to Brooklyn' is like what you used to buy in an old-fashioned grocery—full weight, unadulterated, untrademarked, right out of the bin and the barrel. Mr. Idell gives you American life before it was dehydrated and sealed in cellophane, with labels precise as chemical formulas. And his style, in no derogatory sense, is a corner grocer's—neighborly, unstudied and unhurried. He writes in his shirt-sleeves and his groceries stick to the ribs." Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p5 N 5 '44 750w

ILIN, M. pseud. See Marshak, I. I.

INCE, EDWARD LINDSAY. Ordinary differential equations. new ed 558p $3.75 Dover publications, 31 E. 27th st, N.Y. 16

517.2 Differential equations

"A photographic reproduction of the English edition of 1927, making available at one third of the price of the original edition, a work that has become a classic on ordinary differential equations in both real and complex variables." N Y New Tech Bks

Library J 69:814 O 1 '44 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:27 Ap '44

IND, ALLISON. Bataan, the judgment seat; the saga of the Philippine command of the U.S. Army air force, May 1941 to May 1942. 395p $3.50 Macmillan

940.542 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American. World war, 1939—Philippine Islands 44-2570

"Lieutenant Colonel Ind went to the Philippines in April 1941 for service as an intelligence officer with the Far East airforce. He had done inspection work throughout what was to become the southwest Pacific and East Indies theater of war and was back in the Philippines when the blow fell. He was sent from Bataan to Mindanao fifteen hours before MacArthur left, and followed MacArthur to Australia carrying the papers and records of the Philippine command. His story is an eyewitness account of practically everything that happened in those tragic weeks early in 1942." Christian Century

Reviewed by Sterling North
Book Week p2 Mr 26 '44 270w

Booklist 40:267 Ap 1 '44

Christian Century 61:370 Mr 22 '44 100w

Reviewed by W. P. Myers
Churchman 158:19 My 1 '44 250w

"The story is not only realistic, it makes the author a real human being despite his commission. It is one of the worthwhile war books."
+ Current Hist 6:354 Ap '44 100w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:659 Jl '44 40w

"Overlong—and overdue as far as timeliness—but interestingly fresh in presentation."
+ — Kirkus 12:54 F 1 '44 160w

"Ind does not pull his punches. He gives an unvarnished recital of over-confidence, lack of preparation and criminal neglect. Here is an 'inside' story, written with the authority of one who is as excellent a writer as he was a valorous fighter. And the beauty of his book lies in that he transforms Bataan into more than a symbol. Bataan becomes a fact—as large as life, as bitter as death." C. P. Romulo
+ N Y Times p6 Mr 26 '44 500w

"I have been unable to get through this book, and I don't see how anybody could. One wonders how it came to be so bad. One gets from it the same impression that the thing to be told has been overlaid by a non-conducting layer of language that one gets from ghost-written books. Even when Lieutenant Colonel Ind is telling how he nearly got shot, or crushed by a falling plane, his story sounds quite unreal. Yet the author is apparently a writer." Edmund Wilson
— New Yorker 20:91 Mr 25 '44 550w

"The most complete document to date on the Philippine campaign is Lt. Col. Ind's book. The author is generous with his praise. . . At the same time, he is fearless in his recountal of the mistakes, the quibbling, the lack of foresight that contributed so heavily to the loss of the Philippines and, through that disaster to the loss of Singapore and the Indies." Catherine Porter
+ Pacific Affairs 17:243 Je '44 140w

Reviewed by G. K. Moriarty
Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 19 '44 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p422 S 2 '44 90w

"'Bataan: The Judgment Seat' appears to be a collection of hastily scribbled notes which have been assembled as paragraphs and chapters. Only in the last ten pages of the book does Colonel Ind write clearly and simply. In these pages he describes movingly the tragic death of his close friend, Brigadier General George. Throughout the other part of the book, however, he affects a stream-of-consciousness style. This stream is usually only an irritating trickle. The book deals so frankly with the American military disaster in the Philippines, however, that not even its choppy style, incorrect English and ambiguous and trite expressions can obscure the candid and devastating reporting it contains." George Polk
+ — Weekly Book Review p3 Mr 19 '44 1100w

Wis Lib Bul 40:109 Jl '44

INFIELD, HENRIK F. Cooperative living in Palestine. 192p il $3 Dryden

335 Communism—Palestine. Agriculture, Cooperative
44-47128

"During his stay in Palestine, the author, a refugee sociologist from Vienna, made a study of the kvutzah, one of the most progressive forms of rural settlement. He defines it as a rural producers' coöperative which practises coöperation in processing, marketing and consumption. All economic as well as social functions in a kvutzah (the Hebrew term means 'group') are strictly cooperative. Whoever joins this sort of settlement cedes all his possessions to the group; when he leaves it, he takes with him only that which is on his person. Land, buildings, machinery and other assets belong to national agencies, such as the Jewish National Fund." New Repub

New Repub 111:877 D 25 '44 180w

"The material as presented by Dr. Infield will interest all readers concerned with experiments in communal living." Hans Kohn

+ N Y Times p36 D 3 '44 600w

INGRAHAM, REG. First fleet; the story of the U.S. Coast guard at war; introd. by Frank Knox. 310p il $3 Bobbs

940.545 U.S. Coast guard. World war, 1939— Naval operations 44-2445

Story of the United States Coast guard and its place in the wars of this country from its founding in 1790 to the present. Emphasis is placed on the incidents of the present war, and the various types of Coast guard service of today. The author is navy correspondent of Time magazine. No index.

"The book is crammed with information and detail, and with the deeds of the seldom-sung guardians of our shore lines." Dorsey McCarthy

+ Book Week p8 Mr 26 '44 270w

Booklist 40:281 Ap 15 '44

"The first adult biography of this service, adequately handled."

+ Kirkus 12:15 Ja 1 '44 140w

"Mr. Ingraham tells his stories with a maximum economy of words and brilliantly brings off his effects. It is no disrespect to him to say that, though this is by far the best book of the type, there simply is not space in it to enter upon the human details that bring to life such an account of a single and singular Coast Guard adventure as Lawrence Thompson gave us in 'The Navy Hunts the C.G.R. 3070.' " Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat R of Lit 27:31 My 13 '44 500w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown

Social Studies 35:375 D '44 300w

Reviewed by P. J. Searles

Weekly Book Review p12 Ap 16 '44 800w

INMAN, SAMUEL GUY, and CASTANEDA, CARLOS EDUARDO. History of Latin America for schools. 442p il maps $2.20 Macmillan

980 Latin America—History 44-5705

Textbook on Latin America for high schools, prepared by a North American lecturer and specialist in Latin American affairs, who is now associate professor of history in the University of Texas. Contains maps, discussion topics, projects, chapter bibliographies, and index.

Booklist 41:16 S '44

Current Hist 7:229 S '44 50w

"In presenting a readable and useful volume for students Samuel Guy Inman and C. E. Castañeda try to show that the study of Latin-American history and culture will bring a new appreciation of our southern neighbors and a desire to develop further mutual understanding between the Americas. In this they have, in the opinion of the present reviewer, been highly successful." E. L. Furness

+ School & Society 60:444 D 30 '44 650w

"Inman and Castañeda do not seek to attract the reader by lurid and gaudy tales nor by making him feel superior. They appeal to reason and use vigorous writing in the effort to inform and to promote a neighborly attitude." Wayne Alvord

+ Social Educ 8:284 O '44 600w

Social Studies 35:287 O '44 60w

"The book is written from a thoroughly idealistic point of view and in these days of 'realistic' politics it is refreshing, but the teacher using this text would do well to point out continually that Latin American relations with the United States is not, as one eminent Latin American has put it, a problem that can be solved once and for all; rather, it is a program that must be continually worked at. There are wide differences between us in small, material ways and if the student is not prepared for these, subsequent travel or business in Latin America may blind him to the more important, mutually shared convictions, that Doctors Inman and Castañeda have made the underlying theme of this fine book." C. G. Motten

+ Social Studies 36:39 Ja '45 950w

INNIS, MRS MARY E. (QUAYLE). Stand on a rainbow. 290p $2.50 Duell

A44-5768

Story of one year in the life of a Canadian family consisting of father, mother, and three extremely lively children. Two months of each year is spent at the country cottage and the year begins and ends with the summer trips, with the city winter chronicled between.

" 'Stand on a Rainbow' has in it [a] lyric substratum overlaid with a mature realism and leavened throughout with a delicious humor." J. N. North

+ Book Week p4 Ap 30 '44 360w

Booklist 40:318 My 15 '44

"Though war and tragedy are remote from it, the book is really a wartime gift to the thousands of mothers who today are trying to maintain such jewel-like homes in a hostile world, with their subconscious all the time fixed on the Chopin Etude they intend to master, and the study of Plato which they must finish, and so on. It is also another answer to what is wrong with Nazism. Such homes should be the norm throughout the world. A word must be added for the author's unfailing humor—a quality much too rare in Canadian writing." Eleanor McNaught

+ Canadian Forum 23:238 Ja '44 370w

"Gentle, tenuous, a trifle dulcet."

+ Kirkus 12:125 Mr 15 '44 100w

INSTITUTE FOR RELIGIOUS STUDIES. Religion and the world order. See Johnson, F. E., ed.

INTERNATIONAL cyclopedia of music and musicians; ed. by Oscar Thompson. 3d ed rev & enl 2380p $15 Dodd

780.3 Music—Dictionaries. Musicians 44-5261

"Oscar Thompson's encyclopedia has now reached its third edition. . . The new edition is somewhat more up-to-date, a few earlier errors are corrected and a limited number of new biographical sketches are included. It must make its way, however, not by virtue of its revision but on the merits of the original issue. It remains a useful encyclopedia with some unsatisfactory features, among them a lack of discipline and consistency in organization of text matter, a poor proportioning of space among both subject and biographical entries, inadequate cross-referencing and a bibliography which appears to have been hastily organized." Subscription Bks Bul

"Subscription Books Bulletin for April 1939 reviewed the first edition [Book Review Digest, 1939] and recommended the book for purchase. With some qualification, that recommendation can be renewed, for the current edition contains a generous supply of interesting, not-too-technical information; is, on the whole, accurate; and contains a number of provocative discussions. . . Thompson's International Cyclopedia is useful rather because of its general comprehensiveness and the variety of its contributors than because of its plan or structure. Practicing musicians and laymen will find it helpful but scholars will justly be dissatisfied with it. Small libraries having INTERNATIONAL cyclopedia of music—Cont. an earlier edition and only modest resources for specialized reference works will scarcely feel justified in acquiring this latest edition because of the comparatively small amount of addition and revision it contains. Larger libraries or those with extensive reference collections will probably want to purchase it. With the foregoing qualifications, the International Cyclopedia of Music and Musicians, 1944 edition, is recommended."

+ — Subscription Bks Bul 15:47 O '44 700w

INTERNATIONAL LABOR OFFICE. Co-operative organisations and post-war relief. 174p maps pa $1 The office [pa 4s King]

334 Cooperative societies. World war, 1939— Civilian relief L44-64

"Immediately the military phase of the battle against the axis is won the allies will be faced with another, that of providing relief for countless millions in Europe, the Near East and Asia. . . It is the problem posed by this colossal need which is considered in [this book]." Springf'd Republican

"A notable contribution toward the much-discussed problems of post-armistice relief. . . As far as the coöperatives' possible rôle in post-armistice relief work is concerned, the report is somewhat unsatisfactory." K. E. Knorr
+ — Am Pol Sci R 38:597 Je '44 600w

Reviewed by J. P. Warbasse
Ann Am Acad 234:134 Jl '44 550w

Reviewed by E. M. Cohen
Pol Sci Q 59:461 S '44 950w

Reviewed by H. W. Cross
Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 30 '44 850w

INTERNATIONAL SOCIETY OF LEATHER TRADES' CHEMISTS. British section. Emulsion technology; theoretical and applied; including the symposium on technical aspects of emulsions. 290p il $5 Chemical pub. co.

660 Emulsions. Chemistry, Technical 44-2175

"A reissue of Technical Aspects of Emulsions, published in 1934 for the British section of the International Society of Leather Trades' Chemists. Three new chapters by American specialists have been added. These include manufacturing methods and formulas for various commercial emulsions, including drugs, beverages, foods, polishes and paints." N Y New Tech Bks

"The statements of the three new contributors do not appear to justify the claims on the jacket that the book 'discusses the new developments in emulsions,' and contains a 'comprehensive list of commercial emulsifying agents.' It is a pity that the ten-year-old papers were not brought up to date before being reprinted, for this would have greatly increased the value of the book." Jerome Alexander
Chem & Met Eng 51:195 Mr '44 650w
Library J 69:118 F 1 '44 50w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:6 Ja '44

IRISH, WILLIAM, pseud. See Woolrich, C.

IRVIN, GEORGE ELLIS. Aircraft instruments. 2d ed 607p il $5 McGraw

629.135 Aeronautical instruments 44-3015

"Additions and revisions to the late Mr. Irvin's widely used text, done by the staff of the New York School of Aviation under the direction of J. Richard Whitman. Emphasis on exposition of electrical instruments; all types of aircraft instruments described include both navigation and general field instruments; fundamentals of their construction and operation and methods of installing, using, testing, maintaining and repairing them." (Library J) Index. For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1942.

Booklist 40:287 Ap 15 '44

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:305 Ap 1 '44 80w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:39 Jl '44

IRVING, WASHINGTON. Western journals of Washington Irving; ed. and annotated by John Francis McDermott. 201p il maps $3.50 Univ. of Okla. press

917.7 West—Description and travel 44-40342

"In the autumn of 1832, Irving, just returned to America after spending 17 years abroad, decided to see more of his own country. On the voyage across the Atlantic, he had become acquainted with the irrepressible young Count de Pourtalès and his English tutor, Charles Joseph Latrobe. . . They were all delighted when they fell in with Henry Ellsworth, a Connecticut man who had just been made a member of the Indian Commission. Ellsworth invited them to go with him to a region that everyone then thought of as the Far West—Kansas and Oklahoma. The notes in the Journals end at a day's journey below the mouth of the Arkansas. All together, they cover the period between September 3 and November 17 and record impressions of what was in 1832, in a large measure, new and wild country." Christian Science Monitor

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Book Week p6 D 10 '44 470w

"The truth is that the West was too big for Irving. The 'filigree work' of this polished, sophisticated littérateur, fresh from Europe did not fit its vastness and simplicity. Irving was a product of his literary times and could not avoid comparing the American prairies with the scenery of the Old World. Nevertheless, at their best, his Journals show that he had a real reportorial instinct, a keen eye for significant details, and an intense interest in people." W. K. R.
+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 D 8 '44 350w

Reviewed by F. O. Matthiessen
Nation 160:22 Ja 6 '45 270w

Reviewed by Eudora Welty
N Y Times p3 D 24 '44 1200w
Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 21 '45 650w

"When Irving came to write the formal account of his travels, he couched it in the style of his Father Knickerbocker history, and much of the savor was lost. But his original jottings are like glints of sunlight on the unspoiled rivers of the young land he describes."
+ Time 44:87 D 25 '44 650w

IRWIN, WILLIAM ANDREW. Problem of Ezekiel; an inductive study. 344p pa $3 Univ. of Chicago press

224.4 Bible. Old Testament—Ezekiel A44-632

"Critical study of the Old Testament has done surprisingly little to disturb the traditional view of the unity of the book of Ezekiel, the chronological sequence of its prophecies substantially as arranged, and the accuracy of the datings scattered through the text. Scholars as thorough in their research and as diverse in their views on other topics as Smend, Driver, Bewer and J. M. P. Smith have been in general agreement on these points. Ten years of study, stimulated by directing the studies of many advanced students, have brought Irwin to conclusions differing widely from these and from his own earlier opinions. With characteristic modesty he presents his results not as ultimate and demonstrated solutions of the problem but as a contribution, supporting them by a thorough exhibition and analysis of the evidence upon which they rest." Christian Century

"Even readers rusty (to put it mildly) in their Hebrew will find his argument intelligible, since all quotations in the language of the original (and in the unpointed text) are followed by the corresponding English. To this reader, the analysis and rearrangement here given and the setting of each section against its appropriate historical background make of the whole a much more enlightening and inspiring book."

+ Christian Century 61:530 Ap 26 '44 180w

"Naturally the volume is critical. Hebrew and Greek abound; nevertheless the accompanying translations and explanations are so clear that any one who wishes may easily follow the line of argument. . . This volume is the threshold to a new appreciation of the book of Ezekiel." I. G. Matthews

+ Crozer Q 21:182 Ap '44 550w

"Shows on every page the evidences of scholarly effort of a high order. The author has brought to the discussion of the subject a thorough knowledge of the textual and critical factors relevant to it. The handling of the literary problems arrests attention because of his independence and incisiveness. For these reasons, if for no other, the work renders distinguished service to students and scholars. It is easy, of course, for a caviler to find fault freely both with Irwin's employment of his method and with his conclusions. Some of the criticisms leveled at Hölscher's work can, mutatis mutandis, be directed against Irwin's." W. R. Taylor

+ — J Religion 24:289 O '44 650w

IVES, VERNON. Russia; il. by Rafaello Busoni. (Land and peoples ser) 25p $1 Holiday

914.7 Russia—Juvenile literature

Brief sketch of Russian history, with emphasis on Russia since the Revolution, to be used as a background book in grades five to eight.

Booklist 40:167 Ja 1 '44

"Short, unprejudiced books on the Soviet Republic, written for children, but not over-simplified, have been a real need. Vernon Ives helps to supply that need in this arresting book. He has chosen his material skilfully, touching a few high points in the history of the Russian giant, showing what different sections of the vast area are like, telling what the people do. Rafaello Busoni's lively pictures give color and drama to the informing text." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 20:44 Ja '44 80w

"Not much can be said in twenty-five pages, but it will arouse curiosity and a desire for further knowledge." D. M. MacDonald

Library J 69:73 Ja 15 '44 60w

J

JACKEY, DAVID FREDERICK, and BARLOW, MELVIN L. The craftsman prepares to teach. 184p $2 Macmillan

607 Industrial arts—Study and teaching. Teaching 44-3141

"Written for craftsmen and others in industry who have had little or no previous experience as teachers and who are being called upon to train workers for many different industrial occupations. It explains how to plan and organize the subject matter to meet the desired objectives of a course and describes the basic techniques of successful teaching." School & Society

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 69:205 Mr 1 '44 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:12 Ja '44

School & Society 59:208 Mr 18 '44 60w

JACKH, ERNST. The rising crescent; Turkey yesterday, today, and tomorrow; il. with phot. 278p $3.50 Farrar

956 Turkey 44-6306

"Before the first World War [Dr Jackh] was the personal envoy to Turkey of the German Foreign Minister. . . He left Germany in 1933, became a British citizen. . . At present he is Professor of Public Law at Columbia University. . . Dr. Jackh's central purpose is not to forecast particular events but to give the reader the information about six centuries of Turkish life that is necessary for an understanding of the Turkey with which we shall have to work after the war, whether or not she enters the fighting. He disclaims the intention of writing a formal history, or of offering an exhaustive book of reference. His aim is to sketch a portrait, making clear the essentials of Turkish character." N Y Times

Reviewed by M. W. Fodor

Book Week p2 Jl 30 '44 500w

Booklist 41:39 O 1 '44

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 Je '44

Kirkus 12:226 My 15 '44 200w

Reviewed by J. C. Shipman

Library J 69:554 Je 15 '44 130w

"The story which Dr. Jackh tells is engrossing, and his frank special pleading for Turkey disarming and persuasive. In the cosmopolitan frame in which the book is set his British citizenship seems appropriate, since one of the great traditions of British scholarship—from which we ourselves have often profited, as in the work of James Bryce—is just this dedication to a 'second' country which gives the direction to a lifetime of sympathetic study and interpretation. Surely, the more widely this tradition is honored the sooner we shall have the sound foundations for the one world. Dr. Jackh's book is in this tradition." Byron Dexter

+ N Y Times p3 Jl 30 '44 1650w

"[Dr Jackh's] unique background should yield a valuable book. Unfortunately, 'The Rising Crescent' misses the mark. . . There are valuable sections in the book. The sketch of the three Turkeys is useful to an understanding of the origins and character of modern Turkey. . . But when you come to the outbreak of World War II, go slow." Kendall Foss

— + Sat R of Lit 27:20 Ag 26 '44 750w

Social Studies 33:336 N '44 20w

"This is an interesting and illuminating volume. It is well written and the flow of the sentences is not materially impeded when the syntax gives an occasional reminder that English is not the author's mother tongue. The treatment seems unduly discursive at times, and the picture presented does not always appear consistent." Leonidas Dodson

+ — Social Studies 35:381 D '44 360w

"So much good work has gone into this interesting book that it would be ungenerous to call attention to certain understandable omissions, or to comment on the relatively few errors. The only important criticism one might make is with respect to some of Dr. Jackh's interpretations, together with the fact that his enthusiastic praise of modern Turkey almost amounts to a panegyric." C. P. Grant

+ — Survey G 33:395 S '44 500w

"His book is two things. It is a diplomatic history of that country, which once had one of the greatest empires Europe ever has known, and it is also a frank and undisguised attempt to paint Turkey in the best possible light at this stage in history when belligerent nations think none too kindly of the few neutrals. There can be little quarrel with the success Mr. Jackh has achieved in the first of his two missions. But there will be argument aplenty over whether Turkey's shield should be as shiny clear as it is when Mr. Jackh gets through polishing it." Robert St. John

+ — Weekly Book Review p8 Ag 6 '44 900w

JACKSON, ADA (PREBLE) (MRS THOMAS JACKSON). Behold the Jew [the Greenwood prize poem for 1943]. 24p $1 Macmillan [1s Poetry soc, inc, 33 Portman sq, London, W. 1]

821 44-9128

"This is a simple and moving poem on the Jewish people by a Gentile Englishwoman, a journalist by profession, who has won two national poetry prizes in England. . . She takes her stand firmly on the unity of the human tradition and the brotherhood of man, and pleads her cause passionately in the name of human justice and mercy." Weekly Book Review

JACKSON, ADA—Continued

---

Book Week p9 Ag 13 '44 70w

"For the most part in simple four-foot measure, charged with sincere emotion, and clear as a flute, 'Behold the Jew' is the kind of thing we should like to have written." P. P. S.
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 O 28 '44 500w

Reviewed by Marianne Moore
New Repub 111:499 O 16 '44 600w

"This is a strangely moving poem, largely because, out of an honest compassion, Miss Jackson has written on a theme which, one suspects, will not wholly warm the hearts of those whose cause she espouses so heartily. Although she calls the proud roll of Jewish names famous in many times and many countries, she turns from these figures to pity again with words which make this reviewer uncomfortable." E. M. B.
Springf'd Republican p8 Ag 24 '44 220w

"She writes with directness, sincerity and emotional force, and her work has clarity and felicity of phrasing and a strong and varied rhythmic quality. Her presentation of her subject is unpretentious, lively and vigorous." G. R. Wilson
+ Weekly Book Review p6 S 3 '44 300w

JACKSON, CHARLES REGINALD. Lost weekend. 244p $2.50 Farrar
44-1290

Psychological study of a drunkard. The actual time covered is five days, but in those five days the story of a man's life is told. Don Birnam, a sensitive, charming, and well-read man, left alone for a few days by his brother, struggles with his overwhelming desire for alcohol, succumbs to it, and in the resulting prolonged agony, goes over much of his life up to and including the long weekend.

"The problem of 'casting' Birnam was that of establishing in the reader a sympathetic interest. This interest is won because Birnam is portrayed as a man not himself, but an inexplicable creature on a five days' binge. . . Birnam is a complex imaginative person, and it is his own sophisticated and tormented commentary upon his periodical bottle-crazes that brings him and the reader together in sympathy. Thus The Lost Weekend escapes the dreary fate of being another novel about a misfit in whom the reader can take only a clinical interest." Gorham Munson
+ Atlantic 173:129 Mr '44 360w

"It's written with complete lack of literary pretensions; yet Jackson's sheer ability to lick the problems of flashback, stream of consciousness, mind wandering, twisted recollection and alcoholic delirium is spectacular. There has never, to my knowledge, been a book like this. Its frankness is sometimes shocking but never aimed to shock. The aim, and it is unerring, is always for accuracy and the complete truth." A. C. Spectorsky
+ Book Week p4 Ja 30 '44 1100w
Booklist 40:251 Mr 15 '44

Reviewed by Diana Trilling
Nation 158:195 F 12 '44 90w

" 'The Lost Weekend,' on the documentary level, could no doubt earn an M.A. in psychology from an amiable university. . . Don Birnam is an utterly plausible character; his infantilism, his delusions, his tastes and his affections, his needs, his rationalizations—all exhibit a scrupulosity of observation or a brilliance of intuition in the author which is admirable. . . But in 'The Lost Weekend,' for all the author's care and in spite of occasional patches of excitement, one reaches a point very soon where the sickness of Don Birnam becomes tiresome because it tells us nothing about the sickness of his world." Mark Schorer
+ — New Repub 110:154 Ja 31 '44 390w

"Charles Jackson has made the most compelling gift to the literature of addiction since De Quincey. His character is a masterpiece of psychological precision. His narrative method—and his subjective material—combine terrifyingly in a writing technique that transmutes medical case history into art. It is modern art." Philip Wylie
+ N Y Times p7 Ja 30 '44 600w

"The book has so much that is good that it ought to have been three times as good and a really satisfactory piece of fiction. As a whole, it is rather formless, and the writing, though fluent and smooth, is full of repetitions and tautologies. . . The flashbacks into his early life supplied by his wandering memories become, finally, rather boring because they have not been arranged to build up as a progressive exposition. . . We had expected something crucial to happen; we had expected Don Birnam to take some new turn for either the better or the worse; and we are simply left depressed by the impasse in which he seems likely to spend his life." Edmund Wilson
+ — New Yorker 19:78 F 5 '44 1050w

"If it takes a stout heart to go through this novel, it nevertheless has a compelling fascination. The author has taken this unlikely subject and has made something of a masterpiece of it, a book so powerful and understanding that many readers will find themselves riveted to their chairs until the end. It is a mystery story and a horror story and a revelation of the forces that can move a man, who like tens of thousands of our unhappy fellow beings, are doomed to live as if followed by all the were-wolves and demons that the mind can conjure. It is a journey into fear, into the abyss." Harrison Smith
+ Sat R of Lit 27:5 Ja 29 '44 750w
Time 43:102 F 28 '44 330w

" 'The Lost Weekend' is as unusual a novel as is likely to be published all year. . . You would have said this was an impossible book to write, but Charles Jackson, with considerable skill, has blended one man's aspirations and degradations into a tale that is by turns horrifying and curiously moving. . . Many of the episodes in 'The Lost Weekend' would stand up by themselves as nearly perfect short stories. An interlude in the alcoholic ward of a hospital affords a glimpse into a bizarre world. And for sheer suspense there is the drunkard's ridiculous attempt to commit 'a perfect crime' by stealing a purse in a cafe." Herbert Kupferberg
+ Weekly Book Review p4 Ja 30 '44 850w

"This book may be in a sense a technical stunt, but it has a gruesome fascination, done with insight and terrible knowledge." Orville Prescott
+ Yale R n s 33:xii spring '44 140w

JACKSON, ELIZABETH. The faith and fire within us; an American credo. 180p $2 Univ. of Minn.

917.3 U.S.—Civilization. American literature. English literature A44-4502

"This book is about the poetry and the prose that have, through several centuries, added excitement to the philosophy of political freedom. It is specifically about the great words that have added excitement to the Anglo-American effort to work out a society that can do justice to all while doing justice to each. There is, as Miss Jackson points out, a sharp and disturbing contrast between the ringing phrases of our tradition of idealism and the headlines in the daily paper: '. . . we are much, much nobler in the anthologies than in the newspapers.'. . Miss Jackson has made it clear that political freedom depends upon individual and institutional characteristics that are not always labeled as political. Wisdom about such political devices as taxation and voting belong in the tradition. But so does wisdom about work, about education, about individual and group courage, about social reform, about anger against injustice, and about peace." Sat R of Lit

---

Booklist 41:76 N 1 '44

"The ability of the author to analyze motives and statements, while completely en rapport with the poetic urge, makes her writing sound." P. P. S.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 O 27 '44 350w

Reviewed by B. W. Overstreet
Sat R of Lit 27:13 O 28 '44 500w

JACKSON, GEORGE PULLEN. White and Negro spirituals. 362p il $5.50 Augustin

784.4 Folk songs, American. Negro spirituals 44-3923

A study of American religious folk-songs, "their life span and kinship, tracing 200 years of untrammeled song making and singing among our country folk, with 116 songs as sung by both races." (Subtitle)

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 61:497 Ap 19 '44 1250w

"Like its predecessors, Dr. Jackson's new book is convincing because it is scholarly and thoughtful." J. T. Howard
+ New Eng Q 17:332 Je '44 300w

"Of general interest is Mr. Jackson's study of the religious and social backgrounds of the folk hymn singing tradition in America. I, for one, found this fascinating reading and judge it to be a major contribution, in both matter and method, to the study of our American folksong. It makes manifest, too, how little we know, for all our collections, about the history of American popular music, both religious and secular." Horace Reynolds
+ N Y Times p24 Ap 23 '44 300w

JACKSON, JOHN HAMPDEN. Jean Jaurès; his life and work. 204p $4.50 Norton [12s 6d Allen, G]

B or 92 Jaurès, Jean·Léon A43-1389

Biography of the French statesman, with an interpretation of his work and contribution to history. This first biography in English describes in full the effects upon the future of French history of Jaurès' murder on August 1, 1914. "Mr. Jackson concentrates . . . on the work of Jaurès as the main maker of the modern French Socialist party, as the harmonizer of genius who, for a brief period, held together such men and embodied traditions as Vaillant, Guesde, Sembat, as well as influencing such old allies as Millerand and Briand, such old enemies as Barrès." (Times [London] Lit Sup) Short bibliography. Index.

"A book which will focus attention on some of the healthiest values in life and thought under the much abused Third Republic is to be welcomed at a time when the nature of France's long-standing political divisions and of the contribution she can make to the planning of peace when she finds her true leaders, is not generally understood in this country; at a time when unscrupulous propagandists and literary profiteers are libelling her with impunity... The biographer is to be congratulated on his success in dealing sympathetically and very fully with some of the most inaccessibly French aspects of his subject, above all the character and education of Jaurès." Jérôme Jenatton
+ New Statesman & Nation 25:112 F 13 '43 1200w

"To the understanding of modern France, few things are more necessary than an understanding of Jean Jaurès. And not merely an understanding of the man, but an understanding of the movement of which he was the leader, of the attitude of which he was the synthesis. To that understanding, Mr. Hampden Jackson has made a notable contribution; indeed, in English, a unique contribution." D. W. Brogan
+ Spec 170:152 F 12 '43 750w

"This is the first English book on Jaurès, and it deserves not only the praise we owe the pioneer but the praise we owe a serious and useful contribution to knowledge. It is not, indeed, a critical contribution to knowledge. Mr. Jackson sees Jaurès as a hero; as one of the greatest Frenchmen in modern times and as the great missing figure of modern post-1914 history. That Jaures was a great man or, at any rate, a great figure, is not to be questioned. That he might and, in all probability, would have played a great role in the more recent history of France had he not been murdered in 1914 is also true."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p57 Ja 30 '43 750w

JACKSON, JOSEPH HENRY, ed. Continent's end. (Whittlesey house publication) 415p $3.50 McGraw

810.8 American literature—Collections. California 44-9927

"A collection of California writing." (Subtitle) "Jackson explains in his introduction who these many writers are: All Californians by birth or adoption, most of them are writers of today, now in the full stride of their production—people like John Steinbeck, John Fante, Jo Pagano and William Saroyan. It is today's California that they portray in all its exuberant vitality and some of its profound conflicts." (Book Week)

"It's a rich book, a book I wanted to read straight through without stopping, in spite of the fact that it's a collection of varied pieces from many hands. . . It is good because it isn't merely regional. Regional writing can serve immediate ends like revealing the diversity of California, and that's well and good. But such ends are always secondary. Regionalism is a means, not an end in itself. Joseph Henry Jackson's book gives us in generous measure the writing that uses regional materials for the true ends of literature." J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p34 D 3 '44 600w
Booklist 41:149 Ja 15 '45

"California writing has never been distinguished, not even by the rather low standards of regional writing. So that the compiler of this anthology can hardly be blamed for the general mediocrity of the selections. . . The non-fiction section is considerably better [than the fiction]. T. K. Whipple's essay, 'Aucassin and the Sierras,' is a measured and quietly witty study of the American predilection for the outdoors. Also included is a typically well-written excerpt from Lincoln Steffens's 'Autobiography.' " H. S.
— + Commonweal 41:259 D 22 '44 280w

"This collection of California writing makes one feel that perhaps the best writing done today comes out of that fertile state. The general high level is extraordinary."
+ Kirkus 12:475 O 15 '44 170w

"A very satisfactory addition to a series of regional anthologies which already includes a number of fine volumes. It is an unusual anthology, indeed, which presents so little with which one wishes to quarrel and which omits so little that one would like to see included." Ruth Page
+ N Y Times p4 D 24 '44 750w

"Joseph Henry Jackson, literary editor of the San Francisco Chronicle, whose daily column and Sunday Supplement are among the tall, too few, outlying lighthouses in a country which has allowed New York to absorb most American criticism, possessed himself of a brilliant idea and most expertly put it into effect." Struthers Burt
+ Sat R of Lit 27:7 D 30 '44 1450w

JACOB, ALARIC. Traveller's war; a journey to the wars in Africa, India and Russia. 393p $3 Dodd [15s Collins]

940.548142 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, English 44-47019

For two and a half years the author, a British war correspondent, traveled thru Syria, Iraq, the Caucasus, India, and Russia, reporting the war for Reuter's and The Daily Express of London. This is his account of his experiences, in which he stresses the countries visited and their special problems, rather than his own reactions.

JACOB, ALARIC—Continued

"Perhaps it's unusual for a war book to have as little fighting in it as this one, and such a profusion of calm good humor as the author displays, but the combination is excellent." W. F. Morse

+ Book Week p10 Ja 14 '45 220w

Booklist 41:168 F 1 '45

"This brilliant war correspondent has the 'feel' of the fighting and the command of prose that carries it to his reader, whose reaction to this first book is apt to be, 'Where has he been all this time?' " L. M. Lyons

+ Boston Globe p15 Ja 3 '45 400w

"Recommended." M. E. Clark

+ Library J 69:999 N 15 '44 30w

"Mr. Jacob is brisk and businesslike and always has his eye on the essential elements of his job. He does not spread about him, as perhaps too many war correspondents have been inclined to do, the rather thick atmosphere of the professional company he kept; for all the candour of his personal and sometimes youthfully subjective judgments he keeps a lively sense of proportion on the business of gathering news in the Western Desert or Teheran or Poona or on the Burma front or in Moscow."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p553 N 18 '44 1200w

Weekly Book Review p36 D 3 '44 150w

JACOB, HEINRICH EDUARD. Six thousand years of bread [tr. by Richard and Clara Winston]. 399p il maps $4.50 Doubleday

338.18901 Bread. Civilization—History 44-3538

"A study of the religious, political, and technical history of bread. A prodigious amount of labor has gone into this volume, which ranges from prehistoric times to our own." New Yorker

"It is an amazing book, a fascinating book, particularly in its wealth of allusions to classical works and in its social implications. Because of its dramatic representation some few may question its validity as history, but history is also drama, as anyone can see who looks about him." Walter Hendricks

+ Book Week p6 Ap 23 '44 800w

Booklist 40:296 My 1 '44

Reviewed by Otto Zausmer

Boston Globe p17 Ap 12 '44 270w

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '44

Reviewed by Hal Borland

N Y Times p19 Mr 26 '44 500w

"When the author is writing purely in terms of fact, as in his chapters on the history of maize, his pages are sometimes fascinating. Some of his political and religious conclusions, however, are open to question, and his observations on contemporary America and American agriculture are nothing short of bizarre."

+ — New Yorker 20:95 Mr 18 '44 90w

"Liebig's Law of the Minimum applies to books as well as to wheatfields. This law states that fertility is determined by the element present in least favorable proportions. It would be regrettable to have a book so rich in its implications discredited or neglected. The closing chapters alone, on modern Europe and America, are too valuable for that. If author and publisher will give suitable care to future editions, the thoughtful reader should be able to reach the main body of the book with his confidence unimpaired." P. B. Sears

+ — Sat R of Lit 27:12 Ap 1 '44 500w

School & Society 59:352 My 13 '44 10w

"Teachers of history, social studies, and economics need the story of history built around the ordinary factors of everyday life. Certainly bread is one of these factors. Many parts of this book will prove of value to such teachers and their students. Enough books of this type should lead to a more rounded study of man's development than we now teach." H. F. Clark

+ Social Educ 8:280 O '44 500w

"Though this book is not significant history, one can read with profit and pleasure the scientific and technical story of bread which the author gives. One can respond to his sympathy for the hungry of all centuries and can applaud his plea for the feeding of Europe." I. S. Kull

+ Social Studies 35:282 O '44 700w

"It is perhaps unjust to criticize an author for what he has not done or tried to do. But it is hard to believe that Mr. Jacob might not have written a better, and a much shorter, book if he had really stuck to his subject—if he had abandoned free association and contented himself with writing a book about bread alone, which man does not live by, which history is not unlocked by, but which man has a lively interest in, especially when he is hungry." P. M. Wagner

— + Weekly Book Review p12 Ap 9 '44 650w

JACOBS, A. GERTRUDE, comp. Chinese-American song and game book; il. by Chao Shih Chen; music by Virginia and Richard Mather; text romanization by Ching Yi Hsu; Chinese characters by Yun Hsia. 96p $2.50 Barnes, A.S.

796.13 Games. Folk songs, Chinese. Singing games 44-598

"This book is a partial outgrowth of work in a Physical Education Class at Yenching University, Peiping, China, during the fall of 1940." (Introd) Contains eighteen Chinese singing games, with words in Chinese and English, music, and delicately colored illustrations.

Booklist 40:360 Je 15 '44

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p6 Mr 27 '44 90w

"The work of collecting these rhymes, arranging them to Chinese folk tunes and finding game elements for the words was not completed when the United States Government suggested that Americans come home on the evacuation ships sent for them. Thus the authenticity of the material was not checked as fully as the compiler had intended. The book, however, carries a flavor of childhood in China that is both convincing and appealing." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p17 Ap 2 '44 200w

"This is an interesting addition to the books about China for children. The songs and games give to American children an idea of the Chinese way of life. They will enjoy, too, experimenting with the Chinese characters given at the end of the book. The illustrations by a Chinese child add to the unusual interest of the book." Maria Cimino

+ Sat R of Lit 27:26 Ag 19 '44 50w

JACOBS, MRS EMMA (ATKINS.) Secret spring; il. by Margaret Ayer. 234p $2 Winston 44-47005

Mystery story for older girls. The action takes place on a Chautauqua circuit in 1905.

Booklist 41:171 F 1 '45

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 41:128 N 17 '44 10w

"Interesting and novel reading."

+ Kirkus 12:406 S 1 '44 140w

Reviewed by S. J. Johnson

Library J 69:1106 D 15 '44 40w

"A mild mystery and a promise of romance enliven a typically American period piece for young girls." E. L. Buell

N Y Times p16 D 10 '44 120w

"Chautauqua literature is growing: this book is a worthy addition."

+ Weekly Book Review p32 N 12 '44 300w

JACOBS, HELEN HULL. Storm against the wind. 403p $2.75 Dodd

44-3826

Historical novel about life in Tidewater Virginia, just before the Revolution. The hero is a young aristocrat who gradually breaks with the traditions of his class, to side with the Colonists, in their struggle against the British crown.

"Helen Hull Jacobs, whose skill at tennis is well known, here turns her hand to fiction, and if the results, in this historical novel, are not precisely as dazzling as her work with the racket, they are workmanlike, and the prodigious scholarship necessary to a book of this kind must even more extend our already great admiration for the lady, who is at the moment, by the way, a lieutenant (j.g.) in the Waves." Peter De Vries

+ Book Week p6 Ap 23 '44 550w

Boston Globe p17 My 10 '44 130w

"Interest lies chiefly in the photographic detail of Colonial Virginia's expanding society. Unfortunately, for the reader seeking an evening's diversion with a love story there is too much background; and those who would skip over the romance might wish that the whole book had been devoted to the truly fascinating history of the period." Charlotte Dean

+ — N Y Times p18 My 7 '44 280w

Springf'd Republican p4d My 7 '44 110w

"A performance that deserves unstinted applause. It reflects careful research, a mature perspective and considerable craftsmanship." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p13 Ap 23 '44 80w

JACOBS, MORRIS BORIS. Analytical chemistry of industrial poisons, hazards and solvents. (Chemical analysis, v 1) 2d rev reprint 661p il $7 Interscience

543.5 Chemistry, Analytic. Poisons. Solvents 44-6177

" 'A comprehensive resumé of the principal industrial hazards caused by toxic dusts, gases, vapors, and liquids, the chief industries in which each toxic agent occurs, the symptoms caused by it, the methods of collecting samples and the microscopic and chemical tests, both qualitative and quantitative.' " Special Libraries

---

"A good review of the literature has been made in preparation of this book. The material is presented in a non-critical manner and in many cases the exact wording of the original authors has been maintained. For some of the compounds, particularly lead and carbon monoxide, several different methods are discussed in considerable detail, whereas for other substances only a single method is briefly presented. As would be expected, considering the magnitude of the material covered and the fact that it is presented in a non-critical manner, some pertinent references have been overlooked, over-emphasis has been given to some sections, and methods of little importance have been included. However, there is a wealth of good information and the many references to the original literature, not only on analytical methods but on sampling and toxicity, make this a valuable reference book. It should be interesting and helpful to anyone working in industrial hygiene." H. H. Schrenk

+ Am Chem Soc J 66:1993 N '44 300w

Chem & Met Eng 51:220 D '44 100w

Special Libraries 35:100 Mr '44

JACOBS, MORRIS BORIS, ed. Chemistry and technology of food and food products; prepared by a group of specialists. v 1 950p il $10.50 Interscience

641.1 Food—Analysis (44-6722)

"The twenty-three chapters of this first volume of a projected two-volume work, represent the collaboration of nearly as many experts. Part I deals with the physical chemistry of the various classes of foods, namely: carbohydrates, lipids, amino acids and proteins, enzymes, vitamins and hormones, and inorganic foods. Also included are chapters on coloring matter in foods, the process of digestion, and food spoilage and poisoning. Part II discusses foods from a practical angle, giving their history, standards, composition, nutritive value, methods of preparation and statistics of production. The foods are treated in the following groups: dairy products, meat and meat products, fish, poultry and eggs, oils and fats, cereal grains, bakery products, vegetables, nuts and fruits, sugar foods, coffee and tea, spices and condiments. Selected bibliographies are given at the end of each chapter." N Y New Tech Bks

---

"So much ground has been covered, and excellently in both theory and practice, that it seems hardly just to mention the few slips observed. The reviewer, however, cannot refrain from remarking that the writer of Chapter I has a very poor idea of the essential parts of a modern polarimeter." A. G. Woodman

+ — Am Chem Soc J 66:1804 O '44 330w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 69:700 S 1 '44 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:44 Jl '44

JAEGER, WERNER WILHELM. Paideia: the ideals of Greek culture; tr. from the German ms, by Gilbert Highet. v2-3 ea $3.75 Oxford

370.938 Education, Greek. Civilization, Greek. Greek literature (39-29614)

Volumes two and three of a history of Greek education and culture, the first of which appeared in 1939 (Book Review Digest, 1939). These volumes "span the fourth century B.C., which is the interim between two great catastrophes suffered by Athens: its defeat by Sparta in the Peloponnesian War and its final subjugation by Philip of Macedon. We are allowed to witness the magnificent sunset of the Athenian state as it glowed in the personalities of Socrates, Plato, and Demosthenes particularly. It may be said that Plato and Demosthenes were both soldiers in the same battle against the barbarians for the preservation of the Greek way of life—the first in the field of ideas, the second in the field of political action. Plato fought against the Sophists, who were the barbarians within the city; while Demosthenes fought against the barbarians without, coming from the north." (Yale R)

Christian Science Monitor p9 Je 10 '44 600w

"It is not true, as Jaeger claims (II, xiv), that he has discussed all the extant works of the fourth century, with the exception of the forensic orators. . . A more serious matter for correction is Jaeger's picture of Plato's political activity and purposes. . . It is well to note, in the interests of fair play as well as of sound scholarship, that there are certain pronounced prejudices displayed in these volumes. . . If the author of these volumes were a young and struggling scholar with a reputation still to make, it would be ungenerous in a reviewer to lay such stress upon these defects of scholarship and judgment. But in Jaeger's case there is no fear that the merits of his work will be overlooked. There is rather the danger that his reputation as a scholar will confer a specious authority upon even his mistakes and his prejudices. Paideia will undoubtedly be treated with respect, and Volume I will probably be widely read; but if I were its author, I should greatly prefer to be remembered by my Aristoteles." G. R. Morrow

— + Ethics 55:74 O '44 2100w

Reviewed by P. B. Rice

Nation 158:597 My 20 '44 1700w

Reviewed by John Goheen

New Repub 110:716 My 22 '44 2100w

Reviewed by C. E. M. Joad

New Statesman & Nation 28:241 O 7 '44 1000w

"This is the most illuminating book I have ever read on Greece. I found myself wishing as I laid down the second volume that it could be required reading for all the multitudes today who are drawing up schemes for a new world. This is not only because I am a lover of the Greeks and have had the keenest pleasure in Professor Jaeger's at once profound and lucid exposition of the depths and heights they reached. Professor Jaeger is more than a scholar in the high sense of the word, a disinterested seeker of the truth endowed with a mental equipment adequate for the search: he is a man of great wisdom." Edith Hamilton

JAEGER, W. W.—Continued
+ N Y Times p6 Ja 2 '44 1100w

"All in all, 'Paideia' has been brought to an extraordinarily successful conclusion, and the whole work can be enthusiastically recommended to anyone who is interested in ancient Greece. I sincerely hope that Professor Jaeger will be able to carry out his announced intention of writing the history of Paideia in Aristotle and in the Hellenistic and Greco-Roman periods. Professor Jaeger's chief weakness is stylistic. His works, in both German and English, are anything but easy reading. This has nothing to do with his subject, which is not always difficult. It seems to result, rather, from his pontifical attitude toward his subject. . . One might suspect that this is the fault of the translator, but the reverse is true. Professor Highet has turned in an extraordinarily fine performance. Only the first volume is available in German, but that is a fair basis for comparison. Oddly enough, the English is better than the German." Eugene O'Neill, jr.
+ — N Y Times p7 Ja 28 '45 1800w

"A work that has few of the faults which people are inclined to expect in the productions of German scholarship. 'Paideia' is well proportioned and written in a limpid style. There are no cumbersome or inelegant sentences, and there are no briary footnotes to lay you by the heels or obstacles put in your way in the shape of long quotations from ancient languages. The book has furthermore been given a truly marvellous translation by Gilbert Highet, at once so exact and so natural that one is not aware of reading a translation at all." Edmund Wilson
+ New Yorker 20:73 S 9 '44 500w
Spec 173:346 O 13 '44 90w
Theatre Arts 28:440 Jl '44 600w

"The writer's style is clear, vigorous, and untechnical; the book may be read with profit by scholar and layman alike. The translation by Professor Gilbert Highet is excellent." Raphael Demos
+ Yale R n s 33:543 spring '44 900w

JAFFE, BERNARD. Men of science in America. 600p il $3.75 Simon & Schuster
509 Scientists, American. Science—History 44-5618

"The role of science in the growth of our country," (Subtitle) as evidenced in the lives of nineteen famous scientists. Contents: Thomas Harriot; Benjamin Franklin; Benjamin Thompson; Thomas Cooper; Constantine Samuel Rafinesque; Thomas Say; William T. G. Morton; Joseph Henry; Matthew Fontaine Maury; Louis J. R. Agassiz; James Dwight Dana; Othniel Charles Marsh; J. Willard Gibbs; Samuel Pierpont Langley; Albert Abraham Michelson; Thomas Hunt Morgan; Herbert McLean Evans; Edwin Powell Hubble; Ernest Orlando Lawrence. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Rufus Oldenburger
Book Week p4 O 29 '44 250w
Booklist 41:37 O 1 '44

"Interesting introduction to general science in human terms."
+ Kirkus 12:295 Jl 1 '44 230w
Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:305 Ap 1 '44 30w
Library J 69:1003 N 15 '44 70w
New Repub 111:501 O 16 '44 120w
New Yorker 20:86 O 14 '44 180w
Reviewed by A. H. Compton & others
Scientific Bk Club R 15:1 S '44 950w
Reviewed by W. B. Kirkham
Springf'd Republican p6 N 8 '44 470w
Reviewed by Gerald Wendt
Weekly Book Review p5 O 15 '44 1000w

JAGENDORF, MORITZ ADOLF, comp. 25 nonroyalty holiday plays. 280p $2.50 Greenberg
812.08 Holidays. Children's plays 44-4811

Plays for schools and clubs and other amateur theatrical groups. Holidays celebrated include Christmas, New Year's, Lincoln's and Washington's birthdays, Decoration day, and Thanksgiving.

Booklist 40:343 Je 1 '44

"Author is well known in children's theatre field. His selection of scripts is for low-age, inexperienced groups. Within that limitation he has done well. However, some of his production suggestions seem a trifle elaborate."
+ — Library J 69:461 My 15 '44 50w
Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 2 '44 180w

JALLAND, TREVOR GERVASE. The church and the papacy; a hist. study. 568p $7.50 Morehouse [25s S.P.C.K.]
282 Papacy. Church history. Church 44-11244

"Dr. Jalland begins with a sketch of the Vatican Council of 1870, which he regards as the spiritual apotheosis of the Papacy, and then conducts the reader through the long run of events which led up to it." Spec

"Though Dr. Jalland's conclusions fall far short of Catholic teaching they represent a substantial advance to it on many points. He is well aware of and draws freely on the great work done in this field by the modern French Catholic writers, and when he disagrees with us he does so with perfect courtesy, without a trace of the bitterness and condescension not uncommon in works of this kind. Unlike Pusey he has not fired his olive branch from a catapult. If the latter part of his book were as good as the first it would be an outstanding work." F. D. Cohalan
+ — Commonweal 41:232 D 15 '44 450w
Reviewed by Cuthbert Lattey
Hibbert J 43:86 O '44 1100w

"Bampton lectures are almost always important. Dr. Jalland is to be congratulated on having made a very notable addition to the series." R. H. Malden
+ Spec 173:153 Ag 18 '44 900w
Times [London] Lit Sup p438 S 9 '44 2200w

JAMES, HENRY. Stories of writers and artists; ed. with an introd. by F. O. Matthiessen. 346p $3.50 New directions
A45-659

Collection of stories in which the author presents his views of the artist's struggle for sincerity. Contents: The Madonna of the future (1873); The author of Beltraffio (1884); The lesson of the master (1888); Greville Fane (1893); The real thing (1893); The middle years (1893); The death of the lion (1894); The next time (1895); The figure in the carpet (1896); Broken wings (1900); The story in it (1903).

Reviewed by Bergen Evans
Book Week p2 D 10 '44 110w
Booklist 41:170 F 1 '45

"The stories here collected are those one would hope to see and a re-reading of them makes one realize afresh how superb a teller of tales James is and how genuine a wit." K. C.
+ Canadian Forum 24:239 Ja '45 550w
Reviewed by Cuthbert Wright
Commonweal 41:233 D 15 '44 1250w

"James wrote extremely well about artists and writers; he wrote with a personal feeling that was sometimes lacking in his tales about English lords and American debutantes, where observation took the place of passion." Malcolm Cowley
+ New Repub 112:122 Ja 22 '45 300w
Reviewed by W. H. Auden
N Y Times p3 D 17 '44 1050w
Reviewed by Clifton Fadiman
Weekly Book Review p1 Ja 14 '45 1000w

JAMES F. LINCOLN ARC WELDING FOUNDATION, CLEVELAND. Maintenance arc welding. 234p il 50c The foundation, box 5728, Cleveland 1

671 Electric welding. Machinery—Maintenance and repair 43-18307

"Contains twenty-five award papers, selected from the 1940-42 Progress Program. They deal with the application of the arc welding process in maintenance of metal equipment and structures in a number of different industries." N Y New Tech Bks

---

Library J 69:119 F 1 '44 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:33 Ap '44

JAMESON, STORM (MRS GUY CHAPMAN). Cloudless May. 513p $3 (10s 6d) Macmillan 44-2956

"The scene of Miss Jameson's latest war novel is the typical village of Seuilly in the valley of the Loire. Here, in a district rich in tradition and scarred by previous wars, she has sought to find and delineate the essential pattern of the forces that were present in the downfall of France. Instead of developing a centralized plot, Miss Jameson has chosen to depict the relationships of the village as they are changed by the events that transpire from early in the 'cloudless May' of 1940 before the first German break-through to the final entry of the German army into Seuilly in mid-June. Passions, beliefs, circumstances and character are shown influencing the choice of the inhabitants, as the Nazi menace, well in advance of the tanks, forces them into the camp of collaboration or resistance." Weekly Book Review

---

"Storm Jameson's new novel deserves respect for its intention and its scope. Her subject is important, her labor impressive and there is much that is sensitive and deft in her presentation. Yet as one reads on and on the mood of depression grows, and one comes to the end of this over-long book weary and depressed, missing that lift of the spirit which should have arisen from such an epic." Dorsha Hayes

+ — Book Week p6 Mr 19 '44 700w

Booklist 40:284 Ap 15 '44

"Her statement that all the Communists are dead or dying at the front while the villagers sell their patrimony to the Germans is almost funny. The book, however, has real beauty; the style is distinguished; the characters are authentic; the author never mounts a platform to proclaim her ideas, and the subtle manipulation of a point of view more than compensates for the lack of suspense and action."

+ — Cath World 159:283 Je '44 180w

" 'Cloudless May' is not only informed by a masterly comprehension of the political and social issues involved but is also charged with a profound understanding of essential humanity which gives an individual vitality to characters that, in other hands, might have been mere puppets typifying various attitudes to the crisis. Even the minor personalities are conceived in the round and are firmly rooted in reality. Both as a manifestation of the integrity of the human spirit and as a work of art, 'Cloudless May' is easily the most distinguished of the war novels that have come my way." Wilfrid Gibson

+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 8 '43 150w

"In 'Cloudless May' Storm Jameson has once again done full justice to her talents. Once again she has used them to write about France, to describe a country which she knows well. Scarcely a page of this long book that does not contain a rare sentence pinning to our memories some detail of France's beauty, some half-forgotten aspect of her loveliness. Our interest is maintained to the end by Miss Jameson's rapid though never hurried nor blurred style. . . Many of France's friends have written her post-mortem and no one has presented it with more skill, coolness or daring than Miss Jameson. I feel sure that the author is sincere. But if she is right I wonder why so many Frenchmen have troubled to take arms in the defense of this decrepit country." Anne Green

+ — N Y Times p6 Mr 19 '44 850w

"Readers who enjoy the pleasantly nostalgic writing about France which is the current vogue in fiction won't think much of this, but for those who are willing to explore, at times painfully, the minds of politicians, artisans, ambitious women, staff officers, businessmen, jeunes filles, priests, industrialists, and pious old maids in France's black hour, 'Cloudless May' is full of documentary as well as of literary interest. All in all, a valuable and immensely readable book."

+ New Yorker 20:93 Mr 18 '44 160w

"As an anatomy of French defeatism, this long, solidly printed book is fascinating, brilliant, and informative: as a novel, it begins by arousing high hopes and ends by partially disappointing them." B. R. Redman

+ — Sat R of Lit 27:10 Ap 8 '44 950w

"It is a very depressing record, and such light as it contains . . . does not reassure, because of a sense of excess, of forcing, that disfigures the art and application of this book throughout. In short, this novel is overwritten. Nothing is said once . . . and until indeed even the tenderly evoked beauties and great memories of the Loire Valley, which should have been, even if paradoxically, a consolation against so much evil and dishonour as the story holds, become a weariness also, an exasperation rather than an escape. Events crawl in these pages—as no doubt they seemed to to a few decent men who had to stand by and watch corruption reach their town before the Germans got there; but to create tedium in the reader against the repetitious conversations and debates of a few characters is not the same thing as to make him partake the experience of their tedium." Kate O'Brien

— + Spec 171:368 O 15 '43 450w

Reviewed by C. M. Sauer

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 19 '44 550w

"The book is long, carefully composed and marked by this author's strong sincerity of feeling. It does not, as other English novels on the subject have done, rub the faces of the guilty or of the guiltiest in the dirt, but neither does it extenuate a guilt in which all classes and categories of a nation which chose to reject its historic greatness had a share. . . The picture is, in truth, harshly lit and unsparing. What makes it tragic is in the first place the sense Miss Jameson communicates of the grace and cultivation of French tradition, the historic light and learning, the brilliance and the beauty of the Loire country."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p461 S 25 '43 950w

"Upon both her major figures as well as a throng of lesser ones, Miss Jameson has lavished a wealth of subtle perception and an authentic knowledge of the Anjou folk and countryside. 'Cloudless May' is a genuine achievement because of the sustained skill with which she has depicted the impact of crucial events upon fully vital human beings without violating either her intense sympathy or her strikingly sharp and hard-headed insight into people and politics." William Poster

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Ap 2 '44 650w

Wis Lib Bul 40:86 Je '44

JAMIESON, GEORGE SAMUEL. Vegetable fats and oils. 2d ed 530p $6.75 Reinhold

665.3 Oils and fats 43-17879

"The arrangement of the subject matter in the present volume has not changed from that used in the previous edition [Book Review Digest, 1932]. In a few cases, it was found desirable to rewrite the descriptive matter either wholly or in part. However, in all cases, an effort has been made to bring the information given up to date. A considerable number of fats and oils have been described in addition to those appearing in the first edition." Pref to 2d ed

---

"In general, this second edition is an excellent presentation of the subject. The book will be of interest to those wishing to acquire a general familiarity with the vegetable fats and oils and in addition will serve as a reference book to those requiring detailed and specific data concerning any particular fat or oil of vegetable origin." A. W. Ralston

JAMIESON, G. S.—Continued
+ Chem & Eng N 22:200 F 10 '44 440w
Chem & Met Eng 51:195 N '44 170w
Library J 68:960 N 15 '43 70w

JANTA-POŁCZYNSKI, ALEKSANDER. I lied to live. 312p $2.75 Roy pubs.

940.547243 World war, 1939—Prisoners and prisons, German. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, Polish 44-47545

"Alexander Janta, who was a cadet-officer in the Polish division fighting the Germans on the Western Front in June, 1940, unfolds in this book a little known chapter in the history of this war. When France collapsed he was taken prisoner and throughout the year of his captivity he had to work on a German farm, disguised as a French soldier." Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by Warren Beck
Book Week p5 N 26 '44 550w
Booklist 41:168 F 1 '45

"If 'I Lied to Live' were only an adventure story its suspense would not let the reader put it down before finished. But since Mr. Janta's experiences were lived against the background of present day Germany, he has written a book which should be of interest to everyone who is intelligently concerned about the fashioning of our post-war world." Eveline Dienes
+ Boston Globe p15 D 20 '44 380w

"The trouble with Mr. Janta's report is that he wanted to write two books where one volume would have been sufficient. . . A more condensed version would have made his report more exciting reading." E. K.
Christian Science Monitor p14 D 1 '44 350w

"A straightforward story, an unusual and a dramatic one—good true adventure, handled without exaggeration."
+ Kirkus 12:472 O 15 '44 170w

"Here in the comfortable insulation of America it is unfortunate that Mr. Janta's message may be lost among a dozen similar books whose melodrama is more expertly managed. His prose is uneasy, and sometimes downright redundant: but the sincerity of his attempt to probe the average German's soul to its icy depths cannot be doubted for an instant. As one who has been uprooted and disinherited, he does not try to disguise his hate. Yet he has kept his actual narrative simple and factual." C. V. Terry
+ N Y Times p5 D 3 '44 500w

" 'I Lied to Live,' while unsensational, catches the reader's attention and holds it. It possesses tension, sustained and skilful progress of narrative. It is brilliantly written. But, unfortunately, the story comes to an end very abruptly. . . We meet not enough Germans to pass any definite judgment on the character of the German people, as seen by the author. Herr Schnabel might well represent the 'typical German farmer in his province' but he does not the 'typical German.' The full story of the men with whom we shall have to build up a new and better Germany remains to be written." H. B. Kranz
+ — Sat R of Lit 27:10 D 9 '44 800w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen
Survey G 34:24 Ja '45 650w

"The circumstances of life as a prisoner on a German farm should have great interest for us. Mr. Janta fails to make them interesting." Kay Boyle
Weekly Book Review p10 Ja 7 '45 550w

JAQUES, MRS FLORENCE (PAGE). Snowshoe country; il. by Francis Lee Jaques. 110p maps $3 Univ. of Minn.

917.76 Minnesota—Description and travel A44-5257

Diary of a stay in northern Minnesota from late October thru January, during which the author and her artist husband lived a primitive type of life in order to record their combined impressions of winter woods, animals, trees, lakes, and wild animals.

"A book of vitality and beauty, a book to enjoy and to return to, quite definitely my first suggestion for Christmas giving to anyone in the least susceptible to the appeal of the out-of-doors. The earlier books from these collaborators, 'Canoe Country' and 'The Geese Fly High,' are fine indeed, but this is even better. The drawings are admirable both in spirit and in execution. The writing is at once warm and firm, unpretentious and human and full of fun, yet deep and true in emotion and in meaning." J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p44 D 3 '44 450w
Booklist 41:106 D 1 '44

"Although this hasn't quite the zest and freshness of the earlier The Geese Fly High and Canoe Country, it still ranks high in good regional writing."
+ Kirkus 12:391 S 1 '44 120w

"Much of this winter record, indeed practically all of it, will be spontaneously read aloud and rightly, for it shares and spreads unforced enjoyment." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p6 D 31 '44 500w
Wis Lib Bul 40:159 D '44

JARVIS, JOSE ANTONIO. Virgin Islands, and their people. 178p il map $1.50 Dorrance

917.297 Virgin Islands of the U.S. 44-7397

"The author, a native of the islands, has studied at Columbia, teaches in Charlotte Amalie, has been an editor and is an artist and poet. The present volume, supplementing his previous history of the Virgin Islands, gives a lively and intimate description of the topography and people, with a brief sketch of the history and an account of economic conditions, government, and popular folklore and superstitions." Christian Century

Christian Century 61:977 Ag 23 '44 70w
Springf'd Republican p6 S 1 '44 280w

"A handbook that will interest others than tourists."
+ Weekly Book Review p8 S 10 '44 220w

JAYNES, CLARE, pseud. of JANE MAYER and CLARA SPIEGEL. These are the times. 273p $2.50 Random house

44-40108

Story of a lovely, possessive woman, Judith Kenyon, wife of a successful Chicago surgeon. Judith was determined to keep her husband in this country, instead of allowing him to join a medical unit for duty overseas. With all the tricks in the calendar Judith fought to keep her hold on John, and lost.

"This book by two Chicago women is, quite conceivably, the sort of thing a man should not be reviewing. It is honestly and unostentatiously the stuff of which matinees are made, the kind of fare one looks for in slick, women's magazines. Except toward the end, when it rises beyond these seemingly deliberately chosen limits, it is not this man's meat. Not that I didn't enjoy reading it. I did—possibly more so than people who have followed the adventures of Kildare and other M.D.s of screen and airwaves, and know the inner workings of big hospitals better than I." A. C. Spectorsky
Book Week p1 Ap 23 '44 500w
Booklist 40:318 My 15 '44

"Matters medical are pretty sure-fire fascination for the layman and if white coats and stethoscopes make you prick up your ears 'These Are the Times' is the book for you. Clare Jaynes is the pen name of two talented gals who have turned out above average fiction on a subject it's pretty easy to make melodramatic or sentimental."
Boston Globe p17 My 10 '44 150w

"Contemporary, convincing, and cushioned in all kinds of medical incident—a hard-to-beat combination for feminine tastes."
+ Kirkus 12:82 F 15 '44 170w

"Mrs. Norris would do a better job with this theme. Don't spend your meager book money on it." F. A. Boyle

— Library J 69:304 Ap 1 '44 60w

"The authors . . . have told this story with acumen and skill. They do well by their hospital background. On the whole, however, this book seems overtheatrical, somewhat glib and contrived." E. H. Walton

— + N Y Times p8 My 7 '44 300w

Reviewed by George Conrad

Weekly Book Review p6 Ap 30 '44 380w

JEANS, SIR JAMES HOPWOOD. Universe around us. 4th ed rev 297p il $3.75 Macmillan [15s Cambridge]

523 Astronomy. Cosmogony 44-8932

"Fifteen years ago Sir James Jeans gave to the world an almost perfect example of a scientific book for lay readers. Since then it has run through several editions, with slight revisions from time to time. Now at last he has rewritten the entire book to include within it recent advances in knowledge of astronomy and atomic physics and the new theories that have been proposed by the workers in those fields." (Scientific Bk Club R) For earlier editions see Book Review Digest, 1929, 1931.

Booklist 41:92 N 15 '44

Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook

Current Hist 7:500 D '44 60w

Library J 69:1003 N 15 '44 80w

"One cannot lay down this volume without inwardly expressing admiration for the sweep of the imagination displayed by the great mathematical physicists of our time who have tried to discover how the universe was carved out. We think of these men as dry, formal mathematicians with just enough blood in their veins to keep them alive and thinking. Actually they are epic poets." Waldemar Kaempffert

+ N Y Times p34 N 19 '44 800w

"The new book retains all the charm of the old, it is equally a model of lucid exposition. Those unfamiliar with the technicalities of astrophysics will find it just as readable and informative as its predecessor."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 15:2 O '44 240w

"The layman may wish that Sir James had criticised the conclusions drawn from the second law of thermodynamics expounded in Chapter VII 'Beginnings and Endings' in the light of the quantum theory in Chapter II, 'Exploring the Atom,' since he may find a certain incompatibility between the two theories. However, the book will raise in the mind of the intelligent reader so many difficult problems that the most likely lesson to be drawn from it is that in the vastness of human ignorance all our science is so minute as to amount to nothing at all."

+ — Spec 172:534 Je 9 '44 140w

"Mathematical formulae are mostly confined to footnotes, and anyone desirous of knowing what scientists are thinking about the atom, the past and future history of the sun, earth, planets and stars cannot find a better book than this to read." W. B. Kirkham

+ Springf'd Republican p8 N 1 '44 170w

Weekly Book Review p27 O 22 '44 60w

JEFFERS, EDMUND VINCENT. Music for the general college student. (King's crown press bk) 213p pa $2.50 Columbia univ. press

780.72 Music in colleges and universities A44-3825

"What should be the purpose of music teaching in American colleges—to train specialists (that is, students who plan to use music professionally) or to foster an understanding and appreciation of music as a part of a liberal-arts course? Believing that liberal-arts colleges should adopt the latter aim for their principal work, the author of this book examines the historical backgrounds of, and the influences involved in, the development of such instruction, and the ideas and ideals for music education in colleges as expressed by college educators." (School & Society) Selected bibliography on music for the general college student, and Bibliography of works cited in text. No index.

Reviewed by Walter Helfer

Crozer Q 21:355 O '44 1000w

School & Society 60:48 Jl 15 '44 80w

JENKINS, BURRIS ATKINS, jr. Father Meany and the Fighting 69th [il. by the author] foreword by Joseph A. McCaffrey. 61p $1 Fell

940.542 Meany, Stephen J. U.S. Army. 165th infantry. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American 44-4839

Story of the Chaplain of the Fighting 69th who was wounded at Makin island. Father Meany followed close behind the first assault boats and was wounded by Japanese snipers early in the battle.

"It is splendidly illustrated by the author, and is a glowing tribute to a priest in battle. Yet, it fails to be an outstanding combat story. It is told in the third person and lacks that portrayal of personal reactions that alone can make these tales significant."

+ — Commonweal 40:260 Je 30 '44 130w

Reviewed by G. K. Moriarty

Springf'd Republican p6 My 9 '44 330w

JENKINS, DOROTHY HELEN, and WILSON, HELEN VAN PELT. Enjoy your house plants; phot. by Gottscho-Schleisner; drawings by Joseph Schultz. 238p $2.50 Barrows

635.9652 House plants Agr44-215

Advice and instructions on how to keep house plants healthy and decorative. Partial contents: Pests are not necessary; The mysterious ways of the African violet; The amaryllis is certain to please; Preview of spring with bulbs; Narcissus and other bulbs on a water diet; The Christmas cactus for Christmas cheer; Seven colorful calla lilies; Ferns require wisdom; The gardenia is never easy; Geraniums for gaiety; Indoor plants from the outdoor garden; The marica—a matchless house plant; Orchids are not impossible; The poinsettia has more than a past; Trailers and climbers for color; Vines that take to water; Multiplication of house plants; Rest and vacation for house plants; Church plants have feelings too. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 41:37 O 1 '44

"The authors have managed to convey in every page the deep pleasure that comes from planning and caring intelligently for an indoor garden. Well-planned window gardens like the ones illustrated in this book, can enhance the individuality of almost any decorative scheme. Incidentally, the illustrations are like the gorgeous pictures in the cookbook—they make you want to 'try the recipe' to see if you can make it come out as beautifully!" Helen Henley

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 S 5 '44 150w

"The most practical, workable book on house plants that I've seen."

+ Kirkus 12:366 Ag 15 '44 110w

"The book is well arranged, brisk and clear with its information." E. W.

+ N Y Times p23 O 1 '44 420w

"Expert as garden editors and as interior decorators relying partly on plants, these ladies give the inexperienced in the latter field a guide not only practical, detailed and lively, but so contagiously happy that the first impulse of a reader is to order something instantly from a florist."

+ Weekly Book Review p10 Ag 20 '44 200w

JENKINS, GLENN LLEWELLYN, and HARTUNG, WALTER HENRY. Chemistry of organic medicinal products. 2d ed 675p $6.50 Wiley

615.3 Chemistry, Medical and pharmaceutical. Chemistry, Organic SG44-11

"An expansion of the 1941 edition by over 200 pages. The revision has been extensive, and one new chapter has been added. Intended mainly for students in advanced courses in pharmacy, biology and medicine, but the book can be understood by anyone who has studied a basic course in organic chemistry. There is a seven-page general bibliography in addition to references throughout the text." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

JENKINS, G. L.—Continued

"The second edition of this excellent compilation of organic medicinal compounds according to the accepted scheme of chemical classification is, in many respects, a much improved revision of the first planographed edition of 1941. Care has been taken to eliminate the trivial typographical errors, misspellings, misuse of words and phrases, and careless punctuation which marred the initial text. Rearrangement of the material into more compact paragraphs and better classified sections, and the gathering of the literature references into terminal chapter bibliographies have made the matter more easily and pleasantly readable. New material has been introduced and in many sections the explanatory text has been expanded." C. R. Addinall

+ Am Chem Soc J 66:850 My '44 250w

Chem & Eng N 22:384 Mr 10 '44 30w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:205 Mr 1 '44 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:4 Ja '44

JENKINS, ROLLAND. Fundamentals of mechanical inspection for trainees and junior inspectors. 179p il $1.75 McGraw

621.75 Machinery—Inspection. Measuring instruments 44-2533

An inspection supervisor of the Sperry Gyroscope company has written this brief manual on the purpose, methods, and tools of inspection in a factory. The author has had several years of teaching experience. Index.

Booklist 40:298 My 1 '44

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:205 Mr 1 '44 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:6 Ja '44

JENKINS, THOMAS, bp. Man of Alaska: Peter Trimble Rowe. 340p il $3.75 Morehouse

B or 92 Rowe, Peter Trimble 43-18399

Biography of the first Protestant episcopal bishop of Alaska, Peter Trimble Rowe. Beginning his work in 1895, Bishop Rowe held office until his death in 1942. During that time he witnessed much of the development of Alaska and played an important part in it. No index.

"The author, formerly a clergyman in the Alaska diocese and now bishop of Nevada, has told effectively the story of this truly magnificent character and his pioneering Christian work in the far north."

+ Christian Century 60:1507 D 22 '43 80w

Reviewed by R. C. Miller
Churchman 158:19 My 1 '44 120w

"An unskillful portrait of a rugged churchman, yet Peter Trimble Rowe comes to life nevertheless." Cyril Clemens
Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 30 '44 550w

JENNINGS, BURGESS HILL, and LEWIS, SAMUEL RICHARD. Air conditioning and refrigeration. 2d ed 517p il $4.50 Int. textbook

628.8 Air conditioning. Refrigeration and refrigerating machinery 44-6477

"A book published in 1939 with the title Air Conditioning, Principles, and Practice [Book Review Digest, 1939], has been revised, and the material on refrigeration has been expanded to three chapters." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 41:25 S '44

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:700 S 1 '44 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:39 Jl '44

JENNINGS, BURGESS HILL, and OBERT, EDWARD FREDERIC. Internal combustion engines; analysis and practice. 471p il $4.50 Int. textbook

621.43 Gas and oil engines 44-4569

"A comprehensive study of the theory underlying internal combustion engine design and operation, written for engineering students and practicing engineers. Chapter one describes the various types of engine, but the remainder of the volume deals at length with engine testing, valve timing, carburetion, the ignition process, spark and compression ignition. Also included is material on thermodynamics, fuels and combustion, and a brief discussion of gas turbines. Each chapter contains practice problems and references." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 41:12 S '44

"Emphasis on basic underlying principles and factors upon which all engineers work. Useful for practicing engineers who have had no formal training in this field. Well interspersed with data on present day Diesel, airplane and automobile engines." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 69:205 Mr 1 '44 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:24 Ap '44

JENNINGS, HELEN HALL. Leadership and isolation; a study of personality in interpersonal relations. 240p il $3 Longmans

301.155 Personality. Social psychology 43-14733

For descriptive note see Annual for 1943.

"Observations and even measurement of traits of persons is a well-developed practice in social psychology, but it is not quite such an easy thing to apply techniques of measurement to the more complicated conceptions of personality as a role in a group. Jennings manages, however, to make a very successful investigation of the roles of leader and of 'isolate' through the use of sociometric methods. Her results sound almost as if they had been written under the guidance of Cooley—which may be a tribute both to Cooley and to her." R. E. L. Faris

+ Am J Soc 49:372 Ja '44 330w

"This book, written in a summarized form and therefore requiring careful reading, is recommended for those who wish to gain in understanding of the emotional needs of people and the significance of their interactions within groups." Katharine Roy

+ J Home Econ 36:298 My '44 300w

Reviewed by Monroe and Elizabeth Beardsley
J Philos 41:166 Mr 16 '44 500w

"Leadership and Isolation should be of considerable interest to group workers and religious educators as well as to academic students of personality." E. B. Harper

+ J Religion 24:151 Ap '44 250w

JENNISON, KEITH WARREN. New Hampshire. 102p pl $2.50 Holt

917.42 New Hampshire—Views 44-8180

Photographs tied together with pungent captions all about the beauties of New Hampshire and the wit of its inhabitants. Index.

Commonweal 40:596 O 6 '44 20w

"The author, who was responsible for two similar books, 'Vermont Is Where You Find It' and 'The Maine Idea,' knows a good photograph when he sees one, has a minor genius for writing captions, and, most important of all, carefully sidesteps what usually passes for local color."

+ New Yorker 20:79 S 9 '44 90w

"The pictures are superb. Assuming that good pictures and folk idiom are no regional monopoly, it looks as if Mr Jennison can settle down to compiling 45 more books in this pattern."

+ Springf'd Republican p4d S 24 '44 220w

"All the photographs beat at the heart of a New England exile: as for the text, there is tartness in the rejoinders that has the true New Hampshire tang." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p2 N 12 '44 500w

Wis Lib Bul 40:146 N '44

JENSEN, FRODE, and others. Medical care of the discharged hospital patient. 94p $1 Commonwealth fund [6s Oxford]

614.2 Medical economics. Convalescence SG44-93

"This volume represents a one year experiment in extending extramural medical care to 902 patients discharged from the medical wards of the University Hospital in Syracuse, N.Y., of whom 165 patients were given home medical care by a full-time extramural resident. The experiment which was financed by the Josiah Macy Jr. Foundation was undertaken as a result of a teaching experiment introduced into the curriculum of the Syracuse University College of Medicine in 1930." Am J Pub Health

"Recommended as required reading for public health workers concerned with preventive medicine." George Baehr

+ Am J Pub Health 34:1111 O '44 550w

Reviewed by Eleanor Cockerill

Survey 80:333 N '44 320w

JEWELL, EDWARD ALDEN. French impressionists and their contemporaries represented in American collections. See French impressionists and their contemporaries represented in American collections.

JOAD, CYRIL EDWIN MITCHINSON. Adventures of the young soldier in search of the better world; il. by Mervyn Peake. 154p $2 Arco [6s Faber]

828 44-8310

"[An attempt] to debunk current blueprints for the postwar world. Chief character in these Platonic dialogues is the average well born, well educated young British soldier who meets and is confused by a motley crew representing most of the cults, 'groups' and fetishes of our age. After talking to the Ultra-red Robot (a Marxist), Red-tape Worm (a bureaucrat), Mr. Heardhux (Gerald Heard and Aldous Huxley) among others, the young soldier finally meets the Philosopher who reminds him of the eternal verities and tosses the problem back to the individual, average man." New Repub

"As for the Church, Joad dismisses it with an airy gesture, revealing his old prejudices still uncorrected. The only Churchman in the book is the Rev. Mr. Hateman, who shouts, 'Kill all Germans and Japs, and the better world will be here.' When one remembers the real utterances of Church leaders about after-the-war and knows the character of Christian devotions in these days of tragedy, Joad's gibes about the Church stick in one's craw. Aside from that, this book is truly amusing, and more important than one might at first suppose." B. I. Bell

+ — Atlantic 174:145 D '44 420w

Booklist 41:74 N 1 '44

"Mr. Joad's books are always amusing and refreshing and provoking; his latest offering is perhaps the best-knit and most polished of all. It is certainly vastly amusing and should prove a delightful inoculant against all sorts of viruses."

+ Commonweal 40:548 S 22 '44 1200w

"This is a book which will delight intellectually mature readers. It should be 'must' reading for 'post-war planners', but they will not like it unless they have a sufficiently well developed sense of humor to laugh at themselves."

+ Kirkus 12:497 N 1 '44 190w

"Considered as a Carroll fantasy the book has the weakness that its monstrous characters derive from logical, not imaginative, processes. . . Considered as a lengthy session of the Brains Trust, 'The Adventures of a Young Soldier' becomes more amusing. Here is a Brains Trust in which Dr. Joad not only represents listener and question-master but speaks for all the other members and finally for Dr. Joad himself—an arrangement which is, in its way, perfect. His conclusion is common-sense enough: roughly, that we must have not only good government and planning but inner enlightenment as well, and that the one will not save us without the other." J. M.

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 S 17 '43 300w

"If Professor Joad's summation is inconclusive, his critique of modern dogma and catch phrases certainly is not. Like the Philosopher himself, this little volume is something of a signpost for the immediate future."

+ New Repub 111:382 S 25 '44 240w

Reviewed by Noel Annan

New Statesman & Nation 26:237 O 9 '43 850w

Reviewed by Walter Elliot

Spec 171:316 O 1 '43 850w

"This may well turn out to be the most brilliant satire and one of the most provocative books of the decade." R. A. Brown

+ Survey G 33:464 N '44 160w

Time 42:98 O 4 '43 950w

"The innocent may as well learn at once that not even Professor Joad can produce a short-cut to the Better World, at least in the earthly significance of the phrase. What he can do is to map out the various routes proposed and tell us cautiously whether any of them, in his opinion, is likely to get us anywhere. Now this alone is a valuable service for lazy or busy people. . . Like Mr. Peake's pictures for nursery rhymes three years ago, nearly all these drawings show a strong and extraordinary imagination. Most of them here represent the contemptible, the ugly or the incredible, but they have themselves, at their best, a quality that might almost be called beauty."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p424 S 4 '43 800w

"This book reminds one of an earlier English writer, Thomas Love Peacock. The characters are, like Peacock's abstractions, modish current theories, and the conversation is all intellectuals' arguments. As it is, this highbrow Everyman, is tolerant, enlightened and a little obvious and dull." Irwin Edman

Weekly Book Review p12 Ja 14 '45 1000w

JOESTEN, JOACHIM. What Russia wants. 214p $2.50 Duell

327.47 Russia—Foreign policy 44-40059

An attempt to discover what Russia wants at the end of the war, in the way of territorial acquisitions and political influence in the border states of eastern Europe, the Balkans and in the Far East. The author, now an assistant editor of Newsweek, was born in Cologne, Germany, left his native land after Hitler came to power, and since then has traveled widely throughout the world.

"Joesten's book has value in that it brings into line the developments around which such tremendous controversies centered at the end of the last decade and in the first year of this. I regret that the writer, whose basic premise is so sound, has apparently been satisfied to do merely a surface journalistic job." Ernest von Hartz

+ — Book Week p6 Ja 30 '44 600w

Booklist 40:262 Ap 1 '44

Canadian Forum 24:44 My '44 700w

"This is a book to be read and remembered. It is clear, factual, downright—therefore significant. One finishes the last chapter with the sense of having gained a comprehensive notion of Russia's aims and policy and therefore with a conviction that an intelligent opinion can be formed as to her probable future course." Joseph McSorley

+ Cath World 159:90 Ap '44 270w

Christian Science Monitor p16 F 10 '44 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p2 Ja '44

JOESTEN, JOACHIM—Continued
Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:664 Jl '44 40w

"An extremely useful book as a background for better understanding and judgment."
+ Kirkus 12:15 Ja 1 '44 280w

"Useful as background book and as fairly accurate presentation of probable Russian position at peace conferences. Recommended." G. W. Hill
+ Library J 69:158 F 15 '44 140w

"When Mr. Joesten, an anti-Nazi German now in this country, sticks to the title of his book and sets forth what Russia wants he is, in the main, shrewd, realistic and convincing. When he undertakes the role of apologist for Stalin's methods and objectives these qualities wear pretty thin. The author finds himself led into misleading analogies—tendentious accounts of Soviet relations with Poland and other western neighbors—interpretations that come perilously close to the formula that might makes right." W. H. Chamberlin
+ — N Y Times p13 Mr 5 '44 500w
New Yorker 19:82 F 5 '44 150w

"Mr. Joesten is not 100 per cent pro-Soviet; he takes some of Moscow's statements with a grain of salt. But he gives Stalin the benefit of every doubt. He swallows whole the Russian contentions about Finland, Poland, and the Baltic states. . . Joesten's handling of the Finnish war is an atrocity. . . But the book contains an even greater atrocity! Joesten affirms that the Soviet government is a democracy." Louis Fischer
— Sat R of Lit 27:10 F 12 '44 800w

"Mr. Joesten has written a book at once informative and confusing. It is informative because it has reproduced a number of Russian pronouncements which the reader may have missed; confusing because it shifts its viewpoint frequently without notice. In spots the author assumes the existence of some principles upon which a just peace should be based: in others he is the 'hard-boiled realist' who seems to have rejected the very striving for a just peace in favor of the give-and-take (mostly take) of great-power dictation to lesser neighbors." B. D. Wolfe
+ — Weekly Book Review p8 My 7 '44 750w

JOHN RANDOLPH HAYNES and DORA HAYNES FOUNDATION. Los Angeles: its peoples and its homes. See Hanson, E., and Beckett, P.

JOHNSEN, JULIA EMILY, comp. Basic English. (Reference shelf) 234p $1.25 Wilson, H.W.

428.25 Basic English 44-2428

A compilation of articles on Basic English, its nature and uses, and advantages and disadvantages as a method of teaching and as a universal language.

Booklist 40:254 Mr 15 '44
School & Society 59:144 F 19 '44 10w
Wis Lib Bul 40:83 Je '44

JOHNSEN, JULIA EMILY, comp. Canada and the western hemisphere. (Reference shelf) 295p $1.25 Wilson, H.W.

327.71 Canada—Foreign relations. Canada—Relations (general) with U.S. U.S.—Relations (general) with Canada. Canada—Economic policy 44-7938

"This number of The Reference Shelf does not attempt to cover the abundant and growing literature on Canada as a whole. It is more specifically concerned with Canada in the light of her external relations and trends, together with such background as may seem helpful. It takes into account Canada's special place in the Western Hemisphere, some of her major external problems and trends, her place in the British Commonwealth, and finally it attempts to touch upon Canada's future world relations and her place in the postwar world." Pref

Reviewed by W. H. Wickwar
Am Pol Sci R 38:1251 D '44 260w
Booklist 41:91 N 15 '44

"Here is a very useful collection of extracts from Canadian writing. . . So far as the writer knows this is the first and only compilation of the sort. He has often thought that the prose turned out in the last 20 years by our academics and journalists deserved an anthology: this book is not an anthology exactly but it is to be noted it was left for an American source to do it." A. R. M. Lower
+ Canadian Forum 24:219 D '44 210w

"This is not a debaters' handbook; it is not organized into pro-and-con arguments as are most of the 'Reference Shelf' books; but it contains a wealth of material useful to anyone who wishes to form or fortify an opinion about the future of Canada."
+ Christian Century 61:1106 S 27 '44 80w

"A timely addition to the Wilson company's Reference Shelf series."
+ Springf'd Republican p8 O 20 '44 280w

JOHNSEN, JULIA EMILY, comp. International police force. (Reference shelf) 253p $1.25 Wilson, H.W.

341 Police, International 44-4677

As is usual in this series, the chapters include general, affirmative, and negative discussions, with an extensive bibliography.

"Most of the papers reprinted in the volume were written by scholars who deal with fundamentals and avoid romanticism, and the articles are supplemented by a lengthy, well ordered bibliography. This balanced anthology is useful for speakers, debaters, and—I should add—writers of term papers." Garland Downum
+ Am Pol Sci R 38:820 Ag '44 150w
Booklist 40:357 Je 15 '44
Christian Science Monitor p12 S 16 '44 50w
Foreign Affairs 23:3 O '44 10w
Wis Lib Bul 40:106 Jl '44

JOHNSEN, JULIA EMILY, comp. Lowering the voting age. (Reference shelf) 237p $1.25 Wilson, H.W.

324.11 Suffrage 44-47292

Collection of materials on the question of lowering the voting age from twenty-one to eighteen, arranged under the headings General discussion, Affirmative discussion, and Negative discussion, with a summary of the arguments and a bibliography appended.

Booklist 41:125 D 15 '44
Christian Century 61:1320 N 15 '44 10w
School & Society 60:320 N 1 '44 60w

JOHNSEN, JULIA EMILY, comp. Reconstituting the League of nations. (Reference shelf) 304p $1.25 Wilson, H.W.

341.1 League of nations 43-16405

" 'Among the many plans proposed for the establishment of an international or world postwar order, that of a reconstituted or revitalized League of Nations is generally accorded a foremost place,' states the Preface to this volume in the Reference Shelf series. Presents the arguments in support of this proposal, with a selection also on Alternative plans." Wis Lib Bul

Reviewed by R. S. McCordock
Am Pol Sci R 38:201 F '44 230w
Booklist 40:148 D 15 '43
Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:490 Ap '44 10w
Wis Lib Bul 40:6 Ja '44

JOHNSEN, JULIA EMILY, comp. Wage stabilization and inflation. (Reference shelf) 187p $1.25 Wilson, H.W.

331.29 Wages. Inflation (finance) 43-[illegible]05

"This number of the Reference Shelf, supplementing a previous volume entitled Wages and Prices [See Book Review Digest, 1942, under Summers, R. E., comp.], includes articles, addresses and bibliographical material on wage stabilization and inflation covering a period when the subject has taken on new immediacy and become of increasing vital concern." Management R

Management R 33:107 Mr '44 50w
Wis Lib Bul 39:104 Jl '43

JOHNSON, BURGES. As much as I dare; a personal recollection. 346p $3.50 Washburn

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 44-47444

Reminiscences of an American editor, educator, lecturer and writer of light-verse. The book is in three parts, the first dealing with recollections of a boyhood in New England fifty years ago; the second with a literary career centering in New York journalism where Johnson had many acquaintances and friendships with literary celebrities. The third part covers chiefly a series of family vacations in the Southwest.

"My considered judgment is that 'As Much as I Dare' is too prudent to inform and too mild to divert a modern audience; it's agreeable enough, but a wordy and superficial piece of work." Arthur Meeker, Jr.
— + Book Week p7 D 17 '44 450w
Booklist 41:123 D 15 '44

"The charm of the book lies in its informality, its briskness of style, its humor. Good reading."
+ Kirkus 12:463 O 1 '44 170w

"Recommended for larger libraries and book collections where literary interests are strong." H. A. Wooster
Library J 69:999 N 15 '44 80w

Reviewed by Nona Balakian
N Y Times p7 Ja 7 '45 900w

JOHNSON, CHARLES SPURGEON, and others. To stem this tide; a survey of racial tension areas in the United States. 142p $1; pa 50c Pilgrim press

325.26 Negroes. U.S.—Race question 44-247

"These are reports to the public on certain current interracial developments in this country. Mr. Johnson's work covers the country at large with respect to racial tension in industry, in rural districts, and on public carriers. Other chapters present cases of police mistreatment of Negro civilians and soldiers. Attention is given to the peculiar sources and kinds of friction characteristic of the various regions of the country. The last chapter discusses post-war problems of racial adjustment. Appendixes contain the proposals of two southern conferences, one Negro and the other white, for interracial cooperation." Am J Soc

"The survey does not attempt to be exhaustive; apparently the aim was to put vividly before interested persons a gallery of pictures of action on the racial front in wartime America. If that was the aim, it is attained." E. C. Hughes
Am J Soc 49:371 Ja '44 180w

"A sane and clear-headed analysis."
+ Christian Century 60:1407 D 1 '43 130w

"Particularly helpful in this useful book is a list of nineteen general proposals to forestall prospective post-war problems in the interracial field. . . The book is a valuable addition to Johnson's own Patterns of Negro Segregation." A. M. Lee
+ Social Forces 22:339 Mr '44 280w

" 'To Stem This Tide' by Dr. Johnson and his associates, is not as dramatic as 'Race Riot' because it is not concentrated on one community. He has gathered actual case material from all over the United States and has arranged the material so that it is simple and interesting reading." A. D. Black
+ Survey 80:99 Mr '44 280w

JOHNSON, CROCKETT, pseud. See Leisk, D. J.

JOHNSON, EMORY RICHARD. Railroads and public welfare; their problems and policies. 336p $3 Simmons-Boardman

385 Railroads—U.S. Railroads and state 44-5575

"The purpose of this book is to present an analysis, explanation, and constructive discussion of a subject that is much in the mind of the public." (Pref) Index.

"This is a volume which cannot but appeal strongly to those who are thinking of the country's problems in their fundamental influence. It will be especially valuable for those engaged in railway operation and administration and to those in the Federal Government. It is a contribution which furnishes the basis of sane thinking and action concerning transportation." W. T. Jackman
+ Ann Am Acad 236:197 N '44 850w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p2 Jl 30 '44 90w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:606 Jl '44 70w

JOHNSON, FREDERICK ERNEST, ed. Religion and the world order; a series of addresses and discussions. (Institute for religious studies. Religion and civilization ser) 223p $2 Harper

940.53144 Reconstruction (1939-). Religion and sociology 44-3282

"The lectures of this volume were delivered at the Jewish Theological Seminary of America during the academic year 1942-43 under the terms of the Littauer foundation, a foundation that enables 'ministers of all faiths to study under the guidance of scholars in various fields.' " (Christian Century) "There are several addresses on Post-War Reconstruction, including a valuable essay by Felix Morley on a reconstructed League of Nations; it points out very specifically the errors we shall have to avoid if we do not wish to see a repetition of the fiasco of the first League. Other contributions include 'Contemporary Secularism as an Impediment to Religious Effort' by the editor, 'Religious Liberty in the Post-War World,' by Luther A. Weigle, and 'Religion and Democracy' by Francis J. McConnell." (N Y Times)

"That man cannot live without religion is a truism, but whether any one of the present religious organizations will be able to reorder the world is, even after such fair and open-minded discussions, highly doubtful. The fact that it was precisely the religious in man which helped to bring about the changes of the twentieth century is too often conveniently overlooked." J. H. Bunzel
+ Am J Soc 50:169 S '44 420w

"None of the essays makes any startling new contributions to knowledge, but several of them are very good general statements of the problems with which they deal, and thus they fulfill their purposes well. To the reviewer it is encouraging to see that some religious leaders are concerned with these problems of crucial contemporary importance." J. M. Yinger
+ Am Soc R 9:587 O '44 600w

"An interesting compendium of essays." Ephraim Fischoff
+ Ann Am Acad 235:141 S '44 600w

Reviewed by W. E. Hammond
Christian Century 61:561 My 3 '44 700w

"For the most part the addresses are so honest, informative, and 'realistic' that one wishes maximum influence in the church and in the world for the kind of unfettered and constructive thinking they represent." D. E. Roberts
+ Crozer Q 21:352 O '44 600w

Reviewed by H. M. Magid
J Philos 41:613 O 26 '44 600w
N Y Times p26 Ap 30 '44 600w
Wis Lib Bul 40:85 Je '44

JOHNSON, GENE. Ship model building. 242p il $2.50 Cornell maritime

623.82 Ship models 44-40002

Simple text and many illustrations show the process of building model ships, from start to finish. Inexpensive tools are used. Index.

Booklist 40:192 F 1 '44

Library J 69:32 Ja 1 '44 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 28:69 O '43

"Mr. Johnson has made his book unusual by its attention to minute and authentic detail. He has supplied every needed diagram to supplement a 'know how,' and has covered all possible pitfalls. Best of all, he has shown how the simplest and most inexpensive materials can be utilized, and has devoted particular attention to those refinements of rigging and fittings which establish identity, whether for tubby drudge of the sea or towering ship of the line." J. H. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 27 '44 240w

JOHNSON, GERALD WHITE. Woodrow Wilson; the unforgettable figure who has returned to haunt us. 293p il $2 Harper

B or 92 Wilson, Woodrow 44-6248

A collection of photographs and cartoons covering the major events in the life of Woodrow Wilson from 1909, when he was president of Princeton, to his death in 1924. The author, who has provided an introduction and running comment, had the collaboration of the editors of Look magazine in assembling the pictures.

"These photographs are revealing and edifying. . . The deficiency, it seems to me, is in the captions. They are oversimplified. One cannot explain such contending forces in a few sentences." Edward Weeks

+ — Atlantic 174:125 S '44 420w

Reviewed by Irving Stone

Book Week p3 Jl 30 '44 230w

Booklist 41:20 S '44

"Of course it is the pictures which will sell the book, but it had to be said that Mr. Johnson's text is useful and also that it is very well written."

+ Commonweal 40:375 Ag 4 '44 700w

Foreign Affairs 23:10 O '44 20w

"Despite the revival of Wilsoniana, a specialized, speculative market."

Kirkus 12:317 Jl 15 '44 150w

Reviewed by Richard Hofstadter

New Repub 11:252 Ag 28 '44 170w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p5 Jl 16 '44 500w

"Mr. Johnson's introduction and captions are adequate, despite an emotional content that occasionally gives his prose the choked quality of a prolonged sob, but it is the photographs, which have something of the cumulative effect of a news-reel, that make this a book worth having."

+ — New Yorker 20:60 Jl 22 '44 100w

"Gerald W. Johnson, well known as an editorial writer for The Baltimore Sun and as the author of a number of books on historical subjects, has achieved a pictorial narrative of realistic and mounting interest. Woodrow Wilson, the multiple man—educator, historian, orator, people's leader, and statesman—is revealed in the panoramic unfolding of his visible actions." E. G. Sisson

+ Sat R of Lit 27:8 Jl 15 '44 1100w

Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 16 '44 330w

"An admirably arranged book of photographs." Lamar Trotti

+ Weekly Book Review p3 Jl 16 '44 1000w

Wis Lib Bul 40:147 N '44

JOHNSON, HARRIETT. Your career in music; in collaboration with Vocational guidance research, Evelyn Steele, director. 319p il $3 Dutton

780.071 Music as a profession 44-8024

"Well-organized, adequate presentation of vocational opportunities for music students. Appended are opinions about the desirability of a degree, a list of major awards, schedules of approximate costs for a New York recital, and a bibliography. Partial contents: The concert artist; Teaching is a talent; Wielding a baton; Chamber music; Can you compose?; The importance of opera; Those who write about music." Booklist

Booklist 41:55 O 15 '44

Kirkus 12:407 S 1 '44 130w

"The tone is stimulating though hazards and difficulties are firmly stated, and the advice definite, not in generalities. A more practical book in its own field has not yet been offered to the student or the student's anxious parents."

+ Weekly Book Review p12 O 1 '44 200w

Wis Lib Bul 40:144 N '44

JOHNSON, HARRY JULIUS. Invitation to health; a guide to successful living. 249p $2.75 Prentice-Hall

613 Hygiene SG44-124

"This book consists of 34 short essays on subjects which are taken up in the conventional book dealing with healthful living. The treatments of the various subjects are brief but correct. Many common fallacies about diets, blood pressure, and various diseases are pointed out. . . The author is medical director of Life Extension Institute and Examiners, New York." J Home Econ

Booklist 40:352 Je 15 '44

"If one wants a brief treatment of the subject of healthful living, written in a clear, nontechnical style, he will be pleased with this book. However, the treatment is too brief in most cases to satisfy people who really want to know about the factors which influence health." Jennie Williams

+ — J Home Econ 37:48 Ja '45 120w

"Reliable, sensible."

+ Kirkus 12:190 Ap 15 '44 90w

JOHNSON, JAMES GLOVER. Highroads of the universe; introduction to Christian philosophy. 316p $2.50 Scribner

201 Christianity—Philosophy 44-9805

The author of this work is head of the department of religion at Mount Hermon School for Boys. The book is divided into three parts in which the author shows the relationships between the physical, spiritual, and social aspects of life and Protestant Christian philosophy.

"The book deserves to be judged not only as an introduction to Christian philosophy but also, and more rightfully as a demonstration of what Mr. Johnson has accomplished in presenting religion within the context of the secondary and higher levels of education. It is thus an immensely important piece of evidence relative to the current interest in the place of religion in general education. It goes a long way in giving concrete proof of the frequent assertion that religion does have such a place. In this respect the book is virtually a pioneer in its field. It is unfortunate that it is not being so presented to the public." W. B. Blakemore, Jr.

Christian Century 61:1479 D 20 '44 800w

"This is a valuable outline of the most significant theories and discoveries of the scientists, on the one hand, and of the more modern interpretation of religion, especially Christianity, on the other. The results of the investigations of very scholarly men are put forth in language that the man in the street can understand."

+ Kirkus 12:505 N 1 '44 170w

"In terms of the tradition in which it is written, Dr Johnson's book has the merit of being clear, concise and readable without deliberately oversimplifying the tremendous problems it touches. . . The author's discussion of the nature of man is better on its scientific side than on its religious. Dr Johnson has learned much from Freud, Adler and Jung, and he has made a good job of relating their insights to the Christian understanding of personality. But he oversimplifies the human situation because he does not make full use of the implications of his own source material." C. D. Kean

+ — Springf'd Republican p6 D 15 '44 550w

JOHNSON, MARGARET SWEET, and JOHNSON, MRS HELEN (LOSSING). Rex of the coast patrol; il. by [the authors]. 95p $2 Harcourt

Dogs—Legends and stories 44-3678

Story of a young German shepherd dog, antagonized by unkind treatment, who joined a band of outlaw dogs for a time. A state trooper captured Rex and he was turned over to the Coast Guard where he made good, and after an exciting spy episode, won a medal.

Booklist 40:343 Je 1 '44

"The book about Rex is one that boys and girls from 9 to 12 will enjoy. In it, they will find not only an interesting and touching story, but also considerable insight into the training of dogs for wartime patrol." F. C. Darling

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 26 '44 240w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 20:208 My '44 50w

"Recommended where price need not be considered." A. M. Anderson

+ Library J 69:654 Ag '44 70w

"Its fine study of canine psychology makes this the best of the Johnson dog stories to date. German shepherds at the Dornwald Kennels, New Canaan, Conn, have been used as models for the delightful drawings." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p19 Jl 9 '44 200w

New Yorker 20:56 Jl 8 '44 50w

"A life-like study of dog psychology, so many of its pictures—best of this good series—are taken on the spring that their effect is of strength, beauty and purpose." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Je 4 '44 250w

Wis Lib Bul 40:132 O '44

JOHNSON, MARTHA, pseud. See Lansing, E. C. H.

JOHNSON, MELVIN MAYNARD. Rifles and machine guns; a modern handbook of infantry and aircraft arms. 390p il $5 Morrow

623.44 Rifles. Machine guns 44-7375

"Survey of modern military small arms. Over 60 specific weapons of the United States and foreign weapons of World War II are analyzed and discussed. A companion volume to Automatic Arms and Ammunition." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 41:37 O 1 '44

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 69:653 Ag '44 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:44 Jl '44

JOHNSON, MELVIN MAYNARD, and HAVEN, CHARLES TOWER. Ammunition; its history, development and use, 1600 to 1943. 374p $5 Morrow

623.455 Ammunition 43-18535

Companion volume to Automatic arms, by the same authors (Book Review Digest, 1942). The present volume gives the history of ammunition from about 1600, with the introduction of the paper musket cartridge into Europe, to the fixed shells and cartridge of today. Contains a chapter on current trends and future developments. Illustrated. Index.

Booklist 40:207 F 15 '44

Bookmark 5:7 My '44

Kirkus 12:19 Ja 1 '44 130w

Library J 68:960 N 15 '43 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 28:60 O '43

"An authoritative and broadly inclusive treatise."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 15:4 Je '44 90w

JOHNSON, OSA HELEN (LEIGHTY) (MRS CLARK HALLAM GETTS). Bride in the Solomons. 251p il $3 Houghton

919.35 Solomon islands 44-8247

Description of an extended honeymoon spent in the jungles of the Solomon islands some thirty years ago. Osa Johnson was the bride and she and her husband, Martin Johnson, were attempting to get motion pictures of a cannibal feast. Their experiences at Tulagi, on the cannibal island of Malaita, and other islands in the New Hebrides and the Solomons are described in detail, and the book is copiously illustrated with photographs.

Book Week p4 O 15 '44 180w

Booklist 41:76 N 1 '44

"Fighting fronts of today recalled in the days of exploratory travel, with their primitive aspects rather obviously dished up for the immediate occasion."

Kirkus 12:294 Jl 1 '44 210w

"'Bride in the Solomons' is not an important book—or even a very good travelogue. Mrs. Johnson is vague about the location of many of the places of which she writes—and the spelling of the names of many of the islands has undergone a sea change since she was there. But as a story of two adventurous young Kansans, starting a career of romanticized travel that later brought them a fortune, it makes first-rate reading." Foster Hailey

+ — N Y Times p4 O 8 '44 850w

"Like her other books, this is breezy and unpretentious, and it may have a timely interest for Americans now that our soldiers are in those islands. . . There are no horrors, merely a few pleasant gasps for the book-club ladies. Mrs. Johnson is handier with a camera than with a sentence, as the volume's illustrations attest."

New Yorker 20:83 O 7 '44 130w

Reviewed by N. L. Rothman

Sat R of Lit 27:27 N 4 '44 270w

"Equalling Osa Johnson's flair for portraiture is her ability to make the reader keenly aware of natural scenery, the sights and smells of the jungle. More than 60 fine photographs enhance and complete her verbal account of a honeymoon in the South Seas." M. L. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d O 8 '44 500w

"Charis Crockett, anthropologist, whose beautiful 'The House in the Rain Forest' was a record of two years on New Guinea just before the war, also a bride engaged with her husband in scientific research, wrote wittily and with a memorable philosophical comment on primitive life. Osa Johnson's story is more exciting narrative, more adventure story, but both books, aside from their information and readable experiences, throw up a significant fact. American women, wherever they are, have the makings of good pioneers." Ernestine Evans

+ Weekly Book Review p3 O 1 '44 1000w

Wis Lib Bul 40:159 D '44

JOHNSON, PAMELA HANSFORD (MRS NEIL STEWART). Winter quarters. 346p $2.50 Macmillan [8s 6d Collins]

44-5302

Novel based on the lives of the men of an anti-tank regiment, settled in an English village for the winter. The personalities of officers and men are pictured, as well as those of the civilians, as the regiment waits its call to action.

"The book has in it a great deal that is beautiful, but it also has some serious faults. The daily routine of the battery is barely sketched in, so that the reader knows the soldiers only off duty when they are at their worst. Mrs. Strutt, a fine and well-drawn character, drops out of the story too soon; the outcome of a court-martial, about which much ado has been made is left in doubt. The attempted suicide of young Eileen, after her troubles have been adjusted, has no apparent justification." Otto Eisenschiml

JOHNSON, P. H.—Continued

+ — Book Week p4 Je 25 '44 320w

Booklist 40:377 Jl 1 '44

"There's no denying that Miss Johnson can use colorful, crisp conversations and letters with effect. But what effect! Trifling women, faithless, restless men. Just one conventional couple in the crowd. Maybe it's true but it's certainly disillusioning and no morale maker!"
Cath World 159:572 S '44 140w

"Alert and observant revelations of civilian-soldier relationships in a kaleidoscopic review of an anti-tank regiment's stay near a small English village during the winter."
+ Kirkus 12:178 Ap 15 '44 150w

"There is a very long list of characters, soldiers and civilians, and the story flits here and there from one group to another without developing a main thread or posing a single character for peculiar notice. The people are well seen, and their many conversations have an effect of being natural." J. D. Beresford
Manchester Guardian p3 D 17 '43 50w

"'Winter Quarters' is anything but romantic. The best that has been said of it in the reviews that I have read is that it is 'neatly written.' . . As a man I maintain that Mrs. Johnson has not only attempted a task which most women novelists would fight shy of, but that she has succeeded remarkably well just where one would expect a woman writer to fail: she has portrayed the relationships between a group of Englishmen who never, under any circumstances but that of war, could have found themselves under the same roof." James Stern
+ Nation 159:135 Jl 29 '44 700w

Reviewed by William Poster
New Repub 111:82 Jl 17 '44 300w

"Feminists (only) will rejoice in this gallant attempt to launch a successful invasion on a male military headquarters somewhere in England. . . With women Mrs. Johnson is more at home and therefore more interesting. The girls, whisking in and out of the ladies' entrance supplied by the author, trifle with the affections of their men sufficiently to keep plots and counter-plots spinning merrily. Sex, although skittishly rampant, is kept in its place with a breezy half truth or the rush of decency. This constant hovering on the threshold of Eros has an innocently salacious effect." Isabelle Mallet
N Y Times p6 Je 18 '44 380w

"Morning tea for second lieutenants and majors named Cameron-Leckie may seem not quite recognizable features of camp life to American readers, who, however, will probably find themselves agreeably but not too deeply involved in the loves and jealousies of the battery's officers and men."
New Yorker 20:77 Je 17 '44 70w

"Winter Quarters is both ambitious and entertaining: it can be warmly recommended to the bulk of the novel reading public and should gain the author many new admirers." John Hampson
+ Spec 172:132 F 11 '44 500w

"As might be expected in these circumstances, [the author's] is not an exacting or particularly original vein of fiction. She is brisk, determinedly vivacious and slangily at ease, however, and she offers many or most of the pleasures of the sort of minor naturalism which can so easily accommodate a topical setting."
Times [London] Lit Sup p623 D 25 '43 300w

"There is not much plot or dramatic action in 'Winter Quarters.' There is, however, a wide variety of character and a sprightly, realistic dissection of British Army life. Its crisp, racy and very British dialogue adds to its attractions on this side of the Atlantic." William Poster
+ Weekly Book Review p6 Je 18 '44 550w

JOHNSON, RALPH PAINE. The steam locomotive; its theory, operation and economics, incl. comparisons with Diesel-electric locomotives. 2d ed rev & enl 564p il $5 Simmons-Boardman

621.131 Locomotives 44-3554

"Second edition revised and corrected with new chapters on steam utilization, braking and distribution of locomotive weight. Essentials of locomotive design and operation including comparisons with Diesel-electric locomotives and use of dynamometer cars when testing locomotives." (Library J) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1942. Index.

Booklist 40:357 Je 15 '44
Library J 69:463 My 15 '44 50w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:25 Ap '44

JOHNSON, S. Encyclopedia for boys and girls; a modern reference book. 396p il maps $3 Philosophical lib.

031 Encyclopedias and dictionaries—Juvenile literature

"This encyclopedia was designed to supply brief, accurate information on a wide range of subjects for the use of children from the elementary through the high school grades, as well as to afford training in the use of encyclopedias and to encourage the habit of using them. Accordingly, material to answer some ten thousand questions has been assembled and arranged alphabetically. A single-column page is used. Information is presented very briefly; few articles exceed fifteen lines in length. Information is often limited to a definition as in the case of forty terms included under the entry Architectural Words, or to names and dates as shown on three pages following the entry Battles, and the entry Writers (Poets, Novelists, etc). . . Neither title page nor preface gives any clue to the author's identity but there is considerable internal evidence to suggest that he is English." Subscription Bks Bul

---

"The reproductions are of unequal merit, but add interest to the accompanying explanation. Type is clear and easy to read, paper fair with margins which will permit rebinding, and the cover is neat and pleasing. A few typographical errors were noted, chief of them being Eisteddford for Eisteddfod. Much of the interesting information contained in Encyclopedia for Boys and Girls is readily found in a good dictionary. Many subjects of interest to the children of today are not included. These facts plus the limitations imposed by one person's point of view and interests only, make the book of little value as a tool to supply accurate information. It is not recommended."
— + Subscription Bks Bul 15:43 O '44 700w

JOHNSON, SEVERANCE. Dictator and the devil [narrative poem]. 322p il $3 Ecnareves press, 2 Rector st, N.Y. 6

811 43-15166

"Paradise may be lost, but Mr. Johnson found Hell and reports it in rhymed verse at book-length with pictures and notes at the back. The Dictator, unable to get full co-operation of Death without direct orders from headquarters, makes a long, round-about journey through the solar system to the infernal realm, surveys this in detail, finally gets to the head man—Satan complete with vermilion robes, black throne and a coiled cobra—and is promptly dropped through a trapdoor to a permanent dungeon." Weekly Book Review

---

"The poetry is good in isolated passages. In others, the lines rhyme, if nothing else. Messages put before the public in this form reach very few, but the sincerity and conviction of the author are apparent." M. D. H.
Springf'd Republican p8 F 10 '44 220w

"In its original form, a three-page pamphlet, this poem was reprinted in the Congressional Record. As it now stands, reading it would equip a filibuster."
Weekly Book Review p20 Ja 23 '44 150w

JOHNSON, STANLEY P., and ALEXANDER, WILLIAM MARVIN. Citizenship. 498p il maps $1.80 Ginn

300 Social sciences 44-5511

"A civics text that describes the ideals and benefits of our democracy, the institutions and processes—the tools—of our democratic system, and how youth can work with these tools to make democracy most effective." School & Society

School & Society 59:352 My 13 '44 40w

"Teachers will find in this new civics book a clear, interesting description of the ideals and benefits of our democracy."

+ Social Studies 35:288 O '44 50w

Reviewed by Julia Emery

Social Studies 35:332 N '44 600w

JOHNSON, THOMAS HERBERT, ed. Return to freedom; the affairs of our time and their impact upon youth [Forum lectures delivered at the Lawrenceville school in New Jersey] prefatory notes by [the editor] introd. by Allan V. Heely. 209p $2 Putnam

304 44-4903

"Essays revealing contemporary thought on existing conditions and attitudes." (Booklist) Contents: Learning and the life of man, by C. L. Becker; The forces that mold men's lives in peace and war, by J. R. Angell; The problem of statesmanship today, by F. P. Sayre; Law, lawyers, and the public, by Zechariah Chafee; The spiritual bases of democracy, by H. S. Coffin; 'Time is like a fashionable host,' by J. P. Marquand; The war and the American character, by Bruce Bliven; To halt in this land, by Max Lerner; The citizen as public servant, by C. P. Taft; Japan and America: an interpretation, by J. C. Grew; Education and the soldiers return, by Dixon Wecter.

"The Lawrenceville lectures are uneven in value. Prof. Zechariah Chafee's discussion of the law, for example, could have been delivered in 1929, just before the market crash, as well as during this war. But Carl Becker's penetrating discussion of learning, Charles P. Taft's simple account of Cincinnati's self-reform, Max Lerner's ruthless analysis of Fascism—these and others make one sure that America does not lack intellectual leaders who know what freedom is." Willard Shelton

+ — Book Week p10 Jl 30 '44 100w

Booklist 40:384 Jl 15 '44

Kirkus 12:176 Ap 1 '44 90w

Reviewed by C. B. Palmer

N Y Times p19 Jl 30 '44 500w

JOHNSON, WALTER. Battle against isolation. 269p il $3 Univ. of Chicago press

327.73 U.S.—Foreign policy. White, William Allen. World war, 1939—U.S. A44-4503

This book, which surveys certain aspects of America's thinking on war and European affairs during the last twenty years, is made up largely of the story of the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies and its head, William Allen White, of Emporia, Kansas.

Reviewed by B. J. Sheil

Book Week p1 N 5 '44 1400w

Booklist 41:75 N 1 '44

Christian Century 61:1355 N 22 '44 230w

Commonweal 41:74 N 3 '44 750w

Current Hist 8:70 Ja '45 80w

"Objective, to the point of stripping the material of color and implicit drama, courageous in calling rightful names and placing rightful blame. A challenge that, by facing the truth, we may avoid the pitfalls ahead. One could wish it had been published earlier, though it will stand as part of the record."

+ Kirkus 12:489 N 1 '44 210w

Reviewed by R. N. Kelly

New Repub 111:664 N 20 '44 70w

"Mr. Johnson's style is rapid, fluent and readable. His historical method is impeccable and he has achieved the rare phenomenon of a convincingly impartial account. Having made his own convictions clear at the start, he presents the facts as he finds them; but unfortunately he fails to make them speak eloquently enough to give the story life or purpose." E. W. Fox

+ — N Y Times p4 O 22 '44 600w

"The author leaves no shadow of doubt as to his own position in the debate or his opinion that 'only the constant strife of war and turmoil faces a nation that refuses to work with other nations for the common good.' But, in relating the story of the two hectic years that preceded the assault on Pearl Harbor he is eminently objective, and he has had access to a mass of hitherto unpublished material relating to the personalities and groups involved in the fight against isolation. . . When the author leaves William Allen White his work becomes far less vivid and substantial." H. W. Baehr

+ — Weekly Book Review p18 D 3 '44 700w

JOHNSON, WALTER C. Mathematical and physical principles of engineering analysis. 346p $3 McGraw

620.1 Engineering. Mathematics 44-4479

"A discussion of practical methods for tackling various types of engineering problems, based on engineering courses given at Princeton University. The emphasis is on the mathematical approach leading to the solution of such problems and demands a sound knowledge of college physics, mechanics and calculus. Following two brief chapters on general methods of analyzing the problem and a review of basic physical principles, the remaining chapters cover such points as setting up equations, dimensional series, Fourier series, and systems with distributed constants." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Library J 69:463 My 15 '44 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:43 Jl '44

JOHNSON, WILLIAM HARDING, and NEWKIRK, LOUIS VEST. Modern drafting. 197p il $2.50; school ed $1.72 Macmillan

744.4 Mechanical drawing. Lettering 44-2459

"Simply presented for high schools; also teaches technique of drafting and its application to industry, especially training for wartime jobs. Includes machine drawing, sheet metal and aircraft drafting, tracing, blueprinting and duplicating." Library J

Booklist 40:280 Ap 15 '44

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 69:205 Mr 1 '44 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:5 Ja '44

School & Society 59:192 Mr 11 '44 10w

"The book contains a large quantity of problems adapted to the various levels of ability. The problems are practical and the drawings are of objects that the student can understand. The book is planned to appeal to students at the high-school level. The illustrative drawings are new and to the point, and the pictures and illustrations are attractive and up to date. The book is so bound that it will lie open on the desk or drawing table—a feature which is an aid to the student using the book while drawing." H. O. Pearce

+ School R 53:60 Ja '45 600w

JOHNSON, WILLIAM HARDING, and NEWKIRK, LOUIS VEST. Transportation and power. 129p il pa $1.60 Macmillan

629.1 Airplane engines. Automobile engines 44-8563

"A very practical basal textbook for use in the industrial arts departments of junior and senior high schools. The entire book is devoted to the study of power-driven machines used in transportation. Each of the fifteen projects is fully explained in the text by full-

JOHNSON, W. H.—Continued
page illustrations showing step-by-step procedures." Social Studies

School & Society 60:144 Ag 26 '44 30w
Social Studies 35:335 N '44 60w

JOHNSTON, ERIC ALLEN. America unlimited. 254p $2.50; pa $1 Doubleday

330.973 U.S.—Economic policy. Capitalism
44-4676

A young American business man, president of the United States chamber of commerce, here describes what he calls "the case for a people's capitalism." Mr. Johnston has been mentioned as a possible Republican candidate for Vice President. He "rounds out his defense of private enterprise, rugged individualism and the competitive spirit with chapters which tell his own success story, expound his philosophy, analyze current moral issues and propound an American foreign policy and peace plan. What emerges most freshly from such pages is not the picture of an economic system so much as the picture of a man." (N Y Times) Index.

Reviewed by Sterling North
Book Week p2 Ap 23 '44 650w
Booklist 40:296 My 1 '44
Bookmark 5:5 My '44
Reviewed by L. M. Lyons
Boston Globe p17 My 3 '44 350w
Reviewed by J. F. Thorning
Cath World 159:475 Ag '44 320w
Reviewed by Edward Skillin, Jr.
Commonweal 40:63 My 5 '44 700w
Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:662 Jl '44 40w
Kirkus 12:109 Mr 1 '44 170w
Reviewed by John MacCormac
N Y Times p3 Ap 23 '44 1300w

"Mr. Johnston presents his case for what he calls a 'people's capitalism.' It looks a lot like the old, familiar capitalism, but Mr. Johnston, at least in this book, doesn't look very much like the old, familiar capitalist. Certain parts of his argument read like extracts from an after-dinner speech, but even so his book is a rather unusually effective statement of the conservative position."
+ — New Yorker 20:90 Ap 22 '44 80w

"Despite reservations, this book is recommended to economists, business men and all who would ponder over post-war economic problems." S. E. Harris
+ — Pol Sci Q 59:624 D '44 1250w
Reviewed by Hal Borland
Sat R of Lit 27:10 My 13 '44 2250w

"This is a bumptious book, and it would be easy to drop it with the deserved 'He certainly knows all the answers.' But it is also a sincere and inspiring book. It has in it something of a Mr Willkie setting out firmly to discover something of the world beyond our shores, something of a brash young pilot coming in on a wing and a prayer, something of Cecil Rhodes and a good deal of Rotary clubs. Those who journey with Mr Johnston will scarcely notice that they're in the middle of a well-traveled road, for they'll be having a rip-roaring good time." Alzada Comstock
+ Springf'd Republican p4d My 28 '44 600w
Reviewed by R. B. Scandrett, Jr.
Survey G 33:331 Jl '44 600w

"There are obscure spots in Mr. Johnston's analysis of future prospects, particularly in respect to the extent and machinery of foreign trade. But as an abandonment of what Mr. Johnston himself has called the negative public attitudes of American business, as a recognition by the president of the United States Chamber of Commerce that the world has changed and is changing, and as a warm expression of confidence in this country's future, 'America Unlimited' is a welcome contribution in this year of decision." H. W. Baehr
+ — Weekly Book Review p8 Ap 23 '44 550w
Wis Lib Bul 40:106 Jl '44

JOHNSTON, GEORGE. The doctrine of the church in the New Testament. 156p $2.50 Macmillan [10s 6d Cambridge]

270.1 Church history. Christianity. Bible. New Testament——Criticism, interpretation, etc.
[A43-2470]

"This scholarly work won for its author the Ph.D. of the University of Cambridge, England. It is a painstaking enquiry into the Pre-Pauline, Pauline, and Sub-Apostolic conceptions of the church, with a view to evaluating them for the sake of the unity, the university, and the world-mission of the church today." Churchman

"Being a thesis for a doctorate, it can, we regret to say, be read only by the learned. And this is a pity; for a recovery of the New Testament doctrine of the church has become of great importance in the recent movements towards Christian unity, and Prof. Johnston makes a contribution here that is of value. We can only, therefore, express the hope that the scholars will read it, and that the author will put the substance of it into a form in which it can be recommended to a wider public." F. J. Moore
Churchman 158:15 F 1 '44 150w

"This book . . . does not make an original contribution to our knowledge of the New Testament idea of the church, but it is nevertheless highly significant because it represents a judicious and scholarly re-examination of the writings of the New Testament in the light of the numerous modern studies of the earliest Christian conceptions of the church. Dr. Johnston proves that he is a master of philological and theological New Testament exegesis not only by his independent exposition of the biblical text but also by his critical use of the results of his fellow-workers in the New Testament field." Wilhelm Pauck
+ J Religion 24:298 O '44 300w

"Dr. Johnston's study is marked by solid judgment and independence of thought."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p406 Ag 21 '43 900w

JOHNSTON, GEORGE HENRY. Pacific partner. 227p $2.50 Duell

919.4 Australia. World war, 1939—Australia
44-40040

An Australian war correspondent writes this informal account of Australia, its history, leaders and people, and their characteristics, with stress on Australia and the present war.

Booklist 40:233 Mr 1 '44
Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '44
Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:666 Jl '44 20w

"The best of the books about the land down under, contemporary and sympathetic."
+ Kirkus 12:15 Ja 1 '44 130w

"Book should be intensely interesting to relatives and friends of American boys fighting the Pacific war from Australia as their base. . . Information salted with humor. A grand book; recommended to all libraries." G. W. Hill
+ Library J 69:158 F 15 '44 100w

"An American soldier in Australia asked Mr. Johnston to recommend a book which would give a good general idea of the nation. There was no book to recommend, so Mr. Johnston wrote one. He included a dash of Australia's history, an outline of its political ideals, rather too much about the glory of its feats at arms, sketches of its leaders, and a good analysis of the over-all strategical war problem in that area. Although his book is more journalistic than scholarly, it presents a useful and entertaining picture of Australia at war and simultaneously in transition." Marcus Duffield
+ — Nation 158:258 F 26 '44 550w

"The statement 'in that time (twenty-nine months) Australia had progressed from an agricultural country to a land of enormous industrial output' lacks perspective. Reference to pre-war employment figures, to the composition of the national income, etc., would clarify the role of industry in Australia's economy before 1939. And so on. Mr. Johnston should have spent more time checking his manuscript. The slips will escape the casual reader, of course. But since Australia is little known it is rather irritating to find a clever, vivid book marred by carelessness." C. H. Grattan

+ — N Y Times p5 Mr 5 '44 600w

"The book is too bright and brittle for readers of this journal but there is nothing better available of the same topical interest on the subject." J. B. Brigden

Pacific Affairs 17:254 Je '44 100w

"This reviewer can verify from personal experience with many of these young Americans in the Pacific that what Mr. Johnston recounts about them and their affection for his homeland is true. . . A book about such an Allied country, particularly when written by a competent journalist, cannot help but have appeal. Especially those who have friends or relatives in the Southwest Pacific will enjoy, and benefit from, a reading of 'Pacific Partner.' " C. B. Peters

+ Sat R of Lit 27:10 F 19 '44 800w

"The reader will applaud the commendable purpose of this book and will be pleased by Australia's intention of gearing her post-war policy more closely to American leadership in the Pacific. But the omission of blots upon the escutcheon and of dark clouds upon the horizon will arouse the wariness which all obvious propaganda breeds." Virginia Thompson

+ — Weekly Book Review p12 Ap 30 '44 470w

JOHNSTON, SAMUEL PAUL. Wings after war; the prospects of post-war aviation. 129p $2 Duell

387.7 Aeronautics, Commercial. Aeronautics 44-4466

"It is the purpose of this book to look at some of the problems of aviation of the immediate future, from a practical point of view. . . Without going into great technical detail, or without relying too heavily on statistics, it is intended to point up some of the trends that may be expected in the immediate post-war period in our military aviation, our commercial aviation, and in flying for the average citizen." Introd.

Reviewed by W. F. Morse

Book Week p3 My 7 '44 360w

Booklist 40:334 Je 1 '44

Kirkus 12:130 Mr 15 '44 150w

Library J 69:463 My 15 '44 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:19 Ap '44

"A stimulating, informative little book calculated to keep our thinking about aviation on a realistic basis." Blair Bolles

+ N Y Times p7 My 21 '44 700w

JOINT COMMITTEE OF THE AMERICAN LIBRARY ASSOCIATION, NATIONAL EDUCATION ASSOCIATION AND NATIONAL COUNCIL OF TEACHERS OF ENGLISH. Basic book collection for elementary grades; Gretchen Westervelt, chairman. 133p pa $2 A.L.A.

028.5 Children's literature—Bibliography 44-40026

"Lists some 1400 children's books which a special committee of teachers and librarians think a child should get to know during his first 12 years of life. Of course 1400 books are too many for the average child to read—even in 10 years. But from these 1400 titles the parent can select the most appropriate book for the child and for the occasion, because each title is accompanied by a descriptive note which indicates the book's appeal, its age-group level and its difficulty." Springf'd Republican

"This is a handbook which should be of invaluable aid to parents in the purchasing of books for the home." P. A. Whitney

+ Book Week p11 F 20 '44 100w

Booklist 40:255 Mr 15 '44

"Like all booklists, this one must be used with discrimination, since a basic book collection for any group is a collection which meets the reading needs of that particular group. Teachers and other adults who are closely associated with children while they read will find in the present list some titles which boys and girls will not read voluntarily. . . Librarians, particularly, will appreciate its convenient arrangement of material." Evangeline Colburn

+ — El School J 44:433 Mr '44 400w

"The annotations are on the whole good, although there is some unevenness, owing no doubt to the variety of their source. They are mostly descriptive, but a few evaluative and comparative comments are included." A. B. Mooney

+ Library Q 14:265 Jl '44 850w

"Schools and children's libraries have long used earlier editions of this list. A good elementary school library today is largely built around the 1400 books described in it. But parents are now beginning to see in this book, compiled by children's reading authorities for the ALA, an ideal means for making wise choices for family bookshelves. The most modern parent does not have to be an expert in children's reading—with the 'Basic Book Collection for Elementary Grades' he can be an expert buyer of books for his child."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 6 '44 280w

JONES, ELI STANLEY. Christ of the American road. 255p $1 Abingdon-Cokesbury

277.3 U.S.—Church history. Christian ethics 44-6360

The author of The Christ of the Indian Road, has turned his attention to American Christianity and in this new book he attempts to show how we have failed to live up to our highest ideals and how we can apply the Christian creed to our own social problems.

Reviewed by Preston Bradley

Book Week p7 Jl 23 '44 450w

Booklist 41:7 S '44

"The Christ of the American Road repeats much that the author has said in previous volumes, deals largely with perfectly obvious trends in American life, and oversimplifies the problems which now confront us. . . By far the strongest part of this pocket-sized book is the last two chapters, one of which treats the emerging American interpretation of Christianity, and the other the future religious developments in this country. Here the writer does say something new and fresh. Here he is indeed a prophet worthy of honor in his own country." T. C. Johnson

+ — Christian Century 61:1137 O 4 '44 800w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 Je '44

"This little book deserves as wide a reading as The Christ of the Indian Road, despite the impression that while Stanley Jones knows his India from thirty years of sharing its life, he knows his America primarily by looking at it from the platform, where he is still introduced as 'Stanley Jones of India.' "

+ — Kirkus 12:369 Ag 15 '44 170w

Wis Lib Bul 40:124 O '44

JONES, HAROLD ELLIS, and others. Development in adolescence; approaches to the study of the individual; assisted by the staff of the Adolescent growth study, Inst. of child welfare, Univ. of California. 166p $2 Appleton-Century

136.7354 Adolescence 43-16183

"A detailed record of the growth of a boy between the ages of 10 and 18 with special emphasis on the inter-relatedness of growth factors and the various approaches to the study of development, such as observational methods, tests, and projective techniques. It examines various aspects of behavior and personal adjustment with reference to home and community backgrounds, social relationships within the adolescent culture, and the rhythm of physical and physiological changes in the individual." (School & Society) Index.

"It is a pleasure to welcome 'John Saunders,' with his complex variety of adolescent problems, into the psychological literature. . . With all his gratitude for the valuable material offered here, the reviewer must express some discontent with the additive 'montage' of data which forces the reader—with a necessarily incomplete body of knowledge—to 'develop his own hypotheses' (xiv) regarding the individual as a whole." L. J. Stone

JONES, H. E.—Continued

+ Am J Psychol 57:601 O '44 800w

School & Society 58:352 O 30 '43 80w

"This book and other case reports which may be published by the California Growth Study will be valuable to secondary-school teachers and will be profitably used in the training of prospective teachers." R. J. Havighurst

+ School R 52:317 My '44 600w

"The thoughtful parent and the serious student of child life will welcome Development in Adolescence." E. R. G.

+ Social Forces 23:237 D '44 110w

JONES, HOWARD MUMFORD. Ideas in America. 304p $3 Harvard univ. press

810.9 American literature—History and criticism. U.S.—Intellectual life A44-1981

"Dean Jones tells us that his book is offered in lieu of a long planned volume on the influences of French literature in the United States. 'But now that I have sunk to being an administrator of sorts, I see no prospect of rounding out the history of which these inchoate fragments may be parts.' Hence we are here presented with a group of papers combining those which plead for scholarship in the field of American letters, those which deal with the history of ideas and their influences in America, and the final section treating of the contemporary responsibilities of American literary scholars." Sat R of Lit

---

Reviewed by A. O. Sarkissian
Ann Am Acad 236:224 N '44 310w

Booklist 40:386 Jl 15 '44

"This volume by a distinguished teacher, man of letters, and Dean of Harvard Graduate School combines challenging and stimulating ideas with deep scholarship and with a style that is delightfully clear and forceful." John Pick

+ Cath World 160:85 O '44 550w

"Viewed in its entirety, the book strikes a note that is affirmative, progressive, and American in the best sense of the word. By so doing it makes a positive contribution toward the growing recognition of a national literary tradition in accord with the ideals of Emerson and Whitman, and at the same time enlightened by a broad world view." S. W. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 1 '44 800w

Current Hist 7:52 Jl '44 80w

"The author is scholarly without being dull, and hortatory without being jingoistic. . . The upshot is a thoroughly honest and readable, and often exciting and eloquent, book." Carlos Baker

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 20 '44 900w

"It is a matter for congratulation not only to Harvard but to the nation that this kind of mind is helping to shape 'the creation of a new intellectual order' of such a truly national university as President Conant aspires to build." Ordway Tead

+ Sat R of Lit 27:16 Je 17 '44 650w

"Of particular interest is the essay on American Literature and the Melting Pot which suggests that the persistent indifference of our literature toward the non-English element in American civilization is fraught with peril to our democratic experiment. Perhaps the most valuable of the essays is that dealing with the peculiarly American nature of classicism, romanticism and liberalism in the United States. It is valuable because it reminds us of the danger of applying to the American scene tags appropriate enough for the European, and suggests the desirability of a more perspicacious study of comparative institutional developments." H. S. Commager

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ag 27 '44 900w

Wis Lib Bul 40:108 Jl '44

JONES, JOE. 1-B soldier. 162p $2 Harper

355.12 U.S.—Army—Military life 44-4772

These brief, simple articles dealing with the life in camp of a "limited-service" inductee were originally written for publication in the author's home-town paper. Private Joe Jones during the course of his first year of relatively unimportant service achieved some fame by marrying a Brooklyn girl, Betty Smith, author of A Tree Grows in Brooklyn.

"The tone of the book in dealing with the simple and obvious is one of quiet reflection, which has sometimes the drone of truism, sometimes an individual insight and humor. The book's most attractive quality is a charming modesty and simplicity which the reader is sure quite directly reflects the author himself. It cannot be said to be very exciting reading, all in all; but the volume as a whole leaves one with the feeling of pleasant warmth after an encounter with a genuinely unassuming and altogether appealing young man." John Mallow

+ — Book Week p4 My 14 '44 310w

Booklist 40:352 Je 15 '44

Kirkus 12:132 Mr 15 '44 110w

"A thoughtful book."

+ Weekly Book Review p19 My 21 '44 100w

JONES, JOSEPH MARION. Modern foreign policy for the United States. 94p $1.35 Macmillan

327.73 U.S.—Foreign policy 44-2764

Three articles which have already been printed in Fortune magazine are here published in book form. The thesis is that the future prosperity and security of the United States rests on three things: "(1) that we have a well-defined and predictable foreign policy; (2) that we have an organization—a State Department—with procedures and spiritual equipment adequate to the execution of a well-defined foreign policy; and (3) that support of an agreed foreign policy be built upon the conscious will of an informed electorate and their representatives in Congress." (Introd) The author was an officer of the State department for six years before joining the staff of Fortune in 1943.

Reviewed by W. L. Godshall
Am Pol Sci R 38:592 Je '44 230w

"This small book is remarkably thought-provoking. No student of our foreign policy can afford to be without it, for it outlines future trends with a cogency that is impressive. For the same reason, the average intelligent reader who wants to know whether we can learn anything from the welter of muddling and blood in which we have lived for thirty years should read this book." D. F. Fleming

+ Ann Am Acad 234:132 Jl '44 410w

Booklist 40:278 Ap 15 '44

"Mr. Jones, a Texan, spent four years as an economist of the Tariff Commission and six years in the State Department. He writes concisely and with clarity." A. J. Peaslee

+ Columbia Law R 44:948 N '44 420w

Current Hist 6:438 My '44 160w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:660 Jl '44 30w

Kirkus 12:38 Ja 15 '44 120w

"Should be read by all thinking Americans desiring a real and lasting peace!" L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 69:70 Ja 15 '44 100w

Reviewed by Volta Torrey
Nation 158:601 My 20 '44 180w

Reviewed by Mortimer Hays
New Repub 110:745 My 29 '44 750w

N Y Times p19 Ap 9 '44 550w

"The first section of the book contains a good deal of sound analysis and a realistic approach to the post-war problems. It is also compactly written, which is a relief after wading through the wordage of so many other plans. The attack on the State Department in section two is so fervid that one finishes it with a feeling that there must be a good deal to say on the other side." Hal Borland

+ — Sat R of Lit 27:23 Ap 15 '44 400w
Time 43:99 Ap 10 '44 500w
Reviewed by H. B. Parkes
Weekly Book Review p8 Ag 27 '44 300w

JONES, MARION STURGES-. See Sturges-Jones, M.

JONES, MARY ALICE. Tell me about Jesus; il. by Pelagie Doane. 69p $2 Rand McNally
232.9 Jesus Christ—Juvenile literature 44-47147

Conversations between a small child and his mother provide answers to a child's questions about Jesus. Illustrations, some in color.

Booklist 41:127 D 15 '44
Christian Century 61:1355 N 22 '44 30w

"This is one of the cases where the question and answer method serves a purpose, for almost all parents are confronted with the problems this wise young mother met in answering her son's questions about Jesus. The instinctive association—in children's minds—of their own problems with the facts about Jesus is here skilfully handled, and the figure of Jesus emerges as a reality. . . A good Christmas item."
+ Kirkus 12:518 N 15 '44 170w
Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p6 N 26 '44 150w

JONES, ROY EDWIN. Basic chicken guide for the small flock owner; introd. by E. B. White. 191p il $2.50 Morrow
636.5 Poultry Agr44-212

Comprehensive handbook of practical advice for the poultry raiser with a small flock. Partial contents: Should I keep poultry?; What size flock?; Poultry houses and fixtures; Selecting high quality stock; Candling, grading, and preserving eggs; Killing and dressing poultry; Poultry diseases; Keep poultry accounts; Basic ways to cook poultry and eggs. The author is a member of the extension service in Connecticut. Index.

Kirkus 12:338 Ag 1 '44 60w
Reviewed by J. P. Hunter
Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 9 '44 300w

"His book may be just the simple, practical work many small libraries are looking for. For good measure, there is an introduction by E. B. White which is a well-balanced combination of humor and good sense."
+ Wis Lib Bul 40:126 O '44

JONES, RUFUS MATTHEW. Radiant life. 154p $2 Macmillan
248 Spiritual life 44-4541

Volume of papers and addresses, all inspirational. Two chapters were given as lectures, and two others have appeared elsewhere.

Booklist 40:333 Je 1 '44
Christian Century 61:646 My 24 '44 40w

"This volume of essays is Rufus Jones at his best. He draws upon his knowledge of the Bible, of literature, and of life, to give us six interesting and uplifting homilies."
+ Kirkus 12:141 Mr 15 '44 110w
Library J 69:646 Ag '44 20w

"Best of all about the book, perhaps, is the fact that Dr Jones's own radiant life shines through every page, crowding each one with homely anecdote, idiomatic phraseology and practical philosophy. A preacher could find much material for his profession and the layman for his everyday work in this volume." A. M. J.
+ Springf'd Republican p8 S 20 '44 330w
Wis Lib Bul 40:124 O '44

JONES, VIRGIL CARRINGTON. Ranger Mosby. 347p il map $3.50 Univ. of N.C. press
B or 92 Mosby, John Singleton 44-8072

Biography of John Mosby, the Virginia lawyer, who led the Partisan Rangers during the Civil war, and later became the friend of General Grant and a United States consul in Hong Kong. Mosby's tactics against the Northern troops have been compared to the modern commando technique. Index.

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 D 17 '44 80w
Booklist 41:57 O 15 '44
Christian Science Monitor p14 Ja 27 '45 500w

"Excellent, adventurous material, handled with balance of hero worship and just criticism."
+ Kirkus 12:357 Ag 15 '44 210w

"Book is documented, well illustrated, of excellent format. Maps interspersed in text might add to enjoyment of amateur strategist. . . Generally recommended." J. H. Berthel
+ Library J 69:696 S 1 '44 110w

"Virgil Carrington Jones, Virginia-born newspaper man now on the staff of The Wall Street Journal, in 'Ranger Mosby' has written a long-needed, full-length biography of the great scout and cavalry leader, and has done it with excellent use of the combined arts of story-telling and scholarship." N. K. Burger
+ N Y Times p7 S 3 '44 1150w
Time 44:102 S 11 '44 550w
Reviewed by Lloyd Lewis
Weekly Book Review p5 S 17 '44 1300w

"Colonel John Singleton Mosby rates little more than three or four footnotes in Freeman's exhaustive studies of General Lee's lieutenants, yet he receives from another Virginia biographer, Mr. Jones, a volume all to himself—a volume which can well flank Mr. Freeman's massive tomes on any shelf devoted to the Civil War." Lloyd Lewis
+ Yale R n s 34:368 winter '45 750w

JONG, LOUIS DE, and STOPPELMAN, JOSEPH W. F. Lion rampant. 386p il $3 Querido, inc, 381 4th av, N.Y. 16
940.53492 Netherlands—History—German occupation, 1940-. World war, 1939—Netherlands 44-40003

"The story of the Dutch resistance—and the tyranny they resisted—is told in this case history of a Nazi occupation. Originally written by L. de Jong of London's free Radio Oranje, it has been translated and brought up-to-date by Joseph W. F. Stoppelman. The record of the first three occupation years has been pieced together from underground publications, accounts of escaped refugees, and the nazified Dutch radio and press." N Y Times

Reviewed by H. S. Lucas
Am Hist R 49:776 Jl '44 240w

"For the many who know the Netherlands well, The Lion Rampant is a book to read and reread. It leaves a feeling of pride and hope—pride in the Dutch unconquered in their enslavement, hope in a future which will repay the sacrifices. But those only slightly familiar with the country and its people should also read this book in spite of the large number of details which do not make it easy reading. It teaches a never-to-be-forgotten lesson—a lesson that no country can stay apart when criminal nations are at large." S. Van Valkenburg
+ Ann Am Acad 234:147 Jl '44 320w
Reviewed by H. L. Reich
Book Week p4 F 6 '44 320w
Booklist 40:195 F 1 '44
Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:663 Jl '44 20w
Reviewed by Marcus Duffield
Nation 158:397 Ap 1 '44 500w
Reviewed by H. H. F. Eulau
New Repub 110:387 Mr 20 '44 160w
Reviewed by Richard Match
N Y Times p6 F 6 '44 480w

JONG, L. DE—Continued

School & Society 59:80 Ja 29 '44 40w

Reviewed by R. S. Scott

Springf'd Republican p7e F 13 '44 550w

"This story of Netherlands' resistance May 10, 1940, suffers from its virtues. It probably is the most authentic and complete account of the Nazi invasion of Holland, and its excellent index and appendix material make it an admirable reference book. But though it is a work of collaboration between the Dutch journalist L. de Jong and J. W. F. Stoppelman, head of the Netherlands Information Bureau in New York, it leaves much to be desired, as a presentation of the Dutch position, to American readers. The authors know too much and take too much for granted." Ernestine Evans

— + Weekly Book Review p12 Mr 19 '44 500w

JORDAN, MRS HELEN (ASHTON). See Ashton, H.

JORDAN, MAX. Beyond all fronts; a bystander's notes on this thirty years war. 386p $3 Bruce pub.

940.52 World politics. World war, 1939-. Germany—Politics and government. Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc.
44-51444

"European-born American foreign correspondent and now Associate Director of the National Broadcasting Company's 'University of the Air,' makes an eloquent plea for a peace of justice, not of revenge. The writer has drawn upon his long experience in Europe, and an abiding faith in mankind's potentialities for good, to write a superior war correspondent's book. . . The chief contribution of Mr. Jordan's book is not its philosophy, but the light it throws on that penumbral and legendary German anti-Nazi, Dr. Karl Goerdler, former mayor of Leipzig. With six collaborators, Dr. Goerdler was reportedly hanged in Berlin last September on charges of plotting to overthrow Hitler." Christian Science Monitor

"Jordan's concern for lasting peace is admirable but his idea that Germany is capable of contributing to it reads strangely beside the almost daily reports of the horrors she perpetrated in the lands her soldiers overran." W. F. Morse

Book Week p10 Ja 14 '45 270w

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ja 15 '45 500w

Commonweal 41:401 F 2 '45 800w

JORDAN, MILDRED A. (MRS J. LEE BAUSHER). Shoo-fly pie; il. by Henry C. Pitz. 118p $2 Knopf 44-4324

Life on a Pennsylvania Dutch farm as seen thru the eyes of eight-year-old Debby, who got very tired of being told she could not do this or that, because she was too young. Debby was always willing to try anything once, so she learned by sad experience that she was too young to milk, to ride on the Ferris wheel, or go to the Hallowe'en parade. But when it came to making that Pennsylvania delicacy, shoo-fly pie, even her father had to revise his remarks about being "too young."

Booklist 40:343 Je 1 '44

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p8 Jl 31 '44 230w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 20:285 Jl '44 110w

"One of the most beguiling books of the season."

+ Kirkus 12:218 My 1 '44 170w

"A comfortable family story of the Pennsylvania Dutch, of an energetic little girl and of holidays and happenings which especially mark the year for her. Dialect will interfere little with reading. A few attractive colored pictures as well as black and whites. Recommended." Isabel McLaughlin

+ Library J 69:607 Jl '44 110w

"Debby is worth knowing, and so is her big, laughing family. Mildred Jordan, author of two adult novels of the land of 'the seven sweets and seven sours,' has written one of the liveliest stories we have yet had of that region, and Henry Pitz has caught its homely flavor and fun in his illustrations." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 My 28 '44 200w

"Pennsylvania Dutch speech, customs, and superstitions are well woven into a warm-hearted story and Henry Pitz's illustrations help in creating a particularly pleasing book for readers of the intermediate grades."

+ New Yorker 20:56 Jl 8 '44 70w

"Through Debby's story one gains real insight into the language and customs of her people. . . The book has many illustrations in black and white and several full-page pictures in color. Gloriously bright farmhouses, strong and sometimes weird trees, and bright visions of life at the fair make the book memorable." B. W. S.

+ Sat R of Lit 27:29 S 23 '44 230w

"All Debby does is honestly meant, convincingly told and continuously funny. Henry C. Pitz, on holiday from costume pieces, has fun with pictures of which several are in color: they are right off the farm and in recognizable spots like the County Fair, Reading Markets and the Street of the Halloween Parade." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ap 30 '44 350w

Wis Lib Bul 40:112 Jl '44

JORDAN, PASCUAL. Physics of the 20th century; tr. by Eleanor Oshry. 185p $4 Philosophical lib.

530 Physics

"Although originally written ten years ago, this concise, non-technical presentation of the basic principles of modern physics is only now available for readers limited to the English language. . . The book loses nothing by the delay in publication of this edition for it deals with the fundamental concepts underlying the revolution in physical science that began with Planck's 'discovery of quanta' in 1900, rather than the important but relatively minor details of progress in knowledge of atomic structures during the last few years. As all who are familiar with Jordan's writings would expect, it contains much philosophy as well as trustworthy factual information." Scientific Bk Club R

"In this brilliant work one of the leading contemporary theoretical physicists interrupts his fundamental researches to give us his impression of the state of modern physics, and its effects on philosophy and religion. . . Eleanor Oshry has rendered an important service to the English-speaking public through her excellent translation." Rufus Oldenburger

+ Book Week p6 Jl 30 '44 550w

Library J 69:815 O 1 '44 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:47 Jl '44

Scientific Bk Club R 15:3 O '44 420w

JORDAN, PETER. Central union of Europe; introd. by Ernest Minor Patterson. 110p maps $2 McBride

940.5 Central Europe 44-8373

"A plan for the federation of the countries of Central Europe from the Mediterranean to the Baltic and lying between Russia and Germany—the 11 small ineffectual nations which for centuries have been the breeding places for war and the happy hunting grounds of aggressors." School & Society

"The argument is interesting, even if not convincing."

Christian Century 61:1258 N 1 '44 80w

Christian Science Monitor p16 O 5 '44 400w

"An idea, rather than a book, and a lesser contribution to the postwar planning panacea. . . A valid theory, but insufficiently developed here and making certain naive assumptions."
Kirkus 12:316 Jl 15 '44 90w
School & Society 60:224 S 30 '44 40w

JORDAN, W. M. Great Britain, France, and the German problem, 1918-1939; a study of Anglo-French relations in the making and maintenance of the Versailles settlement [pub. under the auspices of the Royal institute of int. affairs]. 248p $4.50 (15s) Oxford

327.4 Great Britain—Foreign relations. France—Foreign relations. Germany—Foreign relations. Versailles, Treaty of, 1919. Europe—Politics A44-693

"This scholarly book of 230 well-indexed pages falls exactly within its publisher's definition: 'A study of Anglo-French relations in the making and maintenance of the Versailles treaty.' It analyses the problems of Europe as they arose during the period covered, shows what solution was attempted in each case—often empirically and under the pressure of uninformed and emotional public opinion —and leaves the reader to draw his own conclusion. Dr. Jordan has carried out his research at the invitation of Chatham House and it supplements five years earlier and profound investigation into the problem of French security as it arose at the Paris peace conference. The present book is a merger of both studies but it omits any aspects of Anglo-French relations not bearing directly on the German problem." Spec

---

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:662 Jl '44 40w

"Though Mr. Jordan is not altogether successful in disentangling a complicated story his book is a useful guide to those who wish to grasp the lessons to be learnt from this bitter experience." J. L. H.
+ — Manchester Guardian p3 D 24 '43 300w
New Statesman & Nation 26:290 O 30 '43 180w

"A work of exacting and sober scholarship can afford absorbing reading, especially if it deals (as the present book does) with the central problem for the future of peace and liberty in Europe. Dr. Jordan, an English historian, presents a model of impartial and understanding analysis." Hans Kohn
+ N Y Times p27 Je 4 '44 1050w

Reviewed by Bernard Foley
Spec 172:152 F 18 '44 650w

JORDANOFF, ASSEN. Power and flight; il. drawn by Elizabeth Paige and others. 314p $3.50 Harper

629.13435 Airplane engines 44-1692

"By author of many books on aviation. Internal combustion engines and power plants for aircraft. Illustrated chapter on overhauling a typical aircraft engine. Written for airmen, students, mechanics in training as well as licensed mechanics." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 40:279 Ap 15 '44
Bookmark 5:8 Mr '44

"Companion volume to Man Behind the Flight, this is technical, but handled so that the layman interested in the fundamental principles of engines will find it comprehensible. . . Each step is illustrated photographically, making a total of 460 photographs."
+ Kirkus 12:120 Mr 1 '44 120w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:205 Mr 1 '44 50w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:3 Ja '44

Reviewed by J. M. Juran
N Y Times p36 N 26 '44 80w
Wis Lib Bul 40:67 My '44

JOSEPHS, RAY. Argentine diary; with a foreword by Allan Chase. 358p $3 Random house

982 Argentina 44-6301

A daily record kept during the year 1943, of Argentina's internal politics and international relationships, as viewed by a North American newspaper correspondent. Index.

"Ray Josephs's book is the liveliest, the fullest, the most accurate coverage of those issues we have had yet. . . Mr. Josephs is a staff writer for PM. In carrying out this assignment he has placed himself in the top flight of American political correspondents." Duncan Aikman
+ Atlantic 174:129 S '44 600w

"This is one heck of a powerful book, and history will prove that Josephs was right. It will also prove that his 'Argentine Diary' is one of the most important books written by an American since Pearl Harbor." Allan Chase
+ Book Week p1 Jl 9 '44 1850w
Booklist 41:16 S '44

"Mr Josephs by writing this volume, has made a very important contribution toward the defense of democracy in this hemisphere. In contrast to many other 'experts' on South America, who have not seen too much of the countries they write about, Josephs has lived in Argentina and knows the people. He has assembled a lot of material and on the whole it is interesting, significant, informative. The reader receives his money's worth." Otto Zausmer
+ Boston Globe p15 Jl 26 '44 270w
Christian Science Monitor p14 Jl 25 '44 500w

"An exceedingly important and revealing book, though perhaps not one that by sheer readability will take the public by storm."
+ — Kirkus 12:242 Je 1 '44 170w

"Journalistic, keen, informed and analytical, book leaves no doubt that battle against totalitarian influences and fascist way of life is not only to be won in Europe and Asia." J. M. Brittan
+ Library J 69:554 Je 15 '44 130w

"Perhaps one has no right to expect a contemporary foreign correspondent to write as well as Nevinson, Ransome, or even Richard Harding Davis. But when it comes to facts, to both their background past and their implication for the future, Mr. Josephs is first-rate. There is here no sense of deeply outraged morality, as there was in 'Berlin Diary,' and Mr. Josephs knows nothing of Mr. Shirer's economy of argument. Yet in its way this is another 'Berlin Diary.' 'Argentine Diary' covers only a brief period of time, from January 1943 to January 1944, but it gives as reliable a picture of the establishment of the present pro-fascist or semi-fascist dictatorship in the Argentine as can anywhere be found." Ralph Bates
+ — Nation 159:188 Ag 12 '44 1050w

"Although Mr. Josephs occasionally refers to Argentine history to give perspective to recent events, for the novice, unacquainted with the background, the book is a hard nut to crack. . . Even as a handy reference book 'Argentine Diary' is useless. The last-minute index, apparently put in by the publishers, is totally inadequate, doing more harm than good. References are either completely lacking or partial." H. H. F. Eulau
— New Repub 111:107 Jl 24 '44 700w

"This book gives a crystal-clear picture of the political situation that has developed in Buenos Aires. It will ring a sharp alarm in the minds of people who have thought that our Good Neighbor policy had won South America to our way of thinking and that Franco had no influence beyond Gibraltar." Mildred Adams
+ N Y Times p4 Jl 16 '44 800w

"His book is many pages too long, his prose is often many degrees too fervid, and his own extreme interest in political intrigue is not likely to be shared by many of his readers. A more informed, earnest, and truth-seeking book about Argentina could hardly be asked for, however, and it should especially be read by all those who still think that our good neighbors to the south are as good and as democratic as we would like them to be."

JOSEPHS, RAY—Continued

+ — New Yorker 20:71 Jl 15 '44 130w

Reviewed by Will Henry
Sat R of Lit 27:10 Jl 15 '44 750w

Reviewed by Hubert Herring
Weekly Book Review p1 Jl 16 '44 1800w

JOSEPHSON, MATTHEW. Empire of the air. 236p il maps $3 Harcourt

387.7 Trippe, Juan Terry. Pan American airways. Aeronautics, Commercial 44-40060

A popularly written account of the development of Pan American airways and the story of its founder, Juan Terry Trippe.

Am Hist R 50:181 O '44 80w

"It is fortunate that a man of Josephson's abilities has turned his attention to a field of such significance. 'Empire of the Air' should prove to be one of the most important books of 1944." W. F. Morse

+ Book Week p2 Ap 16 '44 500w

Booklist 40:262 Ap 1 '44

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:657 Jl '44 20w

"As a springboard to an overall view of postwar aviation and the key questions of freedom in the skies and a new concept of air power politics, this case history of Juan Trippe and Pan American is an interesting appraisal."

+ Kirkus 12:57 F 1 '44 260w

Reviewed by Allan Spalding
New Repub 110:768 Je 5 '44 1350w

Reviewed by Blair Bolles
N Y Times p4 Ap 23 '44 700w

Reviewed by Wolfgang Langewiesche
Weekly Book Review p1 Ap 16 '44 1750w

Wis Lib Bul 40:67 My '44

JOYCE, JAMES. Stephen Hero. 234p $3.50 New directions [9s 6d Cape, J]

"An early draft of the 'Portrait of the Artist,' recently bought by the Harvard Library and just published by New Directions, with an introduction and notes by Theodore Spencer. This manuscript is, in fact, quite remote from Joyce's later masterpiece. It is simply an autobiographical novel, like so many autobiographical novels that were written in the early nineteen-hundreds. . . The manuscript published now represents about half of a longer book, of which the rest has apparently been lost." New Yorker

Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 16 '44 200w

"It will be fascinating to readers of the final version and extremely valuable to students of Joyce. Much of it consists of scenes insufficiently developed, marred by sudden transitions. Consequently it may make little sense to the reader who does not know 'The Portrait.' But there is no longer any justification for ignorance of or indifference to any work by Joyce, who, it may now be said with assurance, used the language with a degree of consciousness greater than that of any other author who has written in English." Delmore Schwartz

+ Nation 160:106 Ja 27 '45 500w

"Less attention has been paid to Joyce's autobiographical fiction than it deserves, possibly because it is on a small and exact scale and we prefer to think of Joyce as a wallowing Titan. It seems to me in its 'vivisection' of a human being a more truthful book than any of the other autobiographies of our time. Unlike them it is essentially a work of art." G. W. Stonier

+ New Statesman & Nation 28:74 Jl 29 '44 1050w

"It is the most important document on Joyce's life which has yet been made public. Here you have an explicit account of many things that were left in the background of the more focussed and arranged 'Portrait.' . . And the work has a kind of power which you could not have found in that era in either Arnold Bennett or Compton Mackenzie. Joyce's intellectual maturity, his singleness of purpose, his clarity of vision, are absolutely astounding in this 'schoolboy's production,' as he called it, written in his early twenties." Edmund Wilson

+ New Yorker 20:62 Ja 6 '45 550w

"A major occasion for Joyce dévotés, and must interest all students of the novel; it parallels indeed for them with study of the first and last drafts of Flaubert's L'Education Sentimentale. . . Speaking broadly, the chief merit of Stephen Hero—seeing that we know who wrote it and what it afterwards became—is that it sets us to re-reading of A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man." Kate O'Brien

+ Spec 173:112 Ag 4 '44 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p501 O 14 '44 270w

"Because 'Stephen Hero' is part of a more diffuse and more explicit work, it throws into relief, more clearly than the more artistic version, certain salient qualities of Joyce as a writer. Among these are Joyce's conception of the novel as a prose lyric, a vehicle for marked subjective expression. . . Joyce was an explosion of the long dammed up intellect of Ireland. No book of his indicates this more clearly than 'Stephen Hero.' No other book of his sets forth his credo more persuasively. No one serves his generation so well as he who offers it, 'whether in his life or in his art, the gift of certitude'—it is with this blazon on his shield that he sets forth to re-create the conscience of his race." Horace Reynolds

Weekly Book Review p10 Ja 21 '45 700w

JUDAH, CHARLES BURNET. Tom Bone. 499p $3 Morrow

44-5210

Historical romance, in which the scene is variously England, Newfoundland, Virginia, the West Indies and Africa, in the slave trading days of the seventeenth century. The hero is Tom Bone; the villian, Edward Cousin, and their animosity centers in their love for the beautiful Polly Bragg. The chief historical event is Bacon's Rebellion, in which Tom picked the wrong side.

Reviewed by Edith Roberts
Book Week p2 Je 25 '44 410w

"Thoroughly readable tale, fast paced and complex plot, credible characterization—and authentic feel of the period."

+ Kirkus 12:152 Ap 1 '44 190w

"Swift-paced, highly colored, rather monotonously plain-spoken American historical romance. . . Characterization is rudimentary and the style is studded with the clichés of this genre of novel, but Dr. Judah tells his story with gusto and enthusiasm. . . Useful addition to the so-called 'escapist' shelf. Recommended." E. F. Walbridge

+ — Library J 69:502 Je 1 '44 110w

"As in most books of this sort, the villian is a more interesting fellow than the hero. . . Sometimes the story splits a bit at the seams, but Mr. Judah can be counted upon to pull it together again with a juicy pirate battle or voodoo ceremony. Despite its length—nearly 500 solidly packed pages—'Tom Bone' is anything but tedious." Herbert Kupferberg

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Je 11 '44 500w

Wis Lib Bul 40:130 O '44

JUDSON, CLARA (INGRAM) (MRS J. M. JUDSON). They came from Scotland; il. by Mary A. Reardon. 198p $2 Houghton

44-8197

The story of Bruce MacGregor and his family, all of whom came to Indianapolis from Scotland in 1838. At first misfortune and disappointments troubled the eager boy, but soon the family was settled, Bruce and his father got jobs, and America proved to be the "land of plenty" of which they had dreamed. For grades five to eight.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p4 N 12 '44 230w

Booklist 41:62 O 15 '44

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p4 D 14 '44 140w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 41:128 N 17 '44 20w

"There's adventure and mystery here, besides a folk quality in the pictures of camp meeting, Sunday School contests, the general story, and the thrifty MacGregors adapting themselves to the richness of the new world. . . Good Americana."
+ Kirkus 12:229 Jl 1 '44 110w

"An exciting and interesting tale of early days in America. Recommended for ages nine to thirteen." E. M. Gordon
+ Library J 69:886 O 15 '44 50w
Sat R of Lit 27:33 N 11 '44 40w
Springf'd Republican p4d O 15 '44 110w

JURAN, JOSEPH M. Bureaucracy: a challenge to better management; a constructive analysis of management effectiveness in the Federal government. 138p $2 Harper
351.1 U.S.—Administrative departments
44-3041

"This book purports to be a scientific treatise on the nature of the Bureaucratic world, with particular emphasis on the management problems of that world. The author is a student of management. His work as an executive in industry and (since Pearl Harbor) in government has led him to record certain observations on the management make-up of the Bureaucracy, and to present a program for improvement." (Pref) Index.

Reviewed by William Anderson
Ann Am Acad 234:150 Jl '44 600w

"J. M. Juran's 'Bureaucracy,' is refreshing and creative, and, I suspect, may be immediately useful. A fiction exists that, in government, everything is red tape and inefficiency. Some Washington 'information letters' bought by credulous businessmen exploit this notion unscrupulously, and so do some newspapers and books. Juran's approach is strikingly original." Willard Shelton
+ Book Week p9 My 21 '44 260w
Booklist 40:296 My 1 '44

"The author is the assistant administrator of the office of Lend-Lease Administration; the style is keyed to general public reading level and interest, with a humorous slant in illustrations of the idiosyncrasies of the system."
+ Kirkus 12:55 F 1 '44 190w
Management R 33:37 Ja '45 30w

"This book is highly recommended." C. S. Ascher
+ Survey G 34:28 Ja '45 270w

"There are obvious difficulties in getting an effective working relationship between such auxiliary and staff aids and the operating officials responsible for the substantive job. It is by no means clear in any given situation what is the proper place of the management function, however attractively stated it may be on paper. But Mr. Juran's approach is in such refreshing contrast to most writing on this topic that we can well be content with what we have here and ask for a sequel." J. M. Gaus
+ — Yale Law J 53:601 Je '44 400w

JUSTEMA, WILLIAM. Private papers. 38p $1.50 Duell
811 U.S.—Army—Military life—Poetry
44-4601

Poems about the author's year in the army. He had been painter, poet, actor, and designer of fabrics, but after Pearl Harbor he enlisted in the Engineers camouflage battalion, and after making a great success at his work, received a medical discharge in 1943.

"Not especially significant in themselves, I believe Justema's observations would have been much less irritatingly made in prose." Leo Kennedy
Book Week p6 Ap 16 '44 140w

"These rank among the better war poems that have appeared. . . They are thoughtful, intelligent, masculine, revealing a happy combination of the inner and the outer world in a sort of verse-diary of the year's camp experiences. They are written in an original rhythm, powerful and pleasing. Sincerity is their hall-mark. Yet is that enough? Friends of the poet and those who for one reason or another follow poetry consistently will buy this little book. Otherwise it will make but little stir."
+ — Kirkus 12:164 Ap 1 '44 110w

Reviewed by Ralph Gustafson
N Y Times p21 Jl 16 '44 70w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan
New Yorker 20:58 Jl 22 '44 80w

"The charm of Private Papers is its anecdotal candor and its lyrical echoes and reechoes of an insouciant Eliot, a prismatic Mallarmé, and chattering Browning—like a penciled scene of trees and hills in whose lines the oblique likenesses of famous faces are concealed. But there is neither virility in accent nor fine joy in imagination. Already jaded by the very rawness which should give his subject life, he assumes the modern pose of clamorous romanticism padded by a worldly-wise, effete irony which erases everything but the foreignness of the poet to his own surroundings. Such a pose, common among even the more widely published poets today, seems to emphasize how anachronistic this kind of writing really is at a time of historical catastrophe, and how much private chewing of ego fat goes by the name of poetry." Edwin Honig
— + Poetry 64:347 S '44 650w

"His book is a slight, impressionistic, poetic diary of his service. Without any question it speaks the artist. It has sensitiveness and wit. It is my own belief that more good poetry will come out of the war from men in the Services than ever emerged from the last. The artist type seems better understood in this one and more intelligently set to work." W. R. Benét
+ Sat R of Lit 27:24 Ap 29 '44 140w

"Justema is introspective, sensitive, of 'extreme and sometimes willful individualism,' as Witter Bynner notes in an introduction. He seldom puts the reader on an equal footing with himself: too often you feel irony, snobbery or condescension in his attitude. . . [However,] Justema's work—whatever its faults—is a genuine report of significant and universal human experience." Ruth Lechlitner
+ — Weekly Book Review p12 S 17 '44 350w

"Most of the pages do not rise above triviality, and all but a few of them are marred by a self-conscious attitudinizing, an echo of the author's own 'accurate data' which Witter Bynner unfortunately included in an uncomfortably personal preface." Louis Untermeyer
— + Yale R n s 34:342 winter '45 140w

JUSTUS, MAY. Jerry Jake carries on; il. by Christine Chisholm. 64p $1.50 Whitman, A.
43-10908

Story of Southern mountain life, telling how Jerry Jake took care of the home place while his grandfather worked at the sawmill.

"Not important but useful for fourth and fifth grades." Marian Herr
Library J 68:728 S 15 '43 70w
Wis Lib Bul 40:57 Ap '44

JUSTUS, MAY. Lizzie; il. by Christine Chisholm. 64p $1.50 Whitman A.
44-3882

Lizzie was a ten-year-old Kentucky mountain girl, whose chief ambition was to sell enough flowers to buy herself some mail-order clothes. A city girl of her own age, stranded in the little town, made friends with Lizzie, and the two of them managed to make Lizzie's wish come true.

Kirkus 12:171 Ap 1 '44 170w

"Lizzie is a charming character, and the mountaineer expressions and bits of description woven into story give interesting atmosphere. Not an essential book. With the exception of Lizzie and Gramps the characters are wooden, but a pleasant regional story which will be enjoyed by girls of ten and eleven." Marian Herr

JUSTUS, MAY—Continued

+ — Library J 69:464 My 15 '44 110w

"This story for 9-to-ten-year-olds, although pleasant, is slight. Incident follows incident without reaching a climax or contributing to the reader's knowledge of the mountain folk. Even assuming that Lizzie's experiences have made her more capable than the average 16-year-old, her resourcefulness is unconvincing. Because of its many illustrations young readers will find the book attractive, but it is not one which they will be likely to remember."

— + Springf'd Republican p4d Je 4 '44 90w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p5 Jl 9 '44 150w

Wis Lib Bul 40:112 Jl '44

K

KAFKA, ROGER, and PEPPERBURG, ROY L., eds. Warships of the world; with il. by D. R. Merrill. 1038p $15 Cornell maritime

623.825 Warships. Navies. World war, 1939 —Naval operations 44-7455

"The first issue of an important American yearbook comparable to Jane's Fighting ships and other naval annuals. It tabulates data on more than 7,000 vessels, and in addition to statistical information includes (for many ships) photographs, drawings of side elevations, and historical notes, many of these describing exploits of individual ships in World War II. The United States Navy is treated first and at greater length than the navies of other countries, but more pages are given to each of the principal foreign navies, including the British, than are given in the 1942 edition of Jane's." N Y New Tech Bks

---

"Much work evidently went into the preparation of this tome of 1038 pages. The type is clear, the illustrations stem from well-chosen photographs, and the arrangement in general is good. Probably because of wartime restrictions on material, the volume is heavy to hold, and as a consequence it belongs to the reference class; but because of its completeness of information, it recommends itself to those who are interested in the men-of-war which skim in and out of the daily news." F. L. O.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 D 16 '44 550w

Foreign Affairs 23:5 O '44 30w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 69:606 Jl '44 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:33 Ap '44

"'Warships of the World' sets out to be a popularized American version of the pre-war statistical bible, the British 'Jane's Fighting Ships.' It is a good effort. In many ways the book is more readable and the material is better arranged than it is in Jane's." F. H.

+ N Y Times p12 O 8 '44 160w

"A solid, comprehensive naval manual, aiming to cover with thoroughness the whole vast field."

+ Weekly Book Review p40 N 12 '44 220w

KAHLER, ERICH. Man the measure; a new approach to history. 700p $5 Pantheon bks.

901 Civilization—History. Man. History, Universal 43-16944

For descriptive note see Annual for 1943

Reviewed by L. H. Jenks

Am Soc R 9:587 O '44 900w

Booklist 40:302 My 1 '44

"Dr. Kahler gives evidence of possessing profound and comprehensive scholarship and keen critical intelligence." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 61:402 Mr 29 '44 1200w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 22:657 Jl '44 20w

"We find here a special, somewhat dialectical, interpretation of the meaning of history. But more than this, Kahler has put together a number of particular histories of various activities and ideas. Whether or not one can accept his own grandiose thesis about Western civilization (which to some will seem more a prayer than a fact), his ability to trace the social and cultural backgrounds of our present conflicts must win him much admiration as an historian. . . If Kahler has oversimplified the problem of interpreting history, if he is too prone to force unity and continuity where dispute is legitimate, it would seem to be due to his great concern that men gain that peace which he sees prophesied in the records of human accomplishment." F. deW. Bolman, Jr.

+ J Philos 41:131 Mr 2 '44 2500w

"Unlike Spengler, who drew on the early nineteenth-century German Romantic historians, Kahler stems rather from the dominant nineteenth-century French tradition—that of Comte. His book must be one of the most well-founded summations of history ever written by an apostle of the positivist 'religion of humanity.' While the schematism imposed on history is, to this reviewer, no more tenable than Spengler's, and perhaps less suggestive, the humanitarian program from which it derives and to which it argues is much more amiable." J. H. Nichols

+ — J Religion 24:133 Ap '44 1000w

"This is a book which many Americans should study, but above all the American librarian, whose profession imposes a special obligation. He must deal with every range of scholarship from mathematics to poetry. Accordingly, he needs, in a way that the specializing scholar does not, the sense of historic unity, intellectual perspective, and comparative values. All these he will find abundantly in this volume." Pierce Butler

+ Library Q 14:162 Ap '44 650w

"This well-written and thoughtful book, which guides the reader through all the 'isms' of the past two thousand years, ends with a warning that without human community and fraternity we are lost, and that 'man needs goodness as he needs his daily bread.'" Alfred Werner

+ Nation 158:712 Je 17 '44 650w

"There are distinct traces of racial, national and religious prejudice; but on the whole there are a far greater objectivity and a much clearer grasp of the various phases of history dealt with than the main theses put forward might lead one to expect. The necessary compression makes the style at times overly vague; and there is a serious lack of clear and fixed definition. But the quality of most of the book argues that the author is both honest and able; and certainly he is informative, interesting and provocative." D. J. Pierce

+ — Pol Sci Q 59:463 S '44 800w

Reviewed by Jacques Barzun

Sat R of Lit 27:5 My 13 '44 4400w

"Here is a powerful survey of history. Here is a provocative point of view in regard to the writing and understanding of history. Here is a scholarly effort to probe to the basis of the current world disaster and to help mankind in the future by looking at his past." E. F. Seegers

+ Social Studies 35:278 O '44 2200w

KALASHNIKOFF, NICHOLAS. Jumper; the life of a Siberian horse; decorations by Edward Shenton. 224p $2.50 Scribner

Horses—Legends and stories 44-8962

Story of a real horse, offspring of an English stallion and a Siberian mare. Jumper's story is told in fictional form and covers his whole life history from his birth, thru his "education," and his services in the first World war, to his final return to the home and master of his youth.

"Among the other books against which 'Jumper' is to be measured are 'Black Beauty,' 'Smoky' and 'My Friend Flicka.' From a literary point of view it is probably superior to these others, and psychologically it is in no way inferior. To one who grew up with horses, Kalashnikoff's empathy for Jumper seems authentic and remarkably detailed, and it is expressed in a way that is very near to poetry." Wendell Johnson

+ Book Week p4 O 29 '44 550w

Booklist 41:89 N 15 '44

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 41:128 N 17 '44 10w

Kirkus 12:457 O 1 '44 90w

"An animal story that is at once uniformly interesting and completely credible. It could have been written only by a lover of horses. Any horse lover, whatever his age, will find it delightful." Jennings Rice

+ N Y Times p6 D 17 '44 280w

Reviewed by J. S. Meacham
Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 7 '45 130w

"There is sadness in this book, which shows peasants and men drafted into military service in a war that they had not made and could not understand. But in its kindliness and simplicity, it is a warming story, and one that children as well as adults will enjoy."

+ Weekly Book Review p12 N 26 '44 350w

KALTENBORN, HOWARD STANLEY. Governmental adjustment of labor disputes. 327p $3.50 Foundation press

331.154 Arbitration, Industrial 43-14191

"The content includes chapters on the United States Conciliation Service, the National War Labor Board, the Maritime Labor Board, the Railroad Industry boards, agencies of adjustment within the states, and the miscellaneous local authorities, such as Mayor La Guardia's setup in New York City, the Toledo Industrial Peace Board, and others. The book omits treatment of the National Labor Relations Board on the ground that by statute the Board is forbidden the functions of mediation and arbitration." Ann Am Acad

"It is admittedly not an easy task to compress into a single, moderately sized volume the lessons learned by federal, state and local governments in the settlement of industrial disputes, but by discriminating selection of data and skillful analysis the author has done a most creditable job. . . The volume will repay a thoughtful reading by labor economists, personnel managers, employers, and labor leaders. Although there is much here that is familiar to the special student of industrial relations, the detailed, well-documented study and careful analysis will provide a very helpful guide to the judgment of the specialist and layman alike. It is an unusually constructive book and is an excellent addition to the literature of labor economics." G. S. Watkins

+ Am Econ R 34:181 Mr '44 1000w

Reviewed by J. J. Robbins
Am Pol Sci R 38:164 F '44 1000w

Reviewed by Herman Feldman
Ann Am Acad 231:189 Ja '44 450w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:661 Jl '44 10w

"The discursive sections of the book are far more valuable than the analytical part. Also of value is the frequent presentation of statistics, although in some instances the author's pro-labor viewpoint results in unwarranted conclusions being drawn from them. This book will probably be more welcome to the author's colleagues in the field of political science than to the practicing labor lawyer who must turn elsewhere for a legal discussion of this problem."

+ — Harvard Law R 57:430 Ja '44 220w

Management R 33:106 Mr '44 80w

Reviewed by H. R. Northrup
Pol Sci Q 59:308 Je '44 800w

KANDEL, ISAAC LEON. Intellectual cooperation: national and international. 78p pa $1.25 Teachers college

370.621 Intellectual cooperation 44-9129

"A report of the National committee of the United States of America on international intellectual cooperation. The thesis of the study is that the 'foundations for international understanding and intellectual cooperation must be laid in national systems of education at all levels. Only as these foundations are well laid can the structure of national committees of intellectual cooperation be built up and lead to an international structure which would grow naturally out of the recognized need of international cooperation.' " Booklist

Booklist 41:102 D 1 '44

School & Society 60:176 S 9 '44 110w

KANE, HARNETT THOMAS. Deep delta country. (American folkways ser) 283p $3 Duell

917.63 Louisiana 44-40211

"A leisurely unfolding of the delta country—the land made by the Mississippi between New Orleans and the Gulf. This Louisiana author describes the meandering luxuriance of the bayous, the gallant days of history, the primitive morality of the people—and then, the periodic death-bringing violence of the 'Old Man' in flood, for the river dominates all." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Harold Sinclair
Book Week p5 N 26 '44 650w

Booklist 41:122 D 15 '44

"Here we have a modern Timothy Dwight, a professional literary man off on an excursion to fields not, indeed, afar, but right near by, and finding all the novelty of a journey to the moon. Here, too, we have an up-to-date historian rehearsing the details of the Battle of New Orleans that took place 130 winters ago. Whether or not Mr. Kane's account of the doings of Andrew Jackson's defenders of the Delta and Sir Edward Packenham's attackers may go into the school-books as the authentic thing, it certainly comes to something else than a rewritten narration of the encyclopedias." W. P. T.

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ja 20 '45 400w

"A very human document. Unquestionably, it is a romantic and picturesque and appealing world in miniature—a law unto itself—a segment of America that is a melting pot of many peoples, and a wholly unique way of life."

+ Kirkus 12:418 S 15 '44 130w

"Recommended." E. L. Lewis

+ Library J 69:882 O 15 '44 70w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger
N Y Times p9 D 24 '44 850w

New Yorker 20:93 N 18 '44 80w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 14 '45 440w

"Mr. Kane is a New Orleans newspaper man who has already written two first-class books on people and things in Louisiana. He is scholarly and lively, acquainted with the back-files of historical quarterlies and engineering reports on the hydraulics and physics of the Father of Waters as well as the Delta dweller's brutal superstitions and first-hand stories of parish priests, political bosses and neighborhood doctors. In short, Mr. Kane knows his Delta, and at the same time, unlike the average local historian, can tell the story." L. L. Engelking

+ Weekly Book Review p4 N 5 '44 1100w

KANE, HENRY BUGBEE. Tale of the white-faced hornet [il. by the author]. (Wild world tales) [48p] $1.50 Knopf

595.798 Wasps—Juvenile literature 44-4763

Traces the life-cycle of the white-faced hornet from the spring day when the queen begins her nest, to the autumn, when the hornet makes ready for its winter sleep. Illustrated with photographs and drawings.

Booklist 40:344 Je 1 '44

Bookmark 5:9 Ag '44

"Splendid photographs. . . The skill, patience and exact observation required to secure these remarkable photographs fill one with admiration." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 20:291 Jl '44 70w

KANE, H. B.—Continued
"An exciting true story written in beautiful prose."
+ Kirkus 12:173 Ap 1 '44 70w

"Unusually fine photographic illustrations and pen-and-ink sketches as tailpieces go far to enhance format. Author is making a valuable contribution to the children's literature in natural science and all libraries would do well to buy them. Recommended." A. E. Brown
+ Library J 69:405 My 1 '44 80w
N Y Times p24 Je 25 '44 160w

"Scientific yet literary in its text and exceptionally good in its photographic illustrations."
New Yorker 20:58 Jl 8 '44 40w

"The fine photographs and little pen drawings that illustrate it give it the value of a picture book."
+ Sat R of Lit 27:36 My 13 '44 50w
Wis Lib Bul 40:112 Jl '44

KANTOR, MACKINLAY. Author's choice. 497p $3.50 Coward-McCann
44-8274

Collection of forty short stories, selected from his works by the author, including in each case a chapter on the circumstances under which the story was written or published.

Reviewed by Jack Conroy
Book Week p3 O 1 '44 360w
Booklist 41:58 O 15 '44

"This has merit on two counts. The stories themselves are good ones—varied in appeal, in technique, in background and mood and tempo. . . The connecting links comprise a microcosm of a writer in the making. . . Even people who are not by nature short story addicts will find this a collection of unusual merit."
+ Kirkus 12:286 Jl 1 '44 270w

"Almost without exception the twoscore tales are sentimental, and what matters is whether the sentiment is well done or not. In the best of them it is well done, and in the others a neophyte may at least learn by example what not to do." James Fuller
N Y Times p22 O 1 '44 440w

"It is a frank and enlightening recital."
+ Weekly Book Review p19 O 8 '44 150w

KAPELNER, ALAN. Lonely boy blues. 211p $2.50 Scribner
44-8028

Tale of modern life, told in the stream of consciousness style. It is the story of a family—a father who worships his eldest son, whom he regards as the reincarnation of his lost youth; a Puritanical mother who spoils her only daughter; and two younger boys. The "blues" of the title reach a climax when the oldest boy proves to be a 4-F.

"Saroyanesque in its modern realism, but lacking in its very bitterness, the humanity, the poignancy, the faith in the dignity of man which characterize Saroyan. It is a sordid tale of existence."
Kirkus 12:412 S 15 '44 130w

"Despite himself, Mr. Kapelner produces a mood. Something of the vast aimless chaos of city life, of the corrosive effect of mass poverty, of the shrillness and the stridency, of the drowned individual tragedy in the great mechanical mass, of the lonely condition of the ant-like human creature—something of this he expresses. Only the self-consciousness of his performance prevents our feeling this mood poignantly." Ruth Schorer
N Y Times p20 O 8 '44 400w

" 'Lonely Boy Blues' is a good title for Mr. Kapelner's book. It suggests the musical unity this little volume has, the jagged rhythm, and the cacophany of its prose. We may argue, if we wish, with the unrelieved gloom of the piece. . . But these are the lonely boy blues, a short composition in one key, and admirably done. I must admit to a great anxiety to see Mr. Kapelner's next book. If this is an augury of what is to come, it should be a good book indeed." N. L. Rothman
+ Sat R of Lit 27:62 O 14 '44 700w

"Mr Kapelner is a talented observer of raw livers, ugly and poignant scenes. He is a rare user of words, and he's at his best when he isn't parodying the better known words of other authors. It will be genuine entertainment to read his next book when he applies his rich talent to a character of major stature." A. H. Fuller
Springf'd Republican p4d O 29 '44 400w

"Mr. Kapelner's effort to tell this in 'the beat of the blues' leads him into all sorts of strange mannerisms. . . Despite the use of these devices, 'Lonely Boy Blues' bears a strong resemblance to what used to be called proletarian novels. . . The tune may have been jazzed up, but the lyrics are the same." Herbert Kupferberg
Weekly Book Review p6 S 24 '44 450w

KAPLAN, ABRAHAM DAVID HANNATH. Liquidation of war production. 133p $1.50 McGraw 338.91 Reconstruction (1939-)—U.S. Industry—Postwar organization. U.S.—Economic policy 44-6382

"Subtitle: 'Cancellation of War Contracts and Disposal of Government-Owned Plants and Surpluses.' Second in a series of reports to be published under the auspices of Committee for Economic Development. Dr. Kaplan presents 41 specific points as guiding principles and lines of action to follow in order to avoid needless unemployment and to achieve the fullest use of production resources as liquidation of war production is made and industry and government return to peacetime work." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 N 5 '44 90w
Booklist 41:71 N 1 '44
Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:653 Ag '44 70w
Reviewed by B. B. Seligman
New Repub 111:379 S 25 '44 160w

"Kaplan's discussion, while it does not answer any final questions, does provide a set of basic principles from which legislators and administrators can proceed." Jacob Viner
N Y Times p19 S 17 '44 120w

KARIG, WALTER (KEATS PATRICK, pseud), and KELLEY, WELBOURN. Battle report; Pearl Harbor to Coral sea; prepared from official sources; pub for the Council on books in wartime. 499p il maps $3.50 Farrar
940.545 World war, 1939—Naval operations. World war, 1939—Pacific ocean 44-47969

First volume in a series about the part played by the United States navy in World war II. It covers the first six months of the war in the Pacific and was written from official sources, by two naval officers. Lists casualties and awards and citations. Index.

"Despite certain drawbacks, 'Battle Report' does what it sets out to do. It mixes chronology, history, humor, pathos, heroism, vision and imagination into a stirring, memorable, inspiring account of a Navy which recoiled from defeat and started on the road back. By all means, read 'Battle Report' and revel in the knowledge that America produces the kind of men you will find in these pages." Cecil Brown
+ Book Week p1 D 10 '44 1400w
Booklist 41:137 Ja 1 '45

"The value of this record from primary sources will be great for historians. Only those vitally and personally concerned seem to me to be today's immediate market."
Kirkus 12:465 O 1 '44 210w

"Interesting narrative, but rather too detailed for average reader. Recommended for large libraries." S. E. Sherman
+ Library J 69:1047 D 1 '44 110w

"The truth, in history, is what matters. 'Battle Report' reaches the truth, and achieves it as far as it goes—perhaps as far as it is possible for an official narrative to go in the midst of war. But it does not go far enough." H. W. Baldwin

+ N Y Times p1 D 10 '44 2500w

"This record of the activities of the Navy, from Pearl Harbor to the Battle of the Coral Sea, is so much better than anything else that has been written about our Pacific Fleet (or any of our fleets) that a Distinguished Service Medal might as well be pinned on its jacket. There has been no other book quite like it, with the possible exception of 'Combined Operations,' Hilary St. George Saunders' one about the British Commandos, and perhaps it is the war book of the year."

+ New Yorker 20:66 D 23 '44 360w

"This book does not pretend to be a complete narrative in the Pacific war. It is merely the latest, and far and away the best, in the sequence of glimpses to reach us, to tell us our own growth as a power. 'Battle Report' is an honest, competent chapter in a performance to which Americans can thrill with tremendous pride." Paul Schubert

+ Sat R of Lit 27:7 D 9 '44 1150w

"It is a work more for reference and the record than for current reading, but the reading is strangely moving. That is because the authors have relied so largely on battle reports and eye-witness stories. Any one who has ever had anything to do with military history knows the impact of the personal report, usually from a man devoid of literary grace, but charged with all the grandeur and terror of the experience through which he has just passed and conveying it with a directness beyond the power of literary reconstruction. The authors frequently use material of this kind which has already appeared elsewhere; in paraphrasing, selecting and weaving together the unpublished reports they might, perhaps, have shown a greater skill, but on the whole they present a well filled picture of the war and its heroism, of what happened, of why it happened and of how it felt." Walter Millis

+ — Weekly Book Review p1 D 17 '44 1500w

KARSKI, JAN, pseud. Story of a secret state. 391p $3 Houghton

943.8 Poland—History—German occupation, 1939-. World war, 1939—Poland. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, Polish 44-9776

Stirring account of the experiences of a young Polish officer, who served for four years as liaison officer between political and military authorities, and as a courier between the secret state in Poland and the Polish government in exile in London.

"One can accept Jan Karski's credentials and all that he has to say about the valor of the Polish underground, and still find Story of a Secret State a thoroughly disappointing book. Like too many other chroniclers of the various resistance movements, he seems long on adventures and short on results. The Germans still hold Warsaw as this exuberant book appears, and those who made the Nazi occupation difficult deserve a better accounting than he has given us." C. W. Morton

— Atlantic 174:149 D '44 300w

Reviewed by A. C. Spectorsky

Book Week p6 D 17 '44 900w

Booklist 41:121 D 15 '44

Reviewed by L. M. Lyons

Boston Globe p19 D 6 '44 500w

"In part dramatic, in part gruesome, always interesting and informative, [the book] deserves the serious attention of all who are interested in international affairs." A. S. C.

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 D 23 '44 850w

Reviewed by Waldemar Gurian

Commonweal 41:232 D 15 '44 500w

"An absorbing story of the Polish Underground, exceedingly timely, and important as background for contemporary and immediate history."

+ Kirkus 12:414 S 15 '44 170w

"Much of the material in his book is sensational; the pages in which he describes a visit to the ghetto . . . these pages are almost unbearable to read, but the writing is restrained throughout. His testimony on the democratic nature of the underground state is very impressive. If he is to be believed, and I find his story convincing, this government is determined that post-war Poland shall be a genuine democracy based on individual freedom, the equitable division of land, and social control of the country's vital resources." Margaret Marshall

Nation 159:746 D 16 '44 900w

"Apart from the author's personal adventures and his spirited defense of the Polish nation, there is hardly anything in this book which contributes to our knowledge of the Polish underground and its relations with the Polish Government-in-Exile. On the contrary, the author's political naïveté obscures or dismisses many of the burning questions of Polish pre- and postwar politics, questions whose answers are basic to an understanding of Poland's present political dilemma."

— New Repub 111:813 D 11 '44 120w

Reviewed by E. W. Fox

N Y Times p5 D 3 '44 1500w

Reviewed by Edmund Wilson

New Yorker 20:92 N 25 '44 450w

"In the Polish Underground Jan Karski served upwards of three years as courier, propagandist, and envoy extraordinary. In this eloquent, absorbing book he has written more than his personal history, or the story of a secret state, or one of the finest books to emerge from World War II. He has told the heroic saga of a nation." Frederick Gruin

+ Sat R of Lit 27:21 D 2 '44 1300w

"It is not great writing, but it is unforgettable reporting. Karski here makes a report to the world that cannot be ignored by those who have anything at all to say about the final peace. It is an almost incredible story of horror and inhumanity but also a shining tribute to the triumphant and expendable human spirit which refuses to go down to defeat before awful odds." R. N. Fuller

+ Springf'd Republican p4d D 3 '44 700w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen

Survey G 34:24 Ja '45 320w

Time 44:99 D 4 '44 1350w

"It is one of the more exciting stories of our time. Compared to this factual report of intrigue and horror and bravery the Bulldog Drummond novels of international derring-do seem as pale and unreal as the scholarly romances of our childhood in which Christians were thrown to the lions in a Roman arena. This is our world, and these are our nightmares. If you want political emotions as contemporary as a B-29 or a bazooka, this is your book. . . Karski has been permitted to tell more about the techniques of Polish resistance, considering that the Poles are still resisting, than might have been expected. It makes mordant but fascinating reading." Joseph Barnes

+ Weekly Book Review p1 N 26 '44 1500w

KASTNER, GEORGE CHARLES. Benedict Arnold. 159p il $2.50 Dorrance

812 Arnold, Benedict—Drama 44-47755

Dramatized version of Arnold's story.

— Christian Century 61:1386 N 29 '44 30w

"Of interest really only to American history divisions in the libraries. An extremely bad play though interesting because of the subject matter."

Library J 70:69 Ja 15 '45 30w

KAUFMANN, FELIX. Methodology of the social sciences. 272p $3.50 Oxford

301.8 Social sciences—Methodology 44-7107

"One of the chief objectives of this book is to determine to what extent the social sciences should adopt the methods of the natural sciences. With a view to clarifying this problem, the author devotes the first part of his book to an analysis of the general methodological problems of empirical science. . . Among the problems which Professor Kaufmann discusses are those of induction; the nature of physical laws and causality; truth and probability; the relation of biology and psychology to physics; value judgments; etc. In the second part his conclusions are applied to some of the most important methodological issues in social science. . . Professor Kaufmann has been a member of the Philosophy Department of the Graduate Faculty of the New School for Social Research since 1938." Publisher's note

KAUFMANN, FELIX—Continued

Reviewed by G. A. Lundberg
Ann Am Acad 237:246 Ja '45 500w

"A penetrating and constructive analysis of the present relation between the natural and the social sciences." J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p2 S 24 '44 60w

"Professor Kaufmann has written a stimulating book, parts of which should help clear up muddles in a field that has more than its share, but he has not presented us with a methodology of the social sciences (in his sense of 'methodology'). It will be easier to discuss the nature of methodology when he does." M. G. White
+ — J Philos 41:604 O 26 '44 3600w

KAUP, MRS ELIZABETH (DEWING). Seed of the Puritan. 400p $2.75 Dial press 44-2897

Portrait of an American, Josiah Madden, tracing his life story from the day when he returned from World war one, as a hero, thru his years as a politician, to his return to the shoe factory from which he had started for the war. This last was during another World war, and this time Josiah's son was fighting for democracy.

Booklist 40:270 Ap 1 '44

Kirkus 12:85 F 15 '44 160w

"Mrs. Kaup sets herself quite a task in attempting to draw a full-length portrait of a political boss. She added to her handicaps by equipping him with negative virtues and no particular vices. Although he dominates the book through all of its 40 pages, Josiah Madden never quite becomes flesh and blood." Thomas Haynes
N Y Times p12 Mr 5 '44 440w

"For those who found power and originality in Mrs. Kaup's earlier book, 'Not for the Meek,' this present novel will probably prove disappointing." N. L. Rothman
Sat R of Lit 27:22 Mr 11 '44 210w

"A narrative curiously without anger or warmth. It is written with undoubted power, but it doesn't ask you to throw the weight of your own emotions into the balance—either for or against Josiah Madden or for or against the people whose destinies he influenced. Elizabeth Dewing Kaup simply presents an analysis: here is a politician, his rise and fall. She has—in a word—something to say but nothing to sell." George Conrad
Weekly Book Review p6 F 27 '44 380w

KAYE-SMITH, SHEILA (MRS PENROSE FRY) and STERN, GLADYS BRONWYN (MRS G. L. HOLDSWORTH). Speaking of Jane Austen [Eng title: Talking of Jane Austen]. 286p $2.75 Harper [12s 6d Cassell]
823 Austen, Jane 44-4932

Analytical study of Jane Austen's books, characters, and incidentally of her life and times, by two English novelists. Together or separately they discuss such aspects of Jane Austen's writings as: "All the new poems and states of the nation"; "As careless on such subjects as most people"; The Mansfield park quartette; "The sweets of housekeeping in a country village"; "Perfectly compatible with the profession of a clergyman"; "Addicted to letter-writing"; "A bend or two, but nothing of consequence". Contains a Jane Austen quizz, with answers.

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Book Week p8 Je 18 '44 550w

Booklist 40:353 Je 15 '44

Bookmark 5:10 My '44

Boston Globe p30 N 29 '44 50w

Reviewed by J. J. Reilly
Cath World 160:85 O '44 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 Je '44

Reviewed by E. V. R. Wyatt
Commonweal 40:188 Je 9 '44 950w

"Interesting for the initiated; good for critical comment."
+ Kirkus 12:128 Mr 15 '44 150w

Reviewed by K. T. Willis
Library J 69:459 My 15 '44 110w

"Occasionally tedious, like talk of children, pet dogs, or golf. One wonders how Miss Austen herself would regard it. The chances are that she would be more amused than annoyed by her devotees' concern with her characters and every detail of their known and surmised history. . . The collaborators are careful to say that their book is written to please themselves, and for the like-minded, to whom it must be endlessly entertaining."
Manchester Guardian p3 D 31 '43 130w

"I think that for a book about Jane Austen this one is somewhat deficient in verve; and that its authors' worries that some of their opinions may shock their fellow-Janeites possess a coyness ill-suited to a writer who was never coy. . . Otherwise, for any well-posted reader of Jane Austen, there is good matter here; there are many interesting small points and some useful bits of information; and the two authors are often enough at ladylike odds to keep their collaboration from being a mere duet." Louis Kronenberger
+ — Nation 159:187 Ag 12 '44 1500w

"The book is well-named. It is a rich and varied and desultory discussion of the six masterpieces, with no general thesis or sustained argument." Edward Marsh
+ New Statesman & Nation 27:11 Ja 1 '44 1000w

"This book will delight three sets of readers: lovers of Jane Austen and admirers of either Sheila- Kaye-Smith or of G. B. Stern. The authors themselves seek no wider audience than that of confessed 'Janeites.' Devotees though they are, they have no desire to proselytize. . . Indeed, this is less a book than a series of conversations between two leading women-novelists of modern England about the English woman-novelist whom they most admire. It is as informal, as lively, as fresh and spontaneous as their conversations must be. Only in one way does it fail to do justice to the long hours of talk out of which this book finally emerged. I am sure that the original conversations were not neatly divided—as is the book—but that the two voices rose antiphonally, correcting, disputing, arguing, agreeing, contradicting. No written record could do justice to their conversation; yet in the brief section which they entitled 'Odds and Ends' we have some notion of what an evening with Miss Kaye-Smith and Miss Stern must be, when their talk turns, as inevitably it does, to Jane." Marjorie Nicolson
+ N Y Times p3 My 28 '44 1500w

"The book contains a good deal that will be interesting to those interested in Jane Austen, though neither Miss Stern nor Miss Kaye-Smith, it seems to me, really goes into the subject so deeply as might be done. My impression is that the long study of Jane Austen which has lately been published by Queenie Leavis in the English magazine called Scrutiny gets to grips with her artistic development in a way that the present authors, who do not mention Mrs. Leavis' essay, have scarcely even attempted to do. Yet 'Speaking of Jane Austen,' as an informal symposium, revives the enthusiasm of the reader and stimulates him to think about the questions suggested by Miss Kaye-Smith and Miss Stern." Edmund Wilson
+ — New Yorker 20:70 Je 24 '44 2250w

"This book, as the title indicates, is a book of gossip. Here is no asperity of scholarship nor intricacy of analysis to alarm the timid reader. . . Sometimes the authors agree. . . Sometimes they disagree. . . The general effect, however, is composite, and though I am left with the impression that Miss Stern's chapters are the more illuminating, I am aware that this is not unconnected with the violence of my reaction when Miss Kaye-Smith observes that the friendship of Emma and Mrs. Weston was 'devoid equally of hectic absorption and veiled enmity.' " Lettice Fowler

+ — Spec 171:580 D 17 '43 850w
Springf'd Republican p4d Je 4 '44 500w

"When Miss Sheila Kaye-Smith talks of Jane Austen, we are content to listen. Perhaps there is ground for argument about 'snobbery,' so difficult is it to remember always that class-consciousness changes, and that it is unfair to see the convention of a period as a moral offence in the persons of that period. But even on that subject Miss Kaye-Smith's is sober, well-informed, thoughtful talk. Nowhere are Jane Austen, her life and her art, more firmly placed in their proper historical and social perspective, and nowhere has her 'insensitiveness' to the outer life of her time (much of it so brutal and so bloody) been better explained than in the unpretentious talk entitled 'All the New Poems and States of the Nation.' "
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p21 Ja 8 '44 650w

"The present volume offers a conversation between friends, recorded with such a spontaneous air that it seems an open conversation, in which any one may join with an individual opinion. The authors do not expect mere acquiescence; they differ from each other amicably on occasion. They are justly indifferent to the classic canons of criticism—whatever those may be—and make no attempt to estimate the relative or absolute position of Jane Austen in literature. Simply they are amused, engaged by the matter in hand, in all its aspects; they enter the world of Jane Austen as one level of reality, and are no more afraid of saying what has been said before than they are of making a new observation." Isabel Paterson
+ Weekly Book Review p1 My 28 '44 2250w
Wis Lib Bul 40:108 Jl '44

"For one who, like myself, in defiance of inconvenience, carries about upon all journeys the bulky one-volume edition of 'The Complete Novels of Jane Austen,' G. B. Stern's and Sheila Kaye-Smith's new book, 'Speaking of Jane Austen,' is unalloyed and unquenchable delight. I have not, in fact, read in years anything or any sort which has given me more pleasure. And, I may say also, more new and fascinating notions to ponder over and to play with. . . Through the combined and prodigal freshness and enthusiasm of these two devotees of Jane, literally every one of her creations has been born again in the world of my mind to live in another delightful span of years. Immortal before, the immortality of each has been polished to a new brightness." M. E. Chase
+ Yale R n s 34:165 autumn '44 700w

KAZMAYER, ROBERT. Out of the clouds; a realistic approach to the problems of the post-war world. 255p $2.50 Macrae Smith co.
940.53144 World war, 1939—Peace. Reconstruction (1939-) 44-686

An attempted analysis of the present international situation, how it came about, and what the prospects are for "peace in our time."

Booklist 40:249 Mr 15 '44
Current Hist 6:259 Mr '44 100w
Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:655 Jl '44 30w

"A well-written, disillusioning, almost disheartening book, forcing reader to face the facts; one might say—a contribution in the negative. Recommended for libraries with 'thinking' clientele." H. H. Bernt
+ Library J 69:70 Ja 15 '44 70w
Reviewed by Hal Borland
Sat R of Lit 27:23 Ap 15 '44 400w
Wis Lib Bul 40:36 Mr '44

KEATING, LAWRENCE A. Highview mystery. 222p $2 Messner 44-3474

Mystery story for young readers.

"A lively and amusing story." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p4 Je 4 '44 210w
Kirkus 12:98 F 15 '44 110w

"Recommended for any library suffering from a mystery deficiency and a surfeit of mystery addicts." S. J. Johnson
Library J 69:702 S 1 '44 60w
Reviewed by E. L. Buell
N Y Times p18 Ap 9 '44 90w

KEATING, LAWRENCE A. Men in aprons; if he could only cook. 186p $2 Mill
641.5 Cookery 44-47211

Cookbook for men, written by one of them. Partial contents: Breakfast; Sunday night tea; Smart shopping, kitchen talk, and salads; Poker club snacks; Drinks on the house; Dinner is served. Index.

"Gaily and snappily written, as though amateur masculine cookery were a joke—which it generally is—but the author does not evade the main issue under cover of an airy manner."
+ Christian Century 61:1320 N 15 '44 80w

"A delightful cookbook that's fun reading, and that is really cued to the complete nitwit with a yen for the kitchen."
+ Kirkus 12:389 S 1 '44 130w

"Mr. Keating's book gets off to an unfortunate start with the wrong (or at least disapproved) method of hard-boiling an egg. But he does some useful debunking, and his directions for each recipe are nothing less than a model for other compilers, no matter whom they are addressing. He has some surprising and very good-sounding combinations, which also should be emulated. . . He has a good if elementary chapter on drinks and pays deserved tribute to really good breads. His humor gets under foot once in a while but his honest zeal and evident skill make up for it." L. M. Palmer
+ — N Y Times p29 Ja 14 '45 280w

"Although the book is new, many of the recipes call for cream, heavy cream and butter, with no mention of substitutes. Perhaps the best part of the book deals with cooking terms, how to recognize meats, what kitchen utensils are for what, and how to flavor. A reasonably interesting book, but not to be seriously considered as a substitute for established cook books already on the market." L. C.
Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 7 '45 90w

KEATS, MARK. Sancho and his stubborn mule; pictures by Fritz Eichenberg. [41p] $1 Scott, W.R. 44-40117

An old Mexican folk tale, describing the trials of Sancho who wanted to get a load of gourds to market and at first could not budge his mule. Finally a story told him by his grandfather popped into his mind, and the plan worked. For ages five to seven.

"Fritz Eichenberg has done the amusing pictures and there is no one who can better draw an animal with a wicked gleam in its eye. An attractive little book that is lots of fun." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p14 My 21 '44 90w
Booklist 40:344 Je 1 '44
Kirkus 12:217 My 1 '44 90w
Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
N Y Times p21 My 21 '44 80w
Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p5 Ag 13 '44 150w
Wis Lib Bul 40:87 Je '44

KEELER, MRS KATHERINE (SOUTHWICK). Apple rush. 32p il $2 Nelson 44-8306

Story for grades three to four describing a small boy's fun and work during the apple picking season on his father's New Hampshire farm.

KEELER, KATHERINE—Continued

"Katherine Southwick Keeler's red and green illustrations make the book an unusually attractive one, and her story has not only the charm of true Americana, but a great deal of information concerning the growing, picking and shipping of apples." P. A. Whitney

+ Book Week p10 N 12 '44 130w

Booklist 41:111 D 1 '44

"An excellent regional story with the very scent of New England orchard and the tang of its mountainy air shut away between the slim covers." F. C. Darling

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 N 27 '44 80w

"Here's one way to put over really sound information on apple orchards—information about kinds of apples, care of them, proper picking, and how they are packed for shipping."

+ Kirkus 12:480 O 15 '44 90w

"Mrs. Keeler, native New Hampshire woman, has written and illustrated a colorful tale of the section and people she knows. Good factual background combined with fiction to delight nine- and ten-year-olds." Leota Herren

+ Library J 69:1050 D 1 '44 70w

KEELER, MRS KATHERINE (SOUTHWICK). Dog days [il. by the author]. [39p] $1.50 Nelson

44-6311

When the Tucker family moved to the country the three children demanded a dog. But one thing or another interfered and it was July before they knew it. And then as if to celebrate dog days, three dogs arrived on the same day. For children five to eight.

"There are simple puns, for beginning humor, and delightful dog illustrations by the author, but style and action do not come up to the best types of this kind of story."

+ — Kirkus 12:320 Jl 15 '44 70w

"An excellent book for young readers. Although text is simple, plot is unified by the desire of the three Tucker children for a dog. . . Ending adds a delightful element of surprise that will give the youngest reader the feeling he has completed a book rather than a reader." V. W. Schott

+ Library J 69:816 O 1 '44 70w

"For all its small proportions this story has a warm and living sense of family matters, emphasized by the author's pictures and just enough gentle punning to tickle the funny bones of 5-to-8-year olds." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p19 Ag 27 '44 120w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p5 Ag 6 '44 150w

KEEN, MRS GRACE (GRAHAM) and HUTCHINS, ARTHUR EUGENE. Let's all grow vegetables; with il. by Grace Keen. 92p pa $1 Univ. of Minn.

635 Vegetable gardening A44-1500

Valuable suggestions for the gardener who has only a limited space, including hints for window box and chemical gardens. Lay-outs, cultivation, crop rotation, fertilizers, plant diseases and their control, all are considered. Index.

"An excellent handbook for the practicing gardener—whether he works on his own acre in the country or on a city lot." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 My 7 '44 50w

"Another of those excellent small handbooks for the newcomer to the role of gardener. . . The authors do not confuse us with terms that need explanation, but proceed matter-of-factly along a how-to-do and what and when basis."

+ Kirkus 12:194 Ap 15 '44 40w

"Good, but seems expensive for a small paper-bound book."

+ Wis Lib Bul 40:83 Je '44

KELEN, IMRE. Yussuf, the ostrich; il. by the author. [48p] $1.75 Putnam

Ostriches—Legends and stories 44-383

Picture-story book about an educated ostrich who did the Americans a good turn in North Africa, and was decorated for his loyalty.

"If your children like comics, give them good ones like this." P. A. Whitney

+ Book Week p11 My 7 '44 170w

Booklist 40:306 My 1 '44

"Yussuf the Ostrich has a distinctly modern parable quality which adults will appreciate, while the small fry will find the story hugely entertaining."

+ Kirkus 12:143 Mr 15 '44 40w

"This is neither a good animal story, a good war story, nor a funny book, in text or pictures. Not recommended." E. G. Mullan

— Library J 69:406 My 1 '44 20w

"Sophisticated humor in the unusual picture book will escape some children, but the gay and colorful illustrations, timeliness and action, make it a good buy for libraries." Ethel Reiman

+ Library J 69:406 My 1 '44 80w

"The eye of even a little child is first caught by the limpid, brilliant coloring of these lively pictures of men and animals, especially the latter. Then he realizes that they tell a continuous story attractive enough to call for having the text read aloud, and whoever does enjoys it as much as the child, for an amusing, light-hearted tale is told in simple, sensible words. . . The author is one of the cartoonist team of Derso and Kelen: his entry into children's books is auspicious, for the story is gay, the colored pictures droll and the scene one in which many a child with relatives overseas will take particular personal interest." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Mr 5 '44 300w

KELEN, IMRE, il. See Aesop. Fables

KELLAND, CLARENCE BUDINGTON. Heart on her sleeve. 245p $2.50 Harper

44-5856

In a New England village the Senlac family owned and operated a plywood factory, which did a small but important war job. When Raoul Senlac met with a serious accident, his daughter, "beautiful but dumb" (?) took over the management and, with some minor help from the Navy, increased production and solved the mystery of several accidents besides the one her father had suffered—accidents that were not accidents.

"What with assorted criminals, enemy aliens and other characters you wouldn't care to encounter on a dark night, 'Heart on Her Sleeve' develops rapidly into a thriller with romantic trimmings. But as we hinted at the outset, there is nothing to worry about in the final inventory."

Weekly Book Review p6 Mr 26 '44 160w

Wis Lib Bul 40:56 Ap '44

KELLEY, ROBERT FULTON, ed. Sportsman's anthology. 396p $3.50 Howell, Soskin

Short stories—Collections 44-7521

Collection of twenty-five entertaining stories, articles or selections from books, about different kinds of sports. Partial contents: Tale of the gypsy horse, by Donn Byrne; The Matterhorn, by A. F. Mummery; Behind the footlights, by Barry Wood; The Colonel's cup, by Siegfried Sassoon; Trinket's colt, by E. O. Somerville and Martin Ross; Don—the story of a lion dog, by Zane Grey; Bobsleds are like that, by George Carroll; The battle of the fastnet, by A. F. Loomis; Horseshoes, by Ring Lardner; The Warwick woodlands, by Frank Forester; The git thar stroke, by Eric Hatch.

Reviewed by J. B. Metzenburg

Book Week p12 O 22 '44 180w

Booklist 41:41 O 1 '44

KELLS, LYMAN MORSE; KERN, WILLIS FREDERICK, and BLAND, JAMES R. Navigation. 2pts 288;281p il pt 1 $2.50; pt2 $2; also in 1v $5; text ed $3.75 McGraw

527 Navigation. Pilots and pilotage 43-15263

"A textbook for a complete course in the latest methods used in navigation. Chapter headings are: Fundamental mathematics for pilots; Instruments; Charts; Piloting; Navigation aids, rules of the road, tides and currents; Ship and plane maneuvers; Review of spherical trigonometry; Sailings and nautical astronomy; Time; Air almanac; Meridian altitude; Fix; Nautical astronomy and star identification. The authors are members of the faculty of the United States Naval Academy. Chapters 1, 2, 4, and 6 appear also in their Piloting and Maneuvering of Ships [Book Review Digest, 1943]." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Library J 68:626 Ag '43 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:10 Ja '44

KELLY, CHARLES E. One man's war [as told to Pete Martin]. 182p $2 Knopf

940.542 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American 44-7861

The war as it looks to an infantryman, as recalled by one of its outstanding members, Sergeant "Commando" Kelly of Pittsburgh. Besides describing his adventures in battle, Sergeant Kelly gives an account of his life to date.

Booklist 41:39 O 1 '44

Horn Bk 20:498 N '44 40w

"Good reading."
+ Kirkus 12:439 S 15 '44 70w

"The book is good reading. The dialogue, slang, atmosphere are authorized GI, racy, sometimes corny, always entertaining and heartwarming." N. K. Burger
+ N Y Times p6 S 24 '44 650w

"The whole story is written in a pungent down-to-earth style that teen-agers, particularly, will heartily appreciate." Leo Cullinane
+ Weekly Book Review p18 S 17 '44 550w

KELLY, ERIC PHILBROOK. From star to star; a story of Krakow in 1493; il. by Manning de V. Lee. (Stokes bk) 239p $2 Lippincott

Copernicus, Nicolaus—Juvenile literature 44-8026

Krakow, Poland, in 1493, is the scene of this story for older boys. Roman, son of a Polish aristocrat, is robbed and beaten on his journey to the university, and has a troublesome time after his arrival. But he makes friends with Copernicus, also a student at the university; befriends a poor student; and in return is befriended at a time when he can be of great service to his beloved university.

"There is a mystery in the story and a mission for Roman to carry through which brings needed aid to the university. It is a fine tale of man's early search for that next star." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p20 N 12 '44 270w
Booklist 41:94 N 15 '44

"One of the best of this year's juveniles."
+ Cath World 160:281 D '44 40w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 41:128 N 17 '44 10w

"This tale of student life in Poland, at the University of Krakow, throws medieval times and manners into clear relief. Eric Kelly, with his sound knowledge of Polish culture, is well prepared to give a realistic and readable picture of the adventures of a Polish nobleman's son, forced by circumstances to make his own way to procure an education."
+ Horn Bk 20:489 N '44 110w

"Well-done historical fiction rooted in fact."
+ Kirkus 12:453 O 1 '44 170w

"Recommended." Olive Brain
+ Library J 69:1006 N 15 '44 50w

"Because of their especial beauty, many scenes linger in one's memory. Those who love Poland cannot read this story without emotion. They will remember that, in spite of the tragedies of history, Krakow's intellectual past still lives. . . This story in which the adventure of learning is a real passion will not attract the 'movie fan' or the 'sporting' type; but it will bring a new enthusiasm and a rich reward to more thoughtful readers and to all adults who have kept the fire of learning burning in their hearts. Expressive illustrations add to the value of this unique book." B. W. Shaffer
+ Sat R of Lit 27:33 N 11 '44 450w
Weekly Book Review p28 N 12 '44 350w

KELLY, HAROLD CALEB. A practical course in horology. 192p il $2.75 Manual arts

681.11 Clocks and watches 44-4790

"By a practical watch repairman and head of the department of horology, Southwestern Institute of Technology. Useful for beginner or professional repairman. Glossary of terms. Bibliography." Library J

Booklist 40:336 Je 1 '44

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:306 Ap 1 '44 30w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:23 Ap '44

KELLY, THOMAS JOSEPH. Damage control; a manual for naval personnel. 248p il $2.50 Van Nostrand

623.825 Warships. U.S. Navy 44-8172

"Covers both the technique of damage control, particularly during battle and the organization and duties of personnel assigned to damage control duty. Intended for use as a textbook in naval training schools and as a handbook on ships at sea." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:700 S 1 '44 60w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:49 Jl '44

KELSEN, HANS. Peace through law. 155p $2 Univ. of N.C. press

341 International law and relations. International cooperation. Peace 44-9320

"Hans Kelsen sets forth an argument for the view that the legal and juridical elements in the international organization of the future should have primary importance, economic and military factors being made subordinate to them. An especially interesting element in this book is the author's exposition of the applicability of international law to the punishment of individual war criminals in Germany and Japan." Book Week

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 N 5 '44 90w

"The author rightly discerns the difficulty of creating a unified international political authority, completely transcending national sovereignty; and wrongly imagines that he can evade this difficulty by creating an international court with compulsory jurisdiction over all disputes. . . This treatise is made even more abstract and irrelevant by the addition of an impossible individualism to an unrealistic legalism." Reinhold Niebuhr
Nation 159:623 N 18 '44 300w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
N Y Times p20 Ja 7 '45 280w

Reviewed by Norman Angell
Sat R of Lit 27:5 N 25 '44 180w

KELSEN, HANS. Society and nature; a sociological inquiry. 391p $4 Univ. of Chicago press

572 Society, Primitive. Philosophy of nature. Causation A44-169

"On the basis of much ethnological material Mr. Kelsen explains that the distinction between society and nature is known only to civilized man, not to primitive man. The former conceives nature as a system of elements connected with one another according to the principles of casuality; for the latter 'nature' is an intrinsic part of his society, interpreted according to social norms, especially according to the lex taliones, the norm of retribution. In sharp contrast to that conception, modern science, endeavoring to overcome dualism and to establish a monistic view of the world, tries to conceive of society as part of nature and not nature as part of society. But 'no essential difference between natural and social laws, that is, between the laws determining nature, and the laws determining society, exists as soon as the natural law itself relinquishes its claim to absolute necessity and satisfies itself with being an assertion of statistical probability.' " Nation

KELSEN, HANS—Continued

Reviewed by F. H. Knight
Am J Soc 50:226 N 13 '44 1650w

Reviewed by H. W. Schneider
Columbia Law R 44:588 Jl '44 600w

"Kelsen's discussion of the principle of retribution will, I think, become classic, for it is a contribution of the first order to the history of ideas. The book should have been published without the last part, which leaves the reader (at least this reader) disappointed with its inadequacy; one is given, as it were, a glimpse of only the back side of a tantalizingly attractive idea. Perhaps Professor Kelsen will show this idea in all its dimensions in a second volume." M. R. Konvitz
+ — Ethics 54:300 Jl '44 1100w

"Not only is Dr. Kelsen's book, as a sociological inquiry, largely sterile and unproductive, but it is likely to do a good deal of harm. For his very great authority as a jurist is likely to be transferred to his sociology, especially among other jurists, and seriously to interfere with others' assimilation of sociological modes of thinking. It is this circumstance which makes it necessary from the sociological side to speak so very plainly about the shortcomings of the book." Talcott Parsons
— Harvard Law R 58:140 N '44 2400w

"The intellectual history of ideas from the primitive man to the modern man might be expected to exhibit a maturation in both the normative and the causal concepts. . . The historical relations between the two ways of understanding the environment and their interdependent development constitute an interesting, if large, subject-matter for investigation. Conceived in the spirit of The Life of Reason it would be a study of phases in that development. There is some of this spirit in Society and Nature. Unfortunately, the author is riding his thesis hard. The spirit of Procrustes walks through many of these pages. One thinks of it more as a contribution to a mythology of positivism and neo-Kantianism rather than as a contribution to either scientific sociology or the history of ideas." E. N. Garlan
J Philos 41:521 S 14 '44 2500w

Reviewed by E. E. Aubrey
J Religion 24:217 Jl '44 650w

Nation 158:661 Je 3 '44 150w

"Although many American ethnologists will perhaps not agree with all that he writes, it must be recognized that Dr. Kelsen has gone to the data upon which the major alternative views are based and that his reinterpretations of these data are cogent. His apparently random selection of primitive data and some of the inferences which he draws from them are at times dubious, but fortunately such elements of his argument are not crucial to his main thesis. What he has to say is not only full of facile insights; it is productive of a radically social conception of mind that offers a fresh challenge to all those who hold contrary views." C. W. Mills
+ — Pol Sci Q 59:102 Mr '44 800w

"Whether the excellent summary and interpretation of primitive and classical Greek thought contained in the first two long parts of this volume constitute an adequate foundation for the reasoning of the two short concluding chapters, is perhaps a matter of opinion. The reviewer's opinion is that the tracing of a trend in conceptions of nature and causation from primitive and ancient to recent times does not prove anything in particular as to the conceptions of these matters that will eventually be found acceptable by modern man. Dr. Kelsen's scholarship appears to be quite adequate and painstaking." F. N. House
Social Forces 22:459 My '44 700w

KEMPE, MRS MARGERY (BURNHAM). Book of Margery Kempe, 1436; a modern version by W. Butler-Bowdon; with an introd. by R. W. Chambers. 243p $3.75 Devin-Adair [6s Cape, J]
B or 92 44-8498

In 1501 Wynkyn de Worde published a few devotional extracts from a book by an English woman and for centuries that was all that was known of Margery Kempe. In 1934 W. Butler-Bowdon discovered a manuscript which upon examination proved to be the complete "Book of Margery Kempe" written five hundred years ago. The work contains more than devotional meditations, however, as it also recounts the story of Margery's early life and her travels in later years to Palestine, and on the continent. This edition of the work is designed for the general reader with modernized spelling and some obsolete expressions given present-day equivalents. Index.

Booklist 41:123 D 15 '44

Cath World 160:380 Ja '45 180w

"Margery displays, in a form inoffensive because it is completely naive, the egoism which characterizes all but the greatest 'saints.' No doubt she was sincere in her quest for perfection, and no doubt her visions were intensely real to her, but the record of her experience offers no spiritual sustenance to the modern. For the student of religious psychoses, however, it is an invaluable document. The editor, who is also the owner of the manuscript, translates it into language comprehensible to the modern but fittingly archaic in flavor." Cecelia Gaul
Christian Century 62:17 Ja 3 '45 420w

Reviewed by Cuthbert Wright
Commonweal 40:594 O 6 '44 700w

Reviewed by R. J. Hurley
Library J 69:696 S 1 '44 140w

"Volume I of the scholarly edition of the manuscript by the Early English Text Society was published in London by the Oxford Press during the worst days of the German blitz. The publication of the second volume has had to be postponed on account of the war conditions. In the meantime this American edition of the book by Colonel Butler-Bowdon, in some ways an improvement upon the English edition, should be required reading for students of English history, and a delight to every reader who wants to know from authentic sources something about the everyday life of another age, about the changing conditions and environment, that have been the setting of the tragedies and comedies of the unchanged frail and glorious souls of men and women." Sigrid Undset
+ N Y Times p6 S 3 '44 1500w

" 'The Book of Margery Kempe' is the sort of pure gold that would have delighted William James. And whoever reads it with care will read it with excitement. Margery, perhaps, has not the dreadful poignancy of Bunyan in 'Grace Abounding,' but one thinks of her in the same breath and even the skeptical materialist is compelled to sympathize with such genuine tribulation of spirit." Leonard Bacon
+ Sat R of Lit 27:12 N 4 '44 1200w

Springf'd Republican p6 O 15 '44 600w

"What Margery had intended was a book of religious edification, the account of her communings with her Lord and His revelations to her in His holy places. What she has given us is a vivid picture of a warm-hearted and magnificently determined woman, and of life and travel in the fourteenth century." Clare Godfrey
+ Weekly Book Review p6 S 3 '44 1000w

KENNEDY, CHARLES WILLIAM. The earliest English poetry; a critical survey of the poetry written before the Norman conquest; with illustrative translations. 375p $3 Oxford

829.1 Anglo-Saxon poetry 43-16008

"A critical history of Anglo-Saxon poetry which throws light on what used to be called the Dark Ages. It reveals . . . esthetic values which other literary historians have too often either neglected or misapprehended. And it contains, for illustrative purposes, generous samples of this earliest English poetry, done into our modern tongue by an eminent scholar who happens also to be the most gifted translator of Anglo-Saxon poetry who ever practiced that difficult art." N Y Times

"Written in a straightforward style remarkably free from the rhetorical crabbedness of many learned works, the book weds to careful scholarship a certain amount of sensitive literary criticism. In analyzing texts ranging from ancient runes and charms to the magnificent epic sweep of the Beowulf, Professor Kennedy gives full significance to the extent, often understressed, to which Old English poetry 'reflects the rich culture of the Christian Church with all its varied treasures of learning and discipline.'" M. D. Coogan

+ Cath World 158:505 F '44 500w

Reviewed by Carlos Baker

+ N Y Times p22 Jl 23 '44 400w

KENYON, JOHN SAMUEL, and KNOTT, THOMAS ALBERT, eds. Pronouncing dictionary of American English. 484p $3 Merriam

421.5 English language — Pronunciation. Americanisms 44-578

"Phonetic pronouncing dictionary of colloquial English based on cultivated usage, emphasizing the main regional differences in America. Many American proper, historical, and literary names have been included because of special interest in their pronunciation. Pronunciation is indicated by the International phonetic alphabet." Booklist

Booklist 40:228 Mr 1 '44

"This book is of great interest and value. It allows for the broad regional differences between the East, the North and the South of the United States . . . and often gives alternatives based on these. It lets you say a lot of things that the purists consider incorrect but that everybody has been saying for decades. It is to be hoped that Kenyon and Knott will be allowed to substitute in our schools a standard American usage for the many absurd pronunciations." Edmund Wilson

+ New Yorker 20:81 F 19 '44 360w

"A Pronouncing Dictionary of American English is not comparable to the New International Dictionary as it is concerned solely with pronunciation and not with meaning. Since it supplements other dictionaries of the English language and is particularly concerned with American dialects, it is a definite addition to the field and in some libraries might well be circulated. A Pronouncing Dictionary of American English is recommended for large libraries and small school and public libraries that do not have access to large collections."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 15:52 O '44 700w

KENYON, THEDA. Black dawn. 384p $2.75 Messner

44-9628

"Theda Kenyon has taken a long leap down the corridor of history to resume the bizarre family chronicle she began in 'The Golden Feather.' Here descendants of Ajax and Gerald Stacy, brothers who went their separate ways in the reign of Charles the First to settle in Massachusetts and Virginia, meet in enmity after the Civil War. Fired by the preaching of Moody, Geraldine Winslow went to Virginia to teach the Negroes and was received with open insults by the plantation branch of the family. The situation was not improved when one of the Southerners fell in love with her." Weekly Book Review

"The story, with its tangled web of romance, holds the interest throughout."

+ Kirkus 12:327 Ag 1 '44 120w

"There is abundant melodrama in the history of the period to make the book an entertaining one, and the spirit of the time is indubitably authentic. But the characters move in wooden fashion through their exciting days. Their reactions are those of stock characters. . . 'Black Dawn' shines on a momentous scene but doesn't impart the spark of life to the actors in it." Barbara Bond

N Y Times p28 Ja 28 '45 280w

"Miss Kenyon is a good craftsman. Though her novel may be read for its message it is also a good story, weaving diverse incidents and characterizations into a tale that keeps its proportion, pace—and the reader's interest." Emanuel Slotnick

+ Springf'd Republican p4d D 10 '44 220w

"Miss Kenyon's style is as turbulent as the emotions of her characters." Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p20 O 22 '44 120w

KEPLER, THOMAS SAMUEL, comp. Contemporary thinking about Jesus; an anthology. 429p $3.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

232.9 Jesus Christ 44-1053

"Here is a rich store of reading for anyone who wishes to know—and who does not?—what is being thought in our generation about Jesus of Nazareth. 'What think ye of Christ?' is a question that is as searching now as when it was first written down by the evangelist. Fifty-five authors are drawn upon to help answer the question. . . The selections overlap very little in subject matter and are arranged in five parts dealing respectively with the nature of the Synoptic Gospels, the portrait of Jesus in the Fourth Gospel, Jesus' relationship to history, eschatology and ethics, and modern evaluations of Jesus. The selections average in length about six and a half pages. Only four out of fifty-five were published before 1920, while forty of them come from the thirties and forties." Christian Century

Booklist 40:261 Ap 1 '44

"The writers are none of them nonentities, and the published articles or books are skillfully excerpted or condensed." H. J. Cadbury

+ Christian Century 61:433 Ap 5 '44 900w

"It is a valuable book of reference for those who have not the time to study at length the innumerable books on these important problems." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 158:17 Ap 1 '44 150w

Reviewed by O. A. Piper

Crozer Q 21:263 Jl '44 400w

"This is distinctly a technical theological book, but of real value to students interested in this field."

+ Kirkus 12:63 F 1 '44 120w

Library J 69:646 Ag '44 30w

KERN, WILLIS FREDERICK, and BLAND, JAMES R. Geometry with military and naval applications. 152p il $1.75 Wiley

513.3 Geometry, Solid 43-17793

"The aim of this book is to present the fundamental, practical essentials of solid geometry in a new and concise but comprehensive manner. How this subject is used in solving problems arising in the army and navy is indicated in fully illustrated problems." Pref.

Library J 69:32 Ja 1 '44 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 28:65 O '43

KERNAN, THOMAS DICKENSON. Now with the morning star. 234p $2.50 Scribner

44-40186

In 1938 Hitler's men took over an ancient monastery in the Black Forest and dispersed the monks who had lived there. Later one of the monks disobeyed a Hitler decree and was sentenced to ten years penal servitude—and the prison labor camp to which he was sent was the ancient monastery. Because he had known life there before Brother Nicholas also knew he need not stay, he could escape easily enough, but the night Stuttgart was bombed he had a vision of God's plan for him and so he stayed on.

KERNAN, T. D.—Continued

"This book has a beauty and simplicity of phrase unusual in modern writers. It has verity and truth and tenderness. It is excellently written, and moving. There is not a word but has profound meaning. The description of the mountains is both powerful and lovely, and one can feel the atmosphere of that clear light air, and the granite strength of every rock. In every way, it is a most wonderful book, and deserves the consideration of everyone who is interested not only in the overthrow of Hitler but in the end of the dead and stifling 'realism' which has brought the modern world to such a dreadful pass." Taylor Caldwell
+ Book Week p5 D 24 '44 1000w
Booklist 41:78 N 1 '44

"The book is an extraordinary achievement, and I do not believe anyone except Thomas Kernan, with his own special equipment of temperament and experience, could have written it. I doubt if anyone else could give us quite his unique blending of crisp, reportorial detachment and deep spiritual insight." Katherine Brégy
+ Cath World 160:375 Ja '45 180w

"It is a simple story, simply told, and one which sustains unflagging interest."
+ Commonweal 41:105 N 10 '44 350w

"Here is the familiar yet ever strange drama of the dispossessed as it unfolds through the smooth prose of Thomas Kernan. It is history narrowed down and focused, and up until the last two chapters it sustains the interest of history that is not far removed. Mr. Kernan has seen it all happen." Nona Balakian
+ N Y Times p22 O 15 '44 600w

"Mr. Kernan does not probe very deeply into the mind of this bewildered man, but the story he tells is moving and readable."
+ New Yorker 20:97 O 21 '44 60w

"Mr. Kernan is not a skilled novelist. Hardly any one of his characters shows three dimensions; the higher-ranking clerics he introduces are not more than mouthpieces of a conventional attitude. Yet Brother Nicholas is somehow of flesh and blood; his search for work in the Germany of the late thirties—doubly strange to a man who has left the world shortly after the first war—makes for as good a picture of German decay and bewilderment as many a more spectacular yarn. And the ex-monk's courage in smuggling messages from the archbishop's chancellery to Switzerland and Swiss currency back into the Reich becomes credible on the mere strength of his simple faith." Robert Pick
+ Sat R of Lit 27:22 N 4 '44 650w

"Mr Kernan has written an interesting novel and though at times it lags a little, it is a story that will not soon be forgotten." H. J. Sloan
+ Springf'd Republican p4d O 22 '44 400w

"In spite of its background of war and persecution, 'Now With the Morning Star' is a serene book. There is beauty in it, and a message of reassurance in troubled days." Lisle Bell
+ Weekly Book Review p8 N 5 '44 600w

KERNODLE, GEORGE RILEY. From art to theatre; form and convention in the renaissance. 255p il $5 Univ. of Chicago press
792.09 Theater—History. Theaters—Stage-setting and scenery A44-3462

"Many an Italian primitive painting shows figures in what appears to be a complete stage setting. It was thought that these scenes were copied from medieval religious plays, with their open-sided houses, toy ships, curtained backings and other stage gear. This compendious study proves that the stage was, on the contrary, influenced by the paintings, but that the inter-relationship began with the theatre in Hellenistic times. . . Dr. Kernodle has ventured into a fresh field, and while his concern is more for the theatre than for painting, he throws a good deal of new light on the conventions of both pictorial and stage representation. . . He traces the stage backing with its columns and niches from Hellenistic painters . . . into early Christian iconography . . . through medieval miniatures, stained glass and embroidery . . . to the tombs, altars, pageant buildings and stages of the Renaissance. The modern theatre embodies something of all the Renaissance variants of the Greek original: side framing, architectural backing and illusionistic distance." (N Y Times) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 Ja 21 '45 270w
Reviewed by Paul McPharlin
N Y Times p24 O 22 '44 440w

"Mr. Kernodle's book is richly illustrated and learnedly annotated. It is the result of nine years' intensive study here and abroad and is a mine of information and illuminating discussion on a fascinating period of history when the spirit of man flowered in creative beauty, rather than in the successful pursuit of mass destruction."
+ Theatre Arts 28:685 N '44 650w
Times [London] Lit Sup p610 D 16 '44 240w

KERR, RALPH WALDO EMERSON, ed. Chemistry and industry of starch; starch sugars and related compounds. 472p il $8.50 Academic press
664.2 Starch 44-8103

"This survey, consisting of a series of articles by fifteen chemists and technologists, presents and correlates much of our present knowledge of starch research and practice. The subject matter covers the occurrence and varieties of starch; the manufacture of corn, tapioca, wheat, potato, and other industrial starches; the physical and chemical properties of starch; starch reactions; and the use of starch in food and fermentation industries, and in the manufacture of paper, textiles, and adhesives. There are several extensive chapter bibliographies." N Y New Tech Bks

"I can, of course, point out that some chapters are not written as well as others. I can show some repetitions, some inaccuracies, and a few outright errors, but instead of that I shall heartily recommend this book to all starch chemists and technologists, to all chemists interested in the subject, and even to some laymen. And I do it in spite of the rather high price of the book." L. T. Smith
+ Chem & Eng N 22:2048 N 25 '44 350w

"Latest and most complete book on the subject written by editor and 14 other specialists."
+ Library J 70:34 Ja 1 '45 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:49 Jl '44

KERR, WALTER BOARDMAN. Russian army; its men, its leaders, and its battles. 250p maps $2.75 Knopf
940.542 World war, 1939—Russia. Russia—Army 43-18389

A former New York Herald Tribune Moscow correspondent writes of his own experiences in Russia, and of the leaders, men and battles of the Russian army. Mr Kerr was a correspondent in Finland during the Finnish-Russian war; he was in Paris at the time of the German occupation; and in Russia from November 1941 to early 1943. Index.

Reviewed by Alfred Vagts
Am Hist R 49:727 Jl '44 160w
Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Book Week p4 Ja 23 '44 310w
Booklist 40:195 F 1 '44
Cleveland Open Shelf p2 Ja '44
Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:664 Jl '44 30w
Kirkus 12:42 Ja 15 '44 160w
Manchester Guardian p3 Je 21 '44 60w
Reviewed by Ralph Bates
Nation 158:395 Ap 1 '44 400w
New Statesman & Nation 28:242 O 7 '44 100w

Reviewed by H. A. DeWeerd
N Y Times p3 F 6 '44 550w

"Mr. Kerr is a competent reporter and has collected some interesting facts and figures about the Russian military machine. His book, however, is principally valuable as a demonstration of the inability of journalism per se to get hold of the meaning of great historic events."
+ New Yorker 19:67 Ja 22 '44 70w

"Mr. Kerr satisfies the inquiring mind with many facts heretofore available only in confidential reports. The book was evidently written at top speed and therefore is somewhat repetitious and not as well organized as it might be. It is not yet by any means the definitive book on the Red Army. Since the Moscow and Stalingrad campaigns, the home front and all the arms and services of the Russian Army are graphically portrayed, Mr. Kerr's 'Russian Army' is appropriate for the armchair strategist as well as for the professional soldier." Donald Armstrong
+ — Sat R of Lit 27:8 Ja 22 '44 900w

Reviewed by S. H. F. Johnston
Spec 172:506 Je 2 '44 600w

"Mr. Kerr was the New York Herald Tribune correspondent in Moscow. His book on the Red Army is in many ways more informative than could have been anticipated and is unusually balanced and indeed sagacious where it touches enigmas of Russia to-day and to-morrow."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p244 My 20 '44 950w

"There are no dialectics here, and there is no preaching. There is also no omniscience; some details of the battles are given with the warning that the author never could find out what really happened on some sector of the front or on a certain day. And you will find as few generalizations about the Soviet Union, the Red Army, the German army, Communism or the second front in this book as you would find about fire insurance or chemical extinguishers in a good newspaper story about a five-alarm fire. Instead, you will find superb contemporary history and a most exciting book." Joseph Barnes
+ Weekly Book Review p1 Ja 23 '44 1500w

KERWIN, HARRY. Arc and acetylene welding. 240p il $2.50 McGraw

671 Electric welding. Oxyacetylene welding and cutting 44-6776

"A well organized introductory text. Directions and discussions are given for forty-one lessons or shop exercises covering as many types of welding jobs and problems." N Y New Tech Bks

---

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:653 Ag '44 30w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:50 Jl '44

KESSEL, JOSEPH. Army of shadows; tr. from the French by Haakon Chevalier. 159p $2 Knopf

44-5494

The story of the French underground, told in the form of fiction, but based upon fact.

"It is a Dante-esque story which at times leaves the reader breathless and at others makes him sick to the stomach. Yet all the while one lives, feels and struggles with the great people of France which now at last sees the dawn of liberation after four years of darkness." Joachim Joesten
+ Book Week p1 Jl 2 '44 900w
Booklist 41:22 S '44

"None of the main characters in Mr Kessel's book actually becomes a human being, none of them can appeal to our interest. Yet the story is pathetic, and few readers will lay the book down before having read it to the end. . . Haakon Chevalier's English translation reads well and succeeds in recreating the tense atmosphere of the original French text." E. K.
+ — Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 20 '44 390w
Cleveland Open Shelf p12 Je '44
Horn Bk 20:499 N '44 50w

"Harrowing, saddening episodes in lives of abnegation and nerveless courage. Perhaps not for a wide market—but superbly done."
+ Kirkus 12:220 My 15 '44 170w

"A far from perfect book but the author has wisely tried to do no more than tell a story, not the story, of the 'obscure, secret France, new to her friends, her enemies, and above all to herself.' And because he writes with honesty of intention and humility of spirit, he has not marred or smirched the beauty of the thing he describes, the heroism in and of a France where 'civil disobedience, individual and organized rebellion have become duties to the fatherland.'" Jay Allen
+ — Nation 159:102 Jl 22 '44 1330w

"Of the many books—fiction and near-fiction—written about the French underground, few if any have carried the ring of authenticity and none has done full justice to the terrible and inspiring truth. 'Army of Shadows' is a searching attempt to pay a virile tribute to the French resistance." C. J. Rolo
+ N Y Times p5 Je 25 '44 450w

"A restrained, simple almost muffled account of the French underground and its activities. . . No better book than this about France during the Nazi occupation is likely to be written in a long time, and Mr. Haakon M. Chevalier, once more the translator, has lived up to his responsibility by turning out one of his very best jobs."
+ New Yorker 20:68 Jl 1 '44 240w

Reviewed by Frederick Gruin
Sat R of Lit 27:14 Jl 1 '44 900w

"This book must be regarded as a preview of the future as much as it is a mirror of the present. If any war book, written in anger about angry men, can be classed as essential, then this is essential. There are no battles to stir imaginations, no ingenious machines to excite wonder, no glamorous deeds to claim an Oak Leaf Cluster; there is only fear, desperation and darkness." R. F. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Je 25 '44 550w

"A book which the publishers describe as 'the truth in fiction form,' and which written as it is with brilliance, intensity, and distinction, must take its place among the most powerful and stirring stories of our time." Kay Boyle
+ Weekly Book Review p1 Je 18 '44 1550w

KEY to the universe; the world remapped, historic rise and fall of nations, the march of America. 224p il maps $5; current price information not available c1940 Geographical pub. co.

910 Geography. History

"This volume consists of two major sections: 'Key to the Constitution of the United States,' by Francis Clay Harley; and 'Key to the Universe,' by Lloyd Edwin Smith, edited by Frederick K. Branom. The first of these, 'Key to the Constitution,' contains a reproduction of the Declaration of Independence, a profusely illustrated copy of the Federal Constitution and its Amendments with marginal summaries of their content, Washington's Farewell Address, Lincoln's Gettysburg Address, a page of questions and answers on the Constitution, and several pages of miscellaneous material. The second section, 'Key to the Universe' . . . includes a history of geography and exploration, a brief discussion of the solar system, descriptive information on the various sections of the world, supplemented by eighty-two colored maps of the United States and foreign countries. Two additional divisions on historical and economic geography with a gazetteer of the North, Central, and South American countries complete the volume. The whole is prefaced by a table of contents, an alphabetical index to text material, and a table of colored maps." Subscription Bks Bul

---

"The section containing descriptive information on various regions of the world is confusing both in arrangement and content. Regarding arrangement, there is frequent inconsist-

KEY to the universe—Continued
ency in the subordination of material. Often this is due to failure to distinguish between headings for divisions and subdivisions of a subject, e.g., headings for Canada and its provinces. Also in this section, failure to follow an alphabetic arrangement for countries, for which geographical data are given, increases difficulty in locating material. . . Key to the Universe is not recommended."
— Subscription Bks Bul 15:19 Ap '44 850w

KIMBALL, SIDNEY FISKE. Creation of the rococo. ltd ed 242p 274il pl $12 Philadelphia museum of art, Fairmount parkway at 26th st, Philadelphia 30

709.03 Art, Rococo 43-17077

"This is a book full of minute facts, gathered over a period of ten years of untiring research, dealing with dates, names, works and their designs and engraving derived from these designs. It is a thorough study of French interior decoration from the second half of the seventeenth century to about 1770, illustrating such different trends of taste as High-Baroque, Academy of Louis XIV, Regency, Louis XV Picturesque and the early Neo-classicism. From a mass of documents, both written and graphic, the author arouses a new appreciation for Rococo, thus giving a fresh approach to the history and criticism of a style." Weekly Book Review

"No doubt, this monograph is one of the most complete and rewarding works on the subject. Yet, there are moments when one wishes that Mr. Kimball's focus were not fixed so directly on the particulars of his material and that his viewpoint might expand to include historical analogy and social generalization." Christopher Lazare
+ — N Y Times p18 Mr 5 '44 700w

Reviewed by Lionello Venturi
Weekly Book Review p10 Ja 30 '44 1350w

KIMBROUGH, EMILY. How dear to my heart; drawings by Helen E. Hokinson. 267p $2.50 Dodd

818 U.S.—Social life and customs 44-9672

Recollections of the author's childhood in Muncie, Indiana, in the days when automobiles were new and farmers were known to shoot at them.

Reviewed by Mildred Walker
Book Week p42 D 3 '44 400w
Booklist 41:107 D 1 '44

"This is more than a funny book, a period piece. Dignity and love are never quaint. They were the essence of this civilization. They are the essence of a book which is going to be dear to a lot of hearts beside the author's." Dorothy Hillyer
+ Boston Globe p12 N 22 '44 280w

"Tender and delightful with the Hokinson illustrations an additional pleasure. Widely acceptable." M. C. Manley
+ Library J 69:935 N 1 '44 60w

"Not to be classed with the other two 'heart' books, 'How Dear to My Heart' is full of that wide-eyed exuberance which, unhappily, most of us have put away with childish things. Unless you compare her to past masters of childhood lore you will welcome Miss Kimbrough at her youngest if not her gayest." Nona Balakian
N Y Times p7 N 19 '44 440w

"Miss Kimbrough's memories are pleasant enough, and mildly entertaining in spots, but that heart of hers, which has already pumped its way through two other books, is plainly showing signs of strain."
New Yorker 20:92 N 18 '44 60w

Reviewed by E. Y. Mohler
Springf'd Republican p4d N 26 '44 390w

"Emily Kimbrough tells her story as she might a novel, and the reward to the reader is far more escape than the most cunningly contrived thriller or travel book. The narrative runs on and on like a brook, and she does not have to try very hard to 'create an atmosphere', for she writes about things that used to be for all of us." Ernestine Evans
+ Weekly Book Review p4 N 19 '44 1050w

KING, A. T. Engineering inspection practice; a complete guide to the methods, gauges and instruments used in engineering production workshops; foreword and pref. by H. H. Sheldon. 242p 246il $3 Chemical pub. co. [12s 6d Newnes]

620.1 Measuring instruments. Testing 44-6608

"Sample topics in this reprint of a British text are: Limits and tolerances; Linear and angular measurement; Hand-measuring tools; Measuring screw threads; Gear measurement; Precision measuring tools and machines; Hardness testing; and Aeronautical inspection. The treatment is introductory, and the book is designed for beginning workers and small manufacturers." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:606 Jl '44 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:24 Ap '44

KING, DOROTHY N. (MRS JAMES WERBLOW). Fix the toys. [28p] il $1.50 Morrow 44-7129

A picture-toy book. The toys arrive at the toyshop without their heads, and are so pictured. But all the heads are contained in an envelope, and the child reader is supposed to fit the heads on the various toys. For ages three to six.

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p10 S 25 '44 70w

"This is a nice, simple activity book."
+ Kirkus 12:340 Ag 1 '44 60w

"For home use, not a library item." D. M. MacDonald
Library J 69:816 O 1 '44 50w

"Among the best things that have come along in years in 'do-something' books is 'Fix the Toys.' . . It's fun when done right, hilarious when done wrong." L. M. Palmer
+ N Y Times p18 N 12 '44 50w

"It looks like fun. A convalescent child would find this especially acceptable."
+ Springf'd Republican p4d D 31 '44 50w

"Here is a variation on the toy-book idea, providing more amusement than usual and cultivating deftness in small fingers."
+ Weekly Book Review p39 N 12 '44 200w

KING, JEFF. Where the two came to their father. See Oakes, M.

KING, LEWIS E. Lathe operations. 119p il pa $1.75 Macmillan

621.94 Lathes 44-4472

"An introductory textbook. It explains cutting tools and feeds, setting up work, facing and centering, taper work, screw cutting, drilling, boring, reaming, and the use of the steel rule and the micrometer caliper. The author is an experienced toolmaker, and Instructor in Machine Shop, Detroit Public Schools." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:205 Mr 1 '44 20w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:7 Ja '44

KING, RUFUS. Case of the dowager's etchings. 178p $2 Doubleday

44-4923

Detective story.

"Although the story moves rapidly and thrillingly, I had a fleeting vision, at the end, of a homeless group of defense workers, suffering for the sins of thieves, while the dowager goes back to her ways of lonely splendor content apparently, to let the world go by strictly on its own." Elizabeth Bullock

+ — Book Week p10 My 7 '44 130w

Bookmark 5:20 My '44

"Suave—though slight."

Kirkus 12:126 Mr 15 '44 70w

"A perfectly okay job, but we're hoping that in his next book Mr. King will really extend himself."

+ New Repub 110:690 My 15 '44 90w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p14 My 7 '44 120w

"It may strike you at times that Mrs. Giles is unworldly to the point of imbecility, but you will find the story well plotted and good for a number of laughs."

+ — New Yorker 20:87 My 6 '44 110w

"Good fun."

+ Sat R of Lit 27:40 My 13 '44 40w

Springf'd Republican p4d My 14 '44 100w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p14 My 7 '44 130w

KINGDON, FRANK. That man in the White House; you and your President; with a message by Rex Stout. 182p il $2; pa $1 Arco

973.917 Roosevelt, Franklin Delano. U.S.—Politics and government—20th century. Campaign literature, 1944 44-3210

"In answer to his soldier son's question: 'What is going to happen in 1944?', a well-known liberal and radio commentator has made an honest and searching study of the nature of the presidential office and of the vital issues at stake in the coming presidential election." Library J

"A book which would be a strong, clear defense of the President and his course during the past crucial years, one which would blast at those whose unreason has led them to personal hatred of him quite outside of political disagreement, is needed, and the assumption on which 'That Man' was written is sound: that such a book must be popular, easy-to-read, inexpensive. But this isn't the needed book. One salutes the intention and weeps at the wasted opportunity." A. C. S.

— Book Week p4 Ap 23 '44 300w

Booklist 40:302 My 1 '44

Kirkus 12:136 Mr 15 '44 120w

"Although some consideration is given to possible Republican candidates, most of the book is devoted to outspoken admiration of the policies and achievements of the Roosevelt administration and to answering the most frequently heard criticisms of the President, ending with a fervent plea for his reelection in 1944. Not necessary for libraries." M. J. Messler

Library J 69:261 Mr 15 '44 100w

"The slim volume is written with the scholarly simplicity one expects of Dr. Kingdon; it contains considerable interesting historical material of a highly selective sort. But it has no purpose different from that of the handouts issued by the Democratic National Committee." Charles Hurd

N Y Times p11 Ap 9 '44 480w

KIRBY, LOUIS PAUL. Et cetera. 321p $2 Meador

940.53 World war, 1939—Peace. World politics 44-117

"A somewhat rambling monologue of commentary on topics related to the war, its leading personalities, its possible consequences, the dangers of international 'meddling,' and the evils of the New Deal." Christian Century

Christian Century 61:82 Ja 19 '44 20w

"While few of us can share his cynical attitude, it cannot be denied that in this too long and rather badly organized book the author raises questions that have to be answered." W. L. Caswell

Churchman 158:16 F 15 '44 180w

KIRKLAND, WINIFRED MARGARETTA. Discovering the Boy of Nazareth. 64p $1.25 Macmillan

232.92 Jesus Christ—Childhood 44-5421

"Lack of historic data on the boyhood of Jesus, forces [the author] into the realm of imagination and conjecture based upon the 'internal evidence of Jesus' words and characteristics in manhood and the external evidence of known historic facts which would have influenced him.' Amid the intimate associations of the Jewish home, school, and synagogue, in workshop and at play, we see the boy Jesus as others must have seen him: normal, healthy, lovable, yet often mystifying and misunderstood." Churchman

Booklist 41:7 S '44

"The author's reverent treatment, without being sacrosanct, will commend the book to the youngsters of today." W. F. Thompson

+ Churchman 158:17 Je 1 '44 150w

Kirkus 12:66 F 1 '44 120w

"Written with tenderness and imagination, surprisingly free of dogma and sentimentality, it should be useful to both liberal and conservative Protestants. Emphasis is on a radiant, human personality rather than a mystical, supernatural creature. Not fictionized biography. For adolescents and young adults. Recommended for both collections in public libraries." Maude Adams

+ Library J 69:207 Mr 1 '44 110w

KIRKPATRICK, ROBERT WHITE. Creative delivery of sermons; with a foreword by Ralph W. Sockman. 235p $2.50 Macmillan

251 Preaching 44-2165

"The author, who is both a preacher and a student and teacher of speech, realizes that many a good sermon is spoiled by poor delivery. . . Dr. Kirkpatrick's approach is to only a limited degree from the side of the mechanics of speech. His chief contribution is a technique for the attainment, by the preacher himself, of a vivid sense of concreteness in regard to what he is saying by a kind of mental dramatization of every general statement and the imaginative identification of himself with every character to whom he refers." (Christian Century) Bibliography.

Christian Century 61:370 Mr 22 '44 100w

"The learned and devoted author of this volume has evidently given infinite pains to its production. After declaring in its early pages that the preacher must put his mind, voice and body into the delivery of his sermon, he follows with a most technical and detailed statement of what is required. It is truly a most exhaustive (almost exhausting) laboratory dissection of the matter in hand." Clifton Macon

Churchman 158:17 Ap 1 '44 100w

"This book is not designed for casual reading. Its instruction must be pondered and absorbed, for should one attempt to recall the vast amount of suggestion it contains, while delivering the sermon, his freedom of utterance would be greatly hampered. There is a brief summary of the argument at the end of each chapter, and an excellent bibliography is given for further reading. I should say that this book ought to be required for study by all who teach homiletics, and many a man who has been preaching for years will here discover why he has never seemed to achieve the effectiveness he desires." C. N. Arbuckle

+ Crozer Q 21:264 Jl '44 600w

Kirkus 12:67 F 1 '44 110w

KIRSCHENBAUER, H. G. Fats and oils; an outline of their chemistry and technology. 154p il $2.75 Reinhold

665.2 Oils and fats 44-51304

"Compact manual on the fundamentals of chemistry, analytical methods and technology of fats and oils in manufacture of soaps, candle making, paints, varnishes, foods, pharmaceuticals, finishes, etc. Nature, methods of processing, chemical structure and uses of animal and vegetable oils and fats. Tabular

KIRSCHENBAUER, H. G.—Continued
data, diagrams and illustrations. Chapter on waxes. Bibliography." Library J

"In view of the extensive field covered, it is not surprising that some questionable statements were found. It was observed in several cases that differentiation was not made between processes in current use and those now obsolete or impractical. However, in consideration of the scope and purpose of this undertaking, the author has succeeded in bringing together much useful information in an attractively printed volume, remarkably free from typographical errors." G. S. Jamieson
+ — Chem & Eng N 23:76 Ja 10 '45 200w
Library J 70:34 Ja 1 '45 60w

KIZER, BENJAMIN HAMILTON. U.S.-Canadian Northwest; a demonstration area for international postwar planning and development. 71p maps $1 Princeton univ. press [6s 6d Oxford]

338.91 Canada—Economic conditions. Alaska —Economic conditions. Regional planning
A43-3603

"This brief study is an example of planning internationally for the postwar era. The region dealt with varies according to the phase of the subject under consideration, but includes, roughly, 'Alaska, western Canada and northwestern United States.'. . The topics treated include an outline of the author's project; the general characteristics and outlook of the region involved; the major problems of the area; instances of past and present international collaboration there; potential fields for further collaboration; organization and objectives of the planning project; and, finally, a brief sketch of the country's geography, resources, and economy." Ann Am Acad

Reviewed by J. P. Pritchett
Ann Am Acad 232:208 Mr '44 320w
Booklist 40:158 Ja 1 '44

"Informative and very timely little book." L. J. Burpee + Canadian Hist R 25:446 D '44 450w
Christian Century 60:1338 N 17 '43 60w

Reviewed by Trevor Lloyd
Pacific Affairs 17:361 S '44 140w

KLAF, A. ALBERT. Calculus refresher for technical men. (Whittlesey house publications) 431p $3 McGraw

517 Calculus 44-4069

Contains review of basic concepts and methods, and practical applications of differential and integral calculus. The question and answer method is used. Contains tables of logarithms, trigonometric functions, and an index.

Booklist 40:352 Je 15 '44
Chem & Met Eng 51:190 Ag '44 50w
Library J 69:119 F 1 '44 50w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:27 Ap '44

KLAW, BARBARA (VAN DOREN) (MRS SPENCER ALONZO KLAW) (MARTIN GALE, pseud). Camp follower. 166p $2 Random house

355.12 U.S. Army—Military life 44-6606

Everyday experiences of a young army wife in a Midwestern camp town, including the search for rooms, the search for a job, the friendships formed, the good times and the bad ones.

Reviewed by Dorothy Sparks
Book Week p9 Ag 27 '44 310w
Booklist 41:9 S '44
Kirkus 12:246 Je 1 '44 130w

"Completely frank, lightly done, it is good reading, particularly for women." A. M. Davis
+ Library J 69:649 Ag '44 70w

"Mrs. Klaw's style is lyric, pungent and graphic. Her portrait of the American scene today, from private living room to USO lounge, is deft. Some of her characterizations are straight from life, and the whole book is streaked with the sunlight of two young and questioning personalities whose simplicity, good-will and love are good to know." Nancy MacLennan
+ N Y Times p10 Ag 20 '44 320w

" 'Camp Follower' is well done. It never sinks into dullness, and gives an excellently detailed picture of what has been happening to your daughters during their makeshift, make-do months near the army camps. It is difficult for the young and physically buoyant to learn to do nothing—nothing at all. These girls had, almost literally, to learn that lesson. It is to be hoped that they will not find their tediously mastered curriculum of time-killing difficult to unlearn." F. H. Bullock
+ Weekly Book Review p4 Ag 20 '44 900w

KLEIN, ABRAHAM MOSES. Hitleriad. 30p $1 New directions

811 Hitler, Adolf—Cartoons, satire, etc.
44-8664

A satire set forth in a variety of verse forms, by a Jewish-Canadian poet.

"Klein has laid his plan of attack and has pursued it remorselessly. One may object to the stridency of some of the passages, to the punning, and to figures of speech which belong more to the vocabulary of oaths than of aesthetics, but few will deny the drive of the masculine thrust against the common foes of humanity. No other poet today in this country has used the heroic couplet with greater pungency. The subject has pulled the threnodist away from the wall of passive lamentation and placed the satirist in a colosseum with a grenade in his hand and a good round curse on his lips." E. J. Pratt
+ Canadian Forum 24:164 O '44 950w

" 'The Hitleriad' tries to direct against Hitler the voice of public ridicule. But its author, Mr. Klein, has not enough ingenuity or verbal dexterity or malice—as distinguished from rage—to lead in such an enterprise. Most of his gibes are too labored, or else his tactics are inapposite." F. C. Flint
— N Y Times p4 S 3 '44 120w

"The sinister cunning, the tortured perverseness of Hitler and Goebbels are ignored, and so is the specious force of Goering; and the outcome is that the subject is robbed of much of its intrinsic import. In spite of a defect so radical and of some unevenness in craftsmanship (the brick peers through the marble where it was not intended to do so) the poem abounds in vigorous and brilliant passages, and is always lively." E. K. Brown + — Poetry 65:54 O '44 550w

Reviewed by Vivienne Koch
Weekly Book Review p14 O 29 '44 400w

KLEIN, DAVID BALLIN. Mental hygiene; the psychology of personal adjustment. 498p $4 Holt

132 Mental hygiene. Personality SG44-83

"This is a comprehensive textbook for serious students of the subject. The author, who is professor of psychology in the University of Texas, divides his treatise into two main parts: the nature and prevention of mental disease, and the promotion of full mental health in persons who are classed, in a general way, as normal or are at least not beyond the boundaries of sanity. The relevance of religion to mental health is recognized and sympathetically stated but not extensively developed." (Christian Century) Glossary. Index.

"With the possible exception of the first chapter, the book is clearly written and well organized. There is an unusually complete glossary of technical terms and an adequate index." F. L. Goodenough
+ Am J Psychol 57:599 O '44 950w
Booklist 40:350 Je 15 '44
Christian Century 61:595 My 10 '44 90w

KLEIN, ISAAC. The Ten commandments in a changing world. 141p $1.75 Bloch

296 Commandments, Ten. Sermons, Jewish 44-4058

"Chaplain Isaac Klein [was] formerly rabbi of Springfield's Kodimoh synagog. . . The book contains a series of sermons, each devoted to one of the commandments, preached from his pulpit during 10 successive Sabbath services several years ago." Springf'd Republican

"The foreword by Dr. Finkelstein, president of the Jewish Theological Seminary, will doubtless sufficiently commend this book to Jews. This reviewer would like to commend it also to Christians. It embodies such sound moral judgment, such fine religious feeling, and such good practical common sense that, even where it deals with such specifically Jewish topics as the Sabbath, Christians can read it greatly to their edification and instruction."

+ Christian Century 61:595 My 10 '44 90w

"This is a small but forceful volume which critically interprets the decalogue. . . It is a guide to the Jewish philosophy of religion but may be read with profit by people of all faiths." H. L. Hurwitz

+ Churchman 158:19 My 1 '44 180w

Library J 69:646 Ag '44 20w

"In simple language, drawing upon his store of rabbinical as well as secular knowledge, Rabbi Klein fulfills well the task of measuring the moral standards we must adopt. He has approached his subject with the reverence for tradition that marks his orthodox Jewish leanings, yet with a liberal spirit essential to the understanding of the modern American average man or woman." Herschel Levin

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ap 26 '44 500w

KLINEBERG, OTTO, ed. Characteristics of the American Negro. 409p $4 Harper

325.26 Negroes 44-1650

This volume comprises a collection of studies made under the direction of Dr Gunnar Myrdal and under the financial sponsorship of the Carnegie Corporation. Contents: The stereotype of the American Negro; Tests of Negro intelligence; Experimental studies of Negro personality; 'Race' attitudes; The hybrid and the problem of miscegenation; Mental disease among American Negroes: a statistical analysis.

Reviewed by P. R. Farnsworth

Am Soc R 9:589 O '44 750w

"There are some omissions that one would like to have seen covered, such as brain size studies, the extent of feeble-mindedness, and criminality. One would like further studies on the educational mortality, and on the sex distribution of superior colored children. There seems to be a complete absence of case studies of the inheritance of mental level, mental disease, and other traits. However, one is extremely grateful for this henceforth indispensable book." F. H. Hankins

+ — Ann Am Acad 233:254 My '44 950w

Booklist 40:227 Mr 1 '44

Kirkus 12:33 Ja 15 '44 120w

"Particularly timely, should prove of inestimable use. Others besides research students will find in it much of value, but it is not for general reader. Recommended for all reference libraries." D. R. Homer

+ Library J 68:667 S 1 '43 100w

"It would be difficult to name another single volume that contains as much fundamental scientific information on the phases of the Negro problem in which folk beliefs play an important role. This book is recommended to those who would base opinions about the personality of Negroes on scientific data rather than on folklore and romantic notions." E. F. Frazier

+ Nation 159:356 S 23 '44 950w

"Otto Klineberg has done an excellent piece of work, editing, assembling and giving unity to an assortment of monographs arising from research under the Carnegie Corporation's project for this, the final volume of 'The Negro in American Life' series." R. A. Waterman

+ New Repub 110:420 Mr 27 '44 700w

Scientific Bk Club R 15:3 Mr '44 240w

"It is to be hoped that readers will not be discouraged by the scholarly apparatus in the volume, or by the authors' frequent use of terms readily comprehensible only to the psychological statisticians. For it is really a gold mine." S. L. Jackson

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 9 '44 900w

Wis Lib Bul 40:52 Ap '44

KLINGBERG, FRANK JOSEPH. Main currents in English history. 209p $1.65 Appleton-Century

942 Great Britain—History 43-16311

For descriptive note see Annual for 1943.

"The book is marred by occasional minor inaccuracies, especially in the early chapters, and by ambiguous sentences, due perhaps to overcondensation. Suggestions for further reading, based upon practical experience in the classroom, are up to date and should prove useful to both student and teacher. On the whole, the book accomplishes its purpose inasmuch as it stimulates interest and the desire for further reading in English history, presents fresh interpretations of well-known facts, and contributes to our understanding of the forces which have helped to mold America." Norma Adams

+ — Am Hist R 49:528 Ap '44 320w

Churchman 158:16 F 1 '44 80w

Current Hist 6:70 Ja '44 40w

"The author of Main Currents in English History has chosen what is largely a chronological approach, with a concomitant purpose of showing in the process the development of the institutions and beliefs that characterize England. . . The result seems to be an unhappy compromise between the chronological and the topical or conceptual in history. If constitutional developments are predominant in one period and humanitarian efforts in another, then the author is under some obligation to inform us as to the fate of constitutional mechanisms in the period of humanitarian striving. To the reviewer, the writer's treatment of the medieval period is the least satisfactory part of the book." R. V. Sires

Social Studies 35:138 Mr '44 1050w

KNIGHT, CLIFFORD. Affair of the dead stranger. 197p $2 Dodd

44-9743

Detective story.

"Fair."

Boston Globe p12 N 22 '44 50w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p18 N 5 '44 80w

"Mexican and U. S. backgrounds colorful and interesting. Sleuthing unspectacular but convincing. Characters quarrelsome and lively. Pay-off logical and unexpected."

+ Sat R of Lit 27:30 O 28 '44 40w

"Mr. Knight casts suspicion with a practiced hand, lavishes local color upon the Mexican scenes and offers mild surprises at the ends of chapters. Upshot is a literate riddle somewhat lacking in lift, geared for those who wish to keep guessing." Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p21 N 5 '44 110w

KNIGHT, JOHN ALDEN. Woodcock; color plates from paintings by Edgar Burke. 161p $4; ltd ed $15 Knopf

799.24833 Woodcock Agr44-218

"Mr. Knight treats fully the bird's life cycle, feeding habits, migration and flyways, wintering grounds, mating activity, and growth of the young. He adds a vast amount of hunting lore: what types of cover—and footing—the birds use, effects of season and weather on their movements, how to train woodcock dogs, shells and loads, guns and their handling, hunting clothing, and other accessories." (Publisher's note) Index.

KNIGHT, J. A.—Continued
Reviewed by J. B. Metzenburg
Book Week p4 S 3 '44 310w
Booklist 41:73 N 1 '44

"Here are all the facts old timers and newcomers might want to know. . . There is valuable information, too, for those who are interested from the nature-loving angle, the conservation angle, etc."
+ Kirkus 12:367 Ag 15 '44 110w
N Y Times p42 D 3 '44 400w

"The book compresses an encyclopedia full of information into 163 interesting pages of value to sportsman and naturalist alike. The illustrations include some superb color plates made from paintings by a gifted bird artist, Dr. Edgar Burke, and a number of pages of rather dismal black-and-white photographs." E. W. Teale
+ Weekly Book Review p10 O 1 '44 750w

KNIGHT, KATHLEEN MOORE. Design in diamonds. 199p $2 Doubleday 44-668

Mystery story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p5 Ja 9 '44 200w
Booklist 40:253 Mr 15 '44

"Margot's efforts take her to Mexico, where she runs into adventures such as gladden the heart of those who love tales of mystery and international intrigue." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p22 Ja 9 '44 120w
New Yorker 19:68 Ja 8 '44 90w

"Much adventure, plus satisfactory modicum of sleuthing by Margot Blair. Good atmosphere, believable characters, and plentiful thrills. Good."
+ Sat R of Lit 27:21 Ja 8 '44 40w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 16 '44 220w

"A skilfully plotted treat for Miss Knight's many followers, crammed with deviltry and meddlesome gambits." Will Cuppy
+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ja 9 '44 250w

KNIGHT, KATHLEEN MOORE. Intrigue for empire. 199p $2 Doubleday
44-6203

Mystery-adventure tale in which an Axis plot to set up an empire in the Latin Americas is foiled by a young Mexican, recently released from a North African concentration camp.

Booklist 41:24 S '44

"Nice spy stuff."
Boston Globe p15 Jl 26 '44 60w
Kirkus 12:204 My 1 '44 130w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p21 Jl 23 '44 80w

"You've probably encountered this sort of story a good deal lately, but even if you've tired of it, you will have to admit that this one is very deftly constructed."
+ New Yorker 20:72 Jl 15 '44 90w

"Plentiful action, plot that resembles other spy yarns, attractive hero, and satisfactorily villainous furriners. Another spy story."
Sat R of Lit 28:40 Jl 22 '44 40w

"Miss Knight provides an easy way for the eternal fan to keep his mind on current events." Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p12 Jl 16 '44 150w

KNIGHT, RUTH ADAMS (MRS DICKSON JAY HARTWELL), and HERSHOLT, JEAN. Dr Christian's office. 243p $2.50 Random house
44-7186

Chronicles the life of a fine small town doctor, who spends his whole time catering to his patients with both medicine and good advice.

Booklist 41:41 O 1 '44

"In view of the fact that this type of book is always popular, we recommend it." M. E. Clark
+ Library J 69:650 Ag '44 70w

Reviewed by Thelma Purtell
N Y Times p30 O 29 '44 200w

"A nice balance between reality and homily." Lisle Bell
+ Weekly Book Review p14 S 10 '44 100w

KNOTT, MIDDLETON O'MALLEY, and COOPER, PAGE. Gone away with O'Malley; seventy years with horses, hounds and people; il. by Paul Brown. 280p $3 Doubleday

B or 92 Veterinarians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Horses 44-9781

Autobiography of an Irish-American who has loved horses all his life—as the son of an Irish doctor who kept two hunters, as stableboy and odd-jobs man during his early days in America, as veterinarian and founder and promoter of hunts clubs in New Jersey.

Reviewed by Jack Conroy
Book Week p10 O 29 '44 360w
Booklist 41:107 D 1 '44
Boston Globe p31 N 29 '44 20w

Reviewed by D. A. Garrity
Commonweal 41:260 D 22 '44 210w

"It is fun reading—between the lines one senses much left out—but the story is a new one, and spans a period that has passed with a zest, a sense of humor and a pleasant nostalgia."
+ Kirkus 12:362 Ag 15 '44 140w

Reviewed by H. I. Brock
N Y Times p12 D 3 '44 420w

"The temptations offered by biography are many and insidious, and O'Malley Knott has not been able to resist them in telling of the life he loves. It has been a good life and a full one, but it interests O'Malley more passionately than it does the average reader." M. L. Thompson
Sat R of Lit 27:27 N 25 '44 400w

"The book hasn't the full Gaelic flavor of Somerville and Ross, but O'Malley never got entirely rid of the peat smoke, and his quick wit bursts forth from many a page. It is a book to be cherished in the sportsman's library." F. M. Stifler
+ Weekly Book Review p16 Ja 28 '45 370w

KNOTTS, RAYMOND. And the deep blue sea. 246p $2 Farrar 44-3162

Detective story.

"There are racketeers and bodyguards, and much evidence of wealth. There are some quite exciting stretches before the case is solved—and there are some which move, unfortunately, much less swiftly." Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p10 My 21 '44 80w
Kirkus 12:86 F 15 '44 70w

"A well written and straightforward whodunit."
+ New Repub 110:114 My 1 '44 60w

"Some of it is rather far-fetched, but there are action and puzzlement galore." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p12 Ap 30 '44 110w

"Does lovely Judie survive to make Jim happy? Don't be foolish. Mr. Knotts's characters are on the goofy side. In his treatment of nature the pathetic fallacy predominates." Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p11 My 7 '44 100w

KNOWLES, ASA SMALLIDGE, and THOMSON, ROBERT DOUGLAS. Industrial management. 791p il $4.50 Macmillan

658 Industrial management 44-2181

"The main parts of this text deal with different, but closely related, subjects of industrial management—i.e., management of physical property, organization of the physical plant, management of manpower, production control, cost control. A considerable portion of the subject matter, notably that pertaining to the management of physical property, appears here in organized textbook form for the first time. Practical problems are appended to each section." Management R

Booklist 40:264 Ap 1 '44
Management R 33:106 Mr '44 70w

KNOX, ESTHER MELBOURNE (MRS C. K. WRIGHT). Flags of dawn; il. by Marie A. Lawson. 298p $2 Little 44-2812

The time of this historical tale is 1214 and 1215; the scene is Italy and Wales. Halcyon del Myddrai, a young Welsh girl from a scholarly family is studying medicine in Salerno when Giraldus Cambrensis, Welsh priest and scholar, arrives to take her home. All England and Wales is aroused by the tyranny of King John and Magna Carta is in the making. The book closes in London on the eve of the signing of Magna Carta. For grades seven to nine.

"The book has considerable value for its historical detail. . . The rare picture of Wales in 1214 is clear and colorful, and the research work done before the material could be presented must have been tremendous. If the author will learn a little more about plot and suspense before she writes her next book, she will have a work which will not only be distinguished, but will also be readable." P. A. Whitney
+ — Book Week p14 My 21 '44 320w
Booklist 40:306 My 1 '44
Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 20:208 My '44 80w

"Author has done much research on customs of period, with result that plot is sometimes obscured by too much detail. Even so, good historical novel for older boys and girls." M. F. Cox
+ — Library J 69:307 Ap 1 '44 100w

"In those days, just before the signing of Magna Carta, many new ideas were stirring and many plots and intrigues were on foot. The author has managed to suggest the confusion of the period, but her story would have had more interest if she had selected certain events and characters and made them stand out more clearly. In spite of the stirring quality of the period, the tale is seldom dramatic." A. T. E.
N Y Times p24 Je 25 '44 160w
Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p8 Je 4 '44 400w

KNOX, RONALD ARBUTHNOTT, tr. See Bible. New Testament. New Testament of our lord and savior, Jesus Christ

KNUDSON, ALBERT CORNELIUS. Principles of Christian ethics. 314p $2.75 Abingdon-Cokesbury
171.1 Christian ethics 43-16331

"Study of Christian ethics by the Dean Emeritus of Boston University School of Theology. It covers the history, pre-suppositions, and moral ideal of Christian ethics and its application to the individual, the family, the state, the church, and the economic order. It treats these against the background of the doctrine of God's immanence, the ultimate value of personality, and a liberal view of society—with the strength and weakness which these assumptions contain." Churchman

"The book is as readable as it is authoritative, and should be welcomed by the general reader as readily as by the philosopher and the theologian." T. L. L.
+ Christian Science Monitor p17 N 27 '43 470w

"This is a wise and comprehensive study. . . It is the first thorough-going treatment of Christian ethics since Brunner and Niebuhr and has a balance and scope which makes it more valuable for the average person who lives in a world more like Knudson's than Niebuhr's." R. C. Miller
+ Churchman 158:17 Ja 15 '44 190w

"Though the friendly exaggerations of the quotations on the jacket may be heavily discounted, this volume may be widely acclaimed as of considerable value. . . The exposition is one of free philosophical reflection: there is no resort to biblical or ecclesiastical authority. As such it deserves the attention of thinkers whether they call themselves Christian or not, though it is probably meant for and will make its appeal chiefly to ordained Protestant ministers. Dr. Knudson keeps his philosophy of personalism sufficiently in the background for one to accept his view on Christian ethics without being committed to that philosophy. . . Nevertheless his treatment has the character of the idealist systems of yesteryear rather than of the value theory of today." A. G. Widgery
+ — Crozer Q 21:69 Ja '44 1600w

"Dean Knudson states that the volume completes his series of treatises on theology and sums up the results of years of teaching in this field. It is ripe with wisdom and convincing in its lucid validation of an ethic which is distinctively Christian. It will make a wide appeal to students of Christian ethics and to all concerned with the moral issues of our day." E. P. Lam
+ J Religion 24:219 Jl '44 600w
Library J 69:646 Ag '44 20w

KOBRE, SIDNEY. Development of the colonial newspaper. 188p il pa $3.50 Colonial press, inc, 405 Penn av, Pittsburgh
071 Newspapers. Press—U.S. Journalism
44-5579

"Mr. Kobre has entered a much neglected field of American history, that of the eighteenth-century newspapers, with a book which emphasizes their sociological aspects. . . The first chapter gives a brief but adequate description of the colonies in 1690. The remainder of the book is divided, chronologically, into three sections: 1690 to 1725, 1725 to 1750, and 1750 to 1783. There is a discussion of all newspapers printed during the first two periods. Boston, New York, Philadelphia, and Baltimore are dealt with in the final section. All additional newspapers printed prior to 1783 are given a brief bibliographical treatment in the appendix." New Eng Q

"This book is subject to some adverse criticism. The bibliography is inadequate; there is no index; the proofreading, or printing, was extremely careless. There are a few errors in subject matter, such as the incorrect statement that there were no labor troubles in the colonial print shop (p. 43); and there are some errors of omission. . . These criticisms should not be allowed to obscure the fact that the author has made a valuable contribution to colonial and journalistic history." R. A. Brown
+ — Ann Am Acad 236:219 N '44 310w

"There are numerous faults to be found with this book, several of which can be quite easily corrected if there is another edition. The bibliography is inadequate, being both non-selective and poorly organized; there is no index; the proofreading, or the printing, was extremely careless. A few errors in subject-matter were noted, some of which could have been avoided by a closer familiarity with the work of Mr. Brigham, the authority in this field. . . These criticisms should not be allowed to obscure the fact that the author has made a valuable contribution to colonial and journalistic history. . . Future writers in this field will inevitably owe much to the suggestiveness of Mr. Kobre's work." R. A. Brown
+ — New Eng Q 17:455 S '44 800w
Reviewed by C. M. Puckette
N Y Times p16 Jl 16 '44 140w

KOCH, ADRIENNE. The philosophy of Thomas Jefferson. 208p $2.50 Columbia univ. press [16s 6d Oxford]
B or 92 Jefferson, Thomas 43-14414
For descriptive note see Annual for 1943.

KOCH, ADRIENNE—Continued

Reviewed by Gilbert Chinard
Am Hist R 49:739 Jl '44 550w

Reviewed by C. E. Merriam
Am Pol Sci R 38:794 Ag '44 450w

"Thorough and brilliant piece of research." W. E. Garrison
+ Christian Century 61:529 Ap 26 '44 1500w

Reviewed by B. F. Wright
Ethics 54:299 Jl '44 550w

Reviewed by H. A. Larrabee
J Philos 41:220 Ap 13 '44 2350w

"The author of this stimulating study, which was awarded the Woodbridge Prize in Philosophy at Columbia, is anxious that Jefferson be conceded the title of philosopher. . . It seems, rather, that we are left in much the same place that many of us were in the beginning. We know that Jefferson had a philosophical mind, and that he was deeply thoughtful in all of the many fields in which he was a statesman, but we believe that he was essentially a practical man, after all. We are not looking at precisely the same picture, however, for Miss Koch has definitely enriched it." Dumas Malone
+ Pol Sci Q 59:118 Mr '44 600w

"Although Dr. Koch's book may not fit the author of the Declaration of Independence into any philosophical niche, it is a careful and valuable study of the man's manner of thinking. It is particularly successful in distinguishing between Jefferson's idea and Holbach's idea of materialism."
+ Weekly Book Review p8 Ap 9 '44 400w

KOEHLER, WALTER ALLOS. Applications. (Principles and applications of electrochemistry, v. 2) 2d ed $5 Wiley

541.37 Electrochemistry

"As in the first edition (1935) volume I of this work, written by H. J. Creighton, [Book Review Digest, 1936] is concerned with theory, and volume II with applications. The major part of the text in this volume is unchanged or is changed in minor ways, but a number of newly important topics, for example, electrolytic polishing and etching, has been introduced." (N Y New Tech Bks) Indexes.

"The revised edition is now up to date and will no doubt continue to serve the same purposes as the first edition, that is, as a text for college students and a reference for those in the industry." H. B. Linford
Am Chem Soc J 66:852 My '44 350w
Library J 69:119 F 1 '44 30w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:6 Ja '44

KOENIG, LOUIS WILLIAM. The presidency and the crisis. (King's crown press bk) 166p pa $2 Columbia univ. press

973.917 U.S.—Politics and government—20th century. Presidents (U.S.)—Powers and duties. Roosevelt, Franklin Delano. World war, 1939—U.S. A44-5247

"A useful study of the presidential power. It specifically covers the period from the invasion of Poland to Pearl Harbor, and is concerned particularly with foreign relations, military affairs and the home front. Contemporary history has witnessed considerable expansion of the executive power. That development, Mr. Koenig suggests, may be justified by the greater need today for an immediate response to the demands of Machtpolitik. A leisurely diplomacy has no place in a totalitarian era. The author finds the constitutional sources of the presidential power to be indeterminate and often vague. This explains the frequent clashes with Congress. Yet that very indefiniteness reflects the need for a forceful personality in a time of crisis." (New Repub) No index.

"Koenig writes admirably. The subject calls for precision. Koenig's style is not only clear and precise, but forceful and vital. These qualities—rare in such fields—add the virtue of enjoyable reading to a thoroughly useful book." J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p2 N 26 '44 180w
Booklist 41:146 Ja 15 '45

"The monograph merits careful study by those who would either defend or deny the constitutionality of executive actions."
+ Christian Century 61:1419 D 6 '44 150w

"Well written and amply documented book."
+ New Repub 111:574 O 30 '44 120w

KOHN, HANS. Idea of nationalism; a study in its origins and background. 735p $7.50 Macmillan

320.15 Nationalism and nationality 44-3540

"A study of the origins and background of nationalism, with special emphasis upon the forms it has taken in the more important countries of the world. The French Revolution, according to the author, was the first manifestation of modern nationalism, and he traces its roots from ancient times up to that event, promising, in his preface, a second volume that will bring his subject up to date." (New Yorker) The author is a professor of history in Smith college. Index.

Reviewed by Halvdan Koht
Am Hist R 50:93 O '44 1500w

Reviewed by C. A. Beard
Am Pol Sci R 38:801 Ag '44 750w

"The publication of Professor Kohn's opus magnum, of which the present volume is only the first part, represents an extraordinary event in the history of political theory studies. It unquestionably establishes the author as the outstanding authority on the problem of nationalism." H. H. F. Eulau
+ Ann Am Acad 235:135 S '44 550w

"Despite a few passages which bring traffic to a halt, and a general tendency to stylistic eccentricity, the book is a masterly historical essay which really deserves to be called tolerant and discerning, well-informed and illuminating. Brilliant passages quite win over the reader by reason of their insight; opposed to them are thin sections that reveal Professor Kohn in the act of succumbing to a thesis. The book will need revision ten years hence. But for the moment it is the best treatise you can find on an important subject." G. N. Shuster
+ — Atlantic 174:131 Jl '44 420w

Reviewed by Sterling North
Book Week p2 Ap 30 '44 600w
Booklist 40:312 My 15 '44

"On the whole The Idea of Nationalism is a treasure box of valuable information and sound analysis. Let us hope that Dr. Kohn's second volume will be as good." F. S. Campbell
+ Cath World 159:570 S '44 540w

Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook
Current Hist 6:511 Je '44 700w

"This is the first volume of a work that promises to be one of the great accomplishments of our time. Hans Kohn's book is more than a brilliant study, more than a comprehensive collection of facts. It is a grandiose painting depicting the last 3,000 years of the battle between two basic motive powers in human history."
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 22 '44 500w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:655 Jl '44 30w
Kirkus 12:89 F 15 '44 170w

"Learned treatise, only for mature readers; they, however, will greatly enjoy it. Excellent bibliographic appendix. Recommended for scholarly and large public libraries." F. E. Hirsch
+ Library J 69:353 Ap 15 '44 140w

Reviewed by Rustem Vambery
Nation 158:631 My 27 '44 750w

"This survey of nationalism's 'long period of incubation from Ancient Times to the French Revolution' is scholarly, incisive, impressively documented, and broadly progressive in viewpoint; by all odds it constitutes the most significant contribution that has yet been made to the study of the subject." S. W. Rudy

+ New Eng Q 17:467 S '44 420w

Reviewed by H. W. Ehrmann
New Repub 110:741 My 29 '44 1150w

"Those who read this, Hans Kohn's most monumental and most moving book to date, will not only see more clearly than ever before how nationalism grew out of, and therewith overshadowed, an older scheme of values which placed mankind ahead of the nation. They will also see that the recapture and realization of this vision is the most imperative task of our age." F. L. Schuman
+ N Y Times p3 Ap 30 '44 1250w

"Dr Kohn is very thorough, his footnotes alone taking up a hundred and fifty pages, but this thoroughness all too frequently becomes a pedantic barrier that many readers may find it hard to overcome."
New Yorker 20:87 Ap 29 '44 110w

Reviewed by Max Lerner
Sat R of Lit 27:5 Je 10 '44 3050w

Springf'd Republican p4d My 7 '44 700w

"Mr. Kohn's work is especially valuable in giving each thinker credit for what he presented and in defining the limits of his influence. . . Only a true democrat and well-wisher of mankind could have written it." Harry Hansen
+ Survey G 33:251 My '44 1400w

"A timely book. It is purely a historical study. Dr. Kohn makes no attempts to point a post-war moral. He is content to trace the origins and development of the nationalist spirit from the earliest times and to leave the reader to draw his own conclusions as to its strength and persistence. There have been previous studies of nationalism. This is by all odds the most thoroughgoing with which the reviewer is familiar." H. J. Haskell
+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ap 30 '44 1450w

Wis Lib Bul 40:107 Jl '44

KOHT, HALVDAN, and SKARD, SIGMUND. Voice of Norway. 313p $3.50 Columbia univ. press

948.1 Norway—History. Norway—Politics and government. Norwegian literature—History and criticism A44-1487

"History of Norway from earliest times to Nazi invasion written in two distinct halves: first traces growth of political and social consciousness, showing connections with other Scandinavian countries, to final political independence and recognition as enlightened, progressive nation; second half describes development of national literature from Edda and sagas to Undset." Library J

Reviewed by H. C. K. Naeseth
Ann Am Acad 236:184 N '44 450w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p4 My 28 '44 360w

Booklist 40:339 Je 1 '44

"It almost goes without saying that Dr. Koht constantly confuses liberalism and democracy, and written documents with actual constitutions. Dr. Skard is guilty of the same confusion. . . There are dozens of instances where Dr. Koht glosses over Norwegian class antagonisms of the past because he wants to make out by hook or crook that 'the Norwegians' have been democrats since Adam. This is not only ridiculous but also unscientific. It leads the uninitiated reader to suspect just the opposite of what is true, namely, that Norway has to hide an abnormally hideous social past." Martin Dell
Canadian Forum 24:139 S '44 1100w

"This rates a high place in the growing list of books designed to give acquaintance with the friendly and suffering European nations as they are by showing what they have been through the centuries and the course of their historical and cultural development."
+ Christian Century 61:699 Je 7 '44 230w

Christian Science Monitor p14 My 20 '44 450w

Reviewed by R. E. Keighton
Crozer Q 21:361 O '44 900w

"With its naturally picturesque basis and a simple style, it makes an excellent introduction to Norwegian national life."
+ Current Hist 7:51 Jl '44 40w

Foreign Affairs 23:11 O '44 20w

Kirkus 12:212 My 1 '44 130w

"Shows national pride and scholarship, but not easy to read." Margaret Owen
Library J 69:303 Ap 1 '44 80w

"Agreeably free from the academicism and complacency which sometimes mar such national efforts at self-evaluation, 'The Voice of Norway' is a truly stirring account of a people who have stood from earliest times for freedom under law."
+ Nation 159:81 Jl 15 '44 180w

Reviewed by Sigrid Undset
N Y Times p1 My 7 '44 1900w

Reviewed by R. B. Pease
Springf'd Republican p6 Je 12 '44 550w

"In the monograph 'State and Society' which forms the first section of this book Halvdan Koht writes with expert knowledge and clarity. . . In the second section, a review of Norwegian literature from the Eddas onwards, Sigmund Skard displays delicate skill in his choice of authors and in his manner of dealing with each."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p10 Ja 6 '45 480w

"Excellent as the book is, there is a danger that it will be read largely by those who need it least, those already familiar with matters Norwegian. Others, impatient with the crowded analysis of ten centuries, may fail to follow to the end the significant exposition of the ideas and ideals that place Norway in the forefront of constructive workers for a better world and, in the present crisis, one of the most stubborn opponents of the corrupting and corrosive influence of the German aggression." Henning Larsen
+ — Weekly Book Review p5 My 28 '44 1150w

KOLTHOFF, IZAAK MAURITS, and SANDELL, ERNEST BIRGER. Textbook of quantitative inorganic analysis. rev ed 794p $4.50 Macmillan

543.7 Chemistry, Analytic—Quantitative. Chemistry, Inorganic 43-15636

"In the new edition of this text the subject matter and its organization remain essentially the same as in the first edition. However, numerous changes and additions have been made to keep the book up to date. Fuller treatment has been given organic reagents, spectrophotometry, errors, and other topics; and a discussion of amperometric titrations has been introduced. The chapters on the formation and properties of precipitates, coprecipitation phenomena, and the theory of electroanalysis have been revised. Tables of atomic weights, gravimetric factors, and four-place logarithms have been placed on a folder, fitting in a pocket in the back of the book, to permit their use by students in examinations as well as to provide a handy form for use in the laboratory. New problems have been added. In short, the text has undergone thorough revision, and the authors hope that the aims and objects of the first edition are retained in the second." (Pref. to revised edition) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1936. Indexes.

"The text is well suited for undergraduate instruction, particularly of science majors, at both elementary and advanced levels. It should likewise prove increasingly popular with graduate students and others interested in a brief yet adequate discussion of recent developments in analytical chemistry. In the reviewer's opinion, the book is overly optimistic concerning the ease with which the average student masters the calculations of volumetric analysis. A few illustrative calculations in Chapter XXVIII would be helpful, and would tend to de-emphasize the use of formulas in solving problems. It also seems that the treatment of the activity concept and its importance in analytical processes is rather brief, and that the advanced student will be left with numerous unanswered questions." J. F. Flagg + — Am Chem Soc J 65:2474 D '43 330w

KOLTHOFF, I. M.—Continued
Current Hist 6:163 F '44 50w

"The many excellent features of the earlier edition, together with the improvements and expansions make this an outstanding textbook." C. H. Shiflett
+ J Phys Chem 48:98 Mr '44 300w
Library J 68:960 N 15 '43 50w

KOOTZ, SAMUEL MELVIN. Puzzle in petticoats. 256p $2 Crown 44-5025

Detective story.

"As a detective story this is exceedingly thin. No doubt that is why the author has found it necessary to pad it out with bawdy repartee, technical details of the women's garment industry and other irrelevant material." Isaac Anderson
— N Y Times p14 Je 4 '44 80w

"Lively if somewhat elementary tale." Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p14 Je 25 '44 130w

KORNGOLD, RALPH. Citizen Toussaint. 358p $3 Little
B or 92 Toussaint Louverture, Pierre Dominique. Haiti—History 44-7566

A biography of the Negro revolutionary leader, who began his life in slavery, and rose to the rank of ruler of Haiti during the Napoleonic era. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 41:76 N 1 '44

"Mr. Ralph Korngold presents us with a readable biography which at the same time seems to be reasonably just. It unhappily gives an impression of being a trifle undigested, and written strictly for popular consumption. Yet it is well worth reading and it is far and away the best thing available. Certainly no one will find 'Citizen Toussaint' in the least dull."
+ — Commonweal 40:591 O 6 '44 2100w

"Instructive and educative reading for these days."
+ Kirkus 12:313 Jl 15 '44 170w

"One comes to a treatment of Toussaint Louverture with certain misgivings, for the Negro revolutionary has been often treated badly. . . But after the first chapter of Ralph Korngold's study, misgivings vanish, and one knows that he is reading the kind of book that professional scholars talk about but never write—a work of scholarship that reads like first-rate fiction." J. S. Redding
+ New Repub 111:469 O 9 '44 420w

"Mr. Korngold has given us a first-rate account of [the] man and his times. His picture of Toussaint Louverture, while favorable, is two-sided; 'Citizen Toussaint' is balanced, both as history and biography. Its author knows how to separate the trees from the lush jungle of legend, hate and special pleading." William Du Bois
+ N Y Times p7 S 17 '44 650w

"Mr. Korngold writes admiringly of his subject . . . but his book falls considerably short of being the perfect biography of Toussaint. There are too many passages of veiled apology where no apology is needed, too many attempts to make Toussaint's European adversaries seem stupider than they actually were, and all too many places where the author has merely assembled his material without organizing it. Most of the books about Toussaint are so unsatisfactory, however, that this one is worth the attention of anyone not yet acquainted with the story of one of the great defenders of human liberty."
+ — New Yorker 20:82 S 16 '44 140w

Reviewed by W. S. Lynch
Sat R of Lit 27:10 S 30 '44 600w
Springf'd Republican p4d S 24 '44 800w

" 'Citizen Toussaint' is a book that has long been needed. . . Without idolatry and equally without reserve Mr. Korngold has written an extraordinarily good study of a too little known time and people and of a man whom Beauchamp called 'one of the most remarkable men in an age rich in remarkable men.' To read the book is to learn humanity and tolerance and to become acquainted with the beginnings of one of our nearest sister republics." P. J. Searles
+ Weekly Book Review p3 S 17 '44 1750w

KOSSAK-SZCZUCKA, ZOFJA. Blessed are the meek; a novel about St Francis of Assisi; tr. by Rulka Langer. 375p $3 Roy pubs.
Francis of Assisi, Saint—Fiction 44-3473

Historical novel based upon the Children's crusade and the life of Jean de Brienne, who became King of Jerusalem. St Francis of Assisi is one of the chief characters.

"Zofia Kossak is a historical novelist of distinction. She distills the essence of elaborate and careful historical research into a fanciful and reflective novel which revivifies the early thirteenth century with all its religious wars and spiritual conflicts. She deftly mingles fact and fancy, never once forgetting that she is writing a novel and not a history. Her characters act according to their historical tradition, but they also move easily in paths ordained for them by the exigencies of fiction. And never for a moment does she step out of that past which she so vividly creates." Leo Lerman
+ Atlantic 173:133 Ap '44 300w

"The publishers intimate that Mrs. Kossak was a candidate for Nobel Prize honors. I personally doubt that very much. Henryk Sienkewicz and Ladislas Reymont were far more powerful Polish novelists that the author of 'Blessed Are the Meek.' This is a fair tale, worthy of a place in the popular heart, now that 'The Song of Bernadette' is in the movies, but a great work it assuredly is not." Louis Zara
Book Week p3 Ap 2 '44 380w
Booklist 40:318 My 15 '44
Bookmark 5:18 My '44

"Beyond question this is a superior novel which in subject and treatment commands and deserves wide attention." L. L. Marchand
+ Boston Globe p15 Ap 5 '44 350w

"The story is really of epic scope: I wish it had more of epic sweep and beauty. But ironically enough, I believe it could be made into a highly effective 'movie' scenario." Katherine Brégy
Cath World 159:280 Je '44 310w
Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '44
Commonweal 39:597 Mr 31 '44 350w

"An unusual book, this, and one that the Book Club choice may help into the prominence it deserves on its own merits."
+ Kirkus 12:46 F 1 '44 240w

"Historically accurate for the most part, yet writing is uneven. Reader interest similar to Song of Bernadette, The Robe and The Apostle. . . Recommended for all public libraries." E. P. Nichols
+ — Library J 69:262 Mr 15 '44 70w

"It is greatly to the book's advantage that the acid taste of human history is not mollified. Many of its pages keep the stark, almost painfully unmoved, awareness of reality which long ago characterized European letters—and has latterly survived chiefly in the work of the Slavs. But they also reveal the Slav's delight in color and pageant, so that the narrative as a whole has verve and simple grandeur. Nevertheless, the reader may well wish that some of the frequent weaknesses of the historical novel were less evident. It is possibly a fault in the translation (which while good is by no means inspired) that there is no flame in much of what Francis has to say." G. N. Shuster
+ — N Y Times p1 Mr 19 '44 1550w

"The author is so lacking in self-consciousness and so earnest about her mammoth panorama that it's a pity she never succeeds in bringing it to life."
New Yorker 20:94 Mr 25 '44 140w

" 'Blessed Are the Meek' is far from being a great novel. As a matter of fact, it is but a pale descendant of that other Polish novel which can be considered the ancestor of the whole species: Sienkiewicz's 'Quo Vadis?' " F. C. Weiskopf

+ — Sat R of Lit 27:11 Mr 25 '44 750w

"This is a living, breathing book, an inspiration and challenge to all who read it." H. J. Sloan

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 26 '44 400w

Time 43:100 Ap 10 '44 300w

"This rather involved tale of love, war and religion in the thirteenth century is more deeply interesting than it seems at first sight to have any reason for being. Almost from the opening sentence it catches the attention and holds it to the end by virtue of some quality not too easy to analyze and not too frequently found in any sort of historical novel." J. W. Krutch

+ Weekly Book Review p3 Mr 19 '44 1300w

"The action, pageantry, and devout religious feeling of this book make it interesting, but they are handicapped by its rather wooden characters (all save St. Francis) and its clumsy, sprawling construction." Orville Prescott

+ — Yale R n s 33:x spring '44 290w

KOTTKE, FRANK JOSEPH. Electrical technology and the public interest; a study of our national policy toward the development and application of inventions. 199p $3; pa $2.50 Am. council on public affairs

608 Patents. Patent laws and legislation. Industrial research. Electric apparatus and appliances. Monopolies—U.S. 44-3301

"In this survey of the industries which supply electrical apparatus, an analysis is made of business policies regarding competition and patents with a view to determining the relationship between the development of new techniques and the organization of the industry. A partial list of chapter headings includes: The nature and objectives of industrial research; The patent privilege as a stimulus to industrial research; Innovation as a basis for restriction of entry and division of the field; Patent licensing practices and the modification of competition; Toward a new national policy. There is a five-page bibliography." N Y New Tech Bks

---

Reviewed by A. J. Lien

Am Pol Sci R 38:809 Ag '44 190w

"This inquiring approach to the subject of electrical technology is prodigiously painstaking both in its bibliography and in its originality. The work suffers from the author's reluctance to get down on speaking terms with the consumer. The book would have had a wider and more practical appeal had only Mr. Kottke plugged in his statistical discourse on the patent privilege and electrical technology to something as intimately real as a waffle iron." Harlan Trott

Ann Am Acad 236:194 N '44 550w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:43 Jl '44

KRAUS, HERTHA. International relief in action, 1914-1943; selected records, with notes; with the collaboration of the Research center; sponsored by American Friends service committee, Brethren service committee, Mennonite central committee. 248p $1.25; pa $1 Herald press

361.5 Reconstruction (1914-1939). Disasters. World war, 1939—Civilian relief 44-5919

"These records, sponsored by the service committees of the American Friends, the Brethren and the Mennonites, do not form a complete record of the vast programs of relief that have been administered by these agencies through two world wars and the years between them, but the selections are sufficiently copious to afford an adequate impression of the volume and variety of these humanitarian activities. Fifty-seven relief projects are listed, classified and described. They include projects of emergency feeding, housing, health and sanitation, child care, employment, education, recreation, training of leadership, and services to refugees and transferred populations." Christian Century

---

Reviewed by Mona Fletcher

Am Pol Sci R 38:1251 D '44 300w

"All in all, this collection worked out with great pedagogical skill will be an invaluable help for those who are preparing international help. In addition, about forty agencies connected with some of the projects recorded are described. References provide a carefully chosen bibliography for students of different background." Frieda Wunderlich

+ Ann Am Acad 236:188 N '44 230w

Christian Century 61:807 Jl 5 '44 100w

School & Society 59:416 Je 10 '44 30w

KRAUS, RENE. Old master; the life of Jan Christian Smuts. 471p $3.50 Dutton

B or 92 Smuts, Jan Christiaan 44-3278

Account of the life and times of the South African patriot and statesman, Jan Christiaan Smuts. The author, half Austrian, half French, by descent, is now a United States citizen, and has had much experience in European journalism. He has been in South Africa twice and includes a study of South African politics as a background to his biography of Smuts. Bibliography. Index.

"Painstaking and highly readable account of the South African statesman's life... 'Old Master' is a very readable, timely and important book. It would be better if it contained a map of South Africa. It is pro-Smuts and pro-British; it is also scholarly and sincere, and extremely relevant to problems that will dominate the near future." Wendell Johnson

+ Book Week p3 My 7 '44 700w

Booklist 40:317 My 15 '44

Foreign Affairs 23:14 O '44 20w

"Smuts, international figure and the creator of South Africa, has been the subject of one adult and one juvenile biography within the year—and still another is in the offing. But the chances are that Rene Kraus has told his story for the man in the street, for his is a surely popular hand—he has filled in his portrait in detail, written with vigor the story of that 'son of solitude' who has devoted a lifetime to union, fusion and world peace."

+ Kirkus 12:186 Ap 15 '44 190w

"A commendable job written by an ardent admirer. Because of its length it may not be as popular as the recent life of Smuts by Crafford. Recommended for large public libraries and college libraries." H. A. Carpenter

+ Library J 69:353 Ap 15 '44 100w

"The latest book on the famous Boer statesman is a full length biographical work which is an extremely able analysis of the man who has most influenced the destinies of South Africa in recent decades." Eugene van Wyk

+ N Y Times p5 My 7 '44 950w

Reviewed by R. S. Scott

Springf'd Republican p8 Je 8 '44 460w

"Mr. Kraus states the problems of South Africa very vividly. . . The author also shows—and this lesson is worth considering at home—how the Afrikander cry 'South Africa first!' took on numerous malformations under the stress of economic hardship and the imminent danger of war—how isolationism was twisted into anti-Semitism and anti-capitalism; how nationalism became National Socialism. Unfortunately, Mr. Kraus's hostility to these end products leads him to dismiss the whole of Afrikanerdom contemptuously, and to regard his hero's connection with his own stock as a sort of biological accident. . . This weakness in Mr. Kraus's book, although it does not interfere with the volume's interest as an exciting tale of an exciting life, is serious." H. W. Baehr

+ — Weekly Book Review p4 My 7 '44 850w

Wis Lib Bul 40:108 Jl '44

KRAUS, RENE. Winston Churchill in the mirror. 232p $2.75 Dutton

B or 92 Churchill, Winston Leonard Spencer 44-8431

Life of Winston Churchill, told mainly in pictures and cartoons, but with brief text. Index to illustrations.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p4 Ja 21 '45 130w

Booklist 41:76 N 1 '44

Christian Science Monitor p15 Ja 20 '45 100w

"This book is really a supplement to Rene Kraus' biography of Winston Churchill. Therefore the story is a minor part. Not imperative for small libraries." K. T. Willis
Library J 69:882 O 15 '44 70w

"Not very distinguished text. Interesting for the variety and quality of the photographs and cartoons and for the photogenic qualities of the subject."
New Yorker 20:98 O 21 '44 50w

"Mr. Kraus has cast his net wide, not hesitating to use pictures which are remarkably bad from an artistic point of view if they have historical interest. . . But it is Winston Churchill in his latest phase, one of the world's three great leaders in the battle for the survival of civilization, which makes this book most worth while." Allan Nevins
+ Sat R of Lit 27:10 N 11 '44 500w

"Mr Kraus, who has previously written about Mr Churchill, his mother and the men around him, has done an excellent job of picture editing, and written at least an adequate commentary to them."
+ Springf'd Republican p8 N 30 '44 250w

Weekly Book Review p12 Ja 7 '45 130w

Wis Lib Bul 40:159 D '44

KRIKORIAN, YERVANT HOVHANNES, ed. Naturalism and the human spirit. 397p $4.50 Columbia univ. press

146 Naturalism A44-2760

This volume of essays, the work of fifteen authors, has one theme thruout. "All the authors, however much they may differ on minor and occasionally on major matters, are at least content to call themselves naturalists and to share a general philosophical temper called Naturalism." (N Y Times) Contents: Antinaturalism in extremis, by John Dewey; Naturalism and religion, by S. P. Lamprecht; Naturalism and democracy, by Sidney Hook; Naturalism and ethical theory, by Abraham Edel; A natural history of the aesthetic transaction, by Eliseo Vivas; The unnatural, by H. W. Schneider; The history of philosophy, by George Boas; The materials of historical knowledge, by E. W. Strong; Naturalism and the sociological analysis of knowledge, by T. Z. Lavine; Logic without ontology, by Ernest Nagel; A naturalistic view of mind, by Y. H. Krikorian; The categories of naturalism, by W. R. Dennes; The naturalism of Frederick Woodbridge, by H. T. Costello; Naturalism in America, by H. A. Larrabee; Epilogue: The nature of naturalism, by J. H. Randall, Jr. Index.

"Though some of the essays are so technical as to make tough going for the general reader, they will reward the careful study of anyone who really wants to know what this modern philosophic viewpoint is and implies. The most readable piece in the book is a delightful personal sketch of Frederick Woodbridge by Harry Todd Costello." J. T. Frederick
+ — Book Week p2 S 24 '44 130w

Canadian Forum 24:217 D '44 750w

Reviewed by P. B. Rice
Nation 159:804 D 30 '44 360w

Reviewed by Isaac Rosenfeld
New Repub 111:667 N 20 '44 1150w

Reviewed by Irwin Edman
N Y Times p8 S 3 '44 1300w

KRIS, ERNST, and SPEIER, HANS. German radio propaganda; report on home broadcasts during the war [prepared] in association with Sidney Axelrad [and others]. (Inst. of world affairs. Studies) 529p $4 Oxford

940.5488743 World war, 1939—Propaganda. Propaganda, German. Radio in propaganda 44-4524

Report of the findings of a group of scholars, working under the auspices of the Institute of World Affairs, on the subject of German home broadcasts during the war. The book is divided into three parts: the stage; the actors; and situations. Part one explains the machinery and methods of German home propaganda; part two analyses the general features of the propaganda material; and part three traces the handling of specific events in the war and the changing treatment, as the propagandists tried to adjust themselves to events in the war. Index.

"This book is the teamwork of seven authors, who coöperated so closely that, as the preface points out, the authorship of some chapters cannot be specifically established. These chapters, however, are in no way inferior to those for which individual authors are responsible. Credit is due to the two senior authors for having achieved so excellent a collaboration that the book presents, amid the variety of subjects, a uniform line of thought." Heinz Guradze
+ Am Pol Sci R 38:1008 O '44 650w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p4 Je 18 '44 180w

Booklist 40:387 Jl 15 '44

Christian Science Monitor p12 Ag 26 '44 360w

Foreign Affairs 23:12 O '44 30w

"This story is told and profusely documented by two highly qualified authorities and their collaborators. The evidence is carefully analyzed and it is presented without distortion. The result is as illuminating as it is reliable. There are, however, some defects. The book is poorly organized." Robert MacIver
+ — N Y Times p6 Jl 9 '44 400w

Reviewed by A. F. Kiefer
Pol Sci Q 59:475 S '44 450w

"The layman will find in this book a comprehensive account of what the Germans have been told about the war by Herr Goebbels. The effect is almost as though the reader of 'German Radio Propaganda' became an eavesdropper of secret conversations between the Nazi leaders and the German people. A more valuable effect is that he receives a much clearer picture of the Nazi mind and the changing morale in Germany than he might receive from broadcasts that are beamed to this country." H. G. Kranz
+ Sat R of Lit 27:15 Je 3 '44 650w

Reviewed by Cyril Clemens
Springf'd Republican p4d Je 18 '44 600w

"This is a book for the serious minded. It is written quietly, simply and clearly and with a minimum of the technical jargon which minor prophets favor, but it is sober, solid, scholarly and statistical, as befits a substantial contribution to man's knowledge of a sorry but sadly important subject." W. R. Deuel
+ Weekly Book Review p10 Je 18 '44 700w

Reviewed by Sigmund Neumann
Yale R n s 34:176 autumn '44 750w

KRISTOFFERSEN, MRS EVA MARGARET (STIEGELMEYER). Bee in her bonnet; il. by Helen Sewell. 168p $2 Crowell

44-4721

When Merry Carol Magee's big brother went to war, he told his devoted little sister that she must always have "a bee in her bonnet." Merry Carol took this literally and soon had three hives of bees of her very own on her father's Nebraska farm. Brother Dave was surprised at Merry Carol's interpretation, when he came on furlough, but that wasn't the only bee the little girl had in her bonnet, so Dave was satisfied at his sister's participation in home war activities. For children in fourth and fifth grades.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p11 Je 18 '44 140w

"Girls will thoroughly enjoy this 'might-be-true' story."
+ Kirkus 12:117 Mr 1 '44 90w

"A slight but pleasant story which will appeal to girls who enjoy E. C. Phillips and E. O. White." M. N. Miller
+ Library J 69:608 Jl '44 70w

"Not recommended." E. W. Turpin
— Library J 69:608 Jl '44 50w

"Rural Nebraska makes an appealing and genuinely American background. Rich in ideas, the author is inclined to let her plot go in too many directions. But she writes with such a real interest in people and human relationships that we may expect still better stories from her pen." A. T. Eaton
+ — N Y Times p20 Jl 16 '44 180w

"[The book] has good local color and a strong under-current of patriotism, and pictures showing rural Nebraska at its prettiest." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p5 My 14 '44 230w
Wis Lib Bul 40:72 My '44

KROLL, HARRY HARRISON. Waters over the dam. 299p $2.50 Bobbs
44-20856

Novel of adolescence in which the hero is an eighteen-year-old Alabama farm boy. The plot is concerned with Mr Danny's two loves—his innocent but lasting love for his employer's charming tomboy daughter; and his passion for the older and worldly-wise school teacher, into whose clutches he falls for a time.

Reviewed by John Norcross
Book Week p7 Ap 2 '44 450w

"The story is of less importance than the study of the life, bedded in the soil, lightened by wholesome and rather childlike fun, twisted out of focus by the emotional orgy of Camp meeting—a segment of the south above the sordid murky abnormalities of Tobacco Road, but wholly shorn of glamour, moonlight and honeysuckle."
+ — Kirkus 12:153 Ap 1 '44 160w

"A warmly written, unpretentious novel." George Mayberry
+ New Repub 110:416 Mr 27 '44 60w

"This is a disarming book, and a pleasure to read. . . This authenticity is worth something and the pleasure it takes in life is worth more." Eudora Welty
+ N Y Times p4 Mr 26 '44 700w

" 'Waters Over the Dam' has sustained narrative interest, and the flavor of farm life in Alabama permeates every page, but has a defect of which Mr. Kroll is evidently somewhat aware. In a foreword he seeks to explain why, 'if I write of that handful of years as both an adult and an almost unlettered youth, that is inevitable considering the circumstances of that time and the things that have come to pass in the years since.' But that doesn't justify larding the speech of a bumpkin with lines such as, 'Now that I am going to be a benedict it behooves me to probe the mysteries of procreation.' " George Conrad
+ — Weekly Book Review p6 Mr 26 '44 650w
Wis Lib Bul 40:70 My '44

KROUT, JOHN ALLEN, and FOX, DIXON RYAN. Completion of independence, 1790-1830. (Hist. of Am. life ser) 487p il $4 Macmillan

973.4 U.S.—History—1783-1865. U.S.—Civilization 44-51219

This volume completes the set of the twelve-volume History of American life. "All aspects of American life during the period under discussion in this volume are thoroughly explored. Life in town and country, on farm and plantation, and in factory and counting house, the political and economic developments, the important personalities of the time, and the whole political pattern of national growth are described." (Publisher's note) Critical essay on authorities. Index.

"Something new and interesting crops up on virtually every page of this volume in its descriptions of various sections of the nation, of city, farm and frontier-clearing, of life on the highroads and along the Erie Canal. Not only do the authors analyze with apt and telling phrase the ferment of these forty American years; they also clearly show that notwithstanding some remarkable achievements a truly national culture was still largely an aspiration in the rural Republic of 1830." Carl Bridenbaugh
+ N Y Times p1 Ja 7 '45 650w

Reviewed by Bernard Mayo
Weekly Book Review p5 Ja 21 '45 1250w

KRUTCH, JOSEPH WOOD. Samuel Johnson. 599p $3.75 Holt

B or 92 Johnson, Samuel 44-9867

A scholarly biography of Samuel Johnson, by the Brander Matthews professor of dramatic literature at Columbia university. Whereas Boswell, in his biography of Johnson, stressed the latter years of his life, Professor Krutch has spread the emphasis over the whole of Johnson's life. Indexes.

"Krutch is especially happy in his treatment of Johnson's later years. He has given us wonderfully vivid portraits of Mr. and Mrs. Thrale, and if his picture of Piozzi, whose marriage to Mrs. Thrale embittered Johnson's declining days, is not as vivid, he is just to that much-berated man. Indeed, the comic spirit has seldom produced a more moving episode than this story, the full flavor of which Krutch has distilled without losing any of its pathos. I do not think his treatment of Boswell is as good." H. M. Jones
+ — Book Week p1 N 19 '44 1350w
Booklist 41:123 D 15 '44

"Mr. Krutch's 'Samuel Johnson' may be enjoyed by anyone only tolerably familiar with the great man. The briefest contact with Boswell in a college classroom will be sufficient preparation. The biographer does the rest, wittily and perceptively and—because he is an admirer of Johnson and writes, in his own favorite phrase, 'con amore'—protectively. Recommended especially to teachers and students of the art of criticism . . . is the chapter on Johnson's 'The Lives of the Poets.' It is a notable critique on criticism. But it is only one good chapter of an impressive biography." Ray McPartlin
+ Boston Globe p16 N 15 '44 280w

"The indexes in 'Samuel Johnson' are not only useful in the usual way, but have a particular interest in their organization and content. There are four of them. The first is general, the second deals exclusively with the events of Johnson's life, the third is an alphabetical list of all Johnson's works, with references to Krutch's text, and the fourth makes excellent reading in itself. . . The fact that Boswell's life has never been indexed makes this a most particularly valuable piece of apparatus."
+ Boston Globe p12 N 22 '44 110w
Christian Science Monitor p14 N 27 '44 700w
Commonweal 41:280 D 29 '44 650w
Kirkus 12:420 S 15 '44 230w

"This is a soundly scholarly study of the great lexicographer. . . Professor Krutch is tolerant of the ugliness and bad temper of Johnson because he admires his mind, his style impact, but particularly the content of the eighteenth century doctor's writing. Recommended for all reference collections, college and public, but should be of some interest to theatre collections." George Freedley
+ Library J 69:935 N 1 '44 110w

"Mr. Krutch's general approach is comprehensive in its use of old material and corrective in its use of new, which is focused quite as much on Johnson's writing as on his talk. "The book is avowedly addressed to the general reader, not to the professional Johnsonian,

KRUTCH, J. W.—Continued
yet literary scholars of all kinds may read it with double profit, delighting in its learning and wit and, at the same time, recognizing it as an example of the sort of end toward which all of their efforts should be valued but as [a] means." Bergen Evans
+ New Repub 111:760 D 4 '44 850w

and which interprets rather more than it portrays. 'Samuel Johnson' has, indeed, less the special savor of a book about an enormously vivid human being than the solid character of a critical biography of an important literary man. It has Johnson's weight and a little of his wit, but hardly any of Boswell's color. To read it, with its digest of scholarship, ahead of Boswell, would, I think, be a little confusing; to read it in place of Boswell would hardly be judicious; but to read it after Boswell (and after Johnson) is to gain in perspective, knowledge, and understanding. It will leave the informed reader, who is yet no specialist, much better informed." Louis Kronenberger
+ Nation 159:654 N 25 '44 1250w

"All in all, this is the book for which we have long been waiting. This is the complete story of Dr. Johnson—the man, the talker, the moralist and the critic—written with shrewd insight and understanding, with grace and wit. It will not supplant Boswell (what indeed could?). But it will send most readers back to Boswell and to Johnson's own works with increased appreciation and delight. And doing that, it will have effectively accomplished its author's purpose." J. L. Clifford
+ N Y Times p1 N 19 '44 1700w

"The only serious general objection that can be brought against Mr. Krutch's treatment is that, in one sense, he does not seem especially close to his subject. Johnson was so solid a man, who saw the world in such concrete terms, and the give-and-take of his age was so lively, direct, and brusque, that Mr. Krutch's presentation of them seems, by comparison, attenuated and pallid. His book a little bit lacks impact. But he compensates us for this and more or less leads us to forget it by the subtlety, lucidity, and sureness of the analysis which he has made his method. And his style . . . has become, on the whole, an admirable instrument for this kind of analysis. Except for an occasional balled-up sentence, the book reads easily and carries you rapidly; and, though it isolates to some extent from the immediate background of their period the principal actors of the Johnson legend, it surrounds them with an even luminosity which, though gentle, is always revealing." Edmund Wilson
+ — New Yorker 20:84 N 18 '44 1850w

Reviewed by C. H. Bennett
Sat R of Lit 27:31 D 2 '44 1500w

Reviewed by H. E. Woodbridge
Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 7 '45 1100w

"Mr. Krutch has done well to supply an alternative large-scale biography, written with full awareness of Boswell but with less dependence on him than offhand would be supposed possible. Though the materials for the first fifty years of Johnson's life are regrettably scanty, he has at least succeeded in allotting a generous third of the book to the pre-Boswellian period. If the emphasis of space still rests preponderantly on Johnson's old age, it is not as in Boswell due to a change of scale, but to the fact that the principal critical chapters deal with writings that properly belong to the end of the story." G. F. Whicher
+ Weekly Book Review p1 N 19 '44 2100w

KUHN, HEDWIG (STIEGLITZ). Industrial ophthalmology. 293p il $6.50 Mosby

617.7 Eye—Diseases and defects. Hygiene, Industrial SG44-113

"In this pioneer study of eye problems in industry Dr. Kuhn offers the first comprehensive treatment of the subject that has appeared to date. Supplementing her text with a wealth of illustrations, the author discusses in detail the subjects of visual testing in industry, visual skills, correction of visual defects, eye protection principles, and recent developments related to industrial eye problems. A chapter of pertinent facts on industrial eye injuries is contributed by Dr. Albert C. Snell." Management R

"This pioneer textbook has a unique place in that it appeals to two classes—the management group and industrial medicine—groups that in the past have been too widely divergent for the common good. It is to be hoped that these writings will correlate their efforts more closely. . . The book is very worth while and will bear close study by anyone even remotely connected with industrial ophthalmology." H. S. Gradle
+ Am J Pub Health 34:1110 O '44 300w
+ Management R 33:248 Jl '44 80w

KUHNS, WILLIAM RODNEY, and others, eds. Return of opportunity; leaders in many fields discuss the outlook for work and careers. 309p $3 Harper

371.425 Occupations. Technology. Reconstruction (1939-) 44-639

Brief essays by some one hundred and fifty authorities, on the types of industry to be found in the postwar world, and the opportunities for their development. Includes very brief notes on the contributors. Arrangement is alphabetical by author's name.

"The contributions are almost without exception on the naively optimistic side: American ingenuity will do miracles if government does not meddle with free enterprise. The whole is a demonstration that much more thought is being put on the production of plenty, which is not the difficulty facing us, than is put on the distribution of plenty, which is the difficulty. The book suffers further from the worst possible arrangement." Margedant Peters
— Book Week p5 Ja 23 '44 140w
Library J 69:32 Ja 1 '44 30w
Management R 33:108 Mr '44 60w

" 'The Return of Opportunity' contains a good deal of useful information, sound sense and suggestive speculation. But all this is mixed higgledepiggledy with an equal amount of generalities, thin optimism and perfunctory stuff such as a busy executive (overtaken by Mr Kuhns's last telegraphed appeal for copy) might rattle off at the end of a hard day."
+ — Springf'd Republican p6 F 24 '44 360w
Wis Lib Bul 40:34 Mr '44

KULISCHER, EUGENE MICHEL. Displacement of population in Europe. 171p maps $1.50; pa $1 Int. labor office [6s; pa 4s King]

940.53159 World war, 1939—Migration. Europe—Population L43-213

For descriptive note see Annual for 1943.

Reviewed by Rudolf Heberle
Am J Soc 49:538 My '44 1950w

"[This] is an excellent book. This can be said in spite of the fact that no definitive study can now be made, that the sources available are often unsatisfactory, that there is a great chance of double-counting, that the picture changes from month to month and with the tide of every battle. The author is well aware of all this and has dealt with his assorted data with care and discriminating judgment." E. C. Helmreich
+ Am Pol Sci R 38:195 F '44 450w
Economist 145:737 D 4 '43 1450w

Reviewed by Imre Ferenczi
Geog R 34:502 Jl '44 1150w

"In publishing this book, the International Labour Office has done a great service to the discussion of postwar problems. Among so many statements which, under a thin veil of scholarly language, reveal nothing but bias, resentment, and wishful thinking, this is a statement of facts." W. J. Cahnman
+ Social Forces 22:457 My '44 850w

KUNITZ, STANLEY J. Passport to the war. 60p $2 Holt

811 44-2825

"A collection of contemporary poetry. It is in two parts, part 2 being a selection from the author's earlier work ('Intellectual Things,' 1930) and part 1 a selection from then to date. Many of the poems have appeared earlier in a variety of limited periodicals, like Poetry, the Saturday Review, the American Mercury and the Nation." Springf'd Republican

"Kunitz' poetry is intricate, personal and difficult. So many of his poems require absorbing study to resolve their sense, and then do not always reward the patience. His verse certainly is not for those whose definition of poetry is 'a comforting piece of fiction set to more or less lascivious music,' as Mencken once named it." Leo Kennedy

Book Week p6 Ap 16 '44 300w

"Fifty poems that rather definitely mark him as a major poet. Very catholic in his tastes, many of these poems of Kunitz's exhibit that by now not curious synthesis of the new and the old which one finds in the earlier paintings of Picasso and Matisse, a synthesis to which modern painting, so-called, seems to be returning, and which involves freshness of image and perception but no essential distortion; rather a stressing and renewing of the careful craftsmanship of the older painters." Harry Sylvester

+ Commonweal 40:20 Ap 21 '44 650w

"Given any kind of a decent break in the luck, this poet, one hopes, will learn to take heart from his own profession, to relax a little, take it a bit easier; loving means letting yourself go, not holding on to the self quite so tightly, making a few mistakes, learning to be forgiven as well as to forgive. This sounds, no doubt, very smug and easy to say; but Mr. Kunitz is so fine a poet one wishes, somehow, he might be happier." Rolfe Humphries

+ New Repub 110:634 My 8 '44 480w

"Kunitz has now (it would seem) every instrument necessary to the poetic analysis of modern experience. Time and time again in his new poems he achieves, with precision and fullness, his aim. Some of his war poems, such as 'The Daughters of the Horseleech,' are nearly as good if not as good as the poems in Mark Van Doren's 'Our Lady Peace,' which had seemed matchless." Mark Schorer

+ N Y Times p21 Mr 26 '44 440w

"This book is a sincere and sound achievement. It is the work of a talented craftsman, with a sharp and elegant mind, and it concerns itself with the most significant problem of the modern world—the murderous and efficient mechanization of our environment that has invaded and corrupted the mind itself. . . Many of the poems, early and late, are built on a scheme of simultaneously poeticizing language and distorting imagery to convey an intense experience. But we are seduced or distracted by the conceits so that we do not realize, or do not care, that the experience is not being defined and therefore not faced. This fault is not to be found in Mr. Kunitz to anything like the same degree as in George Barker, let us say, yet it is a serious enough one to be denounced wherever it shows itself." A. J. M. Smith

+ — Poetry 64:165 Je '44 900w

"At first glance, the distance between Mr. Kunitz's verses and Mr. Van Doren's [The Seven Sleepers] seems far too great to be circumscribed within a brief review: where Mr. Van Doren writes loosely, Mr. Kunitz's verse is specific in its reference, is often shrill, is serious in a manner that Mr. Van Doren's verse is not and has, so I would say, a general lack of ease. But on second reading a common denominator for both volumes of verses is not too hard to find. Both books are written in a minor strain and both bear marks of a feminine literary influence which may be traced to readings in Emily Dickinson. Mr. Kunitz's verse stems from a source which may be called 'the blood, the bone, and the brain school' and which flourished so generously among women poets of the mid-nineteen-twenties." Horace Gregory

+ Sat R of Lit 27:22 Ap 29 '44 550w

"There are two or three echoes of Matthew Arnold, some of Wordsworth, of Browning and Keats. Much of the cast of thought is like Donne; many of the images are like T. S. Eliot. Like Eliot, Mr Kunitz has both the faults and virtues of such eclecticism. The poetry is involved in thought and frequently obscure. This obscurity often seems wilful and used as a cover for unintelligibility or even sentimental romanticism. . . The virtues are in compactness and brilliance of idea, and there are many examples of these." Lee Varley

+ — Springf'd Republican p6 Mr 20 '44 600w

"This is not a volume of easy verse. Stanley Kunitz has a subtle and strongly individual mind and he will not be satisfied with any easy or superficial expression of idea or emotion. . . He must find new epithet and image, forged from his own unique experience, from his own struggle to interpret his own nature and that of the universe he is forced to inhabit. He does this so successfully that on every page there are striking and powerful images and rhythms, which create new poetic experience in the reader. But this is seldom sustained throughout a single poem."

+ — Weekly Book Review p16 Je 4 '44 300w

KUO, CHING-CH'IU. Giants of China; il. by Woodi Ishmael. 254p $3 Dutton

920 China—Biography 44-6876

"A series of biographical sketches of eleven men and women who have influenced the course of Chinese civilization. From Huang Ti, the Yellow Emperor who brought order and dignity of life to China's primitive man, they range down or up to Generalissimo and Mme. Chiang Kai-shek." N Y Times

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p8 N 12 '44 250w

Booklist 41:44 O 1 '44

"This timely book will do much to interpret China to young people of America."

+ Horn Bk 20:479 N '44 80w

"Delightfully written."

+ Kirkus 12:406 S 1 '44 170w

"Author, born and educated in China, has written out of real love and knowledge of her country's history. . . Goes well with Seeger's Pageant of Chinese History. Recommended for junior high school age." Elizabeth Burr

+ Library J 69:887 O 15 '44 80w

"Readers of junior high school age will find that in meeting these celestial giants they will have gained an insight into Chinese culture." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p19 Ag 27 '44 160w

"The author seems to be at her best when she writes about modern China. For young people who are interested in China—and an amazing number are—this should be a useful book. It will tell them from what heritage the present-day Chinese draw their strength and faith and endurance. The illustrations, by Woodi Ishmael, are in the spirit of the old Chinese prints." B. W. S.

+ Sat R of Lit 28:33 Ja 13 '45 280w

Springf'd Republican p4d O 8 '44 140w

Weekly Book Review p12 N 12 '44 420w

KUO, CHING-CH'IU. Westward to Chungking. 297p $2.75 Appleton-Century

44-7409

"By boat, rickshaw and on foot the Lee family with two servants make their way from their Soochow home to the safety of the provisional capital, Chungking. Like an ancient Chinese picture which has to be looked at section by section, the story of their trip unravels, each incident showing more clearly the hardiness and fine spirit of the family." Boston Globe

Reviewed by Marion Strobel

Book Week p3 O 15 '44 300w

Booklist 41:78 N 1 '44

"Helen Kuo writes English with ease, and the book has a stamp of authenticity which only

KUO, CHING-CH'IU—Continued
a Chinese could give to this terrible era in China's history." Sally Swing
+ Boston Globe p15 S 20 '44 220w
Christian Science Monitor p16 S 18 '44 550w
Kirkus 12:304 Jl 15 '44 210w
Reviewed by H. S. Taylor
Library J 69:699 S 1 '44 70w

"It is the revealing glimpses of the home life of the Lees that make this book fresh and warmly human. All the characters down to Wu-Ma, the servant, are definite individuals; the portrait of Lee Tien-min is finely drawn and unforgettable. Young enough to know youth's problems, sensitively appreciative of the philosophy and wisdom of the fine men of the older generation, Miss Kuo shows it is the combination of the new and old that will be China's future strength." Andrea Parke
+ N Y Times p26 O 15 '44 320w

"Miss Kuo has made the Lees not only representative of China but of all little people struggling valiantly to build a decent life in wartime. Her art is shown in that they remain at the same time highly individualized as well as gallant symbols." M. L. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d O 15 '44 500w

"Fu-Yi and her brothers, even impetuous Fu-An, always floundering into trouble are marionettes, skillfully and lovingly fashioned. . . But in portraying the older generation, Miss Kuo achieves sure and vivid authenticity. Tien-Min seems real and he is fascinating." Page Cooper
+ Weekly Book Review p4 S 10 '44 900w
Wis Lib Bul 40:130 O '44

KUO, HELENA. See Kuo, C.

KUTAK, ROSEMARY. Darkness of slumber. 218p $2 Lippincott 44-8409

Detective story.

Booklist 41:153 Ja 15 '45

"Best of the week."
+ Boston Globe p16 N 15 '44 50w
Kirkus 12:355 Ag 15 '44 90w

"The puzzle is a neat one and a cast of interesting characters enlivens its solution. A promising debut." E. H.
+ New Repub 111:606 N 6 '44 130w

"This is Rosemary Kutak's first mystery story and, for all we know, her first book of any kind, but neither her skilful plot construction nor her excellent character drawing suggests the hand of a novice at writing." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p32 D 3 '44 250w

"A good first mystery, with unusual attention to detail."
+ New Yorker 20:87 N 4 '44 90w

"First class!"
+ Sat R of Lit 27:31 N 18 '44 40w

"Miss Kutak overfiddles her portents at the start, but manages to keep the jitters going all the way." Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p18 O 29 '44 120w

KYLE, ELISABETH, pseud. See Dunlop, A. M. R.

L

LADNER, ALAN WILFRID, and STONER, CHARLES ROBERT. Short wave wireless communication; incl. ultra-short waves. 4th ed rev & enl 573p il $6 Wiley [35s Chapman]
621.384 Radio—Short wave [42-23685]

"This edition has been extensively revised. New material has been added, particularly in the field of ultra-short waves, while much of the original material has been rewritten. A chapter on high frequency therapeutic apparatus has also been added. One hundred and eighty new diagrams are included, but the plates of the previous edition have been dropped. The changes account for an increase of 120 pages." (N Y New Tech Bks) For earlier edition see Book Review Digest, 1934.

Booklist 40:149 D 15 '43
N Y New Tech Bks 28:50 Jl '43

LA FARGE, CHRISTOPHER. East by southwest. 208p $2.50 Coward-McCann
44-6865

Ten short stories and one poem representing "a synthesis of those things [seen] and heard during travel [in the islands of the Southwest Pacific] in the spring of 1943." Author was a correspondent for Harper's magazine and the stories originally appeared in Harper's and the American. The poem appeared in the Atlantic Monthly.

Booklist 41:58 O 15 '44

"The book is written in meticulous prose, and at times the conversations are too stylicized for 'fighting talk.' But through the use of the stream of consciousness technique, LaFarge has achieved a higher reality and a universality lacking in the average dispatch. 'East by Southwest' is a real contribution to the journalistic fiction of this war." Sally Swing
+ Boston Globe p15 Ag 30 '44 330w

"Interesting use of factual material that gives a different angle to what is general knowledge."
+ Kirkus 12:237 Je 1 '44 130w
Reviewed by Diana Trilling
Nation 159:218 Ag 19 '44 300w

"These stories are encompassed with truth. They show an extraordinarily sensitive ear for dialogue, and observing eye and a warm understanding—free from sentimentality and heroics—of the loneliness and slight bewilderment of the fighting men in this remote theatre. They are written with humor and they move easily. Judged by a severe standard, they might seem to traverse ground that is familiar enough to lack any profound new insights. None the less they provide three hours of rewarding reading." C. J. Rolo
+ N Y Times p6 Jl 23 '44 800w

"Mr. La Farge has chosen to cast his book in a form somewhere between straight eyewitness stuff and fiction. His observations are set forth with grace, good humor, and a perceptive intelligence."
+ New Yorker 20:62 Jl 29 '44 50w
Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 30 '44 380w

"These things are all small, in a way, minor details in a great war. And yet the point is they are also immensely important things. They needed to be told, and it is doubtful if they could ever have been told as effectively by factual reporting as they have been told here. They give us an intimate glimpse into the thoughts and feelings of men in the battle areas." Jennings Rice
+ Weekly Book Review p5 Jl 30 '44 950w

LAFUENTE FERRARI, ENRIQUE, ed. Velázquez. See Velázquez, D. R. de S.y

LAHNE, HERBERT J. Cotton mill worker. (Labor in twentieth century America) 303p $3 Farrar 331.76772 Cotton manufacture. Labor and laboring classes—U.S. Trade unions—U.S.
44-6565

"This is the fourth volume in the Labor in Twentieth Century America Series. It deals with our oldest industry in which machinery was employed from the very beginning and in which the first corporate enterprise appeared. . . The history of the unionization of the cotton mill workers is the real theme of the present volume. It is thoroughly documented and should be prescribed reading for all those who fear the power of organized labor and overlook or refuse to acknowledge the arbitrary power of industrial autocrats. At the same time the reader gets a very fair notion of the complexity of the industrial life of the country as a whole and the sensitive reaction of the cotton industry to changes in transportation or to general commercial and manufacturing conditions in New York or California." Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by Jack Conroy
Book Week p4 Ja 14 '45 550w

"Academic rather than popular, Dr. Lahne's presentation is not likely to interest the general reader, but anyone interested in cotton textile or textile organizations will find a wealth of information ably presented and amply annotated." J. L. Harrington
+ — Canadian Forum 24:239 Ja '45 490w

Kirkus 12:364 Ag 15 '44 100w

Reviewed by Philip Taft
Nation 159:623 N 18 '44 90w

Reviewed by Harry Weiss
New Repub 112:93 Ja 15 '45 700w

"This noteworthy study would be much more readable if the story were told consecutively instead of shuttling back and forth in time and space." Manya Gordon
+ — Sat R of Lit 27:8 N 4 '44 950w

LAIDLER, HARRY WELLINGTON. Social-economic movements; an historical and comparative survey of socialism, communism, co-operation, utopianism, and other systems of reform and reconstruction. 828p $5; text ed $3.75 Crowell

335 Socialism. Communism. Utopias 44-9691

"Thousands of volumes have been written on particular schools of thought. No volume, however, has thus far appeared giving a comprehensive picture of all of the important movements for fundamental change along co-operative lines. The present volume, prepared as a textbook for courses in economics, sociology, political science, and social ethics, and as a handbook on social reconstruction for the general reader, is the first volume to present a broad survey of all of these movements. It seeks to provide a history of these movements and systems of thought and describe the social environment which led to their development; to set forth their main principles, policies, leadership, and achievements and to compare them with other reform and reconstruction movements. Within the limitations of space, an endeavor has been made, through the use of carefully selected quotations from the chief exponents of each school, to bring the reader into vital touch not only with the ideas, but with the spirit animating each movement." (Pref) Selected references. Index.

Booklist 41:155 Ja 15 '45

"His latest volume is candidly a textbook but one which will be used henceforth not merely by students and teachers, but by anyone whose interest lies in this field. This is straight history." E. C. Lindeman
+ New Repub 111:701 N 27 '44 550w

"That this book will fit well into the institutional setting for which it was designed (the college course in economics, sociology, political science, or social ethics) is at once the best and the worst thing that can be said about it. Dr. Laidler set out to write a textbook suitable for use by the teachers of courses in radical theories and movements of social reform, and he has produced just such a book. It measures up to the best traditions of what a textbook dealing with highly controversial and suspect questions ought to be. The author is not to be blamed for the fact that good textbook writing in such a field is likely to make for poor education." C. S. Joslyn
Sat R of Lit 27:9 D 30 '44 800w

"Dr Laidler is well qualified to write such a book for he has had a long and honorable history as a student and writer in this field. In addition to several standard books dealing with basic aspects of capitalism and socialism he is a prominent collaborator in the work of the National Bureau of Economic Research. He writes with desirable objectivity, although it would not be difficult to deduce some of his own predilections by noting the amount of space given to certain subjects evidently dear to his heart. . . A first-class comprehensive bibliography at the end of the book is not one of its least assets. It's a pity, however, that its price could not be lower." H. W. Cross
+ Springf'd Republican p4d D 24 '44 800w

"Mr. Laidler has written an excellent survey of the historical development of social-economic movements. In view of the author's background in this field, the work warrants careful consideration. He has performed the unique service of tracing the evolution of social reform from the amoebic beginnings of the religious philosopher Amos to the complications of modern totalitarianism. . . The reader will find the chapters on socialist movements in various lands, including Australia, Canada, and the United States, particularly useful as background information. The admirable chapter on recent programs for reconstruction brings the development in these latter countries up to date in a summary that cannot be duplicated elsewhere." William Withers
+ Survey G 33:462 N '44 400w

LAING, ALEXANDER KINNAN. Clipper ship men; il. by Armstrong Sperry. 279p $3 Duell

623.8 Shipbuilding. Clipper ships. Shipping —U.S. 44-51289

"A story of the development, over long centuries, of the dream of the perfect ship. . . The achievements of the clipper-ship era have stood unapproached against the record of all sea-faring, before and since. Why did the great age of sail come so suddenly—and so late? Why did it end as suddenly, and so soon? . . [This book] traces backward the history of the sea-words that reveal the shaping-up of the dream of the perfect ship. This book deals fully with the contributions of the earlier men, and the earlier times, and thereby makes understandable its account of the superb climax in the Eighteen Fifties." (Publisher's note) Index.

Booklist 41:148 Ja 15 '45

Christian Science Monitor p12 Ja 13 '45 90w

Kirkus 12:418 S 15 '44 120w

"There is great scholarship behind this book, though in form it is essentially an essay, earnest yet easy, giving all the time needed to a fascinating turn of thought. There is, for the reader, that fine sense of a splendid conversation in a corner where the right source books are ready for reference and ready to meet his urge for exploration." C. B. Palmer
+ N Y Times p12 D 24 '44 320w

"The imagination of Mr. Laing, who knows his subject inside out, has plainly been captivated by the clipper ships. Expressing his enthusiasm in a restrained and literate prose, he makes them seem every bit as exciting and fascinating as they undoubtedly were."
+ New Yorker 20:82 O 28 '44 90w

"This is a beautiful little book, well-illustrated and thoughtfully written. It ought to stimulate Americans to remember that their ancestors, a century ago, were thinking as expertly in mechanics and dynamics as the creators of our vehicles of speed today." A. D. H. Smith
+ Sat R of Lit 27:58 D 2 '44 650w

Springf'd Republican p4d N 5 '44 500w

"The present reviewer has found what he thinks are a few flaws, but they are wholly unimportant. The main theme of the work, the glory of the clipper ship, the extraordinary nature of her creation, has been brought out consistently, with a knowledge and appreciation that stand up against every criticism and make fine reading." Lincoln Colcord
+ — Weekly Book Review p6 N 26 '44 1250w

LAING, ALEXANDER KINNAN. Sea Witch; a narrative of the experiences of Capt. Roger Murray and others in an American clipper ship during the years 1846 to 1856; new ed, il. by Gordon Grant. (Murray hill bk) 487p $3.50 Farrar

Sea Witch (ship)—Fiction 44-9148

A novel of the golden age of the clipper ships. The book first appeared in 1933 (Book

LAING, A. K.—Continued
Review Digest, 1933) and is here reissued illustrated in color and in black and white.

"A stirring tale of the sea in all her moods." E. L. Keyes

+ Commonweal 41:260 D 22 '44 180w

Reviewed by C. B. Palmer

+ N Y Times p12 D 24 '44 320w

LAING, DILYS (BENNETT) (MRS ALEXANDER KINNAN LAING). Birth is farewell. 53p $1.75 Duell

811 44-41845

Collection of poems, most of which have been printed earlier in magazines such as The New Yorker, Harper's, The Yale Review, The Saturday Review of Literature, etc. For the author's earlier book Another England see Book Review Digest, 1941.

"Dilys Bennett Laing writes vividly and tightly in conventional forms which she has well under control at all times. Her pictures are sharp and fast. . . It's delicate stuff to work with and a little on the precious side." Leo Kennedy

+ Book Week p15 O 1 '44 200w

"Shakespearean tradition continues in the poetry of Dilys Bennett Laing, whose second book of poems sustains the reputation established by her first. There is not a false note. Here and there expression is a trifle strained, but most of the poems in this volume flower fully and naturally as roses in June. They are both inspired and intellectual."

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 D 9 '44 100w

"This is a slight and immaterial collection of lyrics by a young woman who has published a previous volume called Another England. . . Despite their sincerity and high-mindedness they have too little substance and are too scattered to command attention. Miss Laing, however, has received recognition through acceptance by various periodicals."

— + Kirkus 12:396 S 1 '44 110w

"Miss Laing's work is about the best magazine verse I have seen; her gift is a grain of sand in a very mountainous world. Her failure must be blamed on too much receptivity of the plaudits of such pundits as William Rose Benét of The Saturday Review of Literature, Donald Adams of The New York Times Poet's Column and Louis Untermeyer of the Sanctum Sanctorum, whose teachings, if taken seriously, make a fine course in mediocrity." Oscar Williams

— New Repub 111:536 O 23 '44 80w

"It is probably best to set down objections before agreements, and therefore I shall note first two elements in Dilys Bennett Laing's 'Birth is Farewell,' which are familiar weaknesses in much modern verse. First, there is an occasional straining for felicity, which gives metaphors an effect of being fortuitous rather than inevitable. . . Secondly, there is often a shunning of direct statement, which gives the effect of a riddle. . . These faults are typical of modern verse, and that is why I mention them. Miss Laing's work frequently shows lyric power unmarred by them." Robert Hillyer

— + N Y Times p29 D 10 '44 200w

"Her talent is small but genuine; she sometimes struggles to enlarge it." Louise Bogan

+ New Yorker 20:92 O 21 '44 60w

"It is to the credit of Miss Laing that she is able to produce this kind of verse (so full of peril for the writer) without seeming to make concessions to popular sentiment. But, although especially adroit at handling what Elizabethans called the 'conceit,' she tends at times to be too bare and literal: the mere statement of a truth, however noble, is not poetry. Her volume also contains a good many pieces which can only be considered finger-exercises, but there is enough of genuine worth to make it a distinguished and promising book of verse." J. F. Nims

+ Sat R of Lit 27:22 N 25 '44 230w

LAIRD, DONALD ANDERSON, and LAIRD, MRS ELEANOR CHILDS (LEONARD). Technique of building personal leadership; proved ways for increasing the powers of leadership. (Whittlesey house publication) 239p il $2 McGraw

150.13 Leadership. Psychology, Applied 44-7337

"A popular treatise on personal leadership mostly made up of examples of the various successes men and women have had in this field explaining their technique. Much in the style of Dale Carnegie." Library J

Kirkus 12:269 Je 15 '44 60w

"May be popular but not recommended for public library purchase—not important enough in content." M. E. Clark

— Library J 69:649 Ag '44 60w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 6 '44 180w

LAIRD, JOHN. Mind and deity. 322p $3.50 Philosophical lib. [10s 6d Allen, G]

211 Theism. God. Idealism 44-45318

"Professor Laird here presents the second series of his Gifford Lectures, delivered in 1940. His major theme, metaphysics and theism, was dealt with in the first series under the title Theism and Cosmology [Book Review Digest, 1942]. There he constructed an immanent theism upon the basis of a provisional realism. In the second series he attempts to show that such realism may stand against the arguments of idealism and phenomenalism and that metaphysics may, and probably should, be theistic provided it sticks close to the realities of common experience and advances no logical absurdities." J Philos

Reviewed by H. A. Larrabee

Ethics 55:76 O '44 330w

Reviewed by W. G. De Burgh

Hibbert J 40:97 O '41 2850w

Reviewed by F. D. Bolman, Jr.

J Philos 41:633 N 9 '44 2650w

"This second volume of Professor Laird's Gifford Lectures on Metaphysics and Theism is even more interesting than the first and can be read independently, since it is, as he says, the complement, not the sequel. It gives a careful, candid, and lucid account of the metaphysical implications of theism in its various forms, mainly as to the relations of God and Man." A. D. R.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 15 '41 260w

"A scholarly, candid and most acute study which I heartily commend to all readers of Nature." A. E. Taylor

+ Nature 148:544 N 8 '41 800w

LAMBERT, MRS CLARA (BREAKEY). School's out; child care through play schools. 225p il $2.50 Harper

362.7 Play schools 44-9789

"This factual, helpful book deals with one of the most important social problems of our day—the plight of the school-age child, between 5 and 12, whose parents work and cannot exercise normal control in the home. It explains why community planning for these children is needed and offers specific and practical suggestions for establishing play centers that will take into account the character of the community to be served." (School & Society) Bibliography.

Booklist 41:102 D 1 '44

"This is good, wholesome, practical, as well as theoretical, child care program building, important immediately with interest focussed on juvenile delinquency and wartime emergencies."

+ Kirkus 12:392 S 1 '44 170w

School & Society 60:304 N 4 '44 60w

"Written by staff members of the Play Schools Association and detailing the part taken by its activities in normal American life, this book has a special application to abnormal conditions now prevailing under war and war-production conditions. . . The up-to-date reading list will carry a student further in a subject of immediate and future interest."

+ Weekly Book Review p22 N 5 '44 200w

LAMBIE, THOMAS ALEXANDER. Boot and saddle in Africa. 158p $2 Revell
276.3 Missions—Ethiopia. Missions, Medical SG44-34

Reminiscences of an American medical missionary to Ethiopia, who at one time was an adviser to Haile Selassie.

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:666 Jl '44 10w

"[An] interesting piece of missionary literature." J. W. C.
+ Springf'd Republican p8 Mr 10 '44 300w

LAMOTT, WILLIS CHURCH. Nippon: the crime and punishment of Japan. 258p $2.50 Day
915.2 Japan—Civilization. National characteristics, Japanese. Reconstruction (1939-) —Japan 44-4686

An analysis of Japan's national characteristics and psychology, presented in order to show why she is at war with the Western Powers and what should be done with her in the post-war world. Index.

Reviewed by W. F. Morse
Book Week p11 My 28 '44 90w
Booklist 40:389 Jl 15 '44
Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 61:725 Je 14 '44 950w
Cleveland Open Shelf p9 Je '44
Foreign Affairs 23:17 O '44 20w

"Mr. Lamott has done an invaluable job of interpretation in this succinct handbook of Nipponese ideology." T. A. Bisson
+ Nation 159:75 Jl 15 '44 1300w

"In a brief space it is impossible to discuss this sort of book critically. Japan is confused and it is easier to mirror this confusion than to disperse it. The material Mr. Lamott presents is highly controversial. In the opinion of this reviewer, however, the weakness of 'Nippon' as a guide to postwar planning is its failure to distinguish between 'traditionalism' as propaganda, and the Japanese traditional customs and institutions as a way of life." Helen Mears
New Repub 111:252 Ag 28 '44 1300w

"With a background of almost twenty years of residence in Japan as a missionary teacher, Mr. Lamott knows the country and the people well enough to steer a middle course between sentimentality and blind, indiscriminate abuse. The author is at his best in his description of Japanese education." W. H. Chamberlin
+ N Y Times p22 My 28 '44 800w

"Mr. Willis Lamott taught school for nineteen years in Japan, and, though he does not express himself very brilliantly, his book, like Mrs. Fischer's on Russia, has the interest of a report by an observer who has worked in a foreign country and had intimate experience of its daily life." Edmund Wilson
+ New Yorker 20:78 Je 3 '44 550w

"Mr. Lamott's study stands out in contrast to other books because of the depth of analysis, maturity of thought and the manner in which the author is able to draw intelligent and practicable conclusions for Japan's future on the basis of a careful and well-balanced analysis of Japan's past." Andrew Roth
+ Pacific Affairs 17:352 S '44 420w

"Mr. Lamott has given us a thoughtful, analytical and informative account of Japan's crime and the conditions under which it was bred. But his diagnosis of the crime is far better than his prescription for the future." Wilfrid Fleisher
+ Weekly Book Review p13 Je 4 '44 950w

"Mr. Lamott's opinions are occasionally debatable, but his book is one of the most valuable that has been offered to American readers." Hugh Byas
+ Yale R n s 34:155 autumn '44 700w

LANCASTER, BRUCE. Trumpet to arms. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 380p $2.75 Little 44-5271

Historical novel of the American revolution. The author's purpose is stated in his Foreword: "This book is concerned with the strange transmutation of local militia companies from all the Colonies into the first American Army. It ends with the campaign of Trenton and Princeton. . . We are concerned with what happened to a few imaginary people and with one actual regiment—John Glover's Marblehead men, the Twenty-first (later the Fourteenth) Massachusetts Infantry."

Reviewed by Otto Eisenschiml
Book Week p4 Jl 2 '44 360w
Booklist 40:377 Jl 1 '44

"Sometimes explosive in style, sometimes chatty, 'Trumpet to Arms' is always easy to read and occasionally strikes a note as stirring as a call to battle."
+ Boston Globe p17 Je 7 '44 200w

"It is exciting and authentic, full of vivid incidents and personalities, and rich in local color, but expanded too much for steady reading." N. E. Monroe
+ — Cath World 159:380 Jl '44 150w

"This is one of Bruce Lancaster's best—and when Bruce Lancaster writes good historical fiction it is tops."
+ Kirkus 12:179 Ap 15 '44 140w

Reviewed by Lena Ruppert
Library J 69:502 Je 1 '44 110w

"The characters are on the ready-made side and the hero and his pal occasionally sound a little bit like 'The Rover Boys in the Revolution.' However, the heroine is a sensible girl not given to swooning, and the love story doesn't clutter up the action. Altogether Mr. Lancaster has written a convincing, invigorating account of the early days of the American Revolution, and he hasn't felt it necessary to insist that we'd have been better off if it hadn't happened." Jane Cobb
+ — N Y Times p6 Je 18 '44 320w

"An informative and moderately interesting novel. . . The thread of love story which runs through the novel has the look of having been added against the better judgment of the author, whose real preoccupation is with military matters."
+ — New Yorker 20:77 Je 10 '44 140w

Reviewed by Edrie Van Dore
Springf'd Republican p4d Je 11 '44 380w

"It is a lusty, swaggering tale, peopled with real characters and told by an author who knows his history and his setting. While there is never much doubt but what Rip Mayne will come out safely in the end, the pace is well sustained and the suspense holds. Parallels between that age and the present one are educed without over emphasis. It is a tale that will make a strong appeal to the male reader; nor is the presence in it of Remembrance Morse likely to lessen that appeal one whit." Jennings Rice
+ Weekly Book Review p3 Je 11 '44 750w
Wis Lib Bul 40:130 O '44

LANDAUER, CARL. See Landauer, K.

LANDAUER, KARL. Theory of national economic planning. 189p $2 Univ. of Calif.
338.91 Economic policy A44-89

"Starting with the premise that a sound economy must solve the problem of continuous production and maximum employment, the author presents a closely reasoned argument for a centralized economic system. . . The major concern in this volume is stabilization, though development and expansion are not ignored. The plan for production described here is a refinement of Mordecai Ezekiel's 'Industrial Expansion,' into which Professor Landauer successfully fits the problems of savings, investment, money and international trade. A wider latitude would be granted to individual business men than is usually suggested in blueprints of this kind, but that is one way, says the author, of checking the proposals of the planning board." (New Repub) Index.

LANDAUER, KARL—Continued

Reviewed by Joseph Mayer
Ann Am Acad 236:203 N '44 900w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 Jl 2 '44 120w

Booklist 40:278 Ap 15 '44

"Professor Landauer's well organized treatise is a powerful answer to those economists and statesmen who habitually confound economic planning with totalitarianism. . . This book should be required reading for those interested in postwar planning."
+ New Repub 110:542 Ap 17 '44 240w

LANDHEER, BARTHOLOMEUS, ed. Netherlands; chapters by Johan Willem Albarda [and others]. (United nations ser) 464p il $5 Univ. of Calif.

914.92 Netherlands A44-255

Twenty-one specialists contribute chapters to a comprehensive study, edited by the chief of the Reference and research department of the Netherlands information bureau. Contents: Part 1; The scene; Part 2, Historical background; Part 3, Political and constitutional development; Part 4, Economic and social development; Part 5, Cultural aspects; Part 6, Netherlands overseas territories; Part 7, Second World war and after. Bibliography.

"This is one of the most puzzling books ever printed in this country. At first the reader gets the impression that it must be a valuable source of information on a very interesting member of the United Nations, for it was composed by twenty-one experts. But perhaps this large number of writers caused the editor great difficulty in his attempt to co-ordinate the various chapters. . . Historians in particular will be disappointed to learn that in the four chapters devoted to Dutch history much space has been reserved for subjects that have been treated more fully in the chapters on literature, art, and religion. . . The bibliography also reflects the poor editorial policy which has rendered the book almost valueless to the conscientious historian." Albert Hyma
— Am Hist R 49:722 Jl '44 650w

"The articles on 'Political and Constitutional Development' and 'Political Parties,' which, together with those on the country's history and economic and social structure, are of especial interest to the political scientist, are well worth reading particularly the observations on the Dutch experience with proportional representation. On the other hand, the chapter on 'Music' seems to be little more than an extended Who's Who. On the whole, however, the editor and authors have well accomplished their purpose of presenting an objective, informative, and readable volume on the Netherlands." Gerhard Krebs
+ — Am Pol Sci R 38:594 Je '44 300w

"As might be expected from the nature and intent of the series as a whole and from the authorship of this volume, the tone and approach are sympathetic and at times quite eulogistic. Yet the praise and encomiums are rarely offensive, and there is much of sober truth in the history and expansion of the Netherlands which must enlist the admiration and respect of any honest historian and informed reader." H. E. Barnes
+ Ann Am Acad 233:232 My '44 750w

Booklist 40:196 F 1 '44

Current Hist 6:438 My '44 60w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:497 Ap '44 20w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
N Y Times p10 Jl 2 '44 400w

"Six of the twenty seven chapters in this useful and handsome symposium on Holland and its colonies deal with the peoples, history, culture, and economy of the Netherlands Indies. Of these six the study by Raden Moehammad Moesa Soerianatadjoemena is the most valuable contribution because, in contrast to the other studies, it presents material not readily available." K. J. Pelzer
+ Pacific Affairs 17:255 Je '44 490w

School & Society 59:192 Mr 11 '44 30w

LANDIS, CAROLE. Four Jills in a jeep; il. by Lily Cushing. 180p $2 Random house

940.5477 World war, 1939—War work. Soldiers—Entertainment 44-2742

The uninhibited account of a tour of army camps in England and North Africa in 1942 and early 1943, during which four Hollywood stars gave dozens of performances for the army men. The girls were Carole Landis, Kay Francis, Martha Raye, and Mitzi Mayfair.

"This recital of four blithe spirits on a bender is without a dull moment." Sterling North
+ Book Week p2 F 27 '44 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '44

"Definitely the book for the movie public, and particularly for those to whom Kay Francis, Mitzi Mayfair, Martha Raye and Carole Landis are names to conjure with. For the rest of the reading public, this will seem girlish adolescent burblings and corny humor."
— + Kirkus 12:14 Ja 1 '44 80w

"One of those light, interesting books that make pleasurable reading." J. A. Sohon
+ Library J 69:117 F 1 '44 40w

Reviewed by Lucy Greenbaum
N Y Times p29 Je 4 '44 400w

Theatre Arts 28:320 My '44 140w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p16 Mr 12 '44 270w

LANDIS, PAUL HENRY. Population problems; a cultural interpretation. 500p maps $3.75 Am. bk.

312 Population 43-12157

"This book aims to present a treatment of population which will meet at least four standards: (1) proper emphasis on social and cultural factors as forces in the biological behavior of man; (2) primary stress upon social implications of population data and their human significance rather than on a statistical presentation of biosocial facts; (3) classification of population into categories that have sociological meaning, and analysis of data within these categories; (4) proper presentation of population movements as a function of changing culture patterns." Pref.

"This is a well-written and carefully-thought-out text incorporating the latest statistics and research in the subject of population. It will prove a valuable addition to the texts now available. Whether or not a teacher will want to use it will depend upon the extent to which he thinks the socio-cultural approach of the book should be emphasized." L. R. Chenault
+ Am Econ R 34:656 S '44 1350w

Reviewed by Nathan Keyfitz
Am J Soc 49:373 Ja '44 850w

"In the main, the author has capably carried out his aim. The book is written in an interesting style and is well illustrated with charts and graphs. It should prove to be a popular textbook for beginning students in sociology." H. F. Dorn
+ Am Soc R 9:335 Je '44 400w

"The book is obviously designed primarily as a textbook, and yet it will well repay the time and effort required to study it on the part of any layman who wishes to be adequately informed in one of the most vital areas of social knowledge." H. P. Fairchild
+ Ann Am Acad 234:158 Jl '44 370w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:657 Jl '44 10w

Reviewed by K. J. Rehage
Social Educ 8:187 Ap '44 750w

"Dr. Landis has done for the sociologist and for others a valuable service. He at least has couched population problems in terms of their inter-human aspects and relationships. He has made out the case for population subject-matter as resting in a cultural setting and has gone some further in making a good analysis of the conventional approach within this setting." B. O. Williams

+ Social Forces 22:343 Mr '44 800w

"This book eschews the traditional discussions of historical speculations concerning population and so-called population laws and pioneers in emphasizing the social origin and meaning of the facts it presents. The best available data, gleaned from numerous specialized monographs, have been utilized. The result is a brief, lucid, and balanced survey of the nation's population in a world setting." E. E. Edwards

+ Social Studies 35:91 F '44 270w

"In its treatment of population theories the book is superficial, but in its presentation of population data for the United States it is inclusive. The author's recommendations will be of wide interest to social workers, as they include the increase of nurseries, school lunches, infant-maternity care, health and dental care for all children, maternity benefits, marriage loans, better urban housing, and improved, publicly supported medical care and public health services." Mildred Fairchild

+ — Survey 80:336 N '44 450w

LANDIS, WALTER SAVAGE. Your servant the molecule. 238p $2.75 Macmillan

660 Chemistry, Technical. Chemical industries. Chemistry 44-8602

"A semi-technical discussion of the chemistry of common things: foods and fertilizers, buildings, clothing, pulp and paper, soap and other cleansing agents, petroleum and its products, rubber and rubber substitutes, resins and plastics, explosives, paints, dyes, pharmaceuticals, vitamins, cosmetics, colloids, etc." Library J

"There is nothing new in this book, but if you are at all cloudy on chemistry and its relation to your daily life you can read it with profit. . . In a sense this book is elementary, but don't let that mislead you. There's enough detailed study of such technicalities as valences, for instance, to make it pretty labored going for the many who don't know the difference between a test tube and a retort. That is a virtue, too, for if you can read Landis' book and understand it, you will have an exceptionally intelligent layman's knowledge of our biggest and most significant science and its thrilling potentialities." G. W.

+ Book Week p14 O 29 '44 140w

Booklist 41:86 N 15 '44

Kirkus 12:363 Ag 15 '44 110w

"Will be useful as an introduction to industrial chemistry, but the reader should have some slight knowledge of chemistry before using this book. It should interest the chemist as a 'refresher' text." J. A. Sohon

+ Library J 69:812 O 1 '44 70w

"An intelligent reader who has had a college course in chemistry and who has not forgotten all that he learned from Professor So and So will find this book far more informative than the usual pap on chemistry. This is about the best attempt which has come to the notice of this reviewer to drive home the story of reactions in the very difficult province of organic chemistry." Waldemar Kaempffert

+ Sat R of Lit 27:14 D 9 '44 550w

"It is an excellent introduction to chemistry for business men, bankers and economists and an illuminating supplement to a standard textbook course in chemistry in any school."

+ Weekly Book Review p20 D 3 '44 200w

LANDON, FRED. Lake Huron. (American lakes ser) 398p il $3.50 Bobbs

977 Huron, Lake 44-2420

"This book is a history of Lake Huron and of the St. Clair River into which it empties. It is an attempt to tell of some of the happenings around and upon these waters in the years since Champlain first saw a portion of Georgian Bay. These happenings relate to men and to ships, for ships have personality too, and much will be said of them in these pages." Foreword

---

"All things considered, this book is everything one could wish within its scope. It will stand comparison with any book in the Rivers of America series, and it taps a veritable mine of new materials." Sterling North

+ Book Week p2 Mr 26 '44 750w

Booklist 40:267 Ap 1 '44

Bookmark 5:13 My '44

Canadian Forum 24:118 Ag '44 490w

"The narrative contains a few of the almost inevitable slips. . . Such petty errors are worth recording only in a professional magazine like this and detract nothing from the value and interest of the book which is well written and brings the story of French, British, American, and Canadian interests in the lake together into a neat volume." W. B. Kerr

+ — Canadian Hist R 25:436 D '44 490w

"This 'nursery for sailors' has produced many good tales of men and ships, of contribution to the nation's growth and prosperity, and this record of the happenings around and upon its waters makes interesting regional reading."

+ Kirkus 12:35 Ja 15 '44 120w

"In most libraries this book will be placed in the adult collection but Junior and Senior High Schools would do well to place it on their shelves." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 69:356 Ap 15 '44 90w

" 'Lake Huron' is the first volume in 'The American Lakes Series,' edited by Milo M. Quaife. Fred Landon has provided his successors with a model which will cost them blood, sweat and tears to equal. One wishes one knew half as much about any quarter of a comparable area of the earth as this author does about his region. Yet Mr. Landon might have given us more of the sporting life of the lake. . . Evidently it is the plan of the series, too, to exclude a full account of the natural life and of the geological history. The latter exclusion is especially to be lamented." Oscar Cargill

+ — N Y Times p7 Mr 26 '44 1050w

"If Mr. Quaife's series is maintained at this level it will constitute a notable achievement. It would be easy, of course, to find fault with this volume for what it omits; it might contain more about geology, about mining, and lumbering (though they are not neglected), about certain shore industries, and about flora and fauna. But the editor and author have on the whole chosen with a wise eye to what is both interesting and significant; and the result charms while it instructs, and will be valued by lay readers and scholars alike." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 27:68 Ap 15 '44 850w

"Landon maintains an excellent balance between Canada and the United States. His editorial judgment is sound, he writes well, and he has produced a book about which one can make only a single complaint, that it is somehow rather dull. I find it hard to say why. There is, to begin with, an irritating repetitiousness. . . More serious is the scarcity of narrative. . . The result is a pleasant antiquarianism which muffs a good many opportunities." Bernard DeVoto

+ — Weekly Book Review p3 Ap 9 '44 850w

Wis Lib Bul 40:69 My '44

LANDON, MRS MARGARET DOROTHEA (MORTENSON). Anna and the King of Siam; il. by Margaret Ayer. 391p map $3.75 Day

915.93 Thailand—Social life and customs. Leonowens, Mrs Anna Harriette (Crawford). Mongkut, king of Siam 44-40148

Anna Leonowens was a young Welsh widow, who in 1862 was hired by the King of Siam to teach English to his many children. For five years she struggled thru her difficult task, doing her best to inculcate some learning and Western ideals into the children and some of the king's concubines. At the same time she acted as part-time secretary to the king, until the climate and the uncertainties of life at the court broke her health, and she went back home. The book has been pieced together from two of Anna's own books, long out of print: The English Governess at the Siamese Court; and The Romance of the Harem; and from letters and documents.

LANDON, M. D.—Continued

"This is an enchanting book. The author wears her scholarship with grace, and the amazing story she has to tell is recounted with humor and understanding. And what a story it is! Not fiction, but skillful documented biography." Katharine Sansom
+ Atlantic 174:141 D '44 600w

"This book is a natural, drawing upon the richest vein of untapped material discovered in years. The author's prose lacks professional polish but the acts of Anna Leonowens' life are sufficiently fascinating to camouflage this lack. Don't miss 'Anna and the King of Siam'—caviar to the caliph." Sterling North
+ Book Week p2 Jl 2 '44 600w
Booklist 40:376 Jl 1 '44

"This magnificent story of real reform and how it comes about, set in the damp, lush, tropical scene, transforms the author's style. She has a thrilling tale to tell of what real power is: the king's absolute power, the power of Anna herself, the power of women." E. L. Keyes
+ Commonweal 40:331 Jl 21 '44 280w
Kirkus 12:241 Je 1 '44 170w
Nation 159:277 S 2 '44 270w

"The style is the least likable feature of what is nevertheless a remarkable book. . . The clumsy title might well serve as a sample of the style. . . It is as if a rather obese novel of total recall had been imposed upon the more athletic skeleton of a good biography. In her anxiety to record Mrs. Leonowens' every reaction the author loses her sense of proportion and the story tends to clog with detail. The story, however, is magnificent and the book is 90-percent sheer relief in this desperate season." Ralph Bates
+ — New Repub 111:82 Jl 17 '44 300w

"A biography of unusual charm, an inviting escape into an unfamiliar, exotic past. Mrs. Landon's style is one calculated to transport us instantly to the days when women flushed and paled violently, brushed away a tear or replied with hauteur to the impertinences of strangers. . . Had Anna not been a woman of sensibility, her invasion of an oriental harem might provide sheer comedy. As it is, the fascination of the story lies in the contrast between a splendid Schéhérazade background and the tidy-minded Victorian lady period-piece. Seen through Anna's incredulous, indignant eyes, the suppressed inner life of the harem, the unspeakable cruelties, the lusts and the brazen color come to us as perpetual astonishment." Isabelle Mallet
+ N Y Times p3 Jl 9 '44 600w

"Mrs Landon has a gift for amassing the gestures, the poses of a figure, the sounds of voices which make a panorama of magnitude live. If, at times, the slim figure of Anna Leonowens seems a little rigid as she moves between these flashing, colorful folk, we need only remember her constant need for courage and the strong sense of duty which give her steel when it is necessary. Something new in the world of fiction and certainly much too warm to belong wholly to the world of documentation. 'Anna and the King of Siam' will make good reading for readers of many tastes." E. M. B.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 2 '44 800w
Time 44:102 Jl 10 '44 750w

"I can imagine no one else, unless it might be E. M. Forster, who could have done so grateful a narrative, nor added so much sparkling wit to highlight a humorless heroine. . . I cannot now remember any other book, unless the 'Tale of Genji,' where the narrative is so even, the transport to another scene, alien in time and place, so absorbing. Mrs. Landon never lags in her descriptions of scene or ceremonial, for they are never purely descriptive but integral parts of the drama, or necessary background for the Oriental characters that we, too, seem to become more and more intimate with, whether we understand their tempers or not. We follow their fates with much of Anna's emotion in our anxiety now and then, at least, to see tyranny the loser." Ernestine Evans
+ Weekly Book Review p1 Jl 2 '44 1650w
Wis Lib Bul 40:128 O '44

LANDS and peoples; the world in color; ed.-in-chief, Gladys D. Clewell. 7v il maps $49.50 Grolier soc.
910 Voyages and travels—Pictorial works
43-14724

"This is a revised edition of Lands and Peoples. The original edition, published in 1929-30, was reviewed in the October 1930 Subscription Books Bulletin [Book Review Digest, 1934]; the 1938 edition in the October 1939 issue [Book Review Digest, 1939]. . . Scope, arrangement and format remain unchanged. The seven volumes are planned to bring contiguous countries together. Arrangement is as follows: Vol. I, British Isles and Western Europe; Vol. II, Baltic States and Central Europe; Vol. III, The Near and the Middle East; Vol. IV, Southern Asia and the Far East; Vol. V, Africa, Australia and the Southern Islands; Vol. VI, Canada and the United States; Vol. VII, Latin America and General Articles." Subscription Bks Bul

"The articles are written in a clear narrative style, simple enough to be within the comprehension of the average sixth grade child and yet suitable for use by adults as well. With few exceptions, articles are unsigned. The 1943 edition can in no way be considered a thorough revision. The total number of pages remains the same, which means that any changes made in either text or illustration have been effected by deleting material already on the page. . . Revision of the 1943 edition of Lands and Peoples has not been extensive enough to warrant its purchase if the 1938 edition is still on hand. Prospective purchasers of the new edition should keep in mind that the great bulk of the material in these volumes still dates back to the 1929-1930 edition. The set still has some value because of the background it gives of customs and folkways and because of the many illustrations of native costumes. It is recommended only if this is the type of material desired, not as an up-to-date treatise of lands and peoples of the world today."
— + Subscription Bks Bul 15:49 O '44 1000w

LANE, CARL DANIEL. American paddle steamboats. 250p il $6 Coward-McCann
623.824 Steamboats 43-18567

Records in picture and text the story of paddle steamboats in America, and their importance in nineteenth century transportation. The first section of the book contains the history of paddle boats in the East, Middle West, and Far West. The second has plates of individual boats and facsimiles of advertising broadsides. Index.

"There is a place on the lists for a really complete volume on steamboating—at least as complete as one good solid set of covers can reasonably contain, but Lane's current book scarcely provides a satisfactory outline of what might be done by a steamboat historian with adequate patience and ability. It is my opinion that Lane, on the basis of previous performance, has the ability but in this instance certainly not the patience and fortitude." Harold Sinclair
— + Book Week p4 Ja 2 '44 400w
Booklist 40:178 Ja 15 '44
N Y New Tech Bks 29:12 Ja '44

"The present volume is a worthy tribute to an important subject. One is tempted to speak first of the format, for the book is a triumph of arrangement, a truly efficient job. Intended to be primarily a pictorial volume, the balance between pictures and text has been preserved to the readers full satisfaction." Lincoln Colcord

+ Weekly Book Review p9 Ap 23 '44 1000w

LANE, KENNETH WESTMACOTT (KEITH WEST, pseud). Winter Cherry; a novel of the T'ang dynasty [Eng title: Ma Wei slope]. 217p $2 Macmillan [7s 6d Cresset]
44-8404

Romantic tale of life in China during the eighth century. Winter Cherry, a reluctant mistress of the Emperor, is the central character. Her adventures include an escape from the court disguised as a boy, a return to the Emperor's entourage, and a later marriage with the man of her choice.

"The exotic material and humorous succinct style make this book as delightful and entertaining as chop suey is to Americans, but just as chop suey is not an authentic Chinese food, neither is 'Winter Cherry' an authentic Chinese novel." Ssu-yu Teng
+ — Book Week p12 O 29 '44 200w

"The story is told with deft charm and wit. The atmosphere is enhanced by provocative verses, translated freely from the Chinese or improvised by the author. Often one is tantalized by the uncertainty as to whether Li T'ai-po is quoting himself or the lines Mr. West has attributed to him. A novel obviously transcends the factual, yet it would have been interesting to have made the differentiation."
+ Cath World 160:378 Ja '45 180w

Christian Century 61:1354 N 22 '44 220w

"Distinctive in the re-creation of 8th century Chinese life and feelings, in style and content, but as a novel it lacks vitality and reading interest for the average reader."
+ — Kirkus 12:351 Ag 15 '44 130w

"The author, an Englishman, must have lived much in China. The 'atmosphere' of the story is quite perfect. However, the purpose of the story seems definitely to divert and furnish 'escape.' For large collections." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 69:883 O 15 '44 70w

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse
Manchester Guardian p3 Je 2 '44 150w

Reviewed by Agnes Smedley
New Repub 111:844 D 18 '44 300w

"Mr. West is a humanist. . . His novel deals with poets and courtiers of the T'ang dynasty, and attempts to deal with them from inside the contemporary Chinese mind. In this, I am assured by an expert, he has failed, although I would never have guessed it on my own. It is even questionable how much it matters. This is not a book which depends primarily on documentary information, or even on the interpretation of a real mentality. It is a fascinating book, and, whether authentic or not, the attitude is fresh and pleasing." Philip Toynbee
+ New Statesman & Nation 28:13 Jl 1 '44 420w

Reviewed by Marguerite Young
N Y Times p4 N 19 '44 440w

Reviewed by Emily Hahn
Sat R of Lit 27:13 D 16 '44 700w

"Mr. West tells his story with a great deal of charm and skill, but perhaps the end is weakened by the tying of too many small neat bows." John Hampson
+ — Spec 172:556 Je 16 '44 420w

"It is a book difficult to place. The characters of the old grandfather and of the two 'girls' are life size; some of the others are as mannered as if they were drawn on silk. There is charm in such a presentation, but there is also an artificiality which disengages the emotions and restricts its appeal."
Times [London] Lit Sup p297 Je 17 '44 300w

"There are a few amusing but rather minor flaws in this book which are particularly noticeable to a Chinese reader. . . However, the book succeeds in taking the reader to a totally strange but enchanting world. Many of the stories are colorful and occasionally spectacular. American readers will surely find them interesting." Helena Kuo
+ — Weekly Book Review p10 O 29 '44 750w

"Winter Cherry is witty and intellectually intriguing without making any pretense towards emotional power or dramatic force." Orville Prescott
+ Yale R n s 34:384 winter '45 130w

LANE, MARGARET (MRS BRYAN EDGAR WALLACE). Where Helen lies. 275p $2.50 Duell [9s 6d Heinemann]
44-9238

Novel "about an unsuccessful marriage in a moderately rich and cultivated corner of English society and about a love affair outside marriage and away from a moneyed atmosphere and almost beyond England which was successfully resumed after it had been shipwrecked ten years earlier. The time is a few weeks before the outbreak of war in 1939, and for her climax Miss Lane, as it happens, makes wholly fortuitous use of the circumstances of evacuation and railway travel in the last day or two of peace." Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by Dorothy Sparks
Book Week p6 N 26 '44 400w

"An accomplished English first, for lightly serious tastes, in a story of marriage, and love outside of marriage, with a finesse of detail and dialogue to satisfy the fastidious."
+ Kirkus 12:328 Ag 1 '44 170w

"Though it is inclined to be both lachrymose and spun out, Where Helen Lies is a persuasive story of haunting by an old love, frustrated at the time by outside interference. Charles, the victim of the haunting, is rather a weakling, but there are some amusing minor characters." Charles Marriott
+ — Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 18 '44 50w

"Miss Lane's novel is the account of a seemingly happily married man who suddenly decides to return to an earlier love; its story is clearly slight. But the idea that started Miss Lane's book is rather beside the point of a novel whose merit is a matter of quiet literacy and of a retiring but never-failing good sense." Diana Trilling
+ — Nation 159:696 D 2 '44 290w

Reviewed by James Pope-Hennessy
New Statesman & Nation 28:306 N 4 '44 260w

"Miss Lane's style is cultivated and graceful and she handles her not in the least impressive characters with that cool, mannerly detachment at which the English are often so good."
+ New Yorker 20:82 N 4 '44 150w

"Miss Lane is observant, precise, truthful, delicate of touch, and resolute to keep the atmosphere of her story in tone with the characters from which it arises. There are no fireworks, and there is no heavy weather; Miss Lane takes her characters realistically, as she believes their class and habit have made them, and without apologising or making any great claim for them, brings us as near as she can to their private relationships, their anxieties, vanities, cruelties and mistakes; she shows their busy preoccupation with personal happiness, and how they muff it, and yet keep it for ever in chase." Kate O'Brien
+ Spec 173:156 Ag 18 '44 500w

"Miss Margaret Lane's novel has no profound theme and exhibits no special subtlety of design, but it is full of clever and relentless observation of people and manners that is much to be admired."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p401 Ag 19 '44 1000w

"Here and there, the book is dotted with scenes and reflections which do much to enrich, with their sensitive perceptivity, what is otherwise a deft, neatly put together, but too familiar variation on an age-old theme." Virginia Sapieha
+ — Weekly Book Review p10 N 5 '44 700w

LANE, ROBERT HILL. Principal in the modern elementary school. 313p il $2.50 Houghton

372 School superintendents and principals. Education of children 44-8838

"This is the concluding volume in a series of three books on the modern elementary school in the United States. The Progressive Elementary School [Book Review Digest, 1939] presented the basic philosophy of progressive education; The Teacher in the Modern Elementary School [Book Review Digest, 1941] discussed modern classroom procedures; and the present volume gives an overview of the modern school from the standpoint of the principal." Foreword

"It is the opinion of the reviewer that chapter iv, 'The Principal as Architect and Builder,' bears little relation to the rest of the book. . . It is in the discussion of the duties of the elementary-school principal as the manager of the direction of learning that the author makes this book a really valuable contribution to educational literature. . . The author is not an exponent of the most progressive of current school practices, but he recognizes the influence that the more progressive theories have had on traditional school practices. The book will be of great assistance to those principals who would like to incorporate some of these more modern practices into their schools." M. L. Berge

+ — El School J 45:238 D '44 550w

School & Society 60:256 O 14 '44 60w

LANGE, NORBERT ADOLPH, and FORKER, GORDON M., eds. Handbook of chemistry; a reference volume for all requiring ready access to chemical and physical data used in laboratory work and manufacturing; with an appendix of mathematical tables and formulas by Richard Stevens Burington. 5th ed rev and enl $6 Handbook pubs, inc, Sandusky, Ohio

660.8 Chemistry, Technical—Tables, etc. Mathematics—Tables, etc. 44-3478

"The most important change in the new edition is the complete revision of the table of physical constants of organic compounds. The table has been increased to include 6,507 compounds, with a corresponding list of more than 3,500 synonyms. Twelve other tables have been extended and rewritten. The format is exactly the same as the other editions although the prefaces to the second, third, and fourth editions have not been included in the present offering. There has been an increase in the number of people who have assisted in the work, and the number of pages has been increased by 70 odd." (Chem & Eng N) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1935.

"This excellent handbook, a relative newcomer in the field, has proved very popular with users, as is attested by the need for a fifth edition within ten years from the date of the first." A. D. Bliss

+ Am Chem Soc J 66:1423 Ag '44 110w

Chem & Eng N 22:846 My 25 '44 180w

"In the brief span of 10 years that Lange's Handbook has been available, it has earned for itself a well-deserved place on many a bookshelf of technical references. The fourth revision makes it even more valuable for chemists and chemical engineers."

+ Chem & Met Eng 51:187 Ag '44 140w

"The editor has had the assistance of a number of capable educators and technical men in preparing the handbook. All are to be congratulated on the results of their work. The fifth edition, like earlier editions, has made available a mass of valuable material for the technical library." H. H. Barber and H. F. Scobie

+ J Phys Chem 48:308 S '44 350w

Library J 69:463 My 15 '44 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:41 Jl '44

LANGEWIESCHE-BRANDT, WOLFGANG ERNST. Stick and rudder; an explanation of the art of flying; special appendix on The dangers of the air, by Leighton Collins; il. by Jo Kotula. (Whittlesey house pulbication) 389p $3.75 McGraw

629.13252 Airplanes—Piloting 44-3302

Detailed analysis of flying a plane, for the student flyer or for those who will be owning and flying their own planes after the war. The main divisions of the book are: Wings; Some air sense; The controls; The basic maneuvers; Getting down; The dangers of the air; Some more air sense. Index.

"It is a substantial contribution to the bibliography of flying and is of benefit particularly to those part-time fliers who do not have the chance to acquire the extensive experience which Langewiesche has drawn upon." W. F. Morse

+ Book Week p11 Ap 23 '44 250w

Booklist 40:313 My 15 '44

"The air-minded layman may find this worthwhile reading, for the illusions it shatters and the novelty of the approach to the hows and whys of flying. Primarily, the market is for the prospective flier, for the student, even for the teacher who needs to dust the cobwebs out."

Kirkus 11:565 D 15 '43 120w

Library J 69:32 Ja 1 '44 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:3 Ja '44

"This is an exciting book to anyone interested in flying. It turns most preconceived ideas of flight upside down or puts them in a spin. It is 'agin' common sense and yet it is fundamentally based on common sense. It makes the embryo pilot gasp a bit and realize how little he knows of the principles of flight; and to the man who doesn't fly, but thinks he knows something about it, it presents fascinating mental gymnastics. For if you have the stamina to follow Mr. Langewiesche, and the imagination to do what he does in an airplane, you will learn a lot of things you didn't even guess. It's fun." Russell Owen

+ N Y Times p12 My 28 '44 650w

LANGLEY, DOROTHY. Wait for Mrs Willard. 196p $2 Simon & Schuster

44-2602

After eighteen years of unhappy married life Mrs Willard makes a desperate effort to run away and is caught in a bus accident. Recuperating afterwards in a summer resort near Chicago she finally discovers a surer means of escape.

"Dorothy Langley has given us real warmth without the usual stickiness, for which she has my honest thanks." Bucklin Moon

+ Book Week p3 Mr 26 '44 290w

Booklist 40:284 Ap 15 '44

Reviewed by Dorothy Hillyer

Boston Globe p15 Mr 29 '44 300w

"A delicate, penetrative piece of work with incident and character interacting to fine drawn narration, this is a first novel for discerning readers."

+ Kirkus 11:559 D 15 '43 140w

"The book is several cuts above most women's magazine stories—well written, humorous, with a refreshing slant on an old problem. Mrs. Willard is a charmingly innocent, gentle, yet strong-willed woman whom it's very easy to like. Lastly, her husband Charles is so excessively unpleasant a character that no man on earth will see the slightest ground for self-identification." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p20 Mr 26 '44 360w

"Much as you may be against whimsy, you will probably wish that the author had succeeded in creating in her heroine the whimsical character she is meant to be."

New Yorker 20:97 Mr 25 '44 90w

"One wishes the author had avoided a certain stiltedness in spots, and she might have found a better way of referring to her heroine than by the constant use of her marital title, but at the end of the book it is plain that Mrs

Willard herself will shortly take a hand in the matter." Eleanor Maridin
Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 16 '44 300w

"Miss Langley is as able in her secondary portraits as she is in her major ones. Charles is in excellent company with Aunt Gertrude and Miss Mothershead, the two women who reflect his own good opinion of himself; Mrs. Willard, on her side, finds joyous kinship with Virginia Teagarden and Alec Maclane, two people who know how to make their own rules of conduct. She is equally effective in portraying the two children, capturing the feeling of their development from unquestioning faith to intelligent adolescence. The story moves toward its satisfactory ending with an easy, inviting pace. One closes the book with cheers for Mrs. Willard." Rose Feld
+ Weekly Book Review p4 Ap 2 '44 650w

LANKS, HERBERT CHARLES. Highway to Alaska; photographs by the author. 200p $5 Appleton-Century

917.98 Alaska highway 44-9983

Record of a twelve thousand mile journey by army jeep with trailer, over the new Alaska Highway. The trip was made in the summer of 1943, before the road was completed, and the object was to record something of this great engineering feat and the country thru which it passes in photographs. The book is lavishly illustrated. Index.

Reviewed by Sterling North
Book Week p2 N 26 '44 550w
Booklist 41:122 D 15 '44
Kirkus 12:361 Ag 15 '44 130w

"Few roads in recent history have fired our imaginations as much as the building of the Alaska Highway has done. Yet it is hard to make a book about a road become excitingly alive. Perhaps it is because impressions on a road are swift and superficial, conditioned by the speed of the car. Mr. Lanks has produced a pleasant travelogue of his journey down the road, a journey which appears to have been, in part at least, a publicity and good-will trip for the jeep manufacturers." Ruth Gruber
Weekly Book Review p6 D 17 '44 800w

LANSING, MRS ELISABETH (HUBBARD) (MARTHA JOHNSON, pseud.) Ann Bartlett in the south Pacific. 202p $2 Crowell
44-5769

The heroine of Ann Bartlett at Bataan (Book Review Digest, 1943) has further adventures in this story of the courageous navy nurse. First Ann is stationed at a base hospital in Sydney, Australia, but she is anxious to go to the front, and finally succeeds in getting there. For teen-age girls.

Kirkus 12:279 Je 15 '44 130w

"Its war background is partially authentic, and definitely realistic. Readable, it is up to the minute and of current interest. A good buy for libraries." Nell Barnaby
+ Library J 69:654 Ag '44 40w

"Teen-age girls will find this book even more interesting than the preceding ones, for Ann's romance with Bruce Mitchell, the navy flier stationed in Guadalcanal, runs into complications."
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 6 '44 140w

LANSING, MRS ELISABETH (HUBBARD) (MARTHA JOHNSON, pseud). Nancy Naylor, flight nurse. 167p $2 Crowell 44-9703

Story of an airline stewardess who took up nursing and saw service in the battles of North Africa, Sicily and Italy. For older girls.

Kirkus 12:434 S 15 '44 120w

"Will be in popular demand with the many girls who desire stories of nurses. Slight romance will appeal to older readers. Recommended for this type of story." A. M. Wetherell
+ Library J 69:1106 D 15 '44 70w
School & Society 60:320 N 11 '44 30w

LANZ, JOHN E. Aviation dictionary in nine languages: English, French, Russian, Spanish, Italian, Chinese, Portuguese, German, Japanese; contributing ed, H. N. von Koerber. 430p $6.50 P. D. & Ione Perkins, box 167, S Pasadena, Calif.

629.13 Aeronautics—Dictionaries 44-6616

"Dictionary covers all phases of aviation. Arranged in columns, first in simple technical English, then their equivalent in the eight other languages. Chinese and Japanese translated into the Latin alphabet. Pronouncing guide, charts and graphs. For reference in aviation and industry." Library J

Library J 70:34 Ja 1 '45 50w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:43 Jl '44

"The 'Aviation Dictionary' will fill a real need." James Stokley
+ Weekly Book Review p19 Ag 13 '44 70w

LAO TZU. Way of life according to Laotzu; an American version by Witter Bynner. 76p $1 Day

299.5 Philosophy, Chinese 44-47243

"An attempt at a fluent, simple expression in English of the writings of the Chinese philosopher, contemporary of Confucius. Not newly translated but based on various English versions. [Mr Bynner] has lived in China and worked on other translations from the Chinese." Booklist

Booklist 41:133 Ja 1 '45

"These are the poems of a poet who distrusted language. They suggest more nearly a rugged New England farm and a Robert-Frostian farmer to whom the core of life is something more than a polite fiction, to whom all truth is accessible, for whom the inner eye is more powerful than the outer. The great concern is man as man." Marguerite Young
+ N Y Times p37 N 26 '44 320w

"A fresh simplicity and humane common sense prevail here, as they are said to prevail in the original, and the poems provide a delightful coolness for our present discordant times."
+ New Yorker 20:96 N 18 '44 70w

LARIAR, LAWRENCE, ed. Best cartoons of the year 1944. 128p $2 Crown

741.5 Caricatures and cartoons

"Being a selection, by the cartoonists themselves, of the best cartoons they drew for Collier's, The New Yorker, The Saturday Evening Post, Liberty, This Week, Yank, The American Magazine, Parade, Argosy, P.M., and many others." Subtitle

Booklist 41:55 O 15 '44
Reviewed by Isabelle Mallet
N Y Times p7 S 24 '44 40w
Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p5 D 3 '44 30w

LARIAR, LAWRENCE. Man with the lumpy nose. 224p il $2 Dodd 44-3411

Detective story.

"In this age of specialization the ability of Cartoonist Lawrence Lariar to write a top-notch mystery is something worth mentioning —but more important is the fact that 'The Man with the Lumpy Nose' would rank high regardless of its author's extra-literary activities." Elizabeth Bullock
+ Book Week p8 Ap 9 '44 180w
Booklist 40:342 Je 1 '44

"Just fair."
Boston Globe p17 My 10 '44 40w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p12 Ap 16 '44 80w

"Very uneven mystery."
New Yorker 20:84 Ap 1 '44 90w

"Good."
+ Sat R of Lit 27:26 Ap 1 '44 40w

LARIAR, LAWRENCE—Continued
Reviewed by Baron Ireland
Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 16 '44 210w
Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p19 Ap 2 '44 100w

LAROCHE, K. ALISON. Dear dead professor. 253p $2 Phoenix
Detective story.

"The moral, if any, is that girls' colleges should be more careful in their choice of professors. The story needs a moral, too, for it hasn't much of anything else to recommend it." Isaac Anderson
— N Y Times p14 D 31 '44 100w
Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p18 Ja 14 '45 80w

LASHER, MARY HARMON. Logging chance; il. by Hamilton Greene. 245p $2 Winston 44-5101

Bob Lodell, whose father had gone bankrupt in the lumber business, decided to try his luck in a Northwestern logging camp. He carried on against heavy odds; he was demoted from fire warden to cook; he worked under tension like the older men; he learned what a difficult job it could be to work in a dishonestly run camp. But he persisted in his job, solved a mystery, and learned to be a logger. For older boys.

Booklist 41:79 N 1 '44
Kirkus 12:279 Je 15 '44 80w

"Author does not glorify the industry. He gives information on dangers, unpleasantness and rewards of this service. Characters are natural. An absorbing story in which the author attempts to show that a career can be real adventure. Good format. . . Recommended." A. H. McGinity
+ Library J 69:608 Jl '44 100w

"[There is] a mystery which keeps the story moving at a good clip, but the heart of the book is the description of the logging industry itself, its tough, hard-working men, in the challenge of its greatness, and in its problems of conservation, all set down with a vigorous sense of reality." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p20 Ag 13 '44 140w

LASKER, BRUNO. Peoples of southeast Asia; prepared under the auspices of the Am. council of the Inst. of Pacific relations. 288p il $3 Knopf
915.9 East (Far East). World war, 1939— East (Far East) 43-877

Discussion of the economic and social conditions of the Malays, Filipinos and Indonesians in the past and the part they will play in post-war Reconstruction.

Reviewed by L. A. Mills
Am Hist R 49:793 Jl '44 240w
Booklist 40:233 Mr 1 '44
Current Hist 6:355 Ap '44 100w
Kirkus 12:52 F 1 '44 200w

"An interesting if not always strictly relevant discussion, against a background of solid yet insecurely organized knowledge concerning mores, techniques and cultures, of the problems which the liberation of Southeast Asia will raise for us."
+ — New Repub 110:326 Mr 6 '44 180w
Reviewed by Nathaniel Peffer
N Y Times p8 Mr 19 '44 600w
Reviewed by Rupert Emerson
Pacific Affairs 17:240 Je '44 280w

"Bruno Lasker is to be commended for the high purpose that animated him in writing this volume. . . His motive is noble and it is unfortunate that he fails to live up to it in his approach to his subject." C. P. Romulo
— + Sat R of Lit 27:11 Mr 4 '44 900w

"A wise book, a sensible book, positing no program, expecting no utopia, yet opening doors to better, happier days for the teeming Southeast Asiatic-Indonesian folk within 'the world made one,' in the era which lies ahead." E. S. C. Handy
+ Social Forces 23:111 O '44 1100w

"Mr. Lasker has made a real contribution to knowledge about the peoples of Southeast Asia and has offered constructive suggestions as to their future development." V. T. Adloff
+ Survey G 33:330 Jl '44 360w
Times [London] Lit Sup p14 Ja 13 '45 550w

"This is a highly useful addition to the long list of excellent books sponsored by the Institute of Pacific Relations. It is not, however, intended as a research book for those already familiar with the peoples of Southeast Asia, but as an interestingly written popular 'guide to the minds and ways of life of the Malays, Indonesians, Filipinos, and other peoples of the Asiatic tropics who look to our help in their deliverance from the Japanese yoke.' As such it is to be particularly recommended for reading by members of the armed forces, as well as by the general public." Nym Wales
+ Weekly Book Review p10 Mr 19 '44 480w

LASKI, HAROLD JOSEPH. Faith, reason and civilization; an essay in historical analysis. 187p $2.50 Viking [6s Gollancz]
261 Civilization, Christian. Sociology, Christian. Communism—Russia 44-5077

"Stern warning to democratic nations and a strident call for revaluation of current values. Laski warns of dangers inherent in an 'acquisitive society.' Treats firmly with most controversial subjects of the day and starkly predicts a war-wracked future unless we follow this revaluation with definite action. Hope must exist for the many and not be limited to the few. Without this spreading hope the peace for which we and our allies fight, will end in even greater chaos. Laski claims that hope, a necessary basis for any faith, is more widely distributed among Russians than other allied nations. Predicts that the future belongs to socialism and lashes out at what he calls failures of organized religions and acquisitive elements in our society." Library J

Reviewed by F. G. Wilson
Am Pol Sci R 38:1224 D '44 600w
Reviewed by A. O. Sarkissian
Ann Am Acad 236:177 N '44 450w
Reviewed by Leo Shapiro
Book Week p6 Je 18 '44 430w
Booklist 40:384 Jl 15 '44
Reviewed by G. M. A. Grube
Canadian Forum 24:115 Ag '44 850w
Commonweal 40:256 Je 30 '44 850w
Foreign Affairs 23:6 O '44 30w
Kirkus 12:163 Ap 1 '44 190w

"Book should arouse spirited comment from professional critic and lay reader, but its serious discussion of the present crisis in civilization definitely recommends it as a necessary addition to the controversial literature of our time." J. H. Berthel
Library J 69:501 Je 1 '44 150w

"Stimulating, even if one does not agree with its main thesis." J. P. M.
+ — Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 31 '44 250w
Reviewed by Reinhold Niebuhr
Nation 158:710 Je 17 '44 1050w
Reviewed by H. W. Ehrmann
New Repub 111:140 Jl 31 '44 480w

"His thesis is sustained with his accustomed eloquence and vitality. His writing is unequal; there are passages where the eloquence comes dangerously near to rhetoric. But he has written nothing more challenging than the chapter on 'The Source of the New Values' in which he discusses some of the intellectual leaders of the present day, and urges that they have failed their generation because of their inability to face the implications of the failure of Capitalism and the alternative of Socialism." Kingsley Martin
+ — New Statesman & Nation 27:192 Mr 18 '44 1000w

"Mr. Laski's controversial technique is to keep repeating stock phrases, calling capitalism by bad names and covering communism with eulogies. He begins by begging all the principal questions at issue; and it is not difficult, when one does this, to proceed to mow down opponents by a facile logic. For if democratic capitalism is all the vile things that Mr. Laski says it is, and if communism is the only hope for the world, and if both these facts are obvious to any honest mind . . . then it is no trick at all to advance to the triumphant conclusion that any writer who defends capitalism, who fails to embrace communism, or even who merely fails to take sides, is either a hopeless dunce or a deliberate traitor to humanity." Henry Hazlitt
— N Y Times p1 Je 11 '44 1450w

"The real failing of his book is not that it is largely the reiteration of the tenets of a dogma as rigid as that of the Pauline and Puritan fathers but that Mr. Laski rarely, if ever, shows any real comprehension of the complexities and subtleties of his subject. He consistently confuses the moral and spiritual values of Christianity, for example, with its various established forms, as represented by the several Christian churches, and finally, after writing a rather old-fashioned attack upon religious faith as being both dangerous and irrational, he proceeds to discover a new faith, or what passes for one, at the heart of 'the Soviet idea.' A somewhat similar confusion has found its way into Mr. Laski's prose."
— + New Yorker 20:78 Je 17 '44 360w

"A socialistic argument that deserves reading for its striking challenge to practicing Christianity is Harold Laski's 'Faith, Reason and Civilization.' It is one-sidedly erudite in church history; this reviewer, at least, felt less confidence in Laski's learning about the history of socialism, communism and the Russian experiment." A. H. Fuller
+ — Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 30 '44 600w

"This book says things about Russia and about vital religion which we need to hear and to get into the fabric of our national attitude toward Russia. Laski may not be the modern Isaiah; but he ranks well up among what, in Biblical parlance, we may call the latter-day minor prophets." Ordway Tead
+ Survey G 33:508 D '44 600w

Time 43:99 Je 19 '44 330w

"The book as a whole suffers from a want of depth. To argue as universally as does Mr. Laski from the particular instance of 1917, thereby ignoring its specifically Russian antecedents, is surely to make a virtue of quite unhistorical thinking."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p134 Mr 18 '44 900w

Reviewed by L. M. Hacker
Weekly Book Review p5 Je 18 '44 1850w

Wis Lib Bul 40:124 O '44

LASSER, JACOB KAY, ed. Handbook of accounting methods. 1349p $10 Van Nostrand
657 Accounting 43-15681

"This volume was prepared to meet the practical needs of public and private accountants, system designers, executives and others interested in accounting procedures. It was conceived to furnish an exhaustive yet practical book and, in an attempt to make it a useful tool, several new approaches to the subject were felt to be essential. The project is a cooperative undertaking, with accounting authorities in some seventy different industries bringing their specialized knowledge to it. The bulk of the book (Section III) consists of a series of articles, each dealing with accounting procedures in a specific industry." Pref.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 68:1006 D 1 '43 70w
Management R 33:68 F '44 40w

LASSWELL, MRS MARY. High time. 174p $2 Houghton
44-8654

Further adventures of the three elderly, beer-drinking ladies who lived together in Mrs Feeley's junk-yard home, the Ark. In this book they find a variety of ways to aid in the war effort, even tho they are not acceptable in the Waves or the Wacs or even an airplane factory.

Reviewed by Sterling North
Book Week p2 O 15 '44 500w
Booklist 41:78 N 1 '44

"It's froth, to be sure, but it's three percent beer underneath. For Mary Lasswell builds her high time on real human verities, courage, good humor, love for one's fellow man, and for one's country. To do the best with what you have and to have high jinks doing it is a familiar maxim." M. W.
+ Boston Globe p17 O 11 '44 250w

Kirkus 12:262 Je 15 '44 170w

"Composed chiefly of red blood, common sense, roistering humor and an infinite capacity for taking beer, her heroines are a personal snub to the tortured little women who move monosyllabically through modern female humor. Secure in their ivory junk heap, they live royally, remote from anxiety neuroses or succès d'estime. Mrs Feeley, the motherly; Miss Tinkham, the genteel, and Mrs. Rasmussen, the passionately creative cook, have an enormous vitality which bursts the seams of conventional attitudes and overflows into whirlwind activity." Isabelle Mallet
+ N Y Times p6 O 29 '44 480w

Springf'd Republican p4d N 5 '44 200w

" 'High Time' spears for laughs with boarding-house reach and is rather dated in some of its home-front activities, but no doubt the return of those three old girls will be widely acclaimed." George Conrad
Weekly Book Review p12 N 5 '44 250w

LATHROP, WEST. Northern trail adventure. 217p $2 Random house
44-5433

Adventures of a man and a boy who form a strange partnership on a trek thru the Canadian Northwest. For older boys.

Booklist 41:44 O 1 '44

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p10 N 30 '44 100w

"Here are the elements for a gripping story of good men and bad, faithful dogs and dangers on the trail, of misunderstandings and tight-lipped courage. For boys and girls who like cold adventure."
+ Horn Bk 20:485 N '44 80w

"Exciting—thrilling—throughout, fine characterizations and excellent descriptions of the northern ranges and the frozen tundras."
+ Kirkus 12:118 Mr 1 '44 150w

"A well-written and entertaining adventure story." A. M. Wetherell
+ Library J 69:764 S 15 '44 70w

"Adventure and mystery keep the story moving at a fast clip and the characters stand out as real people against the grim but curiously compelling setting." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p15 S 24 '44 120w

"This is a pleasant book to read aloud, for though it is simple enough for beginners in reading, Miss Lattimore writes with grace and warmth." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p12 O 15 '44 120w

LATOURETTE, KENNETH SCOTT. History of the expansion of Christianity; 7v; v. 6, The great century in northern Africa and Asia, A.D. 1800-A.D. 1914. 502p maps $4 Harper
270 Church history. Missions (37-20993)

This sixth volume in the history of the expansion of Christianity describes the "Great century" of religion in Northern Africa and Asia, specifically during the years 1800 to 1914. The study is arranged by countries or sections of the continents: The northern shore of Africa and the Near East; India; South-Eastern Asia; The Chinese empire; Japan; Russia in Asia. Bibliography. Index.

LATOURETTE, K. S.—Continued

"The impatient reader may first wish to read the chapter of 'Summary and Anticipation,' where narration is submerged in analyses. Here the work of the six volumes is seen in perspective, and the reader new to the work can in small space find the main threads that he needs to know. His own ideas will be confirmed or challenged. Brevity in itself here gives a fresh point of view. Most amazing of all is the author's mastery of a vast literature in many languages. Citations indicate the immense amount of work he has done for the reader and direct him to the sources. Librarians will find the references in the notes and the bibliography of greatest value. The publisher is to be congratulated, particularly in these times, for the publication of a monumental series of volumes, so important to the humanities, and at such a low cost. The final volume will be eagerly awaited." F. J. Klingberg

+ Am Hist R 50:96 O '44 800w

"As a solid historical foundation for a study of the problems that confront the more-or-less Christian nations in the immediate future, both in the ordering of their own domestic affairs and in contributing to the welfare of the world, Professor Latourette's work has an incalculable value." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 61:435 Ap 5 '44 430w

Reviewed by W. F. Sands

Commonweal 39:627 Ap 7 '44 650w

"The Great Century of Christianity's Expansion, 1800-1914, will be an invaluable source book in missionary information for many years to come." R. E. E. Harkness

+ Crozer Q 21:263 Jl '44 450w

Library J 69:646 Ag '44 30w

"The volume in hand is a 'miracle of condensation,' at points overloaded with detailed statistics. But without these facts and figures, his inferences as to the present and the future, in the final volume of the series, would lack that concrete warrant which we expect from the conscientious historian. This volume, therefore, more than the others which have preceded it, must be regarded as the premise for his concluding reflections upon the prospects of the Christian religion as one of the forces which will shape our future." W. L. Sperry

+ N Y Times p25 Ap 23 '44 800w

"When the project is done, it will stand as a monument to exhaustive scholarship, as a source for all future studies of the first nineteen centuries of Christendom's spread." Frederick Gruin

+ Sat R of Lit 27:20 Ap 8 '44 600w

Wis Lib Bul 40:66 My '44

LATTIMORE, ELEANOR FRANCES. First grade; il. by the author. 147p $1.75 Harcourt 44-7471

Story of David, aged six, and what he did during the year when he was a first-grade pupil.

Booklist 41:27 S '44

"Miss Lattimore writes with sympathetic understanding and it is all fun from David's first lesson in writing . . . to the playtimes by the creek." F. C. Darling

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 28 '44 150w

Kirkus 12:341 Ag 1 '44 110w

"Good child psychology for parents." J. E. Wooster

+ Library J 69:764 S 15 '44 70w

New Yorker 20:89 D 16 '44 30w

"Miss Lattimore's pleasant simple prose, her amusing illustrations, and the appealing boys and girls of whom she writes, make this a book which parents and children alike will enjoy." W. H. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d S 10 '44 70w

"Did you ever cherish a toad and wonder why your elders did not? Did you go crabbing? or have a teacher who put a gold star on the page of your writing book that had no mistakes? It was worth while, wasn't it? That's how this little story makes you feel." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ag 27 '44 250w

Wis Lib Bul 40:132 O '44

LATTIMORE, OWEN, and LATTIMORE, MRS ELEANOR (HOLGATE). Making of modern China; a short history. 212p maps $2.50 Norton

951 China—History 44-2155

A one-volume history of China from prehistoric days to the present. A little more than one half the book is devoted to the centuries before 1900; the last part of the book is given to modern China, the war, and some possible outcomes of the war in the future. Both authors lived for many years in China.

Reviewed by A. W. Hummel

Am Hist R 50:126 O '44 550w

"The volume is of uneven quality. In literary style it is very readable, although here and there it seems to give evidence of haste in composition. The sections on the frontiers are first-class summaries, as one could expect from the author of Inner Asian Frontiers of China. The chapters on the past three decades and the current scene are vivid, even though quite obviously pro-Chinese and written under war conditions. But Part Two, which has about a fourth of the book, contains irritating mistakes of fact which one scarcely expects from so competent a specialist as Owen Lattimore." K. S. Latourette

+ — Ann Am Acad 233:235 My '44 350w

Booklist 40:267 Ap 1 '44

Bookmark 5:13 My '44

"Chinese history was once criticized by an old missionary student as 'remote, monotonous, obscure, and—worst of all—there is too much of it.' Evidently taking heed of these various points, Owen and Eleanor Lattimore have written a book on China which is a history brought close to the ordinary American reader, lively in style, pointed, and (best of all from the view of many!) short." R. G.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 6 '44 550w

"Of recent books about China this probably is the clearest and the best. It is not a war book. The Lattimores have lived for many years in China. They are not constantly surprised by the Chinese. They write as calmly as if they were writing a short history of England. They do not think the Chinese are quaint, and the point of their book is not that the Chinese quite easily could be turned into Americans—or should be. They keep remembering this matter of three thousand years, this Chinese civilization which is over three thousand years old."

+ Commonweal 39:653 Ap 14 '44 600w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 22:667 Jl '44 40w

Reviewed by Lien-Sheng Yang

Geog R 34:690 O '44 300w

"A compact and orderly account of the facts of China's story that, without being superficial, nevertheless presents a clearcut view of that country's long history."

+ Kirkus 11:569 D 15 '43 160w

"Recommended for all types of libraries as authoritative background material on China's significant role in world history and probable place in postwar world." M. J. Messler

+ Library J 69:159 F 15 '44 90w

"Surprisingly enough, it is in the treatment of contemporary China that the book comes nearest to falling short of its objective. This is obviously not due to any lack of knowledge on the part of the authors. The historical sections provide an excellent background for the understanding of the problems of the present. Yet many of these crucial problems are glossed over by sweeping statements such as the following dealing with the totalitarian tendencies in the Kuo-mintang. . . It is easy to understand why Mr. Lattimore should hesitate to criticize China in time of war. But it is unfortunate that this extremely valuable book should be marred by short-range political considerations." M. S. Stewart

+ — Nation 159:164 Ag 5 '44 420w

Reviewed by Ralph Bates
New Repub 110:474 Ap 3 '44 450w

Reviewed by T. F. Tsiang
Pacific Affairs 17:223 Je '44 800w

Reviewed by Nym Wales
Sat R of Lit 27:22 Mr 25 '44 850w

Scientific Bk Club R 15:4 Ap '44 360w

"This volume, unweighted by 'dry reading' historical details, dates and minutiae, answers many questions now uppermost in the minds of Americans. . . 'The Making of Modern China' will appeal to both young and adults because of its general interest—also for its readability." R. S. Scott
+ Springf'd Republican p8 Mr 31 '44 500w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
Survey G 33:362 Ag '44 600w

Reviewed by Rodney Gilbert
Weekly Book Review p4 Mr 12 '44 1300w

Wis Lib Bul 40:69 My '44

LAUNER, JAY. Enemies' fighting ships. 222p il maps $3.75 Sheridan

623.825 Japan—Navy. Germany—Navy
44-3580

"An exhaustive study of the naval strength of Germany and Japan, illustrated with charts, silhouettes, diagrams, and identification tables of all the units of the Axis navies known to be still afloat. There is also a discussion of naval strategy, particularly in relation to our war with Japan, as well as a detailed examination of German U-boat strength and tactics." New Yorker

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:660 Jl '44 20w

"Launer is sound, dependable, and as close to an authority as we have on the subject of our 'enemies' fighting ships'—official estimates of strength, losses, replacements and so on. At this price, this book should be on every naval reference shelf—even those to which the price of Jane's Fighting Ships is prohibitive."
+ Kirkus 12:138 Mr 15 '44 90w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:306 Ap 1 '44 30w

"The 'Navy buff' is a peculiar individual, who pores for hours over the pages of Jane or Fahey. . . The present volume is addressed to these buffs, and to them it will be a wonder and a delight. . . It would be a somewhat better book for readers beyond the buff level if Mr. Launer could guarantee the accuracy of the information he sets down as established fact. . . In short, everything new in the book is confessedly or unconfessedly dubious, and if it were to be of any use at all to the armed services Mr. Launer should have been aware that straight broadside waterline silhouettes are now considered of little value for identification purposes." Fletcher Pratt
N Y Times p21 Ap 2 '44 460w

"The book is primarily intended for specialists and naval addicts, but it is also of value to the ordinary reader."
+ New Yorker 20:83 Ap 1 '44 90w

"By all odds the most and best information now available to the general public on the Japanese and German navies." R. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 9 '44 1000w

LAURENT, CAMILLE JEAN FERNAND-. See Fernand-Laurent, C. J.

LAVERTY, MAURA. No more than human. 249p $2.50 Longmans
44-40203

A sequel to Never No More (Book Review Digest, 1942). In this story Delia Scully, seventeen years old, leaves her home in Ireland and goes to Spain to earn her living as a governess. Unhappy in such work she gets a job as an office worker, has a few love affairs and indulges in a happy-go-lucky life that scandalizes some Spanish conventional families, but eventually she returns home unscathed.

Reviewed by E. J. Cronin
Book Week p6 N 26 '44 270w

Booklist 41:108 D 1 '44

Cath World 160:379 Ja '45 180w

"Miss Laverty has written an amusing account of an international oddity—who had ever dreamed of a little society of Irish spinisters in Spain—with a too pretentious title for a merry tale. Yet the story has undertones which make one wish Delia would return to Madrid in the 1930's." E. V. R. Wyatt
+ Commonweal 41:237 D 15 '44 350w

"Exuberance and humor for recollections of a very different world, perhaps not for wide attention but not without charm."
Kirkus 12:308 Jl 15 '44 130w

"Especially recommended for young people." M. H. Zipprich
+ Library J 69:1000 N 15 '44 70w

"Although this must be classed as a light novel, I must pay a compliment to the author, for both in writing and observation there is a realism and honesty here that give a depth usually lacking in romantic fiction. The author's talent, indeed, seems better than her topic, suggesting that for her next book she ought to tackle something less easily encompassed by her powers." D. C. Russell
+ N Y Times p4 N 19 '44 360w

"Trivia that is not well enough written to be good, even of its kind."
— New Yorker 20:98 N 25 '44 90w

"Miss Laverty has a vivid, amusing and true story to tell; and she tells it with verve and wit, and decorates it with rich detail of everyday life in Madrid and in provincial Spain. But she has not given her tale the deep perspective which the novelist must give; she still stands too near to her central figure; she remembers still rather than imagines." Kate O'Brien
+ — Spec 173:584 D 22 '44 340w

"A story that catches many Spanish tones and is full of Irish charm and fun and of something more. Few among even Irish writers could write with a more taking air of spontaneous ease, a pleasanter flow of quiet humour and warm feminine sentiment; Mrs. Laverty is certainly good light reading all through. Her book, however, has a certain undeveloped quality as a novel and indeed wears an air of reminiscence rather than of fiction—an impression strengthened by the allusion to real names, Spanish and Irish."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p581 D 2 '44 950w

"Episodic rather than dramatic, 'No More Than Human' is rich in observation, in sharply composed character sketches, in charming side glimpses of fetes and street scenes and shops. Delia rhapsodizes over Spanish cooking and needlework, and when she is confronted with things which do not please her, she dismisses them from her mind by remembering that she is Irish and no country is quite as close to paradise as the one she belongs to. Maura Laverty has written a novel deftly suggesting that Spain and Ireland are closer kin than one is apt to think." George Conrad
+ Weekly Book Review p6 D 31 '44 300w

LAWRENCE, ALEXANDER A. James Moore Wayne, Southern Unionist. 250p il $3 Univ. of N.C. press [18s 6d Oxford]

B or 92 Wayne, James Moore 43-15290

Biography of a Georgian aristocrat who played a prominent role in state politics in the early nineteenth century, was sent to Congress, and appointed to the Supreme Court by Jackson. He served as a Justice from 1835 to 1867, retaining his position during the years of secession and Civil war.

"The author evidently does not accept at their face value all the unstinted and uncritical praise so often given to deceased judges in the resolutions of the bar. By reason of its candor, therefore, this book is of value to the student

LAWRENCE, A. A.—Continued
of legal history. And regardless of the exact position to which Wayne's legal abilities may entitle him, there is one feature in his career by which the reader will be attracted—his engaging personality, a feature the value of which, in its marked influence upon the discussions between a justice's associates in the conference room, is often overlooked. The evidently sincere tributes by his contemporaries to his delightful personal qualities, his kindliness and courtesy, and his sense of justice are strong evidence of the effect of his presence on the court and afford a considerable justification for his appointment." Charles Warren
+ Am Hist R 49:753 Jl '44 700w

"Mr. Lawrence has performed an important service in supplementing the history of the Court as well as giving us the story of a gallant and courageous man. Fortunately for the purposes of his book, the author is a member of the bar, and while his study is not in any sense legalistic, it is unusually accurate on legal matters. An interesting bibliographical note is appended, illustrating the difficulties of the portraiture of early American legal figures of the lesser rank."
+ Harvard Law R 57:751 My '44 550w

"Mr. Lawrence has given us an excellent account of Wayne's judicial decisions and his career on the bench, a balanced appraisal of his character and ability, and some colorful vignettes of antebellum Georgia. His book is scholarly and the style is not ungraceful. But it suffers heavily from the fact that nobody has ever succeeded in unearthing the private papers of this 'arch-Unionist among the men of the lower South from 1861 to 1865.' " Virginius Dabney
+ — N Y Times p15 Mr 5 '44 480w

"The liveliest stretch of Supreme Court history belongs to the period when Andrew Jackson's appointees took over the work of interpreting the Constitution. If Alexander A. Lawrence's James Moore Wayne is no great addition to the library of the historian of that period, it is at least an honest job of research in scattered correspondence, personal reminiscence, and public encomium." J. T. Farrell
Pol Sci Q 59:150 Mr '44 600w

LAWRENCE, CATHERINE ANN. Narrowing wind. 214p $2.50 Dodd
44-9744

Story of a red-headed Irish girl who left her family's run-down farm to do war work in a Chicago factory. Her attempts to "beat the rate" brought her trouble; then she lost her boy friend, and her buoyancy left her, until a level-headed young Swede taught her some valuable lessons.

"Miss Lawrence gives us a montage of impressions, but she doesn't hint at a solution; perhaps she thinks there isn't any. In this her book is artistically successful. But it is only negatively a social criticism. A problem can't stand by artistic merit alone. People—even if they are novelists—who pose problems should at least suggest solutions." Edith Roberts
+ — Book Week p26 N 12 '44 400w

"A satisfactory novel for young people in all but the ending, and to this reviewer's mind that was much too abrupt." M. H. Zipprich
+ — Library J 69:883 O 15 '44 70w

"Miss Lawrence's artistry is of a kind not easy to detect. But it is there, sure and strong, and ready to attempt still bigger things." Thomas Sugrue
+ N Y Times p10 N 19 '44 440w

"Although this novel is about the problems and people of the present day, it has a curiously unreal, dreamy quality, which is difficult to understand or define, and which is not, apparently, intentional. . . 'The Narrowing Wind' is not a mature book, [but] it contains much good writing. It is often sharp and perceptive; it is usually tender, and it is sometimes lyric. There is every reason to hope that Miss Lawrence's next book will be much better." Barbara Klaw
+ — Weekly Book Review p6 O 29 '44 600w

LAWRENCE, HILDA. Blood upon the snow. 312p $2 Simon & Schuster 44-6837

Detective story.

"You will not put this one down until you've finished it. The characterization is warm and real, the dialogue superb. Mark my words: Miss Lawrence is going places—if she has not already arrived under another name." Elizabeth Bullock
+ Book Week p6 Ag 20 '44 180w
Booklist 41:90 N 15 '44
Boston Globe p17 S 13 '44 40w
Kirkus 12:240 Je 1 '44 60w
New Repub 11:350 S 18 '44 60w

"Here's horror and mystery served up in writing, rich and smooth as pre-war cream. . . Miss Lawrence creates horror atmosphere with good skill, the hard way, with a light touch that leaves no brush marks. A few snowflakes, the mere suggestion of sinister sound, the barest hint of screaming silence, and the reader's hackles come away from his collar." Meyer Berger
+ N Y Times p4 S 10 '44 480w

"Nice writing, but the plot could be simpler."
+ — New Yorker 20:64 Ag 26 '44 90w

"Good!"
+ Sat R of Lit 27:22 Ag 12 '44

"Big, beautiful snowflakes fall thick and fast in this delightfully cool puzzle, starting with the first line and obliging at times in truly life-saving fashion." Will Cuppy
+ Weekly Book Review p14 Ag 13 '44 150w

LAWRENCE, ROBERT. See Mozart, J. C. W. A. Magic flute; Musorgskii, M. P. Boris Godunoff

LAWSON, PHILIP J. Practical perspective drawing. 215p il $2.75 McGraw 742 Perspective. Drawing 43-14903

"Basic geometrical and optical principles of perspective and applications to practical professional drawing jobs. For students and practicing artists." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 40:230 Mr 1 '44
Library J 68:960 N 15 '43 20w

"The chapter on 'Common Errors' will strike a responsive chord in the hearts of teachers and should be a great aid to the student. The technical student, usually bound by tedious mechanical constructions will find in this text a means of release from these oft times burdensome procedures. The suggestions presented should enable him to give a vigor and spontaneity to his drawings which cannot be attained by mere mechanical precision." R. P. Hoelscher
+ N Y Times p25 My 21 '44 210w

LAWSON, ROBERT. Country colic. 66p il $1.75 Little 817 Country life 44-1684

Beginning with ants, and beetles (Japanese), and continuing thru grills (outdoor), lawns, mortgages, etc. to weeds, week ends and yardmen, the author discourses on the various joys (?) of country life. Z for Zany stands for "one who, despite everything, continues to live in the country and loves it." Illustrated with appropriate drawings by the author.

"This book should be a cure not only for 'Country Colic' but for any other disorders incidental to living in the country. It might even prove efficacious for melancholia, toothache and liver complaint. Lawson's method is to reveal the joys of country life by underlining its sorrows." J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p6 Mr 26 '44 400w
Bookmark 5:10 My '44
Kirkus 12:38 Ja 15 '44 100w

"Here is a book on country living that should be enjoyed by everyone who lives in the country, who has ever lived in the country, who hopes to live in the country or who is determined never to live in the country. Lawson's 'Colic' is contagious, and likely to leave you with pains in both sides and, worse still, a complete unwillingness to refrain from at once returning to the cause of it." F. F. Rockwell

+ N Y Times p15 Ap 9 '44 480w

"If this country were really under a totalitarian (and therefore humorless) regime, 'Country Colic' would be banned pronto as a grave threat to success of the 1944 victory garden program. As it is, a good many Americans will chuckle over it, then sally forth to plant and weed. Later, bone-weary and sunburned, they'll read it again for the amusing commentaries of a fellow sufferer. But at neither reading will Mr Lawson fool them for a minute; they know, and he knows that they know, that he wouldn't leave the joys and perils of Fairfield county." M. H. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 16 '44 460w

Weekly Book Review p6 Mr 26 '44 350w

LAWSON, ROBERT. Rabbit hill. 127p il $2 Viking

44-8234

Hard times had hit all the little animals on Rabbit Hill because the big house had been uninhabited and there was no garden. When the news of "new folks coming" spread there was much speculation as to whether they would be "planting folks." The new folks proved to be just the right kind: they insisted on an extra large garden so there would be plenty for all. So there was great rejoicing among the little creatures. For grades three to six.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p3 N 12 '44 350w

Booklist 41:62 O.15 '44

Boston Globe p36 N 29 '44 50w

"An ingratiating story, kindly, understanding, gay, with beautiful drawings that catch the spirit of the animals."

+ Cath World 160:280 D '44 40w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p10 N 13 '44 180w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 41:128 N 17 '44 20w

Horn Bk 20:487 N '44 120w

"Lawson is difficult to place so far as his juvenile audience is concerned. Frankly, I think he is definitely adult—even in the stories he presumably writes for juniors. This is a somewhat too whimsical story of the animals on Rabbit Hill and their excitement when they learn that 'New Folks' are coming to live in the 'Big House'. . . The Lawson illustrations are sure to capture the hearts of all prospective purchasers—but as a story, it doesn't quite come off."

+ — Kirkus 12:403 S 1 '44 170w

Reviewed by P. D. Edie
Library J 69:866 O 15 '44 210w

"Vast understanding of nature and the habits of small wild creatures went into the making of this book. With a skillful blending of humor and whimsey, Robert Lawson has given a distinct personality to each animal, not only by his exquisitely fine drawings but by word pictures as well. Recommended for every library." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 69:886 O 15 '44 90w

"Robert Lawson, because he loves the Connecticut country and the little animals of field and wood and looks at them with the eye of an artist, a poet and a child, has created for the boy and girl, indeed for the sensitive reader of any age, a whole, fresh, lively, amusing world." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p12 O 15 '44 240w

"The small creatures of the Connecticut countryside who live on Rabbit Hill form one of the most ingratiating communities of animals to appear between covers since the one in 'The Wind in the Willows.' . . The pictures remind one of Ernest Shepard's and of the Uncle Remus illustrations in their humorous, humanizing touches, yet they are pure Lawson in their careful execution and beauty."

+ New Yorker 20:84 D 16 '44 90w

"A friendly, charming tale. . . The drawings are both true and beautiful—perhaps the most beautiful that this artist has made."

+ Sat R of Lit 27:32 N 11 '44 40w

"In these days of comic strips, of even more pretentious and expensive volumes that burlesque the animals and make them ridiculous, this book of Robert Lawson's is as refreshing as a cool wind in a stuffy room. The illustrations alone would make it an unique and authentic record." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 27:32 D 9 '44 650w

"It is always invidious to praise one book in terms of another, and Robert Lawson would be the last to call himself successor of Kenneth Grahame, but he has produced in these pictures—marvelously reproduced—and in the gentle story with which they are entwined, one of the few books that bring to mind 'The Wind in the Willows.' " M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 N 12 '44 420w

LAWSON, VICTOR E. Ranger-commando junior; with special features for rangerettes and commandettes. 294p il $2.50 Enterprise associates, 830 Broadway, N.Y.

796 Sports. Outdoor life. Physical education and training 44-5763

Suggestions and instructions for guiding American boys and girls in a physical and mental self-training course. The instructions are in line with the training for Ranger and Commando troops. The author is a well-known athletic coach. Illustrated. No index.

"American boys should have a wonderful time with this book. Victor Lawson is a well-known swimming and boxing coach and in preparing his text he has stressed physical self-training for young people. Dozens of interesting subjects are covered, with diagrams and illustrations by the score." P. A. Whitney

+ Book Week p11 Jl 30 '44 150w

Kirkus 12:300 Jl 1 '44 110w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 20 '44 160w

LAWTON, GEORGE, ed. New goals for old age. 210p $2.75 Columbia univ. press [22s 6d Oxford]

618.97 Old age. Mental hygiene A44-104

A volume of articles by various writers on the psychological and physiological problems of growing old, and on the care of the aged. Partial contents: Adjustment over the life span, by L. G. Lowrey; Aging mental abilities and their preservation, by George Lawton; Physical changes in old age and their effects upon mental attitudes, by L. F. Barker; Work therapy, interests, and activities, by Edward Hochhauser; The creative urge in older people, by E. T. Hall; Mental diseases of the aged, by S. W. Hartwell. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by A. P. Miles
Am Soc R 9:703 D '44 300w

"Not the least among the contributions of this very valuable book is a rich bibliography of much fleeting material which could hardly be reached in full without its help." Otto Pollak

+ Ann Am Acad 233:252 My '44 380w

"This intelligent discussion will furnish helpful enlightenment to the administrators of institutions for the care of the aged, to employers who have to decide about the retirement of aging workers, to the makers and molders of public policies with respect to old age, to families in which one or more of the older generation are members, and to the old people themselves."

+ Christian Century 61:20 Ja 5 '44 160w

"This little book should interest everyone over sixty, and will bring some encouragement to them in its proof that many of the most important things have been done by men past fifty. And it should interest all who have anything to do with the old, especially pastors

LAWTON, GEORGE—Continued
who have to advise families regarding their treatment of them. It is a series of essays by trained workers who discuss every aspect of the problem, all illustrated by actual experiences." W. L. Caswell
+ Churchman 158:15 F 1 '44 210w

Reviewed by C. O. Houle
J Religion 24:230 Jl '44 150w

Kirkus 11:571 D 15 '43 120w

"The authors, experienced in the field, have written a long-needed book of practical value to social workers, to psychologists and to all who are on the shady side of middle life. Recommended." G. O. Kelley
+ Library J 68:1005 D 1 '43 110w

Reviewed by J. J. Corson
Survey 80:269 S '44 440w

"As most of the contributors take a scientific view, the facts are straight without sentimentality, but the sociologists are sympathetic and the psychologists on the whole reassuring. The most practical parts deal with problems of the family, constant in character but changing in conditions, and the modern form of old folks' home."
+ Weekly Book Review p19 My 7 '44 150w

LAZARSFELD, PAUL FELIX, and STANTON, FRANK NICHOLAS, eds. Radio research, 1942-1943. 599p $5 Essential bks.

791.4 Radio. Radio broadcasting. Radio—Social aspects. Radio in education

"Prepared with the collaboration of Dr. Herta Herzog. Second of the annuals 'to study what radio means in the lives of the listeners.' Latest findings in radio broadcasting and technique of radio in operation, analysis and effect of programs, radio in the war and other timely topics." (Library J) For 1941 volume see Book Review Digest, 1942. Index.

Booklist 40:336 Je 1 '44

Reviewed by Jean C. De Menasce
Commonweal 40:161 Je 2 '44 550w

Kirkus 12:213 My 1 '44 110w

Library J 69:463 My 15 '44 50w

Reviewed by J. K. Hutchens
N Y Times p8 My 28 '44 480w

Scientific Bk Club R 15:4 Je '44 300w

Reviewed by Sigmund Neumann
Yale R n s 34:178 autumn '44 370w

LEADERMAN, HERBERT. Elastic and creep properties of filamentous materials and other high polymers; with a foreword by Harold deWitt Smith. 278p il $2 Textile foundation

677.46 Silk, Artificial. Textile fabrics—Testing 43-16843

"A technical report for specialists concerned with plastic materials and synthetic fibres. Discusses in part I the relationship between 'primary creep' or delay elasticity and the molecular structure of high polymers; and presents in part II data obtained in experimental investigations of the creep properties of filaments of silk, viscose and acetate rayons, and of nylon. Includes a bibliography and index." N Y New Tech Bks

Chem & Eng N 21:2140 D 25 '43 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:10 Ja '44

"The text is well provided throughout with figures and photographs and with many references to other work in the field, the latter collected in the form of an excellent bibliography containing some two hundred items. It contains a minimum of mathematics and a maximum of physical discussion. This book should be of great assistance to those entering the important field of plastics research, as well as to theoretical physicists in providing a concise resumé of empirical facts to be explained by modern theories of the quasi-solid state. It is also of great general value in that it gives a report of many new experimental investigations on well-known modern synthetic textile materials. Although the emphasis is on textile materials, the phenomena in the plastics industry are general. On the whole it is felt that this book fulfills a long-standing need for workers in this important field of industrial research." C. T. Zahn
+ R of Scientific Instruments 15:101 Ap '44 550w

LEAF, MUNRO. Gordon the goat; il. by the author. (Stokes bk) 48p $1 Lippincott 44-9910

Gordon was a Texas goat who followed the lead goat because that was the thing to do. One day Gordon got caught in a Texas twister, and after that he decided to do his own thinking.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p7 D 24 '44 90w

Boston Globe p36 N 29 '44 50w

Kirkus 12:519 N 15 '44 80w

Reviewed by Marian Herr
Library J 70:36 Ja 1 '45 70w

"This delightful story will be readily comprehensible to American children. Perhaps Mr. Leaf would be willing to draw a mustache on the pictures of the lead goat for the benefit of small German children, who might well begin their re-education with this wise and gay little story." Marjorie Fischer
+ N Y Times p6 N 12 '44 80w

"Though Mr. Leaf has not produced another 'Ferdinand,' children will certainly laugh at his pictures of Gordon in a twister."
New Yorker 20:80 D 16 '44 50w

"The pictures are in color, funnier than ever. They are also better drawn. I hope this goes no further, for if Munro Leaf really learns to draw, he may stop making those peerless figures by which he educates our infants in good behavior."
+ Weekly Book Review p39 N 12 '44 250w

LEAF, MUNRO. 3 and 30 watchbirds; a picture book of behavior. (Stokes bk) 37p $1.35 Lippincott

170 Conduct of life—Juvenile literature 44-3062

Brief lessons in manners and ethics set forth in cartoons and paragraphs of description of such horrendous creatures as Braggers, Lumps, Stubborns, Primpers, Wanters, etc.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p9 Mr 5 '44 110w

Kirkus 12:95 F 15 '44 80w

"The interest and timely value to younger children is superb." V. W. Schott
+ Library J 69:264 Mr 15 '44 70w

"Children are fascinated by these unattractive characters and come away from viewing them so virtuously inclined that the local Watchbirds can take it easy for a few days. Long live the Watchbird, we say." W. H. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 5 '44 150w

"As usual, Mr. Leaf's remarks on bad behavior pull no punches. . . Children rightly approve of this downrightness; they don't want you to be tactful in such matters if you mean to get results in short order. Mr. Leaf's books get them, as many mothers know." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p5 Je 11 '44 280w

Wis Lib Bul 40:112 Jl '44

LEAGUE OF NATIONS. Economic, financial and transit department. Transition from war to peace economy; report of the delegation on economic depressions. 2pts pt 1 118p $1.50 pa $1 Columbia univ. press [6s; pa 4s 6d Allen, G]

330.9 Reconstruction (1939-) (44-1179)

"This is Part I of a report of the delegation on economic depressions and is a publication of the economic, financial and transit department of the League of Nations. Both the domestic and the international aspects of postwar economic reconstruction are discussed, and consideration is given to such topics as the control of demand, public works, relief, rationing, and the distribution of raw materials, capital and credit." Christian Century

"Whatever one's reservations, he will find the book instructive and a rich source of broad considerations often overlooked in the discussions of postwar reconversion." R. D. Calkins

+ — Ann Am Acad 230:224 N '43 380w

Christian Century 60:741 Je 23 '43 130w

LEAVELL, STUART, and BUNGAY, STANLEY, eds. Aircraft production standards. 264p il $2; text ed $1.50 McGraw

629.1341 Airplanes—Design and construction 44-7900

"Principal part titles in this manual are: Blueprint reading and production illustration; Materials; Inspection; Assembly and installation methods; Standard parts and design standards; Manufacturers' standards; Reference tables and charts. Under each heading are presented data and illustrations pertaining to aircraft manufacture that will be helpful to aircraft workers. The book will be useful in some libraries as a handy means of identifying and giving the specifications for AN parts and such specialties as Cherry blind rivets and the Dzus cowl fastener." N Y New Tech Bks

Library J 68:670 S 1 '43 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 28:59 O '43

"Altogether this is an admirably brief and complete reference synopsis made to fit into an overall pocket." Theodore English

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 19 '44 60w

LECOMTE, EDWARD SEMPLE. Endymion in England; the literary history of a Greek myth. (King's crown press bk) 189p pa $2.25 Columbia univ. press

820.9 Mythology in literature. Literature, Comparative A44-2193

Traces the Endymion theme in literature from its beginnings in Greek legend, thru the literary treatments of Drayton, Lyly, Keats, and others down to the end of the nineteenth century. The author is an instructor in English in Columbia university. Index.

"This study is exceptionally well written, with humor and insight to balance its weight of scholarship." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 D 24 '44 40w

"Both in intent and in its execution this study deserves respect and confidence—respect, because it undertakes a due share of the increasingly important task of revealing the ties that unite the literatures of so many nations and epochs; confidence, because of the thoroughness with which the material has been extensively explored and evaluated, and, furthermore, alloted due measure of main text and of footnotes and references. The work raises, through a large variety of definite example and discussions, the important as well as interesting question, or doubt, whether a myth or legend foreign to the temper of a people can ever inspire integrity and sincerity of mood and feeling or must perforce remain material for the comparatively superficial treatments of sentiment, satire, or mere affectation." J. C. Scammell

+ Crozer Q 21:368 O '44 250w

LEDERER, VIRGINIA. Married at leisure; drawings by Alajálov. 213p $2 Doubleday 44-8909

Hilarious satire on Hollywood life and loves, dealing with the mishaps and trials of Marilyn Moore, a beautiful divorcée, in her five-years pursuit of Chubby, who is a little too satisfied with "life with grandmother."

"This little volume of frolicsome foolishness in Hollywood is going to sell like hot cakes or I've lost my gift of prophecy. . . Because the misadventurous odyssey to the altar of Boston-born Chubby and Kansas-reared Marilyn is the kind of ephemeral nonsense that strikes responsive vibrations from the American funnybone, book season in, book season out. Oldsters among us who can strain memory back to 'Gentlemen Prefer Blondes' will know very well what I mean." Peter Quinn

+ Book Week p10 O 22 '44 270w

Boston Globe p31 N 29 '44 10w

"A Hollywood screamer, without the grace and facility of Mr. and Mrs. Cugat, that has a laugh or two if you don't mind being prodded."

Kirkus 12:305 Jl 15 '44 150w

"Virginia Lederer applies her screwball touch to the subject of Hollywood, with all the misguided enthusiasm of a man carrying coals to Newcastle. . . Alajalov brings some spirited drawings to the party. Deftly he has contrived to illustrate Miss Lederer's excellent sense of humor, which rises above the dusty props of married flirtation, bogus fame, fake suicide and mild inebriation." Isabelle Mallet

N Y Times p6 O 15 '44 320w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p16 O 15 '44 150w

LEDNICKI, WACLAW. Life and culture of Poland as reflected in Polish literature. 339p $3.50 Roy pubs.

914.38 Polish literature. Poland—Civilization 44-9167

This work is based on lectures given at the Lowell institute in 1943, by the author, a Polish historian of literature now teaching at Harvard. "Lednicki uses Polish literature as mirror which reflects national character, political and religious ideals, social and cultural conditions of his people." (Library J)

Booklist 41:169 F 1 '45

Boston Globe p34 N 29 '44 500w

"Since Dr. Lednicki prepared these studies for the lecture hall, the style is that of the lecturer. The text has both the advantages and deficiencies of the lecture form, one of the deficiencies being the use of words or phrases which are acceptable when spoken but which are not appropriate to the printed page. Nevertheless, here is a definite contribution to scholarship, one which could have been made only by a genuine scholar, which thoughtful readers will find original and illuminating." A. S. C.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 N 11 '44 500w

"In view of our limited knowledge of Poland, this should prove, for scholars of international affairs, a useful book, and authoritative."

+ Kirkus 12:477 O 15 '44 100w

"Book should have fairly wide appeal at present, since it helps toward better understanding of complex Polish problem. Recommended for larger public and college libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 69:761 S 15 '44 70w

Reviewed by Eleanor Kittredge

N Y Times p26 O 22 '44 800w

Reviewed by Jan Karski

Weekly Book Review p5 Ja 28 '45 1600w

LEE, BABS, pseud. See Lee, M. V.

LEE, EDWARD, pseud. See Fouts, E. L.

LEE, MRS MARION (VAN DER VEER) (BABS LEE, pseud), and SAUNDERS, CLARE CASTLER. Measured for murder. 228p $2 Scribner 44-2817

Detective story.

Kirkus 12:30 Ja 15 '44 50w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p9 F 27 '44 100w

" 'Measured for Murder' is for those who like their murders with a lush decor. . . Unfortunately the story suffers from a weak plot, stereotyped characters and attempted witty and risque pleasantries which fall far short of their mark." H. J. S.

LEE, MARION—Continued

— Springf'd Republican p7e F 20 '44 110w

"Four violent deaths and a confession of dubious nature lead to the big surprise. Murder, espionage, burglary and blackmail lend color to a readable narrative." Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p16 Mr 5 '44 200w

LEE, ROBERT EDWIN. Television. 230p $2 Essential bks.

791.4 Television 44-8973

"In popular, journalistic style a radio producer and writer presents an enthusiastic 'study of the people and the machinery and the ideas of television' and 'a plan for assembling them into a working scheme which will mean the most happiness for the greatest number of people.' A simple explanation of how television works precedes a discussion of 'immediacy' in television, the Government's place in the new industry, differences between the motion picture art and television, commercials and television as a force for freedom etc. The reader is also taken on a tour through a television studio during the production of entertainment and news programs." Bookmark

"Fascinating from cover to cover." Rufus Oldenburger

+ Book Week p5 My 28 '44 360w

Bookmark 5:8 My '44

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 69:606 Jl '44 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:33 Ap '44

Scientific Bk Club R 15:3 Ag '44 330w

"Perhaps the most interesting chapter in Television: The Revolutionary Industry is the one which takes the reader inside a mythical television studio to show him, in action, some of the techniques available for televising a story. Here, in an early and imperfect state, are the tools and materials with which television artists of the future will work. It is these tools and materials which will mold the outlines of the newest and most revolutionary art form, for in television there are the makings of an art as well as an industry."

+ Theatre Arts 28:55 S '44 500w

LEECHMAN, JOHN DOUGLAS. Hiker's handbook. 220p $2.50 Norton

796.51 Walking 44-2903

Gives practical advice on the equipment, clothing, food, etc. needed to make long or short hiking trips enjoyable.

Booklist 40:280 Ap 15 '44

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '44

"A good primer of walking, but intended for the novice rather than the experienced camper."

+ Kirkus 11:569 D 15 '43 110w

"Douglas Leechman's book is a practical guide to hiking in every phase. It is written simply, concisely, without striving after literary style, but in phrases that cannot be misunderstood. He has been a hiker for years and has studied it from all angles, as his book shows. The work also includes many diagrams and line drawings that should be of great help." L. E. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 15 '44 330w

Wis Lib Bul 40:67 My '44

LEEMING, JOSEPH. Brave ships of World war II; il. by Grattan Condon. 238p $3 Nelson

940.545 World war, 1939—Naval operations. Warships 44-9186

"A factual account of the British and American ships in action that runs from the sinking of the Graf Spee in December, 1939, to the day after Christmas in 1943 when the Scharnhorst was sunk in the Arctic Sea." Sat R of Lit

Kirkus 12:512 N 1 '44 100w

Reviewed by M. M. Smith

Library J 69:1107 D 15 '44 30w

"Mr. Leeming, an American naval officer in World War I, writes vividly of the British and American sea battles against the German, Italian and Japanese ships they met. Although there are few technical errors in this book, it is unfortunate that he did not do a more careful research on the available information about the American battles of which he writes and that he thought it necessary to put in many small details as to ship disposition, courses steered, etc., which add little to the descriptions." F. H.

+ — N Y Times p18 Ja 14 '45 220w

"Mighty exciting reading." K. S. W.

+ New Yorker 20:92 D 16 '44 20w

Sat R of Lit 27:44 N 11 '44 30w

LEEMING, JOSEPH. Fun with clay; drawings by Jessie Robinson. (Stokes bk) 96p $2 Lippincott

738.14 Modeling. Pottery 44-7103

"A book for all beginners, giving methods, full directions, and designs for all types of modeling with both self-hardening and kiln-baked clays." (Subtitle) Includes instructions for "throwing" on the potter's wheel, firing, and making such things as tiles, vases, dishes, and decorating and glazing pottery. Pottery supply dealers listed, and materials and methods are simple and clearly described. For adults and older boys and girls.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p14 N 12 '44 110w

Booklist 41:62 O 15 '44

"Excellent craft book for shop work in schools."

+ Kirkus 12:403 S 1 '44 90w

Reviewed by E. W. Turpin

Library J 69:818 O 1 '44 60w

LEEMING, JOSEPH. Games to make and play at home. 203p $2 Appleton-Century

793 Games 44-858

Collection of easy to make games, both indoor and outdoor. Includes both old and new games.

Booklist 40:230 Mr 1 '44

Bookmark 5:9 My '44

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p5 Ag 24 '44 100w

Reviewed by G. P. Goward

Springf'd Republican p4d My 7 '44 150w

Wis Lib Bul 40:35 Mr '44

LEEPER, ROBERT. Lewin's topological and vector psychology; a digest and a critique. 218p pa $1.75 Univ. of Ore.

150.19 Lewin, Kurt. Psychology. Gestalt (psychology) 43-52875

"Topological psychology is a flourishing contemporary school, an offshoot of the Gestalt movement in psychology. . . Professor Lewin has a large and enthusiastic body of followers, who obviously find his approach a fruitful one for attacking problems of personality and motivation; and their experimental findings have been generally acknowledged as unusually significant even by psychologists with different theoretical affiliations. . . In the present monograph Professor Leeper has expounded with great clarity and sympathy the substance of Lewin's views, and at the same time he has indicated with great care and thoroughness the points at which Lewin's conceptual scheme requires revision and extension." J Philos

"The author of this acute monograph has placed psychologists under a very considerable obligation. The growth of Lewin's topological and vector psychology has been so rapid and so productive of intriguing experimental work that serious and comprehensive conceptual criticism has lagged. Perhaps it is fortunate that the task is so formidable, since this circumstance has resulted in its election by a really competent and careful critic. . . As might be expected in even the most careful treatment of so laborious a problem there are some errors, notably in topological matters. . . These are minor blemishes, however, upon one of the few really first-rate jobs of criticism in recent psychological literature." D. K. Adams

+ — Am J Psychol 57:281 Ap '44 1350w

"Professor Leeper has performed ably an extremely useful task. . . There is one issue upon which Professor Leeper provides less illumination than is desirable. Lewin's hodological geometry contains a large number of definitions of concepts, from which a number of consequences are drawn. . . The discussion of this point seems to the present reviewer the least thorough-going in the book, and the grounds for the conclusion are certainly not made clear." E. N.
+ — J Philos 40:304 My 27 '43 550w

LEES, HANNAH. Till the boys come home. 329p $2.50 Harper 44-7912

The story of how an American wife lived during the year her husband spent in Africa with a medical unit.

"This elemental problem in the relationships among men and women Mrs. Lees writes about with refreshing directness." J. A. Brandt
+ Book Week p4 O 1 '44 550w

Kirkus 12:305 Jl 15 '44 210w

"Miss Lees's novel is remarkably free of the expected sentimental and patriotic clichés. And in sexual matters it is very courageous without being self-conscious." Diana Trilling
Nation 159:332 S 16 '44 900w

" 'Till the Boys Come Home' has been shrewdly whipped up with an eye to the girls they left behind them. Most males blundering inadvertently into its clinical boudoir candor will feel inclined to back out hastily before Page 10. Neither the motivations nor the pert conclusions of its baker's dozen of wives are calculated to soothe and console the distant warrior." Thelma Purtell
N Y Times p14 Ja 7 '45 220w

" 'Till the Boys Come Home' will, as the blurb says, 'shock some people' and it will repel a great many more, not because of its frankness and honesty in dealing with abnormal psychology, but because Sophie herself, in her weakness, her selfishness, her condonement of vulgarity and promiscuity, and her lack of any sort of integrity, is a character for whom the reader will have no liking and very little sympathy." S. H. Hay
— Sat R of Lit 27:25 N 4 '44 650w

"Although the author has taught herself to write soothingly, with the careful attention to details of dress and interior decoration which readers have come to associate with stories published in socalled 'women's magazines,' she has, one is sure, done her darndest in 'Till the Boys Come Home' to present an honest picture of a real situation which many women will recognize painfully." E. M. B.
Springf'd Republican p4d O 1 '44 480w

"Any way you look at it, Hannah Lees's 'Till the Boys Come Home' is a novel that commands respect. Covering a lot of vital contemporary emotional ground, it impresses with its honesty, with the conviction it carries of fidelity to the truth of things as they are happening now—at least to some of the truth." F. H. Bullock
+ Weekly Book Review p6 S 17 '44 750w

LEFFINGWELL, ALBERT (DANA CHAMBERS, pseud). Last secret. 289p $2 Dial press 44-20107

Tale of international intrigue scened in New York and South America, with an "indestructible hero" who outlives all the machinations of enemy agents, wicked doctors, and Nazi scientists.

"If you combine the involved invention of E. Phillips Oppenheim, the futuristic visions of H. G. Wells and the elegant spy-stuff of Graham Green—and then bring that high-powered mixture to the level of a fast-action scientifiction thriller—you'll have 'The Last Secret.' " Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p9 F 20 '44 150w

Kirkus 12:85 F 15 '44 70w

"Fantastic is the word for this yarn." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p9 F 27 '44 200w

"Paging Superman!"
Sat R of Lit 27:30 F 12 '44 40w

"We'd call this war-time thriller outrageous and highly readable—and not just for Superman fans, either. If you want to get scholarly you can say that Mr. Chambers has taken that poor old death ray plot and run amuck with it. We would merely reply that he has done it so well that you hardly notice the slight lack of novelty in the over-all." Will Cuppy
+ Weekly Book Review p10 F 27 '44 200w

LEGER, ALEXIS SAINT-LEGER (ST-JOHN PERSE, pseud). Eloges, and other poems; the French text with English tr. by Louise Varèse and an introd. by Archibald MacLeish. 179p $2.50 Norton 841 44-3403

"Alexis St. Leger Leger was born in 1889 on a French colonial island in the Antilles. He was sent to Paris for his education, he entered the diplomatic service, he began his official career in China, and in due time supplemented the exotic memories of his childhood with vivid impressions of the Orient and of Polynesia. He is now consultant on French literature in the Library of Congress. In 1911 he published the volume here reprinted, using the name St.-John Perse to keep his diplomatic personality apart from his literary self. There were later editions until 1925. The present issue of the original text with a parallel translation makes available for French and American readers alike an unusual, if not unique, approach to life, as set down by a true poet." Weekly Book Review

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Book Week p7 Ap 9 '44 400w

Reviewed by Pearl Strachan
Christian Science Monitor p13 O 14 '44 180w

Commonweal 40:498 S 8 '44 550w

Reviewed by Paul Rosenfeld
Nation 158:570 My 13 '44 1000w

Reviewed by J. G. Fletcher
New Repub 111:282 S 4 '44 950w

Reviewed by Ralph Gustafson
N Y Times p21 Jl 16 '44 280w

"This seems to us distinguished translation, and the work reflecting somewhat the method of our own imagists of thirty years ago, is vivid and full of atmosphere. With the sound, cadence, and syllabification of the original these poems would, of course, take on an added distinction; but the French original goes side by side with the translation for those who would savor the work to the full." W. R. B.
+ Sat R of Lit 27:29 Ap 29 '44 380w

"This is not the sort of art which lays hands on you and compels you to admire. For readers looking for plain, prosaic statements, and demanding to know especially where the poet stands on political and economic questions, it will be a complete loss. But for those who are aware of life as they pass through it, and who can learn from another man's awareness, it will be rewarding and revealing." John Erskine
+ Weekly Book Review p7 Ap 9 '44 330w

Reviewed by Herbert Steiner
Yale R n s 34:181 autumn '44 600w

LEGGETT, WILLIAM FERGUSON. Ancient and medieval dyes. 95p $2.25 Chemical pub. co.
667.2 Dyes and dyeing 44-5633

"A brief historical account of the uses and development of some twenty dyes, of which several, like madder, indigo, safron, woad, and Tyrian purple, were known in ancient Greece and Rome, Egypt, and the Orient." N Y New Tech Bks

LEGGETT, W. F.—Continued
"While this little volume cannot be considered a reference work on the subject, it will provide entertaining reading for those interested in the history of chemistry or in the origins of the dye industry." S. Sussman

Chem & Met Eng 51:211 S '44 50w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:23 Ap '44

LE GRAND, pseud. See Henderson, Le G.

LEHMANN-HAUPT, HELLMUT. Terrible Gustave Doré, 48p il $2.50 Marchbanks press

B or 92 Doré, Gustave 44-1959

Brief biography of the famous artist, best known for his illustrations of Dante and the Bible, whose rather terrorizing pictures were well known in the middle and late years of the nineteenth century. Bibliography.

"A brief and charming estimate of the great 19th century illustrator. It is a rare treat to find such quiet harmony in a little book—the cover, text, typographical design, the choice of illustrations, and even the good quality of the paper all combine to make this a pleasant book to touch, to look at, and to read." Katherine Kuh

+ Book Week p8 F 6 '44 360w
Booklist 40:250 Mr 15 '44

"The graphic pictures in this well-made book, full of vision and terror in their realism and endless in their detail, may be discovered to enthrall a new circle of imaginative children. The little known facts of Doré's life will be of interest to many adults." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 20:105 Mr '44 80w

LEIGHTON, ALEXANDER HAMILTON, and LEIGHTON, DOROTHEA CROSS. The Navaho door; an introd. to Navaho life; foreword by John Collier. 149p il $4 Harvard univ. press

970.3 Navaho Indians A44-2256

"The research of these two physicians, consisting of living with the Navahos, traveling with them, visiting their schools and hospitals, talking with the people who teach them and care for their sick and administer their affairs, not only will be an invaluable guide book for the worker in the field but will appeal to everyone interested in American history, primitive culture, and the Southwest. Strikingly illustrated." School & Society

"It must be rare indeed that an important work is done by precisely the proper people in precisely the proper way and presented to the public in a manner which leaves nothing to be desired. This seems to be that rare concourse of persons and events. As though to cap this high achievement the publisher has produced a volume, containing many fine illustrations, the format of which will delight the reader." W. D. Wallis

+ Am Soc R 9:715 D '44 430w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p2 Ag 13 '44 550w
Booklist 40:387 Jl 15 '44

Reviewed by E. S. Sergeant
Sat R of Lit 27:26 O 28 '44 650w
+ School & Society 59:432 Je 17 '44 60w

Reviewed by A. H. Compton & others
+ Scientific Bk Club R 15:1 Jl '44 1250w

" 'The Navaho Door' is a good book for any one, and exceedingly valuable for Indian Service employees and administrators in occupied areas." C. L. McNichols

+ Weekly Book Review p7 S 3 '44 800w
Wis Lib Bul 40:128 O '44

LEIPER, HENRY SMITH. Blind spots: experiments in the self-cure of race prejudice. new rev ed 146p $1; pa 60c Friendship press

323.1 Race problems 44-40323

"A religious worker, author of World Chaos or World Christianity [Book Review Digest, 1938] writes of race prejudice and the need of recognizing our own irrational views. Simply written in anecdotal style. First published in 1929, now revised, with more attention to anti-Semitism." Booklist

Booklist 41:155 Ja 15 '45

"The cure of prejudice begins at home, even nearer home than charity, for it begins with one's self. Dr. Leiper's attractive little book shows why it should and how it can be cured."

+ Christian Century 61:1258 N 1 '44 30w

LEISK, DAVID JOHNSON (CROCKETT JOHNSON, pseud). Barnaby and Mr O'Malley. 328p $2 Holt

741.5 Caricatures and cartoons. Humor, Pictorial 44-7963

Eight more episodes in the life of the small boy, Barnaby, and his chubby little fairy godfather, Mr O'Malley of the pink wings and cigar magic wand.

Reviewed by Jack Conroy
Book Week p4 S 24 '44 550w
Booklist 41:73 N 1 '44

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 41:127 N 17 '44 20w
Kirkus 12:424 S 15 '44 60w

Reviewed by Isabelle Mallet
+ N Y Times p7 S 24 '44 250w
Springf'd Republican p4d O 29 '44 130w

"If there is meaning in all this, thank heaven it is so hidden nobody digs it up. In these pages the mind has a much needed day off, to be spent in admiration of the skill with which this naïve and apparently effortless nonsense is created and kept going. There is no comic but Barnaby, and Crockett Johnson is his prophet."

+ Weekly Book Review p10 S 17 '44 350w
Wis Lib Bul 40:158 D '44

LEMASTER, CLARENCE ALLEN. Aircraft sheet metal work; how to do blueprint reading, template layout, patterns for bends, riveting, soldering, brazing, welding, drop hammer work. 387p il $3.75 Am. tech. soc.

629.1341 Airplanes—Design and construction. Sheet metal work 44-1254

"A basic course of instruction for apprentices. Emphasis is placed on how to do the work, how to rivet, weld, use the drop hammer, figure bend allowances and other operations. The first chapters have to do with safety rules, tools and blueprint reading. Two chapters are devoted to aircraft materials. Instructive pictures show operations and numerous drawings illustrate typical sheet metal work and the principles explained." Library J

Booklist 40:279 Ap 15 '44

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:205 Mr 1 '44 80w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:9 Ja '44

LEMKIN, RAPHAEL. Axis rule in occupied Europe; laws of occupation, analysis of government, proposals for redress. (Carnegie endowment for int. peace. Division of int. law. Publications) 674p $7.50 Columbia univ. press

940.5337 World war, 1939—Occupied territories 44-47388

"The major part of this volume comprises the texts of laws and decrees of the Axis Powers, and of their puppet régimes, issued for the government of the areas occupied by their military forces in Europe. Preceding these texts are chapters analyzing the purposes and application of the measures as parts of a general scheme of conquest. Other chapters show the organization of the occupying government set up in each invaded country and the special measures adopted for it." Foreword

"The volume is vital reading for everyone who intends to be seriously concerned with the reconstruction of Europe, and a 'must' for those who will bear the responsibility for dealing with the Germans."

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ja 4 '45 400w

"A technical legal treatise and a source and reference work which, as such, is invaluable because it collects and preserves vital raw materials for a history of this age—and, what is even more important, essential evidence for retributive justice. It will prove an indispensable handbook for scholars and historians and for those authorities of the United Nations charged with undoing, as far as possible, the effects of Axis domination." O. D. Tolischus
+ N Y Times p1 Ja 21 '45 1850w

"The scholarship throughout is wide, thorough and restrained. The book was written before the tide of liberation had freed so large a part of the conquered territories; but that does not lessen its special interest. It is likely to remain a standard source for a long time to come." Walter Millis
+ Weekly Book Review p4 D 31 '44 900w

LENSKI, LOIS (MRS ARTHUR COVEY). Let's play house [il. by the author]. [40p] $1 Oxford 44-47004

Picture-story book showing the activities of two little girls and their brother, playing house and store and doctor.

"Little girls from 4 to 6 will have a lot of fun with this book because Polly and Molly like to do exactly the things that are dear to every little girl's heart." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p7 D 24 '44 90w
Booklist 41:141 Ja 1 '45
Boston Globe p36 N 29 '44 40w
Kirkus 12:518 N 15 '44 40w

"The book catches the spirit of playing a game—and the simple text, which is hardly more than running captions for the illustrations, will be appreciated by beginners." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p20 Ja 14 '45 100w

LENSKI, LOIS (MRS ARTHUR COVEY). Puritan adventure; il. by [the author]. 223p $2 Lippincott
44-6750

Puritan New England is the scene of this story for boys and girls. The Partridge children are delighted when their pretty young Aunt Charity arrives from England, but Aunt Charity is amazed at the solemn ways of New England. In her attempt to bring the sweetness and light of the old England to the new, the young woman makes both friends and enemies. The contrast between English and Puritan customs is well brought out. Bibliography.

Booklist 41:28 S '44
Boston Globe p36 N 29 '44 60w

"An interesting subject—in which there is a definite sense of the way in which the early settlers thought, spoke and acted. Unaffectedly illustrated by the author."
+ Kirkus 12:342 Ag 1 '44 110w

"Miss Lenski's latest is told with good deal of charm and accurate, fascinating detail. . . It somehow makes you think of a bayberry candle." Gwenfira Williams
+ Library J 69:764 S 15 '44 70w

New Yorker 20:90 D 16 '44 50w

"Miss Lenski has obviously done a piece of interesting and varied research for this story. All of its details sound authentic, and yet they never intrude on the action and the characters." M. G. D.
+ Sat R of Lit 27:31 O 21 '44 230w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
N Y Times p21 S 17 '44 200w

Springf'd Republican p4d S 3 '44 100w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p6 N 5 '44 280w

Wis Lib Bul 40:133 O '44

LENT, HENRY BOLLES. PT boat: Bob Reed wins his command at Melville; il. with official phot. U.S. navy and phot. taken at the Melville base by Carroll Van Ark. 172p $2 Macmillan

359 U.S. Navy. Motor torpedo boat squadron—Juvenile literature 43-17332

Information on the training of a PT boat skipper at the Motor torpedo boat squadron training center at Melville, Rhode Island. For grade six and higher. No index.

Booklist 40:184 Ja 15 '44
Wis Lib Bul 40:72 My '44

LENT, HENRY BOLLES. Seabee; Bill Scott builds and fights for the navy; il. with official U.S. navy photographs. 174p $2 Macmillan

359 U.S. Navy. Construction battalions—Juvenile literature 44-9627

Story of one boy's experiences in learning to be a sea bee and how he applied his knowledge in battles in the South Seas. Illustrated with official Navy photographs. For ages twelve to sixteen.

Booklist 41:141 Ja 1 '45

"Eminently readable."
+ Kirkus 12:435 S 15 '44 90w

"Intensely interesting and exciting story." S. J. Robinson
+ Library J 70:71 Ja 15 '45 80w

LENZ, ELLIS CHRISTIAN. Muzzle flashes; five centuries of firearms and men; with il. by the author. 812p $15 Standard publications

623.442 Firearms. Gunsmithing. Shooting
44-2453

"Very finely illustrated book on firearms and gunsmithing. Historical section. Discussion of American small arms, inventors and makers, use of weapons and ammunition from colonial days to 1940." Library J

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '44

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:653 Ag '44 40w

LEON, BEATRICE. Two girls on a ladder; il. by Marjorie Thompson. 193p $2 Mill

817 44-6207

"An account of the rehabilitation of a tumbledown house in East Setauket, Long Island, by two young women vaudeville partners. Neither a 'career' book nor a novel, it is humorous—perhaps not quite so hilarious—as Our Hearts Were Young and Gay; told in the first person." Library J

"Girlish—sometimes gay—recitative, with nothing particularly new to contribute, but with a fresh angle on familiar subjects."
Kirkus 12:242 Je 1 '44 110w

Reviewed by Maude Adams
Library J 69:655 Ag '44 80w

"Like the rest of us bitten by the home-in-the-country bug, the girls learned about building and remodeling the hard way. Their troubles are amusing and, in spots, instructive." Charlotte Dean
N Y Times p22 Ag 6 '44 120w
Wis Lib Bul 40:126 O '44

LEONARD, CHARLES L., pseud. See Heberden, M. V.

LEONARD, MARGARET L. Health counseling for girls; with a foreword by Ruth Strang. 131p $1.50 Barnes, A.S.

613 Woman—Health and hygiene. Hygiene—Study and teaching SG 44-244

"This book brings increased recognition of the value of the guidance aspect in health education. Through the records and analyses of actual health interviews and of specific problem situations arising in health counsel-

LEONARD, M. L.—Continued
ing, the reader is provided with multiple illustrations of the problems of adolescent girls and of the widely varied guidance techniques that may be used in health counseling." (School & Society) Chapter bibliographies. No index.

"This book has real value for the school physician and the school administrator, as well as curriculum planning groups interested in setting up a more functional health program. Leonard's plan of health counseling is both a challenge and a suggestion to all those interested in improving the total school health program, not only at the secondary school level, but it has implications for the elementary school as well. The book will be a real aid to all responsible for health counseling." R. E. Boynton
+ Am J Pub Health 35:72 Ja '45 550w

"It may be objected that health counsellors as wise and resourceful as those Miss Leonard describes are not numerous. But we must believe that they can be trained, or abandon our whole democratic faith in education. I fully expect that the purposes and methods set forth in this book will rapidly gain increased recognition and adoption in responsibly administered school systems. Incidentally, this book is good reading in its own right. Rarely is a professional treatise marked, as this is, by candor, unpretentiousness, wit—and common sense." J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p2 D 31 '44 130w

"Although the publication was prepared for secondary school use, it would help the counselor in the freshman area as well. Specific problems discussed illustrate the various ways in which a given problem can be handled and serve as guide to the inexperienced counselor. Emphasis is on making counseling a part of the total school program so that the adjustment of the girl can be carried out satisfactorily and completely. Excellent references are given at the end of each chapter." Susanne Thompson
+ J Home Econ 37:48 Ja '45 120w

"Definitely professional in approach."
+ Kirkus 12:440 S 15 '44 60w
School & Society 60:192 S 16 '44 60w

LEONOV, LEONID MAKSIMOVICH. Road to the ocean [tr. from the Russian by Norbert Guterman]. 510p $3 Fischer, L.B.
44-47309

Story of a Russian engineer whose whole being is wrapped up in the raliroad reaching across the vast stretches of Siberia to the Pacific.

"The whole is presented in the narrative style of a master. The translation is excellent and 'Road to the Ocean' is an honest and magnificent book." John Weilburg
+ Book Week p3 D 17 '44 550w
Booklist 41:124 D 15 '44
Boston Globe p35 N 29 '44 220w

"When it comes to dispensing gloom Leonov can move in the very first rank. It is not only that his pitilessly-mirrored characters almost invariably repel. But the career of the hero, Kurilov himself, could hardly be more depressing."
Commonweal 41:304 Ja 5 '45 700w

"The whole results in an often satisfying, fascinating, sometimes uneven novel of Russia."
+ Kirkus 12:487 N 1 '44 210w

"Though author is outstanding Soviet writer, the detailed descriptions, fanciful digressions and heavy atmosphere make difficult, disappointing reading." H. G. Kelley
Library J 69:883 O 15 '44 120w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling
Nation 159:751 D 16 '44 60w

"Leonid Leonov's 'Road to the Ocean' is, to my limited knowledge, one of the best Soviet books that have been translated into English." George Mayberry
+ New Repub 111:628 N 13 '44 1050w

"This Russian 'Gone With the Wind' is enormous, sprawling, and yet simply conceived. Its structural scope and lucidity are its strong points; its failing is in the pale realization of characters. Most of them, for all of the author's sharp attention to bizarre detail, remain types as familiar to Soviet literature as the handsome, romantic Success is to American. There is plenty of drama here, but there is also much thinly fictionalized history." Kenneth Fearing
+ N Y Times p6 D 10 '44 440w

"The presentation is quite skillful: the interdependence of the various individuals is gradually brought out in a dramatic but usually not obvious way. Episode leads to episode by transitions apparently meaningless: a character who seems unimportant in one chapter will be shown at full length in the next; till, later, a new nexus of relationships which gives the whole picture a new significance is suddenly constituted either by continuing the story in the present or by exploring its earlier phases in the past. . . The translation by Norbert Gutterman is a capable and conscientious job. The local dialect, the Soviet allusions, and the technical language of railroading, as well as the author's elliptical style, must have made it a formidable task." Edmund Wilson
+ New Yorker 20:108 D 9 '44 2100w

Reviewed by Robert Pick
Sat R of Lit 27:11 N 18 '44 1200w

"In his presentation of these characters and their relationships Mr. Leonov exhibits the gifts of a master; even in a translation that sometimes slips into awkward and questionable phrases. It is easy to understand why Maxim Gorky spoke of him in the same breath with Russia's greatest novelists, for he has power and scope and depth, clear sight and sympathy and humor, enormous vitality and an ability to people pages in a way impossible to little writers. Those readers who like the comfort of a straight story line may feel that he makes multiple and confusing claims upon their interest, as he moves from character to character and back and forth through time, but they will surely be impressed and stirred by scene after scene." B. R. Redman
+ Weekly Book Review p4 N 26 '44 950w

LEOPOLD, JULES. At ease! two hundred hours of fun and entertainment; with drawings by Warren King. (Whittlesey house publication) 230p $1.75 McGraw 793.73 Puzzles 43-15506

Compilation of word jumbles, picture puzzles, mathematical brain teasers, card tricks, and other relaxing entertainment, designed for the amusement of the men in service. The compiler is puzzle consultant of the army weekly, Yank.

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 30 '44 70w

"It's good, clean fun for civilians as well as G.I., and if you tire of the mental work the drawings are relaxing."
+ Weekly Book Review p33 N 7 '43 110w

LEPLEY, RAY. Verifiability of value. 267p $3.25 Columbia univ. press [16s 6d Oxford]
121 Worth A44-1619

"Professor Lepley's book is an attempt to show how the study and treatment of value judgments can be brought within the methodology of science. In addition, it is a concise survey of the problems of contemporary value theory in its relations to the sciences and to other fields of philosophy. By examining the possibilities of the transposability of value propositions and fact propositions Professor Lepley suggests a method whereby value judgments can be brought within the scope of scientific social research." Am Soc R

"Verifiability of Value is important reading for social scientists and philosophers." H. G. Schrickel
+ Am Soc R 9:715 D '44 300w

"Lepley writes uncompromisingly in the tradition of John Dewey. But he does rather more than mirror Dewey's views, for the conclusions and arguments are carefully rethought. and defended with detailed reference to a number of alternative theories. The exposition, though often untidy, and occasionally unequal to the standard of rigor which current analytical philosophy is beginning to impose, is for the most part adequately clear. The volume is convincing, and it would be gratifying to dwell at length upon its merits. It seems more profitable, however, and more in keeping with the aims of constructive criticism, to mention some points that remain debatable. . . These remarks do not question the merit of Lepley's work; they seek only to indicate some aspects of it that are worthy of discussion. In both its scholarship and its reasoning the book is of high competence, and will repay attentive study." C. L. Stevenson

+ J Philos 41:385 Jl 6 '44 1500w

LERNER, ABBA PTACHYA. Economics of control; principles of welfare economics. 428p $3.75 Macmillan

338.91 Economic policy. Economics 44-5286

" 'This text, for theory courses in advanced economics and courses in welfare economics, studies the conditions for the optimum use of resources in collectivist, capitalistic and controlled economies.' " (Special Libraries) Index.

"Taken as a whole, this book should prove an extremely valuable instrument for the training of future makers and administrators of economic policy. With certain limitations, it provides an admirably clear and systematic account of the principles by which economic policy can be judged from the point of view of the social interest." M. F. W. Joseph

+ — Am Econ R 34:880 D '44 4050w

"The book will appeal to students of marginal utility economics. The general reader will find many of the chapters far from inviting despite the glossary of abbreviations of Lerner's economic terminology. In some instances neither the formulae nor the definitions contribute to clarity. Mr. Lerner sometimes merely creates a new language for old concepts; for example, the substitution of 'division of income' for 'distribution of income' may intrigue the semantic specialists and the experts in content analysis, but it is hardly significant to the solution of the problem." M. L. Hoch

Ann Am Acad 237:223 Ja '45 650w

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 11 '44 200w

Special Libraries 35:100 Mr '44

LESLEY, HUBERT G. Basic airplane mechanics. 404p il $2.50 Wiley

629.134 Airplanes—Design and construction 44-3767

"A revision of the author's Airplane Maintenance [Book Review Digest, 1941], with additional material on the theory of airplane construction and operation. Contents: Theory of flight; Materials and processes; Controls; Hydraulics; Electrical circuits and accessories; Aircraft construction and structural repairs; Aircraft welding; Deicing equipment; Instruments; Fuel and oil systems; Heating systems." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 69:306 Ap 1 '44 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:20 Ap '44

LESSNER, ERWIN CHRISTIAN. Blitzkrieg and bluff; the legend of Nazi invincibility; tr. by A. B. Ashton. 246p $2.75 Putnam

940.541 World war, 1939—Germany. Germany—Army 43-18582

An analysis of the war in Europe and Africa in its military aspects thru the summer of 1943. The author's thesis is; "The Wehrmacht is large and it is enormously strong; but it is a structure with many flaws and improvisations, and military improvisation has always been Germany's weakness. . . Germany's war machine . . . bears the germ of collapse within it."

"The speculative character of many passages, and even chapters, could have been lessened if the author had told about himself, and if, at least sometimes, he had named the source of his information. He asks a little too much faith in him, even though he asks for it in a good cause." E. S. P.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 D 18 '43 420w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 22:658 Jl '44 40w

"There are certain weaknesses of execution, but on the whole the author did a sound job." Max Werner

+ — Weekly Book Review p19 Ap 16 '44 800w

LESSNER, ERWIN CHRISTIAN. Phantom victory. 227p $2.50 Putnam

44-8272

A fictional history of the fourth reich, 1945 to 1960, written by an Austrian who became a major in the Finnish army, was hunted down by the Nazis, and finally escaped to America in 1941. His story attempts to answer the question, What shall be done with Germany? The book is an indirect plea for a hard peace.

Reviewed by John Weilburg

Book Week p13 O 22 '44 550w

Booklist 41:124 D 15 '44

"A picture of a German collapse and eventual come back that is realistic in many parts, grossly exaggerated in others, and rather depressing on the whole. . . 'Phantom Victory's' last chapter consists of the single line: 'And for the rest, I say that Germany should be destroyed.' The Catonian suggestion is candid but hardly practicable. Even if it could be carried out, it would dispose only of the physical menace that is Germany, and not of the spiritual menace that is Naziism. Above all, to insist on Germany's destruction means to declare the human mind bankrupt. Actually, this is what Mr. Lessner's book amounts to and what makes it a depressing piece of speculation." E. S. P.

Christian Science Monitor p14 O 28 '44 550w

Kirkus 12:471 O 15 '44 170w

N Y Times p30 N 12 '44 700w

"If this were only a deliberate satire on appeasement ideas and on advocates of a soft peace with Germany, it would be one of the most audacious books written in our day and one of the wittiest. It delivers brilliant and successful blows. But as a reminder that 'You cannot do business with Hitler'—'Phantom Victory' is grim and terrifying. It deserves serious attention as long as discussions are going on in this country whether we are to have a 'hard' or a 'soft' peace, as long as some of us seem to be more concerned about the way the Germans will react to Allied peace terms than about the necessity of preventing another world war at any cost. Satire is often a better weapon than reason. In 'Phantom Victory' this weapon is used with craftsmanship." H. B. Kranz

+ Sat R of Lit 27:48 O 14 '44 600w

"Without any doubt, the advocates of a 'soft' peace with Germany are raising their voices in the land. 'Phantom Victory' is a reply to them. Although cast in the mold of fiction, it is as sober and thought-provoking a contribution to the currently debated subject, 'What shall we do with Germany?' as has come our way. It is grim; it is terrifying; it is provocative. It deserves attention." R. N. Fuller

Springf'd Republican p4d O 29 '44 700w

"Major Lessner makes several assumptions that at least seem open to question. One is that Russia will decline to send occupation forces into the Reich or even to concern itself with a seizure by Germany of the Polish Corridor. . . And most questionable of all is Major Lessner's belief that the Allies will be taken in so easily by a new Fuehrer, even one as clever as Friedolin, a shepherd come out of the hills with the divine duty of leading all Germans to salvation through penance. It is likely that even an isolationist will become suspicious when a Friedolin announces that

LESSNER, E. C.—Continued
before he joins in a disarmament plan half of the British and American fleets will have to be turned over to him 'as securities.'" Hubert Kupferberg
Weekly Book Review p8 O 15 '44 600w

LEVANDIS, JOHN ALEXANDER. The Greek foreign debt and the great powers, 1821-1898. 137p $2.25 Columbia univ. press [15s 6d Oxford]

336.3 Debts, Public—Greece, Modern. Finance—Greece, Modern. Greece, Modern—History A44-1877

"A study of the foreign debt of Greece, with its influence on that nation and its relations with other countries. An effort to clear the financial situation and suggestions to enable Greece to rehabilitate itself." Current Hist

Reviewed by W. W. White
Am Pol Sci R 38:1035 O '44 240w

"That there is so little of it is the sole defect of this history, in the reviewer's eyes. It stops about where one must begin, to learn something of Greece's grave problems in public finance after the present war. It should have been brought down to, say, 1940—even at the cost of neglecting bygone generations when Greece was a mere principality." R. O. Hall
+ — Ann Am Acad 236:185 N '44 400w

Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook
Current Hist 7:498 D '44 30w

LEVY, DAVID MORDECAI. Maternal overprotection. 417p $4.50 Columbia univ. press [30s Oxford]

136.7 Child study. Children—Management 43-11263

"Reports an investigation which was made in the effort to study the special relationship between the mother and child, its hazards and how best to prevent them. It is based on the resources obtained from the Institute for Child Guidance at New York City. The investigation sought to find answers to the following questions: How does the mother get to be overprotective? What is the effect on the child of living with such a mother? How can the potential difficulties that may result be cleared up or prevented? Finally the investigators attempted to contribute to present techniques for the study of other human relationships. The report of this study will be prized by all students of child life and family relationships." (Social Forces) Index.

Reviewed by E. R. Groves
Social Forces 23:218 D '44 130w

"This book should be on the 'must' list for all workers in the clinical field of childhood problems." M. E. Kenworthy
+ Survey 80:61 F '44 500w

LEVY, HAROLD P. Building a popular movement; with an introd. by Mary Swain Routzahn. 165p $1.25 Russell Sage

369.43 Boy scouts. Publicity 44-6322

"A case study of the public relations of the Boy scouts of America." (Subtitle) "This is the second of a series planned by the Russell Sage foundation to show how the public relations job is done in actual situations. Chapters on the use of symbols in creating public understanding, gaining public interest and support for the movement, its relation to the community, the literature of the program, and its publicity are included, and a final chapter points out elements of the program that have general application." (Booklist)

Reviewed by P. S. Broughton
Am J Pub Health 34:1288 D '44 450w

Reviewed by A. M. Lee
Ann Am Acad 236:220 N '44 360w

Booklist 41:53 O 15 '44

"As a well-rounded discussion of strong points and weaknesses, this book is a significant addition to the regrettably small library of public relations literature." M. D. Ross
+ Survey 80:271 S '44 600w

LEVY, HARRY. Bombero; tales from Latin America; drawings by Howard Simon. 86p $2 Knopf

43-15649

Four tales for grades three to five, describing life in four Latin American countries: Ecuador, Peru, Argentina, and Mexico.

Booklist 40:116 D 1 '43

"Mr. Levy has spent considerable time in the countries of which he writes, and his readers will learn a good many things about the way people live in some of the places to the south of us. But he seems primarily interested in telling a good story and never has the air of offering information thinly disguised as fiction. He writes with a sense of humor and a light touch. Young readers feel that Luis and Emiliano and the others are children like themselves and sympathize with their adventures." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p16 Ja 23 '44 140w
Wis Lib Bul 40:28 F '44

LEWIS, CECIL. Pathfinders. 249p $2.50 Morrow [9s 6d Davies]

44-4440

Portrays the lives of the six men composing an English bomber's crew in the present war. On the night that their bomber is lost the reader is introduced to each of the men in turn, and his story follows.

"The book is a sharp, straightforward story of what it means to be a young man today and it is certainly one of this year's outstanding war novels." W. F. Morse
+ Book Week p6 My 21 '44 450w
Booklist 40:341 Je 1 '44
Kirkus 12:105 Mr 1 '44 190w

"The author reveals characters of men and women in a fascinating way, philosophizes about the war and touches many different facets of life. Recommended for purchase." R. B. Rankin
+ Library J 69:404 My 1 '44 70w

"The related life stories are certainly remarkably varied in their setting and in their range of activities, though somehow few of them carry entire conviction. But in the description of technical achievement, such as the flying of the aircraft or the sailing of a small boat, Mr. Lewis is at his not inconsiderable best." Wilfrid Gibson
+ — Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 14 '44 70w

"Cecil Lewis has unconsciously leaned rather heavily on characters that are familiar, ready-made types. One feels there is more to Nobby than the pure cockney, more to Hugh than the traditional Englishman at last finding and proving himself, more about each of the six men. But in his real forte—action, and intimate knowledge of the various callings of men of action—he has packed into one book precisely the material for six." Kenneth Fearing
+ N Y Times p5 My 21 '44 500w

"Writing about planes can be the most dramatic shop talk in the world, but the flashbacks that tell the stories of these six men haven't much to recommend them."
New Yorker 20:90 My 13 '44 90w

"This is rather a disappointing novel, because all of its material, varied and potentially interesting as it is, adds up to nothing at all. . . The plane, the flying sequence, the war, are wasted material, good contemporary material pointing up the aridity of the rest." R. L. North
— + Sat R of Lit 27:22 Je 3 '44 240w

"The author obviously knows a great deal about flying, but his characters are types rather than people. Hugh Thornley and his crew fly convincingly, but this, alas! is not enough to make us believe in their private existence." John Hampson
+ — Spec 172:88 Ja 28 '44 100w

"As a novel what Mr. Lewis has produced is at once on the conventional side and highly coloured. He has fallen back on a too obvious and undistinguished pattern of narrative, fitting half a dozen separate life histories into the framework of a technical and dramatic description of the aircraft's flight, and he has filled these biographies, or large parts of them, with a rather rich mass of glamour and sentiment. The fact is that he was surely unwise to try to cast what he wanted to say about flying and our bomber crews in this war in the form of a novel. For it is the direct descriptive stuff in the book which alone matters. The intimate detail about the routine of a bomber crew's job is so vividly and tellingly brought home to the reader, indeed, that one cannot but wish Mr. Lewis had left fiction severely alone on this occasion."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p53 Ja 29 '44 550w

"If Mr. Lewis is effective in the portrayals of the pre-war lives of these men, he is little short of masterful in his concluding account of the raid on Kiel and its heart-breaking aftermath. It is pages such as these, filled with the beauty of motion and the courage of men grappling with fate, which again remind one that, slowly but surely, a literature of the air is evolving which may, some distant day, rival that of the sea." Herbert Kupferberg

+ Weekly Book Review p4 My 14 '44 750w

LEWIS, CLIVE STAPLES (CLIVE HAMILTON, pseud). Christian behaviour; a further series of broadcast talks. 70p $1 Macmillan [2s 6d Bles]

171.1 Christian ethics 43-15459

In this series of broadcast talks the author of Screwtape Letters, takes up the Christian virtues—prudence, temperance, justice, fortitude, charity, hope and faith.

Booklist 40:225 Mr 1 '44

Bookmark 5:4 My '44

"The author displays characteristics which have made his previous contributions so exceptionally welcome. His unmistakably Christian viewpoint, his instinct for what is timely, his well balanced judgment, his outspokenness render his judgments on moral—particularly on sexual—problems as persuasive as they are sound."

+ Cath World 158:604 Mr '44 50w

"The author's special characteristics, in thought and style are exhibited at their best in the discussion of ethical questions. Here, rather than in apologetics, is a field in which his sound common sense, the freshness of his lay approach, and his confident though rather naive faith yield the most substantial results."

+ Christian Century 61:114 Ja 26 '44 80w

Reviewed by F. J. Moore

Churchman 158:16 F 15 '44 120w

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '44

"The brief chapters offer a discussion of Christian morality in language that is concise, but far from trite, made clear by illustrations that are always contemporaneous and often brilliant, without being banal. Lewis has a flair for the simplicities of Anglo-Saxon monosyllables. His sentences are deceptive; they carry a heavy burden of serious thought and the basic principles of conduct. He succeeds in making goodness an adventure in living." R. E. Keighton

+ Crozer Q 21:186 Ap '44 150w

"It is not every radio script that will stand the scrutiny given to the printed page. It is still rare to find broadcast talks that really should be widely broadcast in printed form. This series of radio broadcasts is an exception, as those familiar with Dean Lewis' earliest series published under the title The Case of Christianity would expect. It is an exception because the author is an exceptional writer whose approach to religious and moral subjects is so original and fresh and arresting."

+ Kirkus 12:67 F 1 '44 160w

Library J 69:646 Ag '44 30w

— New Repub 110:578 Ap 24 '44 1100w

"Clive Staples Lewis, fellow and tutor of Magdalen College, Oxford, is neither a Jowett nor a Newman. But the author of the daemonic 'Screwtape Letters' and the fantastic novel 'Perelandra' is not lacking in some of the gifts of those famous men. His mind is very clear; his style exhibits the costly simplicity that is achieved only after much learning and thinking and pruning away of non-essentials." H. J. Forman

+ N Y Times p12 Ap 23 '44 480w

Reviewed by J. K. Mozley

Spec 170:392 Ap 23 '43 340w

LEWIS, CLIVE STAPLES (CLIVE HAMILTON, pseud). Perelandra. 238p $2 Macmillan [8s 6d Lane]

44-3319

Dr Ransom, Cambridge philologist, hero of the author's Out of the Silent Planet (Book Review Digest, 1943) takes another interplanetary trip, this time to Venus or Perelandra. The planet is in its formative state and its first human inhabitants are known as the King and the Lady. Evil in the form of an earthly professor of physics arrives to tempt the Lady, but the power of good, embodied in Dr Ransom, succeeds in casting out evil.

"If the reader can bring himself to accept Lewis' plan, which is by no means orthodox science-fiction, he should find much to enjoy in 'Perelandra.' The book is engagingly written, if at times a little tiring; Lewis makes no concession whatever to pulp fiction, though there are scenes of a fight between Ransom and Weston and of a pursuit on the backs of winged fish; and his pace is leisurely throughout, so that his book stands at the opposite pole from the Mars adventures of Edgar Rice Burroughs." August Derleth

+ — Book Week p2 Ap 9 '44 290w

Booklist 40:304 My 1 '44

"Perhaps only Dante could do full justice to the tremendous hypothesis of God's relations with other worlds than our own. Certainly Mr. Lewis' imagination dips over at moments into delirium, while to resolve so subtle a conflict by means of a final fist fight seems rather an anti-climax. But readers who enjoy these interplanetary speculations will find this experiment 'on the side of the angels.'" Katherine Brégy

+ — Cath World 159:184 My '44 250w

"Mr. Lewis's imagination is luxurious and scholarly, and his power of suspense considerable. So considerable, indeed, that it actually carries over into what one imagines will be the third instalment of Ransom's adventures." Harold Hobson

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 5 '43 950w

"This reviewer . . . is convinced that Mr. Lewis loads the dice rather heavily for his own Eve. Quite obviously, left alone, she would not have overcome Satan. . . Aside from [this] it is writing of the highest order. Definitely in the Wellsian vein, 'Perelandra' is, from all standpoints, far superior to other tales of interplanetary adventures." J. G. Brunini

+ — Commonweal 40:90 My 12 '44 500w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 30 '43 130w

Reviewed by Alistair Cooke

New Repub 110:580 Ap 24 '44 330w

"One of the most exciting stories since H. G. Wells' 'Invisible Man.' Mr. Lewis has a divergent philosophy from Mr. Wells, but he has an equal genius for making his fantasies livable. Since Perelandra is apparently a planet much resembling Paradise, he has here accomplished a peculiarly difficult job—that of representing the sights, sounds, smells and all the unfamiliar physical sensations of a state of perfection." Marjorie Farber

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 26 '44 900w

"Readers who like this sort of metaphysical abracadabra will probably enjoy it hugely. Those who prefer their nonsense straight, however, had better curl up under the nearest bong tree with a copy of Edward Lear."

New Yorker 20:82 Ap 1 '44 230w

"Mr. Lewis is beyond question one of the most exciting and satisfactory writers who has come to the surface out of the maelstrom of these turbulent times. That he should have done so is not to be wondered at. He has a powerful, discriminating and, in the proper sense of the word, poetic mind, great learn-

LEWIS, C. S.—Continued
ing, startling wit, an overwhelming imagination, a charming and disarming naiveté, and the capacity to express himself best described by saying: 'He can write.' " Leonard Bacon

+ Sat R of Lit 27:9 Ap 8 '44 1150w

"Ransom narrates his legendary experience vividly, and at times even movingly. But with too great a weight of circumstantial detail, and too laboured an insistence on relating the ineffable to the obvious. The truth being, I think, that bravely as Mr. Lewis has assaulted the high and mighty symbols of human hope, serious and imaginative as is his purpose, the thing he intends—as we glimpse it towards the end in his best chapters—cannot be done at the pace and within the structure of narrative prose. It is a subject only for verse, and verse at its most immense; and were its purpose not even philosophic and nobly didactic, as it is, but simply imaginative and sensuous, it still would ask too much of prose." Kate O'Brien

+ — Spec 170:458 My 14 '43 450w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 9 '44 600w

"It is impossible to avoid some comparison with Mr. Olaf Stapledon's 'Star-Maker,' and 'Last and First Men,' in our consideration of this remarkable study. There is in both the same rare power of inventive imagination, and something of the graphic vigour of language. But there is a fundamental difference in the underlying philosophies. Mr. Lewis is an idealist who has no doubt of the ultimate issue between spirit and matter, good and evil. The new world of Venus will, in the light of his vision, avoid the grosser developments of our own earth, and Ransom's last experience on the planet was a glorious ceremony of initiation. How far the reader will be able to accept Mr. Lewis's cosmology will depend entirely on his or her own attitude towards first and last things."

Times [London] Lit Sup p209 My 1 '43 300w

"Mr. Lewis has brought to Perelandra's fashioning gifts of imagination and scholarship. However, the theme is frequently lost in the shapes he has created for his imaginings of life on the planet Venus, and the detail into which he enters in describing the economy of life in what seems to be for him a world of ideal beauty. For the reviewer, 'Perelandra,' with its shifting islands, Atlantidean flowers and fruits and immediately accessible epicurean creature comforts, was a place of nightmare horror. That probably would be the reaction of many a reader in this fortuitously safe continent." Clare Godfrey

Weekly Book Review p8 Ap 2 '44 480w

LEWIS, DOMINIC BEVAN WYNDHAM. Ronsard. 340p il $3.50 Coward-McCann [12s 6d Sheed]

B or 92 Ronsard, Pierre de 44-8460

Study of the life and works of the sixteenth century French poet, Ronsard, written by an English scholar. Index.

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Book Week p4 N 26 '44 100w

Booklist 41:104 D 1 '44

Reviewed by E. V. R. Wyatt

Cath World 160:273 D '44 800w

"Wyndham Lewis's pictures of the old suffering, working, smiling poet are as vivid as the earlier ones of life at the feverish University of Paris, and once again mark the author as a superb biographer. The mantle of Hilaire Belloc—to whom the present volume is dedicated—seems to have fallen upon his shoulders. But like every true artist, he 'wears it with a difference.' " Katherine Bregy

+ Commonweal 41:80 N 3 '44 700w

Kirkus 12:467 O 1 '44 130w

"Mr. Wyndham Lewis is ever provocative. . . He makes Ronsard in his studies, loves, and companions move firmly on a background which is ever credible. The narrative is interspersed with poems, quoted with translations, which show to those who may need convincing that Ronsard was one of the greatest poets of France. This is a good volume for war reading: it invites the reader into the sixteenth century with as companions a poet who understood beauty and an author who has wit and a mind of his own, sharply edged." B. I. E.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 My 24 '44 200w

Reviewed by T. W. Earp

New Statesman & Nation 28:92 Ag 5 '44 1400w

"Wyndham Lewis has the first gift of the historian—which is likewise the first gift of poet, preacher or statesman—to wit, the sense of life. His book satisfies the great aspiration of Michelet; 'History is resurrection.' Minor blemishes cannot mar that fundamental virtue. If, once in a while, Wyndham Lewis' information dances on the brink of the fantastic, let the most pedantic among us remember their manifold sins. I was too much under the author's charm to keep tally of all his little heresies." Albert Guerard

+ — N Y Times p34 N 12 '44 1600w

"Mr. Wyndham Lewis's besetting sin is exaggeration; he will spoil a good point by overstatement. . . This weakness for effect runs through the book. . . What Mr. Lewis has done is to reveal (perhaps even to some who were familiar with the 'Institution' to Charles IX) that Ronsard's grasp of reality was both wider and firmer than we are apt to suppose. He points his readers to a good deal of Ronsard that is graver, and maybe higher, than the familiar pieces, but every bit as universally true and as eternally beautiful."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p234 My 13 '44 2100w

Reviewed by John Erskine

Weekly Book Review p5 O 15 '44 1500w

LEWIS, MRS MARY CHRISTIANNA (MILNE) (CHRISTIANNA BRAND, pseud). Green for danger. 199p $2 Dodd

44-7194

Detective story.

"You'll find the scenes of hospital life fascinating, but you may get a little tired of the rehashing of alibis indulged in by the suspects every time they're off duty." Elizabeth Bullock

+ — Book Week p7 S 3 '44 130w

New Repub 111:286 S 4 '44 30w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p10 S 3 '44 100w

"A good, solid story, guaranteed to make you feel squeamish about operations for some time to come."

+ New Yorker 20:68 S 2 '44 100w

"Above average."

+ Sat R of Lit 27:23 S 2 '44 40w

"A glittering exhibit from the topmost drawer." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p8 S 3 '44 110w

LEWIS, WARFIELD, ed. Fighting words: stories and cartoons by members of the armed forces of America; published under the auspices of the armed forces service league. 330p il $3 Lippincott

Short stories—Collections. World war, 1939—Humor, caricatures, etc. 44-6479

Collection of twenty-five stories and twenty-eight cartoons, all winners in a contest sponsored by the Armed Forces service league. All the stories but two are war stories; and cartoons and stories alike are by members of the armed forces. Brief biographical notes on contributors.

"Included inexplicably in a volume otherwise wholly devoted to the war are two mediocre hillbilly stories which are totally incongruous. Their inclusion is an editorial blunder. The cartoons, with two or three gratefully acknowledged exceptions, are a sad lot far inferior in general level of merit to the stories. Most of them are of high-school annual brand of humor. The book would be better off without them." J. T. Frederick

+ — Book Week p6 Ag 13 '44 310w

Booklist 41:59 O 15 '44

Kirkus 12:221 My 15 '44 130w

"Treatment is amateurish—both as fighter and writer—but there is value in the book because of the type of work included. Stories are good pictures of times and minds." K. T. Willis

+ — Library J 69:603 Jl '44 70w

"A conspicuous thing about this book is the almost complete absence of the flip, wise-cracking bravado-in-the-face-of-death which the movies and magazine stories have asked us to believe is the native speech of American soldiers. One can find here the real service man, not observed from the outside but reported from within—really within—and in many cases with skill and powerful effect. The cartoons . . . are almost uniformly poor and cannot compare with those published weekly in Yank, the Army magazine." Stanley Kauffmann

+ — N Y Times p6 Jl 30 '44 440w

Reviewed by Lee Varley

Springf'd Republican p4d D 24 '44 330w

"To create out of such undertones stories that are complete in themselves, balanced and moving, requires a high degree of feeling and skill. The surprising thing in this collection is not that many stories are uneven and some trivial, but that so many of them show a firm, mature proficiency. . . The cartoons, selected by Jerry Doyle and Captain M. Victor Guinness, U. S. M. C., show finish and humor, and occasionally sophistication." Eugene Lohrke

+ — Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 13 '44 500w

Wis Lib Bul 40:126 O '44

LEWISOHN, LUDWIG. Breathe upon these. 218p $2.50 Bobbs

44-2500

Novel based on Nazi brutality and the British treatment of Zionists in Palestine. The time is 1942; the story purports to be told by a refugee Jewish scientist and his doctor wife during a dinner and afternoon at the home of the American head of the Burnett optical company, where the scientist is engaged.

"Dr. Dorfsohn (or Lewisohn) will move his readers, as he moves the Burnetts, by the blazing intensity of his pain, by the searing justice of his testimony and denunciation. One forgets the artificiality of setting, style and situation. What one remembers is Lewisohn, the philosopher-poet, weeping over the needless sinking of the Struma, the needless dying and torture and pain." Leo Shapiro

Book Week p3 Mr 5 '44 420w

Booklist 40:251 Mr 15 '44

"The message is sincere and moving, but gains nothing by being put into the novel form, which staggers under the load of propaganda, and turns to an artificial situation and to exposition instead of to plot and characterization." N. E. Monroe

— + Cath World 159:91 Ap '44 230w

"A sermon, in thin guise as a novel, carries enlightenment and truth, but is almost too obvious for the average reader."

Kirkus 12:24 Ja 15 '44 160w

"Lewisohn's novel is a failure, not only because it is poorly written and mechanically, implausibly contrived. It fails because Lewisohn's courage fails—just at the point where it must accompany his anger—fails to admit how desperate, how frankly hopeless, is the plight of the Jews." Isaac Rosenfeld

— + New Repub 110:509 Ap 10 '44 320w

Reviewed by Frances Witherspoon

N Y Times p20 Mr 19 '44 600w

"It is good for us here in this country to have our apathy shattered by a recital of suffering and death, but Mr. Lewisohn, who, sometimes, even in his most serious moments, teeters on the brink of absurdity, is hardly the man to do it."

— New Yorker 20:86 F 26 '44 180w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 12 '44 600w

"'Breathe Upon These' is written with terrific sincerity, and a type of eloquence not perfectly calculated to serve its admirable purpose. The pamphleteer and the novelist are working at cross purposes." F. H. Bullock

+ — Weekly Book Review p6 F 27 '44 650w

LEWITON, MINA. John Philip Sousa: the march king; il. by Howard Simon. 60p $1.50 Didier pubs.

B or 92 Sousa, John Philip—Juvenile literature

44-633

Short biography of John Philip Sousa for young readers. Includes a list of Sousa's marches.

Booklist 40:306 My 1 '44

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 20:104 Mr '44 70w

"May be recommended for ages nine to twelve or fourteen, but cannot supplant, for warm human interest, the autobiography Marching Along, from which some of the material is taken." Maude Adams

Library J 69:206 Mr 1 '44 70w

"This is a book which leaders of school bands and orchestras will be glad to recommend to budding musicians, and, once embarked on this account of the March King's life, boys and girls will read it with interest." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p27 Mr 19 '44 200w

"As brisk as the music of a military band, and as emphatically patriotic, is this short life of the man whose name means a march tune to all of us. . . Howard Simon's illustrations in colored crayon give the book its chief distinction and period flavor."

+ New Yorker 20:59 Jl 8 '44 90w

Reviewed by Maria Cimino

Sat R of Lit 27:27 Ag 19 '44 110w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p5 Mr 5 '44 300w

Wis Lib Bul 40:57 Ap '44

LEY, WILLY. Rockets; the future of travel beyond the stratosphere. 287p $3.50 Viking

629.13338 Rockets (aeronautics)

44-4167

"This book on rockets [is] devoted to their Past and Present as recorded by history and to their Future as indicated by theory." (Introd) Contents: The beginnings of an idea; The decades of the great dreams; "The rocket's red glare, . . ."; Prophets with some honor; The battle of the formulae; Success, failure, and politics; The meteorological rocket; The rocket into cosmic space; The spaceship; Terminal in space. Bibliography. Index.

"Ley writes with authority, having spent several years as an officer of the German Rocket Society. His book is not pedantic, although it abounds with facts. He has a vivid imagination, his writing is exciting, yet he keeps his feet on the ground. Without a knowledge of the basic mathematics involved a deep understanding of space travel is impossible. However, Ley's book, which avoids most of the mathematics, gives an excellent idea of the problems and what progress can be expected. This is an outstanding and entertaining book, which, I believe, can be easily read by persons not trained in science." Rufus Oldenburger

+ Book Week p6 My 14 '44 650w

Booklist 40:336 Je 1 '44

Chem & Eng N 22:1872 O 25 '44 30w

Kirkus 12:113 Mr 1 '44 190w

Library J 69:119 F 1 '44 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:49 Jl '44

"This book cannot be regarded as something evanescent. It is bound to be used for reference by astronautic historians of the future. Ley happens to have taken an active part in the development of the rocket both in his native Germany and in the United States. . . Especially valuable is Ley's critique of the attempts that have been made to reduce the rocket principle to practice." Waldemar Kaempffert

+ N Y Times p4 My 21 '44 700w

"Mr. Ley, in presenting his subject, has a touch of the scientific show-off, but his professional anecdotes and his personal details of the careers of the pioneer rocketists all go to make his book good reading. It does not seem to be the book of a crank, though he tells us he has been taken for one." Edmund Wilson

LEY, WILLY—Continued
+ New Yorker 20:75 Je 10 '44 1150w

"Known in this country, to which he came in 1935, as the author of 'The Lungfish and the Unicorn,' 'The Days of Creation,' and 'Bombs and Bombing,' Willy Ley had earlier gained renown in his native Germany for his research on rockets. In his present erudite, but at the same time rather popular presentation of fact and theory, he gives the American public what is probably the first inclusive history and scientific prediction of rockets and their uses. It is a distinct achievement to have framed much that is abstract mathematical physics into so palatable a form for the layman." A. H. Compton & others
+ Scientific Bk Club R 15:1 My '44 950w

"Mr. Ley set out to say everything about rockets that could be said, and he has admirably succeeded. For those enthusiasts who enjoy their Buck Rogers with official scientific trimmings this book should prove a bible indeed." D. O. Woodbury
+ Weekly Book Review p8 My 28 '44 400w

LEYSON, BURR WATKINS. Elements of mechanics. 176p il $2.50 Dutton
621.81 Machinery. Mechanics, Applied
44-3145

"A readable, elementary book explaining the workings of some basic mechanisms and telling how they developed. The account covers water turbines evolved from the primitive water wheel, crushing and grinding machines, hydraulic presses, water, and air pumps, levers, gears, and clutches. Of particular interest is the chapter on locks and locking devices." (N Y New Tech Bks) For boys and adults. Index.

Booklist 40:313 My 15 '44

Reviewed by Alice Monroe
Horn Bk 20:213 My '44 60w

"A readable and understandable explanation for the lay person of what machines are and what makes them go."
+ Kirkus 12:174 Ap 1 '44 50w

Library J 69:463 My 15 '44 30w

Reviewed by Alice Monroe
Library J 69:506 Je 1 '44 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:9 Ja '44

Wis Lib Bul 40:112 Jl '44

LEYSON, BURR WATKINS. Plastics in the world of tomorrow. 184p il $2.50 Dutton
668.4 Plastics. Plastics industry 44-6474

Study of plastics for the layman, showing the manifold uses of this substance, now and in the future. For military reasons, some of the new uses of plastics cannot be discussed in this book. Includes a list of uses in various industries. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 41:55 O 15 '44

Kirkus 12:407 S 1 '44 90w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:700 S 1 '44 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:48 Jl '44

Sat R of Lit 27:49 N 11 '44 20w

"For those who would like to know a little about the field of plastics, this is a well-written, interesting introduction and the short bibliography at the end of the book points the way to further knowledge for those who wish to pursue the subject." H. G. Dikeman
+ Springf'd Republican p8 O 11 '44 390w

Reviewed by James Stokley
Weekly Book Review p6 Ja 14 '45 80w

Wis Lib Bul 40:157 D '44

L'HOMMEDIEU, MRS DOROTHY KEASBEY. Skippy, the little Skye terrier; il. by Marguerite Krimse. 58p $1.75 Lippincott
Dogs—Legends and stories 44-40382

Skippy, a Skye terrier puppy, left behind for a day by his mistress, decides to be a bad little dog, just to show his disapproval. But everything he does backfires; at the end of the day all he has accomplished is a reputation for being a good little puppy.

Booklist 41:171 F 1 '45

"Recommended for all libraries. Can be read by children in third and fourth grades." M. F Cox
+ Library J 70:71 Ja 15 '45 70w

"Will greatly amuse small readers; and the pictures of his encounters with duck, mole and a small black kitten will delight dog lovers of any age." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p10 Ja 7 '45 100w

LIEB, FREDERICK GEORGE. St Louis Cardinals; the story of a great baseball club. 213p il $2.75 Putnam
796.357 St Louis Cardinals. Baseball
44-6951

Describes the activities and achievements of the St Louis Cardinals from their beginnings back in 1876, to the present year. Contains many illustrations and anecdotes.

Booklist 41:37 O 1 '44

Kirkus 12:292 Jl 1 '44 130w

"Of special interest is account of growth of farm system pioneered by Branch Martin. Book is timely for Cardinals seem well on way toward winning 1944 Pennant. Recommended." H. M. Brogan
+ Library J 69:702 S 1 '44 80w

Reviewed by J. K. Hutchens
N Y Times p20 Ag 27 '44 600w

"Pretty good stuff, written for the most part in pedestrian style. Mr. Lieb manages somehow to make the best of baseball anecdotes sound a trifle boring."
+ — Weekly Book Review p10 S 3 '44 900w

LIEBELER, MRS JEAN (MAYER). You, the jury. 306p $2 Farrar 44-6667
Mystery story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p10 S 10 '44 180w

Booklist 41:90 N 15 '44

"With courtroom clashes, judicial and legal interpretations, and friendly and unfriendly witnesses, the background is well filled in for this solid whodunit."
+ Kirkus 12:265 Je 15 '44 190w

"This is an engrossing story of a juror who takes her responsibility seriously and refuses to be swayed by the arguments and abuse of her colleagues." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p18 Ag 27 '44 120w

"Absorbing."
+ Sat R of Lit 27:23 S 2 '44 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p19 Ag 27 '44 80w

LIEBER, MRS LILLIAN (ROSANOFF). Education of T. C. Mits; drawings by Hugh Gray Lieber. rev & enl ed 230p $2.50 Norton
510 Mathematics 44-40067

"This 'funny little book,' with its saucy, enigmatic drawings and its strange typography that looks like free verse, but isn't, deserves much more space than we can possibly allow it. Its hero is The Celebrated Man in the Street, and its purpose is far more than to provide a painless introduction to the strange new algebras and geometries of modern mathematics. . . Half of the book is an exposition of classical mathematics with its demonstration of the practical effectiveness of abstract thinking. Half is concerned with the new mathematics in which 'twice two is not four,' and by virtue of which we may 'speak of living in a four-dimensional world without being either confused or mystical.' Words and drawings combine to give an enticing demonstration of the fact 'that modern art has infinitely more variety than old-fashioned art, just as mathematics today has infinitely more variety than it used to have.' " Scientific Bk Club R

Booklist 40:287 Ap 15 '44

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:205 Mr 1 '44 40w

Reviewed by M. A. Rosanoff
N Y Times p30 Ap 18 '43 750w

" 'The Education of T. C. Mits' is a delightful book that is both chastening and stimulating. I enjoyed it enormously, although the reason for the book's charm is hard to analyze. It might lie in the good-humored style, its total lack of condescension to the reader or in its fundamental faith in the human mind. More likely, the answer includes all three." Mitchell Wilson
+ N Y Times p20 My 14 '44 340w

"The book is one of those comparatively rare specimens of which it may be said that you agree with the sentiments on the dust-jacket after finishing it. There are pretty heavy guns on this dust-jacket and all of them hit. . . Banalities notwithstanding, the Liebers have written an ingenious, entertaining, and illuminating book." Leonard Bacon
+ — Sat R of Lit 27:20 Ap 15 '44 1100w

+ Scientific Bk Club R 15:3 Ap '44 360w

Reviewed by A. H. Fuller
Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 1 '44 490w

LIEBLING, ABBOTT JOSEPH. Road back to Paris. 300p $3 Doubleday

940.548 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American 44-40016

"The author went to Paris in 1939 shortly after the war started and stayed there until just before France fell. Later he went to England for several months, then made a memorable voyage back to America on a Norwegian tanker which was at sea on the day of Pearl Harbor. He went to London again in 1942 and, as soon as the landing in North Africa was announced, he set off for Oran, Algiers, and Tunisia. All this time he was writing for [the New Yorker] his remarkably well-informed pieces. The bulk of this book is compiled from them, but there is considerable new, connective material." New Yorker

---

Reviewed by Sterling North
Book Week p2 Ja 30 '44 320w

Booklist 40:210 F 15 '44

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:497 Ap '44 20w

"Skillful reporting. Recommended for small library purchase." F. A. Boyle
+ Library J 69:70 Ja 15 '44 80w

Manchester Guardian p3 S 22 '44 300w

Reviewed by Richard Match
New Repub 110:356 Mr 13 '44 240w

"An unhurried book that fills in details of events in the first three years of the war without going over the big news stories again. It isn't the kind of book that would be an especially good find for an archaeologist digging up traces of our civilization in the year 3944—he might be able to piece together a crude outline of the start of the war in Europe, but it couldn't be anything definitive. On the other hand, anyone who has read the daily papers since 1939 will find its details vivid, perceptive, funny, pathetic, encouraging and much more." Daniel Schwarz
+ N Y Times p5 Ja 23 '44 900w

New Yorker 19:67 Ja 22 '44 140w

"The book is spotty and varied in pace, but seasoned with a lightness of touch and a sprinkling of wit that save it from the oracular tone of some of our war reports. Mr. Liebling is at his best in writing of the French, because he knows them best; but after he learned to know the English he admitted that they are not so stuffy as they think they are. . . This is not one of the grands reportages of the war, but it succeeds in getting close to the core of the people who fight it at home and at the front." S. L. McGee
+ Sat R of Lit 27:7 Ja 29 '44 700w

Springf'd Republican p7e F 13 '44 600w

"The book is not conventionally exciting or sensational. There are no 'disclosures.' The author does not deal in a large way with military operations or political developments. Quietly, wittily and humanly he introduces the reader to the common men in and behind the battle, and because of that probably gives a truer picture of things than most books about the war."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p421 S 2 '44 1300w

"Probably no other correspondent has made better use of his time; certainly no other war book is as amiable, witty and heartwarming as this one. The explanation undoubtedly lies in Liebling's genius for writing about interesting people, most of whom are not other newspaper men." Herbert Kupferberg
+ Weekly Book Review p5 F 6 '44 1100w

LIEPMANN, KATE K. Journey to work; its significance for industrial and community life; with a foreword by A. M. Carr-Saunders. (Int. lib. of sociology and social reconstruction) 199p maps $3.50 Oxford [15s Routledge]

331.83 Labor and laboring classes—Transportation [44-3511]

A British sociological study of the various aspects of the daily journey to and from work which has come to be a prominent feature in an industrial civilization. "The first part of the book is occupied by a general discussion of the issues raised by the journey to work. The second part provides statistical information, both on the methods of inquiry and on the results obtained. . . A final chapter puts forward the conclusions and recommendations which emerge from the statistical examination and from the general discussion. The study is based on peace-time conditions but takes account of such war-time features as appear likely to be of importance for future development." (Introd) Index.

Reviewed by Rachel Kestenberg
Am J Soc 50:245 N 13 '44 400w

"The book is heavily weighted with descriptive and statistical material and sociological jargon as compared with the natural question of a reader as to what may best be done by concerns to reduce the strains and increase the advantages of travel to work. The statistical tables and some of the material could be cut down or summarized and the study made less of a monograph and more of a presentation of constructive industrial and social policy. With these limitations, it is a thorough source book on the nature of the problem, and a widely factual statement of a familiar experience." Herman Feldman
+ — Ann Am Acad 236:196 N '44 360w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 S 10 '44 270w

"A timely as well as a scholarly and well-documented piece of research into an important aspect of physical planning." Elizabeth Denby
+ New Statesman & Nation 27:260 Ap 15 '44 850w

Spec 172:134 F 11 '44 170w

"This is a book which town-planners and alert industrialists cannot afford to neglect, however much they may differ in their outlook from the author."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p244 My 20 '44 850w

LILIENTHAL, DAVID ELI. TVA; democracy on the march. 248p il $2.50 Harper

627.1 Tennessee Valley authority 44-3037

Describes the Tennessee Valley Authority "as an example of how a government-inspired project vastly increases the amount of free enterprise and prolongs it far into the future." (Henry A. Wallace) Partial contents: New life from the land; The people's dividend; A seamless web; Democracy at the grass roots; The release of human energies; The decisions of businessmen; Experts and the people; Modern tools for a modern job; What about 'politics'?; TVA and world reconstruction. An appendix contains, Some references for technicians. Index.

LILIENTHAL, D. E.—Continued

Am Hist R 49:802 Jl '44 20w

Reviewed by C. S. Ascher
Am Pol Sci R 38:561 Je '44 900w

Reviewed by Harlan Trott
Ann Am Acad 235:156 S '44 400w

Booklist 40:279 Ap 15 '44

Bookmark 5:5 My '44

Reviewed by Paul Hutchinson
Christian Century 61:559 My 3 '44 800w

Commonweal 39:655 Ap 14 '44 700w

Eng N 132:111 Je 15 '44 320w

"As one of the administrators from the start and more recently as Chairman of the TVA, Lilienthal writes eloquently of that achievement of democracy and science, of the people —for the people—by the people. . . The chief value of a book such as this today is that TVA stands for a model of what government intervention and economic planning can—at its best—achieve."
+ Kirkus 12:128 Mr 15 '44 160w

"Recommended as text on social studies or regional planning." D. F. Lucas
+ Library J 69:159 F 15 '44 100w

"Of all the books I have read during the past twelve months, Lilienthal's on the TVA is to me the most exciting. It is exciting because it describes the new democracy in terms as real as a juicy steak. Curiously enough, there is nothing in this book to offend nine out of ten business men." H. A. Wallace
+ New Repub 110:414 Mr 27 '44 1100w

"The book is simply but ably written. Its interest is compelling and the story it tells is one of deep concern to the whole American people." D. F. Fleming
+ N Y Times p4 Ap 9 '44 1100w

New Yorker 20:90 Ap 8 '44 90w

Reviewed by Jonathan Daniels
Sat R of Lit 27:25 Ap 15 '44 800w

"The book deals basically with the philosophy of administration. It advocates a philosophy that is unquestionably democratic. The book should, therefore, be read by all school and college administrators. It could be used by them as a yardstick (as the TVA is a power yardstick) to evaluate their administration. If this writer's observations are correct, a great many administrators need to make some changes in their administration; for there is good reason to believe with Mr. Lilienthal that 'the job of our time can be done . . . not only for the people but by the people.' " J. P. Milligan
+ School & Society 60:334 N 18 '44 900w

"What constitutes a great book? There are many and divers answers to that question. In this instance, we may justly call Mr. Lilienthal's effort a 'great,' for it is characterized by direct and lucent prose, clear and logical thinking, and a high faith, founded on proved fact, that such projects as TVA are workable and advantageous, regionally, nationally, and internationally." A. H. Compton & others
+ Scientific Bk Club R 15:1 Ap '44 1300w

"A remarkable book, likely to impress intelligent conservatives almost as much as it will please intelligent liberals. Furnishing such a needful common ground for such people, it might have been titled 'Hands Across the Tennessee.' " Marshall Bragdon
+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 1 '44 750w

Reviewed by P. A. Waring
Survey G 33:330 Jl '44 550w

"For ten years, as member and chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority, David Lilienthal has virtually lived in a gold-fish bowl, every thought and act being exposed to the public view. He has stood the test remarkably well. He has become a shrewd bargainer, a competent administrator and a clever advocate. He is a likable and interesting person. All these qualities are revealed in his book on the TVA." L. M. Hacker
+ Weekly Book Review p1 Ap 9 '44 1650w

Wis Lib Bul 40:69 My '44

LILLIE, FRANK RATTRAY. Woods Hole marine biological laboratory. 284p il $4 Univ. of Chicago press

574.072 Woods Hole, Massachusetts. Marine biological laboratory A44-2768

Account of the establishment, growth, and present status of the institution for the study of marine biology at Woods Hole, Massachusetts. "Many interesting documents pertaining to the institution are printed in the appendixes, and much interesting information is given concerning the other scientific institutions in Woods Hole—the laboratory of the United States Bureau of Fisheries, erected in 1885, and the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution, founded in 1929." (Scientific Bk Club R) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:606 Jl '44 40w

"Everyone who has ever worked in any of the three institutions in Woods Hole will of course want to read this book, but it is of general interest as well to all who are concerned with the progress of science. It stands as Exhibit A in favor of cooperation among scientists, complete independence from outside control, self-government by professional biologists who compose the board of trustees as well as occupy all administrative posts, and national scope devoid of any semblance of provincialism."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 15:4 S '44 420w

LIM, SIAN-TEK. Folk tales from China; with il. by William Arthur Smith. 160p $2 Day

398.2 Tales, Chinese 44-40149

Old Chinese tales and historical anecdotes retold for older boys and girls. Many of the tales have a tendency toward the moralistic. The stories were collected by the author during the years 1930-1940, "from the great field of Chinese folklore, from ancient volumes . . . and from classic works . . . and from modern collections."

"In the city the storytellers have a definite place in society. I can recall with nostalgic delight my first experience with my brother in a teahouse where the most famous storyteller in the city of Foochow held forth. That is why it gave me a great deal of personal pleasure to read Lim Sian-tek's 'Folk Tales from China.' The 60-odd stories contained in the book are much more simply told than is usual in China; nevertheless, they possess the same charm and human warmth which characterize most Chinese folk tales." C. C. Cheng
+ Book Week p4 Jl 9 '44 180w

Booklist 40:379 Jl 1 '44

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 20:285 Jl '44 70w

"Recommended." J. E. Wooster
+ Library J 69:654 Ag '44 80w

"[This book], with its careful selection from the great body of Chinese folk literature, is welcome as a book for somewhat older boys and girls who are interested in the history of China." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p20 Je 18 '44 80w

"The stories Mr. Lim has selected are delightful in themselves and full of humor and fantasy and he has written them in clear and charming English. . . The book is charmingly bound and illustrated and will give pleasure to many readers, young and old." Eleanor Lattimore
+ Weekly Book Review p3 Ag 6 '44 750w

LIMING, ROY A. Practical analytic geometry with applications to aircraft [with tables]. 326p il $4.50 Macmillan

629.1341 Airplanes—Design and construction. Geometry, Analytic 44-3935

"The object of this textbook is twofold: to answer the need for a practical system of analytic calculation techniques for direct use in the aircraft, automotive and marine industries; and to provide the student of mathematics with the motivation that comes only with seeing his subject suffciently alive and creative in industrial fields of activity." Special Libraries

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:205 Mr 1 '44 60w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:27 Ap '44
Special Libraries 35:101 Mr '44

LINCOLN, ABRAHAM. Abraham Lincoln; selections from his writings; ed. with an introd. by Philip S. Foner. 96p 85c Int. pubs.
308 44-3900

Selections from Lincoln's writings and speeches, arranged under the headings: Democracy, Slavery, The Civil war, Labor.

Book Week p8 My 14 '44 70w

"In his introductory essay, the editor brings out with economy and clarity Lincoln's role as the driver of a difficult team. He helps the student to see precisely how Lincoln assessed the roles of different social groups at home and abroad in the great crisis. The present reviewer knows of no better introduction to an extensive and important body of democratic thought." S. L. Jackson
+ Springf'd Republican p8 Jl 21 '44 160w

LINCOLN, VICTORIA ENDICOTT (MRS VICTOR AUGUSTUS LOWE). Grandmother and the comet; an insubstantial pageant. 246p $2.50 Farrar 44-5406

A collection of short stories, autobiographical sketches, and poems, by the author of February Hill (Book Review Digest, 1934).

"Ten years ago Victoria Lincoln's very successful 'February Hill' was published; now she rewards our patience with a collection of short stories, sketches and poems. Their appeal, fresh and immediate, evokes the kind of gratitude which would like to press a bouquet into her hands. Or, in embarrassed silence, to leave one on her typewriter. And if either were possible, the obligation, though relieved, would not be greatly lessened. For this new book of hers is a delight. Skillful technically, able both to control her prose and to flick unnecessary verbiage from it, she is also spirited, having a sound heart and a five-gaited humor." Marion Strobel
+ Book Week p3 Jl 16 '44 360w
Booklist 41:14 S '44

"Not important but pleasant reading."
+ Kirkus 12:201 My 1 '44 90w

"All of the items in this collection are well written and range from sensitive psychological studies to humorous pieces about family life, including the required servants. Author has a varied style and sufficient originality of plots to eliminate almost completely the repetitiousness usually found in collected works. Recommended for those libraries specializing in American literature." H. G. Kelley
+ Library J 69:603 Jl '44 70w

"There are many examples of Miss Lincoln's true insight into childhood. Not only is she able to recapture the emotions, the unarticulated fears and jealousies, the secret pride and strange logic of children, but she has the gift of presenting them with a clear, psychological interpretation. Many of these sketches show a sympathy—almost a yearning—for childhood. . . In the poetry, even more clearly than in the prose, one notes this preoccupation with childhood. For the most part it is 'escapist' poetry, facile without being inspirational. Few of these poems have an instantaneous appeal. But some, though lacking Mrs. Parker's wit and much of her cynicism, are just as acute in observation." J. T. Lloyd
+ N Y Times p12 Jl 16 '44 420w

"The first and longest tale of the volume is a charming, unforced episode. . . A good many of the pieces, however, even though they are illuminated by the author's infectious humor, are not only 'insubstantial' as the book's subtitle disarmingly calls them, but a bit trivial. It's high time Miss Lincoln let us have a good, keen look at some of her characters instead of these little half-glimpses, diverting as they are."
+ — New Yorker 20:70 Jl 15 '44 140w

"A thrifty Frenchwoman with an elderly suitor, a taxi-driver whose hero was Lawrence of Arabia, a fantastic little house in Washington, a wonderfully typical girl of fifteen—'round each of these Miss Lincoln spins a fine web of enchantment and suspends them there so that we, too, may enjoy the rare markings, the glittering reality, the unique magic of each. Her style is as limpid and unaffected as it is effective: the whole performance is startlingly lifelike." Iris Barry
+ Weekly Book Review p4 Jl 23 '44 450w

LINCOLN library of essential information; an up-to-date manual for daily reference, for self-instruction, and for general culture. 14th ed 2174p il maps morocco $24.50, fabrikoid $19.50, library buckram $17.50; also in 2v $31.50, $23.50, $21.50 Frontier press
031 Encyclopedias and dictionaries

"This well-known encyclopedic handbook has been evaluated in Subscription Books Bulletin for January 1930, July 1934 [Book Review Digest, 1934] and October 1937 [Book Review Digest, 1937]. The primary function of the book has been to furnish concise information of wide range within a small space. This has been accomplished by utilizing every available square inch on each page and by tabulating and graphing much of the material. Arrangement is topical under twelve broad headings, e.g., literature, history, science, education, biography, etc. The material has been made easily available through thumb notching, a well subdivided table of contents and a good, comprehensive index. Articles are not signed but the list of editors and contributors, consisting primarily of college and university professors, is given. Arrangement and size of the handbook have remained the same throughout the various editions. Old material is deleted to make way for new. Some sections have been more thoroughly revised than have others." Subscription Bks Bul

"While The Lincoln Library of Essential Information cannot take the place of a standard multivolumed encyclopedia even in the smallest library or in the home, its broad scope, the ease with which it can be used, and its sound editorial policy make it an excellent tool for quick ready reference. It is recommended for the home and for all types of libraries."
+ Subscription Bks Bul 15:50 O '44 400w

LINDBERGH, ANNE SPENCER (MORROW) (MRS CHARLES AUGUSTUS LINDBERGH). Steep ascent. 120p $2 Harcourt
44-40062

Novelette, introspective in tone, in which is told the story of an American woman and her British airman husband. On a trip by plane over the Alps in 1936 Eve's thoughts turn back to her little son in England and to the child she is to bear. There is a time of terror when it seems they will not get over the mountains, and then they descend safely into Italy.

Reviewed by Sterling North
Book Week p2 Mr 19 '44 340w
Booklist 40:270 Ap 1 '44
Bookmark 5:19 My '44

"There are not today many writers with Anne Lindbergh's power to record perceptions so delicate, so warm and so acute with the just and perfect word." Katherine Brégy
+ Cath World 159:184 My '44 250w
Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '44

"No American writing today discourses as well as Mrs. Lindbergh about flying—or any other subject, for that matter. In all but a very few instances in the 'Steep Ascent' her solitary cogitations ring clear and true. The doubt persists whether one more perilous air adventure would have given a veteran flier such as the narrator an entirely new appreciation of things of earth. Her preface implies that her story will embody certain moments when time brushes eternity."

LINDBERGH, A. S.—Continued
+ — Commonweal 39:598 Mr 31 '44 450w

"Anne Lindbergh is first of all a poet; her prose style has a rhythm tuned to the rhythm of flight. She is an aware, a sentient being—her symbolism opens itself to wide interpretation, application. But the immediate value and appeal of the book lies not there, but rather in the spiritual message it carries for each reader."
+ Kirkus 12:101 Mr 1 '44 320w

"Superbly done; packed with nourishment. Recommended for universal purchase." F. A. Boyle
+ Library J 69:262 Mr 15 '44 100w

"As an adventure story it is keen and exciting. But it is much more than that. Its charm and grace are rooted in the fabric of the author's mind and in the fruit of her philosophy. For Eve, the heroine, and Anne Lindbergh are indissolubly one. The story is beautifully and simply told." Beatrice Sherman
+ N Y Times p3 Mr 19 '44 600w

"One of the most arresting short novels of recent years. There is not a whiff of politics anywhere, either, which, in view of a certain wave that the author once saw engulfing the future, is probably all to the good."
+ New Yorker 20:82 Ap 1 '44 140w

"It would be a pity if those who were disturbed by Mrs. Lindbergh's last book were to ignore this one because of it. For they would lose in so doing one of the most beautifully written, sensitive, and lovely volumes which has appeared since those earlier ones which were akin to it, 'North to the Orient' and 'Listen! the wind.'" Amy Loveman
+ Sat R of Lit 27:12 Mr 18 '44 400w

Reviewed by Eleanor Marindin
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 19 '44 190w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen
Survey G 33:222 Ap '44 290w

"Mrs. Lindbergh's is a talent with fire and ice . . . but though it speaks often of the earth, there is little in it that is earthly. Instead there is a towering introspection. Her feelings are balanced high in thin air on syncopating poetry, beholding the world in the glare of sunlight on snow. The heroic and the tropic have nurtured her thinking, not earth at all. A freezing little wind sweeps through her book like something from an ice cap." Thomas Sancton
Weekly Book Review p4 Mr 19 '44 750w
Wis Lib Bul 40:71 My '44

LINDE AIR PRODUCTS COMPANY. Oxy-acetylene handbook; a manual on oxy-acetylene welding and cutting procedures. 587p il $1.50 The company, 30 E. 42d st, N.Y. 7
671 Oxyacetylene welding and cutting
43-18214

"Intended primarily as a book of instruction in vocational schools and shops, this manual covers, in a comprehensive manner, most aspects of oxy-acetylene welding and cutting. It was previously issued under the title of Oxwelder's handbook but has now been considerably enlarged and revised. The six main sections are: General principles of oxy-acetylene process; Oxy-acetylene welding of ferrous alloys; Welding of non-ferrous alloys; Miscellaneous applications; Oxy-acetylene cutting; Inspection and management. An appendix includes such miscellaneous information as flame-adjustments for various jobs, uses of different types of welding rods, specifications and codes, data on metals and alloys." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

N Y New Tech Bks 29:50 Jl '44

"Authoritative and useful book for plant managers, for home use, and a text for trade schools and colleges." L. A. Eales
+ Library J 69:606 Jl '44 50w

LINDEMANN, KELVIN. House with the green tree; tr. by Henry Alexander. 348p $2.75 Fischer, L.B.
44-5522

Chronicle of eighteenth century Denmark. The "house with the green tree" was in a Copenhagen square, and belonged to Isert the grocer. Three generations of Iserts, their apprentices, and friends occupy the stage; the scene varies from Denmark, to the Dutch possessions in the East Indies, Africa, the Philippines, and the Nicobars in the Bay of Bengal.

"This book is a translation by Henry Alexander, and I have the feeling that it is a good one. There is excellent color and character pictured against an authentic background. The story is a bit long, but far from dull."
+ Book Week p7 Je 11 '44 150w
Booklist 40:390 Jl 15 '44
Kirkus 12:239 Je 1 '44 190w

"It is an exciting, exotic bit of history and the author brings to his story an imposing facade of careful documentation. What one misses most in this book, perhaps, is a truly memorable character to make the whole work jell." E. S. Holsaert
+ — N Y Times p13 Ag 27 '44 160w

"Translated by Henry Alexander, this really 'different' story, so well written and presented, will be excellent reading for vacation days; a book interesting enough to be called recreational reading, yet meaty." H. L. Mitchell
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 2 '44 300w

"In the character of Christopher Isert, Mr. Lindemann has drawn a vigorous and living figure. His vision of empire did not appeal to his son, who entered into the grandiose plan with reluctance and met an unhappy fate. The grandsons were the ultimate instrument of the old man's purpose, though the end result was not what he had dreamed. The story unfolds without urgency, but there are incidental rewards in the glimpses of Danish home life, the details of long voyages, and graphic descriptions of jungle life."
+ — Weekly Book Review p6 Je 11 '44 350w

LINDNER, ROBERT MITCHELL. Rebel without a cause; the hypnoanalysis of a criminal psychopath; introd. by Sheldon Glueck and Eleanor T. Glueck. 296p $4 Grune 131.34 Psychoanalysis. Hypnotism. Criminal psychology. Personality, Disorders of SG 44-211

"A case history with the full record of the hypnoanalysis through which Dr. Lindner took a young criminal psychopath. . . The 'rebel' is a young Polish-American whose recorded criminal history began at the age of twelve, and who by the time he reached Dr. Lindner, a psychologist in a Pennsylvania Penitentiary, had compiled a staggering list of criminal offenses. Under a lengthy analysis the boy's history is bared and the remote sources of his degeneracy brought to light." New Repub

"This book is a 'must' for sociologists, psychiatrists, criminologists, and others concerned with criminals." E. J. Lukas
+ Ann Am Acad 236:215 N '44 650w

"The material of 'Rebel without a Cause' might have made a very good novel. As it stands . . . it is the most exciting and one of the most deeply and tragically human stories I have read in a long time. According to the introduction, the book 'is not intended for the layman,' and it is published by a small medical publishing house, but it will be regrettable if it is read only by the psychiatrists and penologists to whom it is addressed. Like Dr. Frederic Wertham's 'Dark Legend: A Study in Murder,' it deserves a far wider audience." George Mayberry
+ New Repub 111:108 Jl 24 '44 180w

"This book may develop to be epochal in its field. The indomitable pioneering implicit in Dr. Lindner's quest of the real secret of criminalism—the causes as contrasted with the symptoms—will surely one day prevail over the indifference and cynicism that stalk the dismal corridors of prisons and pervade the sterile formalism of criminal courts. This fascinating account is mainly a behavior expert's report on an actual, though not a typical, case." E. J. Lukas

+ N Y Times p25 Ag 13 '44 900w

School & Society 60:64 Jl 22 '44 30w

Reviewed by H. E. Jensen

Social Forces 23:219 D '44 650w

LINDQUIST, GUSTAVUS ELMER EMANUEL, and others. The Indian in American life; foreword by Mark A. Dawber. 180p $1; pa 60c Friendship press

970.6 Indians of North America 44-3204

"An account of the present distribution and condition of the 400,000 Indians in the United States, a discussion of their cultural and economic problems and of government policies in regard to them, and a study of the work and the responsibilities of the Protestant churches. A large folded map shows the location of all Indian reservations. The author has had much experience in mission work among Indians, has been a member of the federal board of Indian commissioners, and is founder and secretary of the National Fellowship of Indian Workers. He and his three collaborators, who contribute one chapter each, favor 'the release of the Indian from wardship' and his assimilation into the life of the 'white' community wherever possible." Christian Century

"An excellent account."

+ Christian Century 61:465 Ap 12 '44 130w

Reviewed by E. G. Eastman

Springf'd Republican p8 Ap 28 '44 900w

LINK, MRS CAROLYN CROSBY (WILSON). There is still time. 60p $1.60 League to support poetry

811 44-51318

"[These] poems range from brief to narrative. The sonnet is a favorite form. . . In spite of some . . . descriptive pieces of persons and places, notably 'Black Boy Resting' and 'Sleeping Beauty: Old New England Seaport,' which probably point the way to future trends, the core of this first book is personal. Living is what the author cares about, and love in life." Sat R of Lit

"The League to Support Poetry has shown its usual good judgment in picking Carolyn Wilson Link's 'There is Still Time.' Mrs. Link's work has been seen more and more of late in magazines, good and often delighting work. She is in the certain tradition of better American women poets." L. T. Nicholl

+ Sat R of Lit 27:24 N 25 '44 400w

Weekly Book Review p33 N 19 '44 150w

LINKLATER, ERIC. Wind on the moon; Nicolas Bentley drew the pictures. 323p $2.75 (10s 6d) Macmillan

44-40381

Fantasy about two little English girls who embark on a career of naughtiness, to the despair of their literal-minded elders.

Reviewed by F. H. Bullock

Book Week p5 D 31 '44 360w

Booklist 41:140 Ja 1 '45

"The question is: Is this one fish, flesh, or fowl. It's a bargain anyway, because you can hand it to your youngest and he will undoubtedly be highly entertained by the saga of Dina and Dorinda and their misdeeds; or you can give it to your best friend and he will be entertained by the delicate satire in every page."

+ Boston Globe p15 D 27 '44 160w

Kirkus 12:458 O 1 '44 140w

Reviewed by Francis Bird

New Statesman & Nation 28:410 D 16 '44 60w

"This story, like 'Snow White,' could translate easily to the screen. There are delightful camera angles—such as the episode of the two little girls who turn into balloons and must be deflated." Marguerite Young

N Y Times p6 D 17 '44 470w

"Reads like a mildly amusing bedtime story, but the publishers say it's satire."

New Yorker 20:104 D 2 '44 40w

"Eric Linklater's delightful fantasy belongs in that section of the bookshelf alongside 'Alice in Wonderland,' 'The Jungle Books,' 'The Wind in the Willows,' and 'The Rose and the Ring.' Because it has that same quality of believable magic, it makes one think of all these books." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R of Lit 28:26 Ja 13 '45 650w

"It is handled very competently, but there are subtle indications that its distinguished author can resurrect the past with more conviction than the never-never, and his manner is certainly more suited to the measured paces of Socrates than the airy lunacies of walking and talking animals. The numerous illustrations by Nicolas Bentley are always exquisitely to the point."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p574 N 25 '44 150w

"Mr. Linklater writes with a puckish quality that keeps his book from bogging down under the weight of its own whimsey. There are many charming passages and much drollery is employed in the telling, but on the whole 'The Wind on the Moon' cannot be counted as one of its author's more successful books." Marion Sturges-Jones

+ — Weekly Book Review p8 D 10 '44 450w

LIPPINCOTT, JOSEPH WHARTON. Wilderness champion; the story of a great hound; il. by Paul Bransom. 195p $2 Lippincott

Dogs—Legends and stories 44-9586

A red hound pup, lost on a trail in the mountains of Alberta, is found and adopted by a huge black wolf. Later, when the dog is half-grown, and thoroly versed in the ways of the wild, he is rescued from a trap by the ranger to whom he had belonged. For several years Reddy lived with the ranger and upon his knowledge of the wild was superimposed his knowledge of the ways of men. Then he met the king of the wolf pack again, stayed with him until the old wolf died, and then returned to his human master.

Booklist 41:171 F 1 '45

"Fascinating story of a great hound. . . A rugged and dramatic dog story—good adventure—and sound background of the life in the wilds."

+ Kirkus 12:521 N 15 '44 120w

Reviewed by E. M. Beal

Library J 69:1107 D 15 '44 70w

"Mr. Lippincott is a knowledgeable sportsman. His style is forthright, unpretentious, but he can make you remember the wilderness and the suspense of the chase, the savagery of titanic battles, almost as clearly as if you had seen them first hand, and you are sure that Reddy would have behaved exactly as he did." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p30 N 26 '44 160w

Sat R of Lit 27:43 N 11 '44 40w

LIPPMANN, WALTER. U.S. war aims. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 235p $1.50 Little

940.531 World war, 1939—U.S. World war, 1939—Peace. U.S.—Foreign relations. World politics 44-5863

In effect this volume forms a supplement to Mr Lippmann's United States Foreign Policy (Book Review Digest, 1943). "This book is intended to be a report which begins with why we are at war and goes on to show how the way we have waged the war has shaped the peace that we must conserve and perfect. When we know why in truth we are fighting, how in fact we have fought, what in reality we have won, we shall know how to define our war aims." (Introd)

LIPPMANN, WALTER—Continued
"Brilliantly written, brief book." Willard Shelton
+ Book Week p6 Jl 16 '44 550w
Booklist 40:387 Jl 15 '44
Boston Globe p31 N 29 '44 50w

Reviewed by G. M. A. Grube
Canadian Forum 24:187 N '44 900w

Reviewed by Paul Hutchinson
Christian Century 61:1138 O 4 '44 1100w

"'U. S. War Aims' is a less satisfying study than was Mr. Lippmann's 'U. S. Foreign Policy,' perhaps because it gets into deeper questions about mankind's behavior and duties. But if the American people want more than it offers, they had better begin writing to their Senators." Carlyle Morgan
Christian Science Monitor p16 Jl 12 '44 950w
Cleveland Open Shelf p9 Je '44
Commonweal 41:21 O 20 '44 10w
Foreign Affairs 23:9 O '44 100w

"Lippmann makes his thesis very convincing, and the book is a constructive contribution."
+ Kirkus 12:224 My 15 '44 500w

"A sane, conservative approach to plans for a lasting peace." J. E. Cross
+ Library J 69:602 Jl '44 130w

Reviewed by P. E. Corbett
Nation 159:186 Ag 12 '44 750w

Reviewed by Albert Guérard
New Repub 111:163 Ag 7 '44 700w

"We have a new peace plan. Mr. Lippmann's proposed system for the organization of the world throws overboard so many ideas which have received much consideration, tosses away conceptions dear to so many hearts, that it is bound to be received with ample criticism, but no one will question its characteristic of novelty. For nothing just like it has been brought forward." E. L. James
+ — N Y Times p1 Jl 9 '44 1400w

"Mr. Lippmann builds up a reasonably convincing case for his somewhat geopolitical point of view, but his book, in all likelihood, is going to start far more debates than it is going to end."
New Yorker 20:58 Jl 22 '44 410w

Reviewed by Grayson Kirk
Pacific Affairs 17:507 D '44 350w

"A great deal can be said for Mr. Lippmann's thesis. He is the clearest of all writers on international policy, and one of the most incisive and forceful. He thoroughly knows his world of strategy, diplomacy and high politics. He is a realist who understands that statesmen do, in the long run, what they must do in the light of geographical and economic facts. His massive common sense knocks out the last teaspoonful of brains from the isolationists, shortsighted nationalists and sentimental pacifists. But there is much in the book to make uneasy a reader who still cherishes hopes of a truly international organization." Preston Slosson
+ — Pol Sci Q 59:599 D '44 1200w

"Mr. Lippmann, as usual, is admirable in his analysis of our present predicament. With the delicacy of a surgeon's scalpel, he probes the past, skilfully cutting away dead matter, pointing up the essentials. He has an enviable gift for compressing decades of history into a few lucid paragraphs which give new light to obscure controversies. . . It is when he comes to the admittedly baffling task of exactly how the international machinery we might be called on to operate might be devised that Mr. Lippmann raises many questions in the reader's mind." V. M. Dean
+ — Sat R of Lit 27:7 Jl 8 '44 1850w

"'United States War Aims' can and will be challenged at many points. Mr. Lippmann is tracing certain lines of development, and he would be first to admit that he cannot see all the implications of some parts of his program. But there is such healthy realism and such clarity on large issues in his exploration that it is a brilliant contribution to our thinking." M. H. B.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 16 '44 900w

Time 44:99 Jl 17 '44 1300w
Times [London] Lit Sup p565 N 25 '44 1600w

"The book is written carefully, reasoned closely, and supported with much useful historical analysis. It need hardly be said that it bristles with challenges. It is desirable that it should be read widely, discussed freely and criticized unsparingly." W. A. Neilson
+ Weekly Book Review p1 Jl 9 '44 1450w
Wis Lib Bul 40:128 O '44

Reviewed by Carl Becker
Yale R n s 34:149 autumn '44 600w

LIPTON, LAWRENCE. In secret battle. 343p $2.75 Appleton-Century
44-8715

A novel of politics and the "secret battle" against fascism in America just before and during the early months of World war II.

"Readers who liked 'Under Cover,' who don't mind a solid dash of contemporary history with frequently first-rate storytelling, will enjoy 'In Secret Battle.'" J. A. Brandt
+ Book Week p3 O 29 '44 600w

"The author knows what he is talking about and what he has to say should be known. But the prerequisite of a novel is interest in character, without which all the good material in the world is lost. And here there is none. When Ted Huntley is killed because of the faulty mechanics of the old parachute we feel only annoyance at the unnecessary waste. The fate of the others concerns us even less." Mary Poore
N Y Times p22 N 5 '44 360w
Weekly Book Review p12 N 5 '44 150w

LITTEN, FREDERIC NELSON. Sinister Island squadron. 251p $2 Dodd
44-9747

Adventure tale for older boys. The story relates the adventures of a young American engineer who signed up as a Navy flier the day Pearl Harbor was bombed. Tho he had lived in Japan most of his life and had liked the Japanese he had a deeply personal reason to do more than his duty when he undertook a flight against the Japanese on Sinister Island.

"Frederic Nelson Litten rates among our top writers for boys because, while he never forgets to tell a fast-moving story, he always has something pretty solid to say to young readers." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p4 N 12 '44 360w
Kirkus 12:512 N 1 '44 130w

"Good flying background but melodramatic ending. Personal narratives and eyewitness accounts still seem preferable to stories laid in the same settings." Eleanor Kidder
Library J 70:36 Ja 1 '45 80w

LITTLE, CONSTANCE, and LITTLE, GWENYTH. Black honeymoon. 210p $2 Doubleday 44-1672

Detective story.

Booklist 40:253 Mr 15 '44

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p10 Ja 23 '44 100w

"Determined gaiety of yarn often rings hollow, and comic-relief detective is quite incredible. Plot is interesting although confusing. Grotesque."
Sat R of Lit 27:10 Ja 22 '44 40w
Times [London] Lit Sup p621 D 23 '44 150w

"The Littles, specialists in wackiness, doubtless care not at all where and when you smile at their goings-on. Some of the story is in a more sober mood, if that is the word." Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p22 Ja 23 '44 150w

LITTLE, CONSTANCE, and LITTLE, GWENYTH. Great black Kanba. 188p $2 Doubleday

Mystery story. 44-47947

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p11 Ja 21 '45 130w

Boston Globe p15 D 27 '44 50w

Kirkus 12:413 S 15 '44 70w

"This is the third or fourth mystery story within the last few months to feature amnesia as a contributing cause—and it is the most amusing one of the lot." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p35 N 26 '44 120w

"A good idea, worked out in a rather slapdash manner."
+ — New Yorker 20:68 D 23 '44 90w

"Good."
+ Sat R of Lit 27:15 D 23 '44 40w

"Customers are advised to concentrate on the lucky penny, the razor, the toggle bolt and the barking lizard without expecting too much sense in the plot—the last thing the Littles worry about. Several murders occur, counting what happened to Uncle George that time, and the explanation is of the screwball variety." Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p26 N 26 '44 150w

LIVESAY, DOROTHY. Day and night; poems. 48p $2.50 Humphries

811 44-7827

"After reading the young Canadian poet, Dorothy Livesay, it is not surprising to learn from the jacket of her book that she comes from literary parents, that she has been a newspaper reporter, a graduate student in poetry at the Sorbonne, a social worker and a wife and mother. All of these things are reflected in her poems. . . This book, covering the production of nine years, contains seven sizable poems and two groups of shorter lyrics." Poetry

Reviewed by Margaret Avison
Canadian Forum 24:67 Je '44 950w

"The final poem, West Coast, gives the clearest, most mature expression. It is a full picture of a shipyard in the clatter and swing of war work and describes the approach and adjustment there of a poet from the mountains. As Miss Livesay's most recently written poem, it is a promising ending to the book." Ruth Stephan
+ — Poetry 65:220 Ja '45 500w

LIVINGSTON, SIGMUND. Must men hate? 344p $2.50 Harper

296 Jews—Political and social conditions 44-5528

"Mr. Livingston believes that anti-Semitism can be traced to the ignorance or misinformation about the Jew, prevalent in the Gentile world. Jew-hatred, says Mr. Livingston, is not inherited but acquired. . . The author, founder and erstwhile president of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, the world's largest Jewish fraternal organization, undertakes for the hundredth time to destroy certain obnoxious superstitions concerning the Jews, canards which, idiotic though we know them to be, are still used successfully by the fascists in their anti-Jewish campaigns. They range from the medieval ritual blood accusation to the more recent assertion that the Jews are shirkers." (New Repub) Bibliography. Index.

"The people who need this book most will probably not read it. But those disposed to receive light upon a perplexing and serious question can profit greatly from it. It is rich in historical background and in psychological insight." F. E. McMahon
+ Book Week p10 Jl 16 '44 650w

Booklist 41:7 S '44

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 61:975 Ag 23 '44 1050w

"Among the numerous books which seek to explain—and combat—anti-Semitism, this is one of the sanest and most readable."
+ Foreign Affairs 23:6 O '44 20w

Kirkus 12:159 Ap 1 '44 210w

"In so far as it may aid decent, truth-seeking non-Jews looking for material with which to refute anti-Semitic lies, the book is of considerable value. But will it change the minds of hard-boiled anti-Semites who, as Mr. Livingston asserts, are 'paralogists,' allergic to reason? Strangely enough, the author himself is influenced by such "thinking.'" Alfred Werner
New Repub 111:21 Jl 3 '44 550w

Reviewed by William Van Til
Social Educ 8:378 D '44 550w

Springf'd Republican p8 O 5 '44 270w

"This penetrating analysis of anti-Semitism is a remarkably objective exposition by a man whose familiarity with the facts is derived not only from personal experience, but from extensive study as well. It is not a dry, factual statement, nor a despairing complaint of injustice. The material Sigmund Livingston presents is useful and important." A. G. Hays
+ Weekly Book Review p16 Ag 27 '44 750w

Wis Lib Bul 40:124 O '44

LIVINGSTONE, SIR RICHARD WINN. On education; foreword by Virginia C. Gildersleeve. 309p $1.75 Macmillan

370.1 Education—Aims and objectives 44-5234

"This volume includes the text of two books by Sir Richard issued separately in England, The Future in Education and Education for a World Adrift. These books have played a considerable part in the current discussions in England of plans for reshaping the educational system after the war. Virginia C. Gildersleeve, dean of Barnard College, furnishes a Foreword for American readers." School & Society

"The book is remarkable for several reasons. First of all, it is eminently well written, full of wise and classically phrased paragraphs that will find their way into educational literature on all levels. Second, the original two small books have been best-sellers in England, where they were reviewed and discussed more comprehensively than any other educational literature. Third, Sir Richard's writings reflect an almost revolutionary reorientation which has a representative significance because of the outstanding reputation of the author as a classicist and because of the favorable reception which has been given to his work." H. D. Gideonse
+ Am J Soc 50:247 N 13 '44 350w

"These two essays are at once soundly critical and profoundly constructive. Sir Richard believes in the education of every man and of the 'whole man,' and he believes in education with a purpose. . . In my opinion 'On Education' surpasses the kindred works of such men as Robert M. Hutchins and Mark Van Doren. It merits reading and re-reading. It breathes with the vitality which made Western civilization great." A. A. Gustin
+ Commonweal 40:211 Je 16 '44 650w

School & Society 59:352 My 13 '44 60w

Reviewed by A. F. Myer
Survey G 33:396 S '44 270w

LOBECK, ARMIN KOHL, and TELLINGTON, WENTWORTH JORDAN. Military maps and air photographs; their use and interpretation; with an introd. by John K. Wright. 256p il maps $3.50 McGraw

623.71 Maps, Military. Photography, Aerial 44-3132

"Standard modern methods for interpretation of maps and aerial photographs. Stresses human attributes as power of observation, good memory, visualization and judgment of distance, time and direction. Typical maps included." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 40:372 Jl 1 '44

LOBECK, A. K.—Continued
Reviewed by W. D. Jones
Geog R 34:675 O '44 160w

Library J 69:463 My 15 '44 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:8 Ja '44

Reviewed by Murray Harris
N Y Times p22 Je 4 '44 280w

Reviewed by James Stokley
Weekly Book Review p19 Ag 13 '44 30w

LOCKRIDGE, MRS FRANCES LOUISE (DAVIS), and LOCKRIDGE, RICHARD. Killing the goose. 254p $2 Lippincott 44-1216

Detective story.

"Humor and crime are again expertly blended by the Lockridges." Elizabeth Bullock
+ Book Week p7 Ja 30 '44 230w

Booklist 40:305 My 1 '44

"One of the screwiest cases the Norths have ever been mixed up in and by the same token, one of the most amusing." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p8 Ja 30 '44 100w

"The Norths will probably gain a lot of new admirers as a result of this book."
New Yorker 19:79 Ja 29 '44 90w

"Some irritating loose-ends . . . but suspenseful plot moves according to sure-fire North formula. Pam's delphic non-sequitors amusing as ever. Top drawer."
+ Sat R of Lit 27:26 Ja 29 '44 40w

"Mr. and Mrs. North are on the beam, especially Pam, who rises to new heights in the final stages while Jerry is speaking on the Book Forum program, the most thrilling event of that kind on record." Will Cuppy
+ Weekly Book Review p14 Ja 30 '44 280w

Wis Lib Bul 40:71 My '44

LOFT, JACOB. The printing trades; with a foreword by Henry David. (Labor in twentieth century America) 301p $3 Farrar
331.7655 Printing trade 44-6151

"An account of the printing trades in America from 1899 to 1939. Covers commercial and newspaper printing and considers labor conditions, hours, wages, employer organizations, and unions. Based on exhaustive research, the statistics and findings are recorded thoroughly but in a solid, pedestrian style. Selected bibliography." Booklist

Reviewed by C. R. Daugherty
Ann Am Acad 237:242 Ja '45 450w

Booklist 41:54 O 15 '44

Reviewed by Stewart Cowan
Canadian Forum 24:212 D '44 700w

Kirkus 12:293 Jl 1 '44 120w

"[This volume] cannot be recommended for the general reader. Even the specialist may find it somewhat difficult. . . Students of labor problems will, however, find some of Mr. Loft's material of interest."
New Repub 111:670 N 20 '44 150w

LOFTS, MRS NORAH (ROBINSON). Golden Fleece. 249p $2.50 Knopf
43-18854

A tale of strange events which took place during one day and night in 1817, in an English inn, the Golden Fleece. A child is born, a woman tries to commit suicide, a man is murdered, and a mystery is solved, but the next day life resumes its usual course.

"With a little more care in the line of craftsmanship the various elements might have been more soundly established in a spiritual relationship, as well as more closely knit into a unified narrative. But even then the reader would have had to face the rather heavy style and the moralizing, like glue oozing from the joints in a whatnot, with which the author secures her structure." Peter De Vries
Book Week p4 Ja 23 '44 270w

Booklist 40:183 Ja 15 '44

"The splendid characterizations and excellent writing mark this diverting historical tale. Highly recommended for all libraries." M. P. McKay
+ Library J 69:71 Ja 15 '44 70w

"It is an excellently told tale. Norah Lofts has the almost uncanny gift of writing about olden times as if she had lived in them." Beatrice Sherman
+ N Y Times p5 Ja 16 '44 360w

"The picture of early [nineteenth]-century domestic life is brushed in lightly and expertly, but the narrative is confused and the array of characters confusing."
+ — New Yorker 19:66 Ja 22 '44 90w

" 'The Golden Fleece' skilfully marshals its characters so that each is involved in the rising tension and moves at quickening pace to the splendidly exciting climax. In this best of her historical romances Miss Lofts has contrived an enjoyable journey from our world to the dangers and drama of another century." L. S. Munn
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 16 '44 450w

"Within a classic unity of time and place, Norah Lofts deftly keeps spinning the separate little worlds which are the lives of more than a dozen people so oddly assorted that only chance and an inn could have brought them together. Nor is this a synthetic concoction, for character and circumstance interact and events long past enter inexorably into the pageant of this particular morning, afternoon and night. While the book catches and holds your attention as a story of human beings, it has also the attraction of strangeness in time and place." Mary Ross
+ Weekly Book Review p4 Ja 16 '44 550w

Wis Lib Bul 40:37 Mr '44

LOGAN, RAYFORD WHITTINGHAM, ed. What the Negro wants. 352p $3.50 Univ. of N.C. press
325.26 Negroes 44-47086

"Fourteen prominent Negroes with varying careers and reputations have contributed to this symposium. They are of one mind regarding what Negroes want. They want the simple, human things you and I want: To take part, without arbitrarily imposed handicaps, in the duties and the benefits of the society they live in; to be counted in as human beings when we white 'Christians' say 'all men are brothers,' when we white 'democrats' say 'all men are created equal.' " Weekly Book Review

Reviewed by E. B. Reuter
Ann Am Acad 237:242 Ja '45 380w

"The essays which make up the book vary widely in tone, in emotional attitude, and in specific details, but taken together they offer a real cross-section of Negro opinion. Certainly they give most of us a far fuller and truer understanding than we could hope to get in any other way. The Publisher's Introduction by W. T. Couch, a strongly written essay which is profound both in thought and in feeling, is an essential contribution to the whole picture. I recommend this book most earnestly, and congratulate both editor and publisher on the production of a book of true importance." J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p4 N 19 '44 270w

Booklist 41:119 D 15 '44

"In approaching their subject, several of the contributors have shown a remarkable gift for analysis. All of them display erudition. Some of them display much fairness." E. R. L.
Christian Science Monitor p12 N 7 '44 400w

"Recommended without reservation. Should be required reading for all Americans, white and Negro." D. R. Homer
+ Library J 69:935 N 1 '44 110w

Reviewed by J. S. Redding
New Repub 111:665 N 20 '44 850w

"Rationalization and sublimation have been the means by which we have tried to solve the American race problem, and this ably written book published by a Southern press is an outstanding example of the frontal approach." W. S. Meacham

+ N Y Times p28 N 5 '44 850w

"This [is an] impressive volume. . . The editor writes of the contributors that four of them might be called conservatives, five liberals, and five radicals. In the matters that basically count, they show, however, in spite of their differences, an amazing and heartening agreement." H. A. Overstreet

+ Sat R of Lit 27:15 N 4 '44 1200w

Scientific Bk Club R 15:2 D '44 450w

Reviewed by Mrs Paul Robeson

Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 21 '45 500w

"The conspicuous thing about the book is the spirit in which it is written, the absence of rancor and the small amount of bitterness, the reasonableness with which these men state their case, the patience with which they assume that the white man cannot forever live with his own hypocrisy. Only one contributor has dipped his pen in acid. Only in a few sentences are the words gummed with honey. Nine-tenths of the book is straightforward talk about the writer's experiences, the objectives and methods of the organization he is identified with, the actions he is taking and recommending to others, the way America looks to its second-class citizens, their alternate hope and despair regarding that large part of their lives over which they have no control." Paula Snelling

+ Weekly Book Review p3 N 12 '44 1350w

LOHSE, CHARLOTTE, and SEATON, JUDITH. Mysterious continent; the story of the adventurous sailors who discovered the south Pacific islands; maps and il. by W. R. Lohse. 165p $2.50 Bobbs

990 Oceania. Australia. South Sea islands. Explorers 44-8979

Step by step the authors tell the story of how voyagers and adventurers changed the maps of the South Pacific until out of the vast expanse of white known as Terra Incognita, emerged the outlines of the South Sea Islands and the Continent of Australia.

Booklist 41:171 F 1 '45

"Particularly interesting at this time, this gives a well-knit picture of discovery and exploration of islands highlighted in the history of today. Libraries and schools—and supplemental material for teachers."

+ Kirkus 12:322 Jl 15 '44 160w

Reviewed by Eileen Riols

Library J 69:1051 D 1 '44 50w

+ N Y Times p16 N 12 '44 80w

Springf'd Republican p4d D 17 '44 110w

"Here is a book, pat to the moment, that lasts in a library because nothing like it has been done for children."

+ Weekly Book Review p30 N 12 '44 350w

LONG, AMELIA REYNOLDS. Death has a will. 255p $2 Phoenix

44-378

Detective story.

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p12 F 13 '44 80w

"All necessary ingredients of pretty good yarn, including two likably inquisitive spinsters—but it just gets duller and duller. Soporific."

— Sat R of Lit 27:10 Ja 22 '44 40w

LONG, AMELIA REYNOLDS. Symphony in murder. 187p $2 Ziff-Davis

44-5665

Detective story.

"Clever."

+ Boston Globe p15 Je 21 '44 50w

Kirkus 12:203 My 1 '44 40w

"A fairly good story." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p16 Je 18 '44 80w

"Average."

Sat R of Lit 27:52 Je 17 '44 40w

"What rhythm and harmony are to musical composition, plot and characterization are to this type of fiction. In this second appearance of her Irish amateur criminologist, Trelawney, Miss Long achieves if not a smash hit at least a pleasant enough little tune. To those who look for excitement and suspense in a detective story, however, the volume will prove disappointing." R. J. C.

+ — Springf'd Republican p4d Je 18 '44 120w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p15 Je 18 '44 100w

LONG, CHRISTOPHER STANLEY. You. 112p $2 The author, St John's rectory, Halifax, Va.

131.324 New thought 44-3493

"The rector of St. John's Church, Halifax, Va., seems to have adopted almost the entire thesis of Unity, whose magazine has published some of these essays, which seems to be that if you desire any good thing strongly enough you may have it—health, happiness, success." Churchman

"In this little book C. Stanley Long gives needed emphasis to an aspect of life and religion seldom sufficiently stressed except by those who neglect other aspects. Great is the importance of right thinking and a consciousness of the indwelling of God."

+ Christian Century 61:49 Ja 12 '44 150w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell

Churchman 158:17 Ap 1 '44 120w

LONG, MRS GABRIELLE MARGARET VERE (CAMPBELL) (MARJORIE BOWEN, GEORGE PREEDY, JOSEPH SHEARING, pseuds). Lady and the arsenic; the life and death of a romantic, Marie Cappelle, Madame Lafarge: 1816-1852. (Smith and Durrell book) 278p $2.50 Barnes, A.S.

Lafarge, Mme Marie Fortunée (Cappelle) Pouch- —Fiction

Biography in novel form of Madame Lafarge, a young Frenchwoman, who in 1840 was convicted of poisoning her unattractive husband. Madame Lafarge, née Marie Cappelle, served twelve years of her term of life imprisonment, and was then released. Unable to re-open her case or to prove the innocence which she maintained was hers, she finally died a miserable death, at the beginning of her thirty-seventh year.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p10 F 6 '44 230w

Kirkus 12:1 Ja 1 '44 80w

"Guilty or innocent, she is the right heroine for her biographer, who presents her with color, tact, understanding and with a proper dash of sympathy. He is inclined to place the blame of her guilt, if any, on the period in which she lived." Sally Benson

N Y Times p5 F 20 '44 800w

"Mr. Shearing is as scrupulous as ever in dealing with his source material, which he has translated from the records of this cause célèbre and from Madame LaFarge's interminable memoirs. In his introductory chapters, he blames Madame LaFarge's predicament, as well as that of a number of other young ladies who were too handy with the arsenic or the knife, on the French romantic writers, and advances the rather sweeping theory that the novels of George Sand and her admirers were responsible for a crime wave in nineteenth-century France. You don't, of course, have to believe all this in order to enjoy the novel, which is full of the best Shearing brand of suspense and horror."

+ New Yorker 19:83 F 5 '44 200w

"Fictional treatment of factual cause celebre. Penetrating portrait of erratic exhibitionist with genius for publicity, and interesting recreation of feverish era. Rewarding."

+ Sat R of Lit 27:30 F 12 '44 40w

"Highly recommended to crime addicts." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p12 F 6 '44 360w

LONG, HANIEL. Power with us. See Núñez Cabeza de Vaca, A.

LONG, LAURA. Fuss 'n' feathers. 229p $2.25 Longmans

B or 92 Scott, Winfield—Juvenile literature
44-7416

Slightly fictionized biography of General Winfield Scott, written for young people.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p6 N 12 '44 230w
Booklist 41:94 N 15 '44

"A valuable addition to biography shelves—for home, school and public libraries. Fast-moving, superior reading."
+ Kirkus 12:301 Jl 1 '44 170w

Reviewed by Marian Herr
Library J 69:1051 D 1 '44 70w
Social Studies 35:384 D '44 10w
Springf'd Republican p4d O 29 '44 80w

"Laura Long's gift for bringing back alive a period of our past and setting it down, seething with its debate, in a book for the teens has even more chance in this life of Winfield Scott than in her historical stories." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p6 N 5 '44 400w
Wis Lib Bul 40:163 D '44

LONG, MANNING. Bury the hatchet. 249p $2.50 Duell
44-7097

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p7 Je 25 '44 190w
Kirkus 12:203 My 1 '44 60w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p14 My 28 '44 80w

"Good baffler."
+ Sat R of Lit 27:32 My 20 '44 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p16 My 21 '44 60w

LONGAKER, JOHN MARK. Ernest Dowson. 282p il $4 Univ. of Pa. press

B or 92 Dowson, Ernest Christopher 44-8085

Biography of an English poet of the late nineteenth century, remembered as the author of "Cynara" and for his membership in the circle that included Oscar Wilde, Arthur Symons, Richard Le Gallienne and others.

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 D 17 '44 90w
Booklist 41:76 N 1 '44

"It is a pity that the paper shortage and a livelier style had not clipped this work down to about half its present size. The most willing reader searching through the volume for the new material in it—there are some hitherto unpublished letters of interest, e.g., a few from Oscar Wilde—is bogged down in a morass of repetitions and dull circumlocutions. In fact a good pedestrian page or two in the midst of it would sweep him off his feet." Kathleen Coburn
— Canadian Forum 24:190 N '44 210w
Commonweal 41:76 N 3 '44 1000w

"A sober and readable biography of Ernest Dowson. . . The book is a good piece of research, and it goes beyond mere research in being directed by a certain sense of narrative and a warm, directive interest in Dowson. This is not enough. . . If Mr. Longaker had asked [certain] questions at the outset, and had pressed them instead of listening to the pundits who told him that 'Cynara' was 'one of the greatest lyrical poems of our time,' he might not have written so much on so little a poet. Or he might have passed beyond scholarship to criticism." E. R. B.
+ — Nation 159:534 O 28 '44 390w
New Repub 111:670 N 20 '44 180w

"Mr. Longaker has rightly chosen to do a solid rather than a brilliant job. Previous writing on Dowson, except for that of Symons, has been distinguished by its irresponsibility. It has dressed backstairs gossip in rhinestone and given it a seat at the tea table. Mr. Longaker is content with the plain cloth, which he examines thread by thread with sobriety, patience, sympathy and an occasional gleam of humor." Carlos Baker
+ N Y Times p4 O 8 '44 650w
New Yorker 20:87 O 14 '44 110w

"This straightforward study on an equivocal and ambivalent genius is in many respects a fine performance. To penetrate all the dim regions of so mysterious a personality, even if it were desirable, is perhaps impossible. And with some of Mr. Longaker's judgments we are not compelled to agree, not because we are a higher court but merely because we have our share of human cussedness. Nevertheless, his over-all estimate of the situation is as full of good sense as anything the reader is apt to encounter with respect to Ernest Dowson." Leonard Bacon
+ Sat R of Lit 27:54 O 14 '44 1000w

"Prof Longaker has thoroughly investigated all available sources of information about Dowson's life, and has discovered a considerable amount of new material. . . It cannot be said that he has explained the paradox of Dowson's life and work, but he has made it somewhat more credible. His attitude toward his subject is sympathetic without being sentimental, and he draws an honest and convincing portrait. Unfortunately his style is rather wooden and repetitious, and his anxiety for scholarly exactness often leads him to hedge his statements with qualifications which he has already indicated more than sufficiently." H. E. Woodbridge
+ — Springf'd Republican p4d N 12 '44 580w

"A painstaking, devoted biography of Dowson, which, if it does not completely rehabilitate his character or excuse his failings, at any rate makes a sympathetic understanding of his lapses possible. It also treats his poetry from first to last with the reverence that only great art can deserve. The suspicion that he may be right about the merits of Dowson's performance entitled his book to a respectful hearing." G. F. Whicher
+ Weekly Book Review p19 O 29 '44 700w

LONGSTREET, STEPHEN (THOMAS BURTON, DAVID ORMSBEE, pseuds). Nine lives with grandfather. 236p il $2.50 Messner

818 44-2246

Reminiscences of the author's highly individual grandfather, whose love of life, including food and women, extended well into his eighties.

Reviewed by Sterling North
Book Week p2 Mr 19 '44 400w

"Entertaining reading, of particularly masculine flavor."
+ Kirkus 12:19 Ja 1 '44 160w

"While not exactly suited to the delicate tastes of gentle old ladies, this roaring tale of a lusty oldster of eighty will whet the appetites of hardy souls." E. P. Potter
Library J 69:160 F 15 '44 70w

"[This book] is not a unified whole, but a group of sketches, records of recollections, a truly sophisticated book, funny as only human foibles, fears, and fakes are funny when looked at frankly. It is conversational and informal, has just enough satire for spice, and is just ribald enough to give the squeamish the thrill of impending danger averted. It is filled with a laughing nostalgia for a lusty, robust day, but it is never sentimental." L. E. Wilson
+ Sat R of Lit 27:24 Ap 8 '44 500w

"At best, it is readable, escapist non-fiction, often amusing but seldom really funny. At worst, it is merely the sixth book in two years by 33-year-old Stephen Longstreet."
Time 43:104 Mr 13 '44 200w
Weekly Book Review p17 Ap 2 '44 180w

LONGSTRETH, THOMAS MORRIS. Tad Lincoln, the president's son. 263p $2.50 Presbyterian bd

Lincoln, Thomas—Fiction 44-4456

"Mr Longstreth himself says that the incidents used in this story are true; that he has imagined only the conversation. It sounds quite authentic. . . He has not missed a single opportunity to recount the mischief and fun with which Taddie and his brother Willie (until the latter died) regaled themselves at the White House. He has not missed a chance to show small Tad seated on his kindly father's knee during weary cabinet sessions and political debates. It is difficult to imagine, now, any small boy so familiar with a President, not even if that President were his father." Springf'd Republican

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 41:128 N 17 '44 10w

"For all its slight fictionizing, this study may well be an important addition to any library of Lincolniana. Although not aimed at young people, there's no doubt that they will welcome it, and one 10-year-old at least, that we know of, is just waiting to get his hands and eyes upon the book. Mr Longstreth has done other books for young people and his easy, readable style has been carried over into this one without loss of dignity or authority." Edrie Van Dore
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 23 '44 280w

"Written for boys, an older lover of Lincolniana will go through this book without stopping. What is more to the point, neither he, nor the boy to whom he may give the book, will forget what has been for the time a personal experience." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p5 Jl 9 '44 400w

LORAC, E. C. R., pseud. See Rivett, E. C.

LORAN, ERLE. Cézanne's composition. 141p il $6.50 Univ. of Calif.

759.4 Cézanne, Paul A44-90

Analysis of painting, in which thirty-eight specific pictures are subjected to minute study. Reproductions of the paintings, with photographs of the actual scenes wherever possible, are included, as well as diagrams of the composition. Index.

"This is a day for rejoicing. A book, using only factual words, has been written about art. For those of us who have plowed through the recent crop of charming art books full of vague adjectives and intimate biographical details, 'Cezanne's Composition,' by Erle Loran, comes at long last as a healthy antidote." Katharine Kuh
+ Book Week p6 Ja 23 '44 470w
Booklist 40:179 Ja 15 '44

"Mr. Loran's analysis should be particularly valuable to practicing painters and students, but it should also be of great service to teachers of art and laymen seeking clarification of Cezanne's baffling style." Thomas Craven
+ Weekly Book Review p8 Ja 2 '44 450w

LORAND, ALEXANDER SANDOR, ed. Psychoanalysis today. 404p $6 Int. univ. press

131.34 Psychoanalysis 44-6356

"A collection of essays in commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of the publication of Freud's first studies on hysteria, with contributions by Jelliffe, Ferenczi, Brill, Kardiner, Wittels, and other distinguished authorities. The articles are arranged in a sequence which composes an ordered exposition of the present state of Freudian thought." (New Yorker) Index.

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 S 3 '44 180w
Kirkus 12:214 My 1 '44 110w

"The range of topics is wide, but space devoted to each is very limited, treatment is uneven and the volume lacks systematic organization. Medical practitioners unacquainted with psychoanalytic concepts and others concerned with human welfare and adjustment should find the book interesting, readable and stimulating." A. I. Bryan
+ — Library J 69:353 Ap 15 '44 120w

"An attempt has been made to keep clear of the difficulties of technical language or to explain unfamiliar terms as the author goes along—with the result that the volume makes an excellent guide for the ordinary lay reader."
+ New Yorker 20:68 Jl 1 '44 120w

Reviewed by E. R. Groves
Social Forces 23:217 D '44 130w

LORCH, ALEXANDER. Trends in European social legislation between the two world wars. (Editions de la maison française) 148p pa $2 French & European publications

331.094 Labor laws and legislation

"The pioneering efforts of the Weimar Republic and the progress made in the field of social legislation under the Blum government in France show, as the author states in the preface to his book, 'the most characteristic tendencies of social reforms during the period between the two World Wars.' . . Lorch limits his study to the main features of social reforms, i.e., to legislation on collective bargaining, on mediation and arbitration, and on workers' representation in the shops. He analyzes the text of various statutes, describes the administrative practices and the influence of judicial decisions." Am Econ R

"The great merit of Lorch's book is that it deals with complicated and very specific problems of comparative law in a highly readable and fascinating manner." Julie Meyer
+ Am Econ R 34:937 D '44 1200w

"Dr. Lorch's consideration of the main features of the subject would have more than the value of a very good historical comparative study if the author had, as the main title announces, discussed comparatively European, rather than merely German and French, social legislation. . . These remarks are not intended to detract from the work done by the author. On the contrary, we are presented with an excellent study and it only remains to be desired that at least the specialists in labor and social legislation in this country will familiarize themselves with the book." Arthur Lenhoff
+ — Columbia Law R 44:794 S '44 950w

LORD, CLIFFORD LEE, and LORD, MRS ELIZABETH SNIFFEN (HUBBARD). Historical atlas of the United States. 253p il maps $3 Holt

911 U.S.—Maps. U.S.—Historical geography 44-999

This atlas, containing more than 300 maps, includes not only those of political import, but also many depicting social and economic changes and trends.

Reviewed by E. E. Robinson
Am Hist R 49:741 Jl '44 650w
Am Pol Sci R 38:401 Ap '44 150w
Booklist 40:267 Ap 1 '44

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:661 Jl '44 10w
Nation 158:604 My 20 '44 70w

"The book suffers some of the disadvantages of its method. The maps are almost all derivative, and not being drawn for the specific purpose they serve, sometimes fall short of their objective. A few are on a scale too small to be helpful. . . But these faults do not detract from the value of the volume as a whole. Put together with imagination and edited with care, it will find convenient place on the desks of many grateful users." Oscar Handlin
+ — New Eng Q 17:461 S '44 350w

"For breadth of concept there is no handy atlas of American history to compare with this work of Clifford and Elizabeth Lord. It is disagreeable, therefore, to have to say that the book has a serious and fundamental fault. The first requirement of a good illustrative map is that it be clear, relatively simple, and really illuminating. A good many maps in the

LORD, C. L.—Continued
'Historical Atlas' will not meet such tests." Francis Brown
+ — N Y Times p14 Mr 5 '44 500w
Weekly Book Review p14 My 28 '44 230w
Wis Lib Bul 40:53 Ap '44

LORD, ROBERT HOWARD, and others. History of the archdiocese of Boston in the various stages of its development, 1604 to 1943; with a foreword by William Cardinal O'Connell. 3v 812;766;808p pl $15 Sheed

282.744 Boston (archdiocese). Roman Catholic church in New England 44-5675

"In three long and very complete volumes we are presented with a history of Catholicism in the New England area, narrowing down for recent years to the immediate vicinity of the Boston Archdiocese." Commonweal

"A striking feature of the book is its freedom from bigoted partisanship. It is not even written in the spirit of extravagant exultation over the remarkable growth of the church or over the discomfitures of its opponents, political or clerical, during various periods of conflict. The authors have consistently preserved an attitude of fair-mindedness in recording facts throughout the three volumes which number more than two thousand pages. Even when religious controversies are recorded both sides are reported, free from bitter, rancorous, or denunciatory comments. Such repression on the part of zealous and devoted proponents of a faith is, perhaps, somewhat unusual." J. C. Webster
+ Canadian Hist R 25:442 D '44 1250w

"The first volume is the most interesting, but the whole work is well written and should be definitive."
+ Commonweal 40:284 Jl 7 '44 60w

"Considered as institutional history in the narrow sense, the work is marred by three shortcomings. . . This work raises also a more important general question. Here is an account, on the whole excellent, of parishes and churches, bishops and priests, hospitals and convents. We learn much about scores of individuals and institutions, but almost nothing about Catholicism in the diocese. . . The consistent failure to deal with such matters bars explanation or understanding, and confines the authors to a description of externals." Oscar Handlin
+ — New Eng Q 17:606 D '44 1250w

"Scholarship without pedantry, a thoroughly documented work which yet retains a style easy to read and easy to understand—these are the accomplishment of the three highly gifted authors. Their 12 years of labor have produced an example of historical writing which it would be difficult to over-praise." T. S. Hanrahan
+ Springf'd Republican p4d N 5 '44 500w

LORIMER, MRS EMILY (OVEREND). What the German needs. 129p $1.75 Norton [5s Allen, G]

940.531 World war, 1939—Peace. Reconstruction (1939-)—Germany [A43-479]

Suggestions for a program of re-education for the German nation, in order to stamp out the effects of Nazism. Bibliography.

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:162 O '43 10w

"At the beginning of 1939 Mrs. Lorimer produced an informed and helpful little book on 'What Hitler Wants.' . . This new little volume, though a legitimate counter to the sentimentalists, is of more dubious worth. It presents the reader with a good many truths about German history and the direction of German thought that need to be borne in mind to-day and should not be forgotten on the morrow; but these are selective truths and are often stated in a too bald or exaggerated way."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p542 N 7 '42 480w

LORRAINE, JACQUES. Behind the battle of France; tr. by Gerard Hopkins. 142p pa $1.25 (3s 6d) Oxford

944.08 France—Politics and government. World war, 1939—France A44-1511

"This little book recounts the story of the early months of 'collaboration' in France, both Nazi-occupied and Vichy-administered." Foreign Affairs

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:497 Ap '44 20w

"M. Jacques Lorraine has written an able and, in the circumstances, an acute well-balanced account of the diplomatic struggle for the soul—and the assets—of Vichy. He avoids the temptation to which other historians of this depressing period have succumbed of proving too much on very slender evidence, and his deductions from the limited evidence at his disposal are generally moderate and convincing. . . For the reader who keeps the general course of the war in mind, this rather specialised narrative will be full of enlightenment." + Spec 171:226 S 3 '43 90w
Times [London] Lit Sup p386 Ag 14 '43 420w

LORWIN, LEWIS LEVITZKI. Postwar plans of the United nations. 307p $2.50 Twentieth century fund

940.531 World war, 1939—Peace. Reconstruction (1939-). United nations, 1942—Economic policy A44-256

For descriptive note see Annual for 1943.

"In this volume Mr. Lorwin endeavors to present a factual and objective survey of the plans for post-war reconstruction of the United Nations. The book should fill a gap in the literature. . . As the author states, his task has been to describe and explain, not to judge or evaluate the programs. Mr. Lorwin has acquitted himself of this task very well, although he had to cope with many difficulties. . . I wish Mr. Lorwin would write a second volume adding to his survey the judgment and evaluation of the programs of the United Nations." Antonin Basch
+ Am Econ R 34:368 Je '44 1500w
Am Hist R 49:544 Ap '44 40w

"Dr. Lorwin has written an interesting, scholarly, and timely reference work, one which is sure to be widely used by all who strive to create a postwar world capable of transforming the Four Freedoms into realities." R. H. Wells
+ Am Pol Sci R 38:379 Ap '44 550w

"Postwar Plans of the United Nations commends itself to those who want a concise but scholarly summary of the many and divergent plans that are being discussed and adopted in our own country and the countries of our allies." J. H. Landman
+ Ann Am Acad 233:224 My '44 270w
Cleveland Open Shelf p2 Ja '44

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:491 Ap '44 30w
New Repub 110:389 Mr 20 '44 180w

Reviewed by Adrienne Koch
N Y Times p25 O 8 '44 500w

"The material presented here is almost entirely factual and descriptive; and the chief criticism to be made of the book is that no attempt is made by the author to estimate the relative importance of the competing groups whose plans are analyzed and so to give some guidance as to which plans are most likely to be put into operation. Also he takes every plan at its face value." F. H. Underhill
Pol Sci Q 59:315 Je '44 330w

"This volume contains an admirable survey of domestic economic plans which have been proposed by governments, business interests, labor, and other groups of countries belonging to the United Nations. If it had done nothing more it would have given a cross-section of views as of September, 1943, when sufficient writings had already appeared to indicate major trends of opinion. But it does more: in many cases it provides sufficient background and enables the general reader to obtain a knowledge of earlier achievements in the fields of economic policy and social welfare. Thus, although later plans will necessarily 'date' the book, they will not impair its value as a work of reference." L. A. Mander

+ Social Educ 8:233 My '44 700w

"Mr. Lorwin has performed an invaluable service by assembling in one place the public and unofficial plans for postwar economic and social reorganization in the several united nations. While the volume will be useful primarily for reference purposes because of its encyclopedic documentation, the author philosophizes in a helpful way on the broad trends disclosed." Ordway Tead
+ Survey G 33:252 My '44 320w

LOTHAR, ERNST. Angel with the trumpet; tr. by Elizabeth Reynolds Hapgood. 457p $3 Doubleday

44-3344

"Ernst Lothar's novel chronicles the story of Austria from the year 1889, when the Crown Prince died at Mayerling, to the year 1938, when Austria became the 'Ostmark' of the German Reich. . . The story of Austria is mirrored in the story of the Alt family, pianomakers (Imperial and Royal Purveyors to the Court), an important family, pillars of propriety, solid, steady members of the upper bourgeoisie. . . Over the great door of the house was emblazoned a shield holding a sculptured angel with a trumpet, symbol of the musical pursuits of the family." N Y Times

Reviewed by H. L. Reich
Book Week p11 Mr 26 '44 850w

Booklist 40:284 Ap 15 '44

"The story is well constructed and interesting; political and social history, though given in great detail, is never allowed to take the place of narrative, and the adroit use of foreshortening serves to keep the central theme in focus. However, when the author tries to interpret history through the reactions of his characters, he is less successful." N. E. Monroe
+ — Cath World 159:186 My '44 200w

"A conscientious handling of details of social and political history, with an authentic feel, but it lacks the pace of story and the focus on character which would give it the vitality it needs. Personification of the Austrian spirit is not enough."
— + Kirkus 12:25 Ja 15 '44 120w

"'The Angel with the Trumpet' is undeniably founded on fact. Mr. Lothar says as much in his epilogue. Whether Hans Alt really exists, or whether his career is a composite picture of that of several men of his generation known to the author, does not really matter. What matters is that Hans Alt becomes to the reader a symbol of the Austrian in whom the world sees hope—hope that the spirit of Grillparzer, or Mozart, is not dead, and that through men of his stamp Europe may at last be delivered from fear." Catherine Maher
+ N Y Times p6 Mr 19 '44 600w

"Herr Lothar is at his rather solemn best when he chronicles the political and cultural life of his native land and less interesting when he is engaged with plot and characterization."
+ — New Yorker 20:94 Mr 18 '44 70w

Reviewed by R. R. Plant
Sat R of Lit 27:12 Mr 25 '44 750w

"Mr. Lothar carries the story of the family and of the collapse of the Habsburg Empire down to the present. . . He has composed, within the framework of a complex and dramatic story, the requiem of a city." Lisle Bell
+ Weekly Book Review p6 Mr 12 '44 750w

LOTZ, PHILIP HENRY, ed. Rising above color [contributors: Frank Glenn Lankard and others]. (Creative personalities) 112p $1.50 Assn. press; Revell

325.26 Negroes—Biography 44-40017

Biographical sketches of thirteen Negroes, stressing their contributions to American culture. Contents: G. W. Carver, Marian Anderson, W. E. B. DuBois, R. R. Moton, Samuel Coleridge-Taylor, Richard Allen, Frederick Douglass, D. H. Williams, B. T. Washington, Roland Hayes, P. L. Dunbar, J. W. Johnson, Walter White. Bibliography.

Booklist 40:246 Mr 15 '44

Reviewed by T. F. Opie
Churchman 158:17 Ap 1 '44 130w

"Should be of paramount importance to all libraries. Although particularly valuable as reading for young people, those of all ages will find their interest quickened and their minds inspired by these stories. Their writing is simple but the thought and conviction back of them are mature and significant." Ernestine Rose
+ Library J 68:895 N 1 '43 100w

"A book which high school classes, church groups and any young people's round table interested in gaining more knowledge about the struggle of the Negro in America for higher self-expression will find of value. It is so arranged as to furnish excellent discussion material, with questions and bibliography." S. R. Harlow
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 12 '44 650w

LOUDEN, J. KEITH. Wage incentives. 174p $2.50 Wiley

331.22 Wage payment plans 44-5669

"A concise explanation of what wage incentive plans are and what they can do for management and labor. Policies, relationships, and controls are emphasized rather than technical details for the industrial engineer. The author is Production Manager in the Glass and Closure Division of the Armstrong Cork Company." (N Y New Tech Bks) Bibliography. Index.

Library J 69:463 My 15 '44 20w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:25 Ap '44

LOVELACE, DELOS WHEELER. General Ike Eisenhower. 140p il $1.75 Crowell

B or 92 Eisenhower, Dwight David 44-7750

A biography of General Eisenhower, for older boys. It traces the story of his boyhood, his years at West Point, his marriage, the part he played in the first World war, and brings the study to a close with the fall of Cherbourg. Index.

Boston Globe p36 N 29 '44 30w
Christian Science Monitor p13 N 4 '44 400w
Kirkus 12:374 Ag 15 '44 170w

"In spite of a few sentimental spots, the book is well done." M. L. Goodwin
+ — Library J 69:1106 D 15 '44 30w

"Someday a better juvenile biography of Eisenhower than this one will be written, but until it is, this easy-going narrative of the General's life will serve as a source of facts and anecdotes about the modest man who has been relatively unpublicized. The writing leaves much to be desired, but at least the author's approach is almost entirely factual and disarmingly unpretentious. Most young people will want to read the book."
+ — New Yorker 20:91 D 16 '44 60w

Reviewed by Cyril Clemens
Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 5 '45 280w

"It is as rapidly readable a book as this war has given American boys."
+ Weekly Book Review p14 N 12 '44 400w

LOVERIDGE, ARTHUR. Many happy days I've squandered. 278p il $2.75 Harper

B or 92 Naturalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 44-5702

Reminiscences of an English naturalist who has spent many years in Africa capturing wild reptiles and animals and studying the habits of lions and ants, snakes and monkeys, tortoises and elands. The author is now Curator of reptiles and amphibians at Harvard's museum of comparative zoology. Index.

Reviewed by Ralph Peterson
Book Week p4 Jl 16 '44 650w
Booklist 40:389 Jl 15 '44
Boston Globe p31 N 29 '44 50w
Cleveland Open Shelf p11 Je '44

"A naturalist, whose work is play to him, makes his adventures thoroughly entertaining reading."
+ Kirkus 12:136 Mr 15 '44 150w

"The book is quiet and leisurely and will be enjoyed by armchair game hunters." Katherine Shorey
Library J 69:501 Je 1 '44 110w

"Here is a keen observer and astute scientist reporting his life-long holiday, gathering pertinent data for half a dozen museums in three continents. No naturalist, amateur or professional, young or old, can afford to miss this amazing record, can escape the infection of its spirit of enthusiasm and insatiate curiosity." H. N. Alyea
+ N Y Times p8 Jl 2 '44 850w

"Mr. Loveridge writes with more than customary ability and knows how to tell stories. His book is full of good ones and anybody who likes to read about wild animals ought to enjoy it hugely."
+ New Yorker 20:79 Je 17 '44 90w

"Perhaps the most engrossing pages of the book are those dealing with lions, particularly the story of a night spent at their kill. This is unusually exciting. The five-day invasion of millions of ants on an abandoned plantation, their depredations and the author's battle with them is almost too graphic. The reader is sure to hear the rasping of their feet, see them in their columns, and almost feel them crawling in their myriad pursuits."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 15:3 Jl '44 420w

"There isn't an embroidered or padded paragraph in the entire book. The writing conveys a sense of integrity. This trustworthiness, the foundation of all good nature books, enhances the effect of the author's adventures. And there are spine-tinglers aplenty in his pages." E. W. Teale
+ Weekly Book Review p3 Jl 2 '44 1000w
Wis Lib Bul 40:126 O '44

LOWDERMILK, WALTER CLAY. Palestine, land of promise. 236p il $2.50 Harper

330.9569 Palestine—Economic conditions. Agriculture—Palestine 44-2614

An American soil expert, assistant chief of the soil conservation service of the United States, visited Palestine and came back with practical suggestions for reclaiming the farm lands of Palestine and the whole Near East. He proposes the establishment of a Jordan Valley Authority, to carry out the project. Index.

Reviewed by W. J. Cahnman
Am J Soc 50:155 S '44 650w
Booklist 40:262 Ap 1 '44
Commonweal 39:570 Mr 24 '44 750w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:666 Jl '44 30w

"This important little book describes the dramatic transformation being made in the culture patterns of Palestine by Jewish refugee pioneers and suggests ways for further progress in the future. The author, assistant chief of the United States Soil Conservation Service, is well qualified to observe and advise in a situation that consists essentially of a regional application of the principles of conservation." Peveril Meigs
+ Geog R 35:168 Ja '45 1300w
Kirkus 11:566 D 15 '43 120w
Manchester Guardian p3 N 12 '44 150w

"This is a very unusual book, written by a man who unites scientific competence with historical perspective. Dr. Lowdermilk has had a long and distinguished career as forestry engineer, hydrologist, geophysicist, and soil conservationist." W. F. Albright
+ Nation 158:656 Je 3 '44 900w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus
N Y Times p20 My 21 '44 650w
Scientific Bk Club R 15:4 My '44 150w

Reviewed by Herschel Levin
Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 2 '44 850w

Reviewed by Philip Wagner
Weekly Book Review p1 Ap 2 '44 1800w
Wis Lib Bul 40:82 Je '44

LOWELL, JULIET. Dear sir; 75p $1 Duell

940.5496 World war, 1939—Humor, caricatures, etc. 44-7225

A collection of letters culled from the files of Draft boards, the OPA, war plants, and government agencies, revealing some of the problems and perplexities of American citizens in wartime.

"Some of the epistles palpably have been written by jokesters with tongue in cheek. . . Quite a few of the missives are too Rabelaisian (in effect or implication, if not in intention) for the readers of a family newspaper. Every one is calculated to stimulate risibility, ranging from the faint smile of appreciation to the uproarious guffaw." Jack Conroy
Book Week p2 Jl 23 '44 250w
Kirkus 12:367 Ag 15 '44 40w
Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 27 '44 50w

LOWELL, ROBERT. Land of unlikeness [poems]. 43p $3; autog ed $6 Cummington press

811

"Not only is Mr. Lowell a formalist, whose models and congeners are such seventeenth-century formalists as Drayton and Crashaw, Vaughan and Traherne, but he is also, as Allen Tate remarks in his Introduction, 'consciously a Catholic poet.' " New Repub

"Mr. Tate is right when he says that Mr. Lowell's style is bold and powerful. It is. His angry and violent use of Catholic symbolism is often—as in the fine 'On the Eve of the Feast of the Immaculate Conception'—extraordinarily effective. . . When this slackens, however, the verse tends to become either turgid and strained or merely heraldic, and the thematic limitations more manifest. There are enough good things of a non-religious sort here—'In Memory of Arthur Winslow,' 'The Drunken Fisherman'—to give one hope that Mr. Lowell will expand his range. He already has the power." Conrad Aiken
+ — New Repub 111:530 O 23 '44 350w

"Mr. Lowell lacks humility and tenderness in these poems, but there is a challenging vitality in his fearless and energetic use of language and in his strongly personal rhythms which makes the poetry unlike that of any one else writing today." Elizabeth Drew
+ Weekly Book Review p18 D 17 '44 250w

LOWREY, MRS JANETTE (SEBRING). In the morning of the world; some of the Greek myths retold [pictures by Zhenya Gay]. 168p $2 Harper

292 Mythology, Classical—Juvenile literature 44-9745

Legends of the origin of the gods of Olympus woven into a united whole to serve as an introduction to mythology for junior high school age.

"Janette Sebring Lowrey, who has a number of fine children's books to her credit, brings an exceptional storytelling ability to these tales of Greek mythology. The stories have been selected by an inspired plan which gives the book special significance." P. A. Whitney

+ Book Week p7 D 24 '44 250w

"Beautifully done, in singing prose."
+ Kirkus 12:454 O 1 '44 90w

"An outstanding book of myths for junior high age. Drawings by Zhenya Gay add to the distinction of the book." E. E. Frank
+ Library J 69:1106 D 15 '44 50w

LOWREY, MRS JANETTE (SEBRING). Lavender cat; pictures by Rafaello Busoni. 180p $2 Harper 44-9704

Imaginative story about a lonely small boy who went on a journey with his little lavender cat and a leprechaun, in search of a warm hearth and people to love.

Booklist 41:127 D 15 '44

"Beautifully written story that should rank with modern children's classics. Its prose paints pictures of utmost delicacy, real feeling, real human quality and rare charm."
+ Kirkus 12:431 S 15 '44 90w

"Sensitive, imaginative story. . . There is an out-of-this-world quality about it that should appeal to little girls who like At the Back of the North Wind and Fog Magic, although it is a lesser book." Miriam Snow
+ Library J 69:1050 D 1 '44 70w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
N Y Times p10 Ja 7 '45 180w

"It is not the story that gives this book its value. It is the atmosphere and the wording."
+ Sat R of Lit 27:31 N 11 '44 40w

LOWRIE, WALTER. Short story of Jesus. 238p $2.50 Scribner
232.9 Jesus Christ—Biography 44-474

"Though Dr. Lowrie is a theologian and a scholar who has written a host of books for other theologians and scholars, he has written this short Life for the benefit of the larger public. He has, in his own words, desired 'to make it simple and avoid every appearance of pedantry.' . . For his 'short story' Dr. Lowrie relies chiefly on the Gospel of St. Mark, on which he is a great authority, having some years ago written a monumental work, 'Jesus According to St. Mark.' . . This new book is by no means an abbreviation of the larger work but is rather a recreation and simplification of it for a new public which could not possibly have been attracted to so scholarly a book." N Y Times

"Dr. Lowrie's Short Story of Jesus is in many respects a very remarkable book. It may seem superficial to mention first its charm of style. But with Dr. Lowrie this is not a surface quality. As one looks for the reason for this attractiveness, it becomes evident that it is not mere verbal felicity, though the phraseology is clever and often striking, but a quality of the author's mind and thought. He is an open-minded believer, a reverent critic, with an emotional balance which permits him to feel and convey the profound significance of the materials with which he is dealing and at the same time to handle many details of the story with a lightness, almost a playfulness, of touch that gives the narrative an extraordinary degree of vitality." W. E. Garrison
+ Christian Century 61:305 Mr 8 '44 500w

"This book should weaken no one's faith, but rather strengthen that of the man who worships the Christ, but is anxious to know just what an intelligent Christian may believe regarding the details of his life."
+ Churchman 158:16 Mr 15 '44 360w

"Many people will welcome this book as a delightful and useful book for lay people. This seems to be its purpose, and it should be evaluated on that basis." J. R. Branton
+ Crozer Q 21:184 Ap '44 350w

"Although history is subordinate in Dr. Lowrie's thought to theology, some of the best work in this volume is in the short paragraphs interspersed throughout the interpretation which reconstruct the life in Palestine in the time of Jesus. Here history is given its full value and is skilfully and compactly set forth." M. E. Lyman
+ J Religion 24:299 O '44 250w

"The author is a scholar and a conservative churchman—who has given all of us a valuable aid to the understanding of the life of Christ."
+ Kirkus 12:68 F 1 '44 70w

Reviewed by John Cournos
N Y Times p18 Ja 9 '44 440w

LOZANO, ARGENTINA DIAZ. See Diaz Lozano, A.

LUCAS, CURTIS. Flour is dusty. 166p $1.50 Dorrance
44-368

"A short novel, with much action, concerning the experience of an ambitious young Negro in the south who, after a bad start, came north to further struggles against difficulties." Christian Century

Christian Century 61:147 F 2 '44 30w

Springf'd Republican p7e F 6 '44 290w

LUCAS, JIM G. Combat correspondent. 210p $2.50 Reynal
940.542 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American 44-7869

Personal experiences of a young newspaper reporter of the marines' special corps of fighting writers. He saw many angles of the fighting in the Pacific, from foxholes dug out of coral, from jungles, from beachheads, from submarines. He even went on one aerial night mission. He also has a chapter on boot training at Parris Island, which he was forced to endure before he could go overseas with the marines.

Booklist 41:75 N 1 '44

"Fresh, keen accounting of marine warfare."
+ Kirkus 12:291 Jl 1 '44 230w

"Recommended." H. A. Carpenter
+ Library J 69:697 S 1 '44 70w

"Lieutenant Lucas's book is not a major contribution to the story of the corps' historic achievements in the Pacific; it is hardly an adequate account of the part that Marine Corps combat correspondents played in those achievements. Yet, as a personal narrative, it is easy, pleasant reading—all except the bloody parts about Betio on Tarawa." Meyer Berger
+ N Y Times p3 S 17 '44 440w

"Almost everything Lieutenant Lucas writes about is already a thrice-told tale, but his account of our war against the Japanese, set forth simply and honestly, has a straightforward earnestness that gives it a new interest and, at times, considerable excitement."
+ New Yorker 20:81 S 23 '44 80w

Reviewed by A. D. H. Smith
Sat R of Lit 27:48 O 14 '44 400w

"There are a few minor errors and inconsistencies, but they do not mar the general excellence of the book. A map would have helped considerably to understand the confused action at New Georgia. Whether in training, on a bombing raid, fighting in the jungle, or gathering stories in between battles, Lieutenant Lucas writes a yarn that commands attention from beginning to end. His book is proof that he and his fellow marine correspondents have more than met the high requirements of the corps and earned a place in that fighting organization as well as in the field of journalism." Beach Conger
+ — Weekly Book Review p5 S 24 '44 1150w

LUCKIESH, MATTHEW. Light, vision and seeing; a simplified presentation of their relationships and their importance in human efficiency and welfare. 323p il $4.50 Van Nostrand

612.84 Sight. Lighting. Light 44-7581

"A readable and informative account of the relationships of light, brightness, vision, lighting and seeing. The author discusses the mechanical and physiological aspects of seeing in such chapters as: Light and sight; What makes things visible; Role of size; Visual acuity; Meaning and measurement of visibility; Brightness engineering; Efficiency, safety and easy seeing. At the end of the book is a collection of 100 questions (and answers) which are commonly asked in connection with eyesight and vision. A six-page bibliography is included." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:700 S 1 '44 60w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:49 Jl '44

LUDWIG, EMIL. Mackenzie King; a portrait sketch. 62p il $1.75 Macmillan

B or 92 King, William Lyon Mackenzie 44-9204

"In this little book, subtitled 'A Portrait Sketch,' Mr. Ludwig has given an interpretation rather than a biography of Canada's Prime Minister. He traces Mackenzie King's character to the heritage derived from his maternal grandfather, William Lyon Mackenzie, fiery radical of Canadian politics and a leader of the suppressed but nevertheless significant and fruitful revolt of 1837, and from 'the scientific balance of mind, the patience and caution of his father,' John King, a lawyer." Weekly Book Review

Times [London] Lit Sup p458 S 23 '44 1200w

"Mr. Ludwig's opinions are plausible if facile, but he has not bothered to bolster them with many facts, assuming either a familiarity with King's career, which is certainly rare in the United States, or an acceptance of the author's infallibility, which is probably equally rare."
Weekly Book Review p24 D 3 '44 200w

LUTHIN, REINHARD HENRY. First Lincoln campaign. 328p $3.50 Harvard univ. press

973.7 Presidents (U.S.)—Election. Lincoln, Abraham. U.S.—Politics and government—1783-1865 A44-5189

"This book was soundly planned. It sketches clearly the rise of the Republican party from its origins in amazingly varied political factions, portrays adequately each of the major candidates for the Republican nomination in 1860, and then narrates fully the events leading up to the gaudy melodrama of the convention at the Wigwam at Lake and Market sts. in Chicago which nominated Lincoln, and those of the campaign which followed." Book Week

"Dr. Luthin's hundreds of notes for each chapter, extensive bibliographies and full index occupy more than 100 pages of the book. His writing is not precisely sprightly—is, I think, less concrete and colorful than the material would warrant, even granting fully his scholarly purposes and obligations. But his treatment is commendably objective and balanced, and his book is not only a 'must' for the Lincoln specialist but well worthy of the attention of the general reader." J. T. Frederick
+ — Book Week p2 N 26 '44 320w
Booklist 41:137 Ja 1 '45

"Mr. Luthin's book is well annotated. Hardly a statement is made without authority, and his bibliographical list is really formidable." M. W. B.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 N 6 '44 500w

Reviewed by Carl Bridenbaugh
N Y Times p16 N 5 '44 440w

"An excellent study of the campaign and election of 1860. At political skulduggery, questionable promises, tricky maneuvers, the politicians of 1944 were pikers in comparison. No presidential campaign in United States history has been more pregnant with decision for the future than that of 1860; few have been so complicated, even fewer so dramatic. Prof Luthin has written a definitive history of this campaign." R. A. Brown
+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 24 '45 400w

Reviewed by Lloyd Lewis
Weekly Book Review p4 Ja 21 '45 1450w

LYDGATE, WILLIAM ANTHONY. What America thinks. 167p il $2.50 Crowell

973.917 Public opinion—U.S. U.S.—Politics and government 44-8338

The editor of the Gallup poll discusses American opinion on a variety of topics and questions of the day. Partial contents: What the public thinks of labor unions; Is isolationism dead?; Americans at war; Family man with two dependents; Franklin D. Roosevelt; How to take a poll; How Americans think. Index.

Booklist 41:87 N 15 '44

"This is a stimulating book, worth keeping for reference purposes. It has two shortcomings: (1) In analyzing inconsistencies in opinion, as on labor questions, Mr. Lydgate fails to point out how propaganda produces such paradoxes. . . (2) 'What America Thinks' would have been improved by the inclusion of more materials from the Fortune Survey, National Opinion Research Center polls, and other measures of public opinion. But Mr. Lydgate, after all, is a Gallup editor." S. C. M.
+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 N 13 '44 580w
Kirkus 12:334 Ag 1 '44 150w

"Readable style and unbiased presentation make book highly recommendable for all public and educational libraries." H. H. A. Bernt
+ Library J 69:697 S 1 '44 70w

Reviewed by R. J. Sontag
N Y Times p16 O 15 '44 550w

"A most interesting book, in which [the author] wanders to and fro, hither and thither, upsetting applecarts in a liberal, even lavish, manner that will delight the contumacious of all sects and factions. By the same token, he will outrage the traditionalists. Whether the delighted will be more than the outraged is a question; but hardly anybody will be bored, so if the first duty of a book is to be interesting this one may be deemed a success." G. W. Johnson
+ Sat R of Lit 27:13 O 7 '44 1250w

Reviewed by Marcus Duffield
Weekly Book Review p22 O 22 '44 850w

LYMAN, EUGENE WILLIAM. Religion and the issues of life. 140p $1 Assn. press

201 Christianity—Philosophy 44-3714

"Professor Lyman's book is small and is intended only as an introduction. It is published by the Edward W. Hazen Foundation 'to facilitate the serious study of religion by students and other youth.' Religion is defined as having four dimensions: (1) man's upreach toward God and consciousness of God's response, (2) inwardness and the feeling of the divine indwelling, (3) fellowship with man grounded in fellowship with God, and (4) loyalty to the divine purpose." J Religion

"The reviewer wishes he had had this book in easy reach during collegiate religious wanderings, not because it would have solved the problems by formulas, but because of its suggestive direction as it brings into focus and relation the main problems in life and religion." P. A. Bertocci
+ Crozer Q 22:84 Ja '45 700w

"The book is 'liberal' in the sense that it presents reasoned conclusions in a calm and judicious manner which yet gives no hint of aloofness. But it is so free from polemical argument that it draws its readers together in acknowledgment of what they believe in common instead of making each man think of the ways in which he differs from others." J. S. Bixler
+ J Religion 24:300 O '44 220w

LYNDE, H. H., pseud. See Huntington, H.

LYON, DANA. It's my own funeral. 220p $2 Farrar

44-2814

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p10 Mr 26 '44 90w

Kirkus 12:8 Ja 1 '44 60w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p8 Mr 12 '44 100w

"Tough—and not too credible—yarn about an unusually clever criminal gang. Full of action and surprises. Average."
Sat R of Lit 27:26 Mr 18 '44 40w

"For those who crave fast, tough stuff, no quarter asked or given." Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p15 Mr 26 '44 90w

M

MAASS, EDGAR. Dream of Philip II; tr. by Edward B. Garside and Norbert Guterman. 310p il $3.50 Bobbs

B or 92 Philip II, king of Spain 44-47253

This partially fictionized biography of Philip II of Spain begins with "an account of the visitation of the Black Death throughout Europe in the fourteenth century. . . Then, without modulation, we hasten, in time, to the year of Philip's birth (1527), and, thereafter, he is shown at various stages of his career, as boy, as heir to the throne, and as monarch. . . Each of his four wives enters, successively, into the story; and his children help to build up the background. Philip is interpreted more sympathetically than is usual, as the champion of Catholicism and of the greatness of Spain." (Weekly Book Review)

"The writing is well planned and vigorously executed. The author has fictionalized, but has not gone too far with it. Thus the feeling of authenticity persists. There are vivid sidelights on Cervantes and El Greco (from whose painting the book is titled), and the story of Lepanto, Spain's great naval victory, approaches the epic. Definitely this book will reward the reader." F. N. Litten
+ Book Week p3 O 29 '44 400w

Boston Globe p30 N 29 '44 50w

Reviewed by W. T. Walsh
Cath World 160:373 Ja '45 340w

"A decade ago Reinhold Schneider, another German-born author, published a study on Philip II called 'Religion and Might'—a profound analysis of the Spanish religious restoration. Mr. Maass adopts much of Schneider's analysis, but remains peripheric; he makes some clever remarks, he presents some colorful fictionized details—hasty and glittering like a movie. But this is not a novel, only a history book with some fiction sprinkled on. The unprepared reader does not know where history ends and the author's imagination begins. Books of this kind, a fifth poetry and four fifths non-fiction, are an abomination for the serious student of history." Max Fischer
Commonweal 41:133 N 17 '44 280w

Reviewed by John Cournos
N Y Times p29 O 15 '44 440w

"Dr. Maass knows very well that Philip II was no saint and no visionary. He is content to try to interpret him against the background of his time, and to make him out, as perhaps a biographer ought to do, a sympathetic and interesting person. To this end the techniques of fiction are called in, and some of the resources of legend, but it's uphill work, and the most entertaining pages of this biography are often those in which its hero figures least." Garrett Mattingly
+ — Sat R of Lit 27:11 D 23 '44 950w

"This conception of Philip is a rather grand and romantic one, but it has the advantage of being relatively novel. This is not the rigid one-dimensional figure of the history books; still less is it the black malignant horror that broods over the pages of 'Tyl Ulenspiegl' as once it shadowed the Netherlands. Philip will always be a rather controversial figure, not only because of his own seeming complexity but because the great issues of his stormy century are still so important that it is difficult, even yet, to view him with complete objectivity. His present biographer has, however, in spite of all his romantic embellishments, succeeded in stepping outside of his prejudices (if he has any) and in making of Philip II not a saint, a villain or a mere symbol, but a living and understandable man." W. H. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p6 O 31 '44 600w

"The book is a good specimen of its kind. It cannot compare in brilliance with Dr. Maass's novel, 'Don Pedro and the Devil' [Book Review Digest, 1942] but it has many of the same characteristics. The morbid religiosity of Spain during the period of the Counter Reformation is impressively suggested. . . The background is enriched with a good many word-pictures of cities and buildings associated with King Philip. The cold and elaborate dignity of the Escorial, resting four-square upon the mountain slope, is well evoked, as is the converted mosque, which is the cathedral of Cordova. Seville and Granada do not count for much, but both Toledo and Salamanca provide important back-drops for events." S. L. Chew
+ Weekly Book Review p12 O 22 '44 650w

MAASS, JOACHIM. Magic year; tr. by Erika Meyer. 315p $2.75 Fischer, L.B.

44-40220

A German refugee, living in New England, travels back in his memory, and relives one year of his life in a comfortable German home of the early 1900s. The book is the first of a trilogy.

" 'The Magic Year' is the polished work of a sensitive, keen, poetic craftsman, verbally overwrought at times, given to occasional futile shadow-dancing with imponderables, etched at least faintly by German romanticism, but over all a literary artist of very considerable stature. By virue of the 'better mousetrap' principle, a larger and larger number of readers will seek him out, and they will be the richer for it." Wendell Johnson
+ Book Week p3 D 24 '44 750w

Booklist 41:140 Ja 1 '45

Reviewed by Eveline Dienes
Boston Globe p13 Ja 17 '45 320w

"There is a fullness here, sometimes an ornateness, of detail and of style which is more European than American. There is a solidity, also a stolidity, which is German—and of questionable appeal on this side. Within these limitations, this is an able portrait."
— + Kirkus 12:485 N 1 '44 150w

"Fine gift of observation, together with psychologically 'true' characters, makes book very readable. Recommended for public libraries." H. H. A. Bernt
+ Library J 69:1000 N 15 '44 60w

Reviewed by Marguerite Young
N Y Times p5 D 31 '44 320w

New Yorker 20:114 D 9 '44 90w

"[The] 'Prelude' is one of the finest pieces of refugee writing ever done. Mr. Maass transplants the whole magic of the German Wald atmosphere to the wooded hills of New England. In that piece American readers will recognize Mr. Maass easily as what his publishers quite rightly present him—as one of the sincerest, most typical writers of pre-Hitler Germany, a cultured, patient, and highly sensitive novelist. Perhaps they would have done better by him in advising Mr. Maass to wait for the rest of his trilogy to be finished before introducing him to a new audience. As it stands now, 'The Magic Year' has with all its fine qualities, the effect of an unbalanced fragment." Robert Pick
+ — Sat R of Lit 27:12 D 16 '44 750w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn
Springf'd Republican p4d D 17 '44 440w

MAASS, JOACHIM—Continued

"Delicately, with a Proustian exactitude, he plucks the petals of memory, probing for the essential truth of life. But this quest is no mere self-revelation, no mere record of actual events, for Mr. Maass is an artist, and in 'The Magic Year' he has resurrected a way of life and a kind of childhood long since dead." Virgilia Sapieha

+ Weekly Book Review p4 D 17 '44 950w

MACARTHUR, JOHN ROBERTSON. Ancient Greece in modern America. 396p pl $6 Caxton printers

913.38 Civilization, Greek. U.S.—Civilization 43-15207

"Many books have been written about our cultural heritage from Greece and Rome. Dr. Macarthur's purpose in this book is not merely to give a clearly drawn picture of the contribution of the Greeks in art, language, literature, philosophy, religion, science and government, though he does all this and more. His specific intention is also to show how these things have actually entered into the life and thought, the speech and literature, even the industry and advertising, of modern America." Christian Century

"An interesting, but not very accurate. book. . . In spite of all its faults, however, this book will be attractive and useful to many Americans. It gives the answers to many questions which puzzle those without much classical education. It shows how the culture of the ancient Greeks is woven into our own. It is a pity that it is not more accurate and more adequate. But it has a value for those for whom it was designed." W. K. Prentice

+ — Am Hist R 49:463 Ap '44 400w

"Dr. Macarthur does not follow a scrappy quiz-book method but presents an orderly account of great Greek personalities and achievements. His book will acceptably fill part of the vacuum left by the almost complete disappearance of Greek from the curriculum. He himself, though well trained in Greek, has long been a professor of English and was for many years a dean in California Institute of Technology."

+ Christian Century 60:1168 O 13 '43 340w

"Mr. Macarthur has not attempted an exhaustive or statistical study. He has written a series of informal, unpretentious essays which seem to be based upon lectures and are in an easy, informal, sometimes slangy style. . . His least pretentious essays, such as those on the Greeks in our gardens, in medicine, and in advertising, are the most enjoyable. Those on the great subjects are, like most popular lectures, not altogether satisfying in cold print. The many illustrations carry out the author's purpose entertainingly and tellingly, although one could wish publishers had contributed better reproductions and a more pleasing binding." E. P. Richardson

+ — Commonweal 39:548 Mr 17 '44 360w

School Arts 44:13a S '44 100w

MACAULEY, CLINTON B. F. Helicopters are coming; il. by Erik Nitsche and Roslyn Welcher. (Whittlesey house publication) 165p $2 McGraw

629.13335 Helicopters 44-2251

A popular book on helicopters, designed to tell the layman something of the facts concerning this "offshoot of the aeroplane," and to answer the question how soon will it come into general use.

Booklist 40:298 My 1 '44
Bookmark 5:8 My '44
Kirkus 12:14 Ja 1 '44 80w
Library J 69:119 F 1 '44 30w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:19 Ap '44
Weekly Book Review p6 Mr 5 '44 250w

MCAULIFFE, HAROLD J. Father Tim. (Science and culture ser) 162p il $2.25 Bruce pub.

B or 92 Dempsey, Timothy 44-5785

"The story of a Catholic priest who settled dozens of strikes, checked gang wars, built shelters for the poor, and fed and clothed millions of people in the years of his pastorate in 'the worst slum district in St. Louis,' is told in this book by Father McAuliffe. It is the biography of 'the most useful citizen of St. Louis,' the Rt. Reverend Monsignor Timothy Dempsey, known to most everybody in Missouri as 'Father Tim.'" Book Week

Reviewed by Eddie Doherty
Book Week p6 Jl 2 '44 360w
Cath World 159:573 S '44 150w

"It is rather a hero-worship type of biography, perhaps a little too sentimental, but nevertheless interesting and readable." C. D. K.

+ — Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 2 '44 90w

MCBRIDE, THOMAS GARTH. Christian ethics and economics; a new approach. 428p $3 Smith, Richard R.

261 Sociology, Christian. Christian ethics 44-3904

"This book propounds the thesis that every man shall be rewarded according to his works. . . It is Mr. McBride's assumption that property rights in anything except personal labor (expressed also in its various mutations through the channels of production, exchange and distribution) are unnatural, immoral and unjust." Cath World

"I do not think it necessary to criticize or confute Mr. McBride's thesis. One peculiarity, however, is worth noting. It is his frequent effort to prove and bolster economic propositions with biblical and theological arguments. His enthusiasm in this direction indicates that God's primary concern with humanity is to show us how to achieve economic abundance and civil liberty. In a chapter entitled 'The Insight of the Eucharist,' he reaches the ultimate distortion of examples." J. H. Fichter

Cath World 159:280 Je '44 500w

Reviewed by I. G. Whitchurch
Christian Century 61:900 Ag 2 '44 800w

MCCAHAN, DAVID, ed. Life insurance: trends and problems. 247p $2 Univ. of Pa. press [12s Oxford]

368.3 Insurance, Life 43-11074

"This book consists of a series of twelve lectures given under the auspices of the Huebner Foundation (set up to provide fellowships and graduate scholarships and otherwise assist in training at the University of Pennsylvania) during the academic year 1941-42, with a brief Introduction by Thomas I. Parkinson, president of the Equitable Life Assurance Society and Chairman of the Coöperating Committee for the S.S. Huebner Foundation for Insurance Education. The lectures are by leading representatives of the life insurance business, mostly presidents or vice-presidents of life insurance companies. They are grouped in three parts in the book: Part I, Public Aspects Relating to Life Insurance (2 lectures); Part II, Significant Trends and Problems Affecting Life Insurance Costs (5 lectures); and Part III, Significant Trends and Developments in Distribution and Public Understanding of Life Insurance (5 lectures)." (Am Econ R) Index.

Reviewed by A. H. Mowbray
Am Econ R 33:926 D '43 1000w

"This volume contains valuable contributions of different character, mostly actuarial." Alfred Manes

+ Ann Am Acad 229:223 S '43 400w

MCCARTHY, JOHN J. Science of fighting fire. 265p il $2.75 Norton

614.84 Fire extinction 43-17490

"For the citizen, the professional, the volunteer and the auxiliary." (Subtitle) Explains what fire is, its prevention and inspection, describes certain types of fire-fighting appliances, and the organization, training and equipment of members of a fire department. Index.

Booklist 40:179 Ja 15 '44

"This book, written by the assistant chief in command of the New York fire department, fills a real need. [It is] written in clear, straightforward fashion. . . This is not just a book for the war emergency. It is replete with practical suggestions for the homekeeper as well as an eye-opener concerning the manifold duties of firemen."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 14:4 D '43 240w

MCCLINTOCK, MARSHALL. Airplanes and how they fly: with drawings by Arthur Silz; foreword by George H. Prudden. 94p $2 Stokes

629.13 Aeronautics—Juvenile literature
43-18253

"A complete primer of aviation for younger boys and girls who want to understand why and how a plane flies. It includes: A brief history of man's conquest of the air; A clear statement of the principles of aerodynamics; The chief types of planes—their engines, instruments, equipment; A glimpse of the great future of flying." (Subtitle) Index.

Booklist 40:200 F 1 '44

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p8 F 24 '44 150w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 20:46 Ja '44 40w

"Treatment is brief, but more difficult than is suggested by the slightly oversized format and the subtitle. . . A good general survey. Illustrated with black-and-white diagrams and sketches." A. K. Monroe
Library J 69:73 Ja 15 '44 80w
Wis Lib Bul 40:72 My '44

MCCLOY, HELEN. Panic. 217p $2 Morrow
44-8487

Mystery story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p16 N 19 '44 180w
Booklist 41:90 N 15 '44
Boston Globe p19 N 8 '44 30w

"High suspense and practised puzzlement for a quality market."
+ Kirkus 12:385 S 1 '44 90w

"Students of cryptography and cryptanalysis should find this story completely fascinating. For others the going may be rough, for the solution depends upon the breaking down of a cipher believed by the man who invented it to be unbreakable. . . It is a skillfully constructed mystery and it contains much information about the more intricate forms of cryptography." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p18 O 29 '44 150w

"A new variation on a theme which is growing tiresome."
New Yorker 20:100 O 21 '44 60w

"Grade A."
+ Sat R of Lit 27:30 O 28 '44 40w

"If cryptography gives you a slight but persistent headache, you might try skipping the harder passages in this story of a nice girl and a supposedly unbreakable cipher." Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p21 O 22 '44 170w

MCCORMICK, RENEE (DE FONTARCE) (MRS LEANDER J. MCCORMICK). Little coquette; the story of a French girlhood; tr. by Leander J. McCormick; decorations by Susanne Suba. 295p $2.75 Houghton
44-6129

Frank reminiscences of the first fifteen years of the life of a French girl of the upper classes, during the years 1899 to 1914. In her foreword the author says: "Simone d'Entremont is a little girl such as once I was. My life was like hers, and it was passed at a time and in circumstances such as I have here described. The people, the places, the events of which I tell are in essence true, but the details are drawn from many sources; hence the characters of the book and the correlation of events are really fictional."

" 'Little Coquette' has humor and some beautiful but lengthy descriptions. Unfortunately, they are frequently marred by incidents and speeches in deplorably bad taste that have not lost their crudeness in translation. The book stabs the Vielle Noblesse in the back and is hardly recommendable as a graduation present for sister or little junior's birthday. However, it will be intensely interesting to people who have lived in France, or those who can understand and pardon its decadence." Esme Davis
+ — Book Week p3 Jl 16 '44 500w
Booklist 41:22 S '44

"The book is charmingly written, with much intimate descriptive detail, but the subject matter seems insignificant today."
Kirkus 12:225 My 15 '44 130w

"Though enlightening and amusing in incident, book is depressing in its atmosphere of futility and decadent living. Large libraries." G. W. Hill
Library J 69:404 My 1 '44 80w

"The only harm I can see that Mrs. McCormick has done is to give us, as the Countess gave her guests at those fabulous dinners, too much of a good thing. I needed a nap by the time the sherbet was served." James Stern
+ Nation 159:273 S 2 '44 1100w

"The title suggests a chromo of the 'Good Morning, Papa!' 'Cherry Ripe' series but this picture of French life . . . is anything but smug. It is acidly amusing, disarmingly frank and very entertaining. Not everyone has had such a childhood, and very few among those who read this gay volume will find in it the echo of a similar infancy." Anne Green
+ N Y Times p7 Jl 16 '44 700w

"An extremely lifelike photograph of an extravagant society with which not many Americans are familiar."
+ New Yorker 20:70 Jl 15 '44 90w

"The panorama of a society which can hardly exist again is unrolled to us in a swiftly paced and extremely objective manner. There is no humor, but a Gallic frankness of wit and a drollery of situation, a sophistication which finds nothing shocking except bad taste. . . This is a book which will fascinate and sometimes repel the reader by its unabashed portrayal of an exquisite and degenerate society; it will enchant him by the delicate flavor of nostalgia which pervades its pages, it will amuse and delight him by the combination of naivete and worldly wisdom with which the little Simone observes and recounts the events which pass before her eyes." S. H. Hay
+ — Sat R of Lit 27:19 Jl 15 '44 550w

"What with one thing and another . . . a lot of people will welcome a story such as 'Little Coquette' for its sheer charm of presentation, for the laughter which bubbles up from its pages and for the freshness of its style. Read it for these merits, without delving into the selfishness and ugliness which lurk behind the gaiety and insouciance." E. M. B.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 16 '44 330w
Time 44:100 Jl 17 '44 900w

" 'Little Coquette' tells a story of a France which now may have disappeared completely. Possibly many Frenchmen would wish never to have it return. The story, here told with charm and grace and honesty, is extraordinarily interesting, in part because it is so wholly alien to most American traditions. You may disapprove of these people and their ideas unstintedly, but you can hardly keep from liking them." Mary Ross
+ Weekly Book Review p2 Jl 30 '44 1150w
Wis Lib Bul 40:130 O '44

MCCOY, JOHN PLEASANT. Swing the big-eyed rabbit. 283p $2.50 Dutton

44-1708

Story of one year in a southern mountain mission school, presided over by a fundamentalist preacher with a nasty temper and little hold over his pupils. Southern customs and folkways crop up often in this story, as well as some of the pupils' experiments in sex.

"This is a fresh, believable story that has the ring of authenticity." Sterling North
+ Book Week p2 F 20 '44 420w

"From the West Virginia mountain country, a first novel which is indigenous, sensitive, and understanding of the adolescent, his first ambitions, desires and disillusion. . . Nicely handled —aware—realistic, but not for everyone."
+ Kirkus 12:84 F 15 '44 130w

" 'Swing the Big-eyed Rabbit' is as beguiling as its title. . . With nothing to distinguish it that can be conveyed in synopsis, its charm is a matter of its author's decency and fondness for life and affection for people. Especially in a first novel, and a novel about youth, it is unusual for an author to show so much quiet respect for his characters." Diana Trilling
+ Nation 158:399 Ap 1 '44 90w

Reviewed by George Mayberry
New Repub 110:416 Mr 27 '44 100w

"This synopsis does less than justice to Mr. McCoy's book, for he is a graphic writer as well as a sex-conscious one. All of his scenes ring true—from the beauty of his mountains to the animal comedy of a woodland seduction, from the Rabelasian baptism of a night watchman to holy baptism in the brook. But he has not fused these scenes into a coherent novel; the blaze of his local color makes thin silhouettes of his characters." William Du Bois
+ — N Y Times p18 F 20 '44 500w

"Mr. McCoy writes freshly and with neat touches of insight that make the book worth reading."
+ New Yorker 20:86 F 26 '44 90w

"Mr. McCoy, as a first novelist, is a very diverting and a slightly disturbing young man. . . He has not written his book as satire either of the poor, quaint mountain folk who seem to be toughly able to take care of themselves, or of the often satirically belabored missionary fanatic. Obviously enough he is on the side of sin. . . But his one purpose is telling a good, lively, often bawdy story." Jonathan Daniels
+ — Sat R of Lit 27:19 Mr 4 '44 300w

"Surprisingly, this is the first novel of the author, but it bears none of the usual marks of amateurishness. It is a rich, real, balanced piece of writing. Although the theme of the book is the seduction in a criminally incompetent school of a simple country boy, the story still is as fresh and wholesome as a clump of blooming laurel bending over a mountain brook." Lee Varley
+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 27 '44 440w

" 'Swing the Big-Eyed Rabbit' is a quiet novel, unusual and rare, a pleasantly memorable book. It is fresh escape of a kind and despite some trivial imperfections—beginner's blemishes—it is almost always written in sunlit prose with a wood smoke and sugar-cured flavor." Leo Lerman
+ Weekly Book Review p6 Mr 5 '44 550w

MCCOY, MELVYN HARVEY, and MELLNIK, STEPHEN MICHAEL. Ten escape from Tojo; as told to Welbourn Kelley. 106p $1 Farrar

940.547252 World war, 1939—Prisoners and prisons, Japanese 44-3003

Account of the treatment meted out to American and Filipino prisoners of war by the Japanese after the fall of Corregidor. The authors relate nothing except what they knew of by actual experience.

Reviewed by W. F. Morse
Book Week p4 Ap 2 '44 250w

Booklist 40:282 Ap 15 '44

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:659 Jl '44 30w

Kirkus 12:88 F 15 '44 210w

"The two officers—senior men of the ten who escaped—tell a restrained story. They, and Lieut. Kelley, had the good sense to know that when you have a story to tell as brutal as the one they lived through, it is well to leave out the adjectives. The account is made all the more impressive by this restraint." Foster Hailey
+ N Y Times p1 Mr 12 '44 500w

"There is nothing more to say about this book except that, like 'Tarawa,' it ought to be read by everybody who wants to find out what the war in the Pacific has been like." Edmund Wilson
+ New Yorker 20:92 Mr 25 '44 230w

"Those Americans who believe that the home front should be told the full truth about the war will find in 'Ten Escape from Tojo' the reporting they have demanded—an unmincingly worded, eyewitness account of Japanese atrocities against American prisoners of war in the Philippine Islands. This is a terrible story." George Polk
+ Weekly Book Review p4 Mr 26 '44 750w

Reviewed by Hugh Byas
Yale R n s 34:158 autumn '44 200w

MCCOY, SAMUEL DUFF. Nor death dismay; a record of merchant ships and merchant mariners in time of war. 248p $2.50 Macmillan

940.545 World war, 1939—Naval operations. Merchant marine—U.S. 44-6083

The saga of the ships and personnel of the American Export lines during the present war. The author gives names of ships, ports, and the men who run the ships, providing a picture of the life of the whole merchant marine in his description of one line.

"A story that not only gives a grand picture, but has many thrilling pages of sea action more exciting than fiction."
+ Current Hist 7:226 S '44 60w

Kirkus 12:270 Je 15 '44 110w

"This is history happening now and made alive in a book. The author, humble before the glory he's found in our seafaring men, keeps himself out of the way; he has no desire except to make us see. We do, thanks to his knowing how to tell of great things humanly. The watchers, safe but troubled on the shrouded shore, can say, 'Now, at last we know what it's like—out there.' " Booth Tarkington
+ N Y Times p4 Jl 30 '44 500w

"Samuel Duff McCoy writes ably and with a sense of timed organization, so that the effect is quite novel, perhaps unique in maritime literature, because here in summation is the contribution made by a seafaring corporation, the embodiment of a sort of corporate war hero." G. W. B.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d S 24 '44 600w

MCCRACKEN, HAROLD. Son of the walrus king; drawings by Lynn Bogue Hunt. (Stokes bk) 128p $2 Lippincott

Walruses—Legends and stories 44-7412

Informative story for fifth to eighth graders, describing the life cycle of the walrus, that little known animal of the Arctic.

Booklist 41:28 S '44

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p4 D 14 '44 140w

"With its fine illustrations the book will add a telling chapter to our record of animal life in Bering Strait."
+ Horn Bk 20:485 N '44 100w

"Another fictionized story of wild animal life written by an author with a sensitive understanding of his subject—this time a baby walrus with a real personality."
+ Kirkus 12:373 Ag 15 '44 90w

"Information reading as easily as fiction and with as much drama. Scarcity of books about walruses makes this one important as well as interesting. Written with authority by man who travelled and hunted in Alaska, Siberia and Bering Sea. . . Pencil drawing by Lynn Hunt are good, but a map would have added value. Recommended for ages ten to fourteen." Gertrude Andrus

+ Library J 69:818 O 1 '44 110w

"One of the charms of a good animal story lies in the fact that a writer who thoroughly knows his subject can transport not only boys and girls but their elders to strange new places, where for a little time they are privileged to remain, intimately observing wild life in a wild land. Harold McCracken is particularly successful in thus enlarging the experience of his readers. In his latest story he describes a remarkable creature, about whom little has been written, with a fidelity and a vividness that leave the reader, as he finishes the book, half believing that he has spent a season in the Arctic." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p25 O 1 '44 240w

Sat R of Lit 27:44 N 11 '44 30w

Wis Lib Bul 40:149 N '44

MCCRACKEN, KENNETH DAVID. Baby flat-top; il. by George Shellhase. 180p $2 Farrar

359.12 Princess (aircraft carrier). World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American 44-6084

"Baby flat-tops like the Princess, whose comparatively uneventful story is told in this book, are smaller than grownup flat-tops like the Lexington and the Saratoga . . . but life aboard both classes of carriers seems to be about the same. Commander McCracken, a peacetime lawyer, has meticulously followed the usual recipe for a story of this sort, which calls for taking the crew and officers of a ship, marinating them in salt spray, spooning in paragraphs of conversation, [and] seasoning with a dash of restrained sentiment." New Yorker

"This is a refreshing sort of war book. It's the kind of war book that men who have been at sea would approve. You'll like it, too." W. H. Fetridge

+ Book Week p6 Ag 13 '44 320w

Booklist 41:54 O 15 '44

"Though this has somewhat of the compass of Max Miller's Daybreak for Our Carrier, there is sharp contrast in style. This is a random, casual, sometimes amusing account of a small carrier, The Princess, written by her navigator, with a deliberate, aforestated avoidance of the dangers, the dramas encountered."

+ Kirkus 12:245 Je 1 '44 130w

"A familiar concoction but a palatable one."

New Yorker 20:62 Ag 12 '44 180w

"In an earlier age these would have been called sketches of sea life, and they are a fairly distinguished example of the same. Perhaps one could hit the quality of the book most nearly by describing it as Washington Irving crossed with James Thurber; there is a slightly delirious note to the whole business which only the latter has hitherto been able to supply. That note is one of the main reasons for recommending 'Baby Flat-Top' to any reader desirous of learning what really goes on in the Navy. Most war books are full of platitudes and heroics, whereas the average ship gets into action only once or twice in a year (if lucky) and most of the time is spent as on McCracken's baby flat-top." Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat R of Lit 27:19 Ag 12 '44 310w

"Commander McCracken [will] answer most of your questions on how sailors live. Once you open these pages you'll probably read the book through without putting it down." George Polk

+ Weekly Book Review p10 Ag 27 '44 350w

MCCRACKEN, RUSSELL. Elegant elephant; il. by Susanne Suba. 33p $1 Rand McNally 44-9748

Eddie was a young elephant who longed to be elegant enough to join the circus. He made some disastrous attempts at elegance, which fell flat, but finally achieved his ambition. There are two cardboard elephants at the end of the story, for young readers to cut out and fit together.

"The combination of Suba's delightful drawings and the McCracken story with its amusing and sensible moral, is a happy one." P. A. Whitney

+ Book Week p4 N 12 '44 230w

Commonweal 41:256 D 22 '44 30w

Kirkus 12:518 N 15 '44 80w

"His story is very slight, chiefly a vehicle for Susanne Suba's pictures, which are as elegant as Eddie's heart could ever have desired and which have endowed him with something of Babar's endearing charm." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p18 O 22 '44 140w

Weekly Book Review p39 N 12 '44 150w

MCCRARY, JOHN REAGAN, and SCHERMAN, DAVID EDWARD. First of the many; a journal of action with the men of the Eighth air force. 241p il $3.75 Simon & Schuster

940.44973 U.S. Army air forces. 8th air force. World war, 1939—Aerial operations 44-8662

"An up-to-date segment of American history in a sort of yearbook that recounts the exploits of one of the most famous classes ever to matriculate in the United States Army—the men and officers of the Eighth Air Force, based in England. Major McCrary, a former Mirror man, tells the story of the Eighth from the time a flight of twelve planes bombed Rouen in August, 1942, down to June, 1944. . . Mr. Scherman, a Life operative, contributes more than a hundred pages of photographs." New Yorker

"The reader will learn the differences between fighter and bomber men, between the mighty Liberators and Flying Fortresses, and will meet a considerable company of brave men, both our own and our allies'. In addition the book has 128 pages of photographs of notably high quality." W. F. Morse

+ Book Week p12 O 29 '44 90w

Booklist 41:87 N 15 '44

"The journalistic character of the book makes this just another one of many rather than a must war book."

Kirkus 12:393 S 1 '44 120w

"Graphic and thrilling, revealing the courage, nervous tension, humor and spirit of these air fighters. . . Not even the smallest library should miss this. It's grand." G. W. Hill

+ Library J 69:935 N 1 '44 100w

Reviewed by F. S. Adams

N Y Times p6 O 22 '44 500w

"The photographs are better than the prose, which is often as awful as tabloid prose can get, but the record of courage and tenacity hung up by the Eighth manages to survive it."

New Yorker 20:82 O 28 '44 160w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown

Springf'd Republican p4d D 31 '44 600w

Reviewed by Beach Conger

Weekly Book Review p7 D 24 '44 300w

MCDIARMID, ERRETT WEIR, and MCDIARMID, JOHN. Administration of the American public library. 250p $3 A.L.A; Univ. of Ill.

025 Library administration 44-40023

"In this study the authors summarize actual methods of organization and management in 315 municipal libraries and from the findings of their survey formulate principles of accepted practice. The study deals with the library's internal organization, management, and relations. Governmental relations are presented only as a background, followed by reports and discussion on the place of the board in library management, the executives, departmentation, financial management, personnel management and coordinating devices. The practical recommendations based on the findings follow the topics as they are presented. Bibliography: p.243-245." (Booklist) Index.

MCDIARMID, E. W.—Continued
Booklist 40:205 F 15 '44

"In the literature of library administration, this new book represents the best volume published in recent years, both for the student of administration and for the experienced administrator. The student now has a handbook of accepted practice and the administrator has a manual for checking his administrative practices with the results of the survey and with the authors' recommendations." H. R. Galvin
+ Library J 69:401 My 1 '44 700w

"The Administration of the American Public Library is a notable contribution to the growing literature on the library in the political order. . . The volume repays reading by virtue of the clarity of its insight and the challenge of its recommendations. It is refreshing in its freedom from the jargon of public administration. Not many librarians are likely to adopt the suggested administrative organization, but all librarians will profit from an understanding of the administrative ideas advanced. The book is required reading before any job of public library reorganization." Lowell Martin
+ Library Q 14:247 Jl '44 1600w

MACDONALD, ALEXANDER W. Revolt in paradise; the social revolution in Hawaii after Pearl Harbor. 288p $3 Daye

330.9969 Hawaiian Islands. World war, 1939 —Hawaiian Islands 44-8109

History of the Hawaiian Islands from 1820, when the first American missionaries came to the islands, to 1943, with the islands practically under military control. It carries the reader thru the fall of the native rulers, the monopoly of power by the leading sugar families, the stress of Pearl Harbor, and up to the beginning of the establishment of democratic life. No index.

Reviewed by Arna Bontemps
Book Week p3 O 1 '44 500w

Booklist 41:72 N 1 '44

"Well organized presentation of a little considered problem, a history book with a purpose and message in its reforms."
+ Kirkus 12:337 Ag 1 '44 130w

"Singularly interesting account of a little-known American phenomenon which may not be very popular, but which larger libraries will want to own." G. W. Wakefield
Library J 69:649 Ag '44 110w

New Repub 111:638 N 13 '44 180w

"[The] book is very readable and is recommended highly." J. K. Landon
+ Springf'd Republican p4d S 24 '44 390w

MACDONALD, GOLDEN. Red light, green light; il. by Leonard Weisgard. [40p] $2 Doubleday 44-8554

Picture book for small readers, showing the differences between red lights and green lights in managing traffic. The text is very brief, the pictures are lithographs done in four colors.

Boston Globe p36 N 29 '44 40w

"A fine picture-story book for the smallest ones." F. C. Darling
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 O 30 '44 170w

"A very simple treatment of the notion of stopping and going. Probably useful for city children who will have to cross the streets unaccompanied. Illustrations particularly good." H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 41:127 N 17 '44 20w

"A thoroughly modern picture book."
+ Horn Bk 20:474 N '44 50w

"A 'safety book' and a good one. There's lots of humor in the text."
+ Kirkus 12:448 O 1 '44 80w

"The words are not at all dramatic, but the pictures are. They are strikingly designed in soft browns with accents in red or green." M. C. Skinner
+ — Library J 69:862 O 15 '44 70w

"In these days of traffic lights and safety education this book has a decided value. And yet, it is not all informational. Lines have a certain rhythm. . . Illustrations are well done." M. A. Webb
+ Library J 70:72 Ja 15 '45 70w

"Text is reminiscent of Gertrude Stein. Apparently written to illustrate traffic rules for little children, the introduction of dogs and mice as well as trucks and jeeps is a bit confusing, and the repetition of 'Red light they can't go, green light they can' does not help." R. O. Bostwick
— Library J 70:72 Ja 15 '45 70w

"The brief text has a pleasant rhythmic quality: its chief value is to hold together the unusual pictures through which a child unconsciously gains a sense of the world beyond his doorstep, a world secure and protecting when safety laws are obeyed." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p21 Ja 21 '45 130w
Sat R of Lit 27:29 N 11 '44 30w

"The four-color lithographs by Leonard Weisgard will be the chief attraction, but the brief text has a rhythmic quality which will appeal to the youngest readers. Its board covers will limit the life-span of the book, however." P. H. S.
+ — Springf'd Republican p4d O 15 '44 60w

"Distinctive, handsome, useful. . . Slender as this may seem for a story, something in both words and what seem to me Mr. Weisgard's best pictures, sets up the right overtones. Children at this age feel them, though they do not put them into words. In these quiet pages, wondering as little children do what is going on outside while they are sleeping, they see the velvet world, the little distant headlights on a valley road that take away loneliness from dwellers on a hill. There is a real idea in the simple words, the pictures rise to its implications." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p6 O 15 '44 280w

MCDONALD, MRS LUCILE (SAUNDERS). Bering's potlatch; il. by Nils Hogner. 232p $2.50 Oxford 44-1339

Story for older boys, based on the account of Vitus Bering's voyage in 1741, made at the order of the Empress of Russia to explore America from the West. The hero is Andreas, a young Cossack hunter, who was on Bering's ship.

Booklist 40:393 Jl 15 '44

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p5 Ag 24 '44 200w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 20:211 My '44 110w

"There's a tremendous amount of fresh and interesting information in this story of a Cossack boy who went with Dr. Steller on the ill-fated Bering expedition in which Bering lost his life. But somehow the author has not been wholly successful in her selection of pertinent material, and the story bogs down a bit in the factual data."
+ — Kirkus 12:99 F 15 '44 90w

"The fearful hardships, the constant dangers, the struggle to keep life in frozen bodies makes a stern but fascinating story, much reminiscent of Hell on Ice, in a juvenile form. The style of the book is rather labored, but the present interest in Alaska makes this a timely and interesting addition to the few titles we have on Alaska and the North." G. M. Williams
+ — Library J 69:465 My 15 '44 110w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p6 Jl 16 '44 300w

"The hero of the story here is young Andreas Levedeff, a sixteen year old hunter who accompanied Dr. Steller, scientist with the expedition, and the chief difference between this book and the one by Cornelia Goodhue [Journey Into the Fog, Book Review Digest, March] is that Steller, who was pretty much of a villain in that book, is shown in more favorable light here. That point aside, this account makes an excellent adventure narrative for older boys."
+ — Wis Lib Bul 40:58 Ap '44

MACDONALD, MALCOLM. Down north. 274p $3 Farrar

917.12 Northwest, Canadian 44-4404

"Mr. Malcolm MacDonald, British High Commissioner in Canada, feels that too few Canadians are aware of the potentialities of their great Northwest and so he has written an account of his two short airplane trips, which swung from Ottawa to the Arctic Ocean. Among the places he visited are Fort Nelson, Dawson, Aklavik, the Mackenzie River, Great Slave Lake, Great Bear Lake and Coppermine." (N Y Times) Index.

Reviewed by Ralph Peterson
Book Week p3 Ag 20 '44 600w

Booklist 41:57 O 15 '44

"The author's fascination with the region is apparent, the romance and promise of the region is catching—for a book which is largely travel, part background."
+ Kirkus 12:337 Ag 1 '44 130w

"There is little in 'Down North' that those who are interested in the Northwest did not already know. If, however, this superficial report causes others to turn to the many fascinating accounts of the people and the history of the country, Mr. MacDonald will have accomplished his avowed purpose." Kathrene Pinkerton
N Y Times p14 Ag 27 '44 360w

"Mr. MacDonald deliberately avoids discussing what he acknowledges to be the 'delicate and difficult problems' of the North; this would be unbecoming in a high commissioner. Also he disavows any claim to have written a learned work. His book is an unpretentious travelogue—and a pleasant one because he is interested in so many things." Marcus Duffield
+ Weekly Book Review p4 S 10 '44 650w

MACDONALD, MARY ELIZABETH. Federal grants for vocational rehabilitation. 404p pa $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press

331.86 Disabled—Rehabilitation, etc. A44-2270

"This monograph is the result of a study of the federal grant-in-aid program for vocational rehabilitation from the beginning of the program in 1920 to 1943. Based on an examination of documentary materials, the volume is devoted primarily to the history of federal legislation for vocational rehabilitation, and to the federal administrative machinery and federal administrative practices and policies which have been evolved to carry out the program. One chapter is devoted to state administration, but emphasis is placed on only those aspects of state vocational rehabilitation programs which have been affected by federal policy through the grant-in-aid system." Am Pol Sci R

"The volume should be of great interest to social workers, and it should be of considerable value to political scientists interested in federal-state relations. The author has performed a useful service in pointing out the major shortcomings of the federal vocational rehabilitation program, and in directing attention to some of the more important problems of federal grants-in-aid." W. H. Bennett
+ Am Pol Sci R 38:1001 O '44 550w

Reviewed by W. H. Magill
Ann Am Acad 236:210 N '44 400w

MCDONALD, WILLIAM ANDREW. Political meeting places of the Greeks. 308p il $5 Johns Hopkins press [30s Oxford]

725.1 Architecture, Greek. Greece—Antiquities. Greece—Politics and government 43-10147

"A very usable manual. In systematic progression are considered the archeological and architectural aspects of the assembly places in Crete and in Homeric and post-Homeric Greece. The descriptive reports of the remains is supplemented with relevant literary and epigraphical evidence and with judicious commentary." (Am Pol Sci R) Index.

"The book is one of the best of the series. Its great value lies in the careful use made of the evidence (ancient texts, commentaries, and excavation reports), in the author's familiarity with most of the ancient sites under consideration, and above all in the fact that he was able to discuss his problems with all those scholars who were likely to be of help and assistance. McDonald's book is therefore not only an original contribution to Greek archaeology but also a manual that will be of great use at home both to students and to teachers of Greek civilization, and in the field to those who study the ancient sites as well as to the excavators themselves." A. E. Raubitschek
+ Am Hist R 49:692 Jl '44 1100w

"The author attends strictly to his specialty; thus this volume . . . gives little directly to the student of government; but it does provide him with essential material for interpretation of the political ideas and institutions of the ancient Greeks. Students of political ecology will welcome the careful work of Professor McDonald." A. F. Saunders
+ Am Pol Sci R 37:1132 D '43 150w

Reviewed by E. L. Minar, jr.
+ Pol Sci Q 58:635 D '43 450w

MACDOUGALD, DUNCAN. The languages and press of Africa. (African handbooks) 86p pa $1.50 Univ. of Pa. press [pa 9s 6d Oxford]

496 African languages. Newspapers 44-4429

"This No. 4 of the 'African Handbooks' consists largely of a 'language census' and a list of newspapers—both organized according to political subdivisions." Foreign Affairs

"Easily accessible, pertinent information on a little-known continent." K. E. Knorr
+ Am Pol Sci R 38:806 Ag '44 200w
Foreign Affairs 22:666 Jl '44 20w

MCDOUGALD, ROMAN. The deaths of Lora Karen. 249p $2 Simon & Schuster 44-329

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p7 Ja 16 '44 230w

"A story that brings to our notice a new detective and a new writer with a real talent for mystery." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p8 F 6 '44 90w

"Action and suspense ample. Plot over-involved with confusing criss-cross motives and almost too sudden solution. Readable."
+ — Sat R of Lit 27:21 Ja 15 '44 30w

"This is one of the better hair-raisers."
Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 9 '44 110w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p22 Ja 23 '44 100w

MACDOUGALL, MICHAEL. Danger in the cards. (Alliance bk) 236p $2.50 Ziff-Davis

175.5 Gambling. Cards 43-17721

An exposé of cheating tricks and methods used by dishonest patrons of many kinds of gambling games from bingo to horse racing. The author is a detective, author of Gamblers Don't Gamble (Book Review Digest, 1939).

Reviewed by Herman Kogan
Book Week p4 N 28 '43 600w

Booklist 40:189 F 1 '44

Wis Lib Bul 40:33 Mr '44

MCDOWELL, TREMAINE, ed. America in literature. 540p $2 Crofts

810.8 American literature—Collections. U.S. —Civilization 44-5256

Anthology composed of selections from American prose and verse, fiction and non-fiction, which purport to be "transcripts from American life, set down during a century and a half by American authors." Biographical sketches and index of authors. Index of titles.

MCDOWELL, TREMAINE—Continued
School & Society 59:368 My 20 '44 40w

"An excellent book to be used in high school courses in American literature and history."
+ Social Studies 35:384 D '44 40w
Wis Lib Bul 40:108 Jl '44

MACFARLAND, CHARLES STEDMAN. Survey of religious literature. 157p $1.50 Revell

016.2 Theology. Religious thought. Books—Reviews 43-16426

The author, general secretary emeritus of the Federal Council of churches, reviews thirty-six religious books. They are arranged in six separate sections labeled: Personal religion and preaching; Philosophy and theology; The return to Jesus; The social Gospel and the world order; Glances at history; As Christians face the reality of war. There is a concluding chapter on Contemporary religious thought. Index.

"The topical arrangement of the material makes this volume a hopeful summary and evaluation of current trends as well as of specific books. It is valuable both for present information and for the record."
+ Christian Century 60:1075 S 22 '43 50w

"The book will be of interest to a large circle of readers, but is especially to be commended to the busy pastor whose parish duties rigidly enforce discriminating reading. Here he will find opportunity to keep abreast of contemporary religious trends under the guidance of a teacher well equipped to point out rewarding fields of such further research as his time may allow." H. C. Newell
+ Crozer Q 21:87 Ja '44 350w

Reviewed by E. E. Aubrey
J Religion 24:301 O '44 40w

MCFEE, WILLIAM. Ship to shore. 407p $2.75 Random house 44-7126

The love story of two people of widely varying backgrounds and stations. Rosita Ross, New York business girl, was on a "luxury cruise," (the parting gift of a one-time "protector") when she came to the attention of the captain of the ship, Gregory Sylvester, middle aged and middle class, who had achieved some fame in the annals of the sea. These two fall in love and tho they cannot marry, they have several years of happiness together before death solves the problem.

Reviewed by Ray McPartlin
Boston Globe p15 S 20 '44 350w

"Long, drawn out and old-fashioned."
Kirkus 12:285 Jl 1 '44 170w

Reviewed by H. A. Wooster
Library J 69:651 Ag '44 70w

Reviewed by J. H. Preston
New Repub 111:573 O 30 '44 90w

Reviewed by C. V. Terry
N Y Times p4 S 24 '44 650w

"Fairly good reading, but there has been, and probably will be, better McFee."
New Yorker 20:77 S 9 '44 90w

"'Ship to Shore' is an unusual sea-story, which has the merit of never divorcing the reader from awareness of the influence of the forces, human and social, which govern life ashore. It is written with the solid artistry Mr. McFee has shown so often before, never too technical, always faithful to the basic instincts of the group of men and women involved." A. D. H. Smith
+ Sat R of Lit 27:9 S 9 '44 900w

"'Ship to Shore' is rather slow moving and repetitious, especially in the early chapters. A considerable group of amusing and credible characters appear in the foreground of Greg and Rosita's story. But they all share with Captain Gregory Sylvester a disturbing quality of having been picked whole out of life and the newspapers and assembled in neat and aptly fitting jigsaw in these pages. There is, however, no shadow of a doubt that Mr. McFee knows thoroughly the life he writes of, both at sea and ashore." F. H. Bullock
+ — Weekly Book Review p6 S 10 '44 850w

MACFIE, ALEC LAWRENCE. Economic efficiency and social welfare; with a foreword by Frank H. Knight. 142p $3.25 (10s 6d) Oxford

330.1 Economics. Sociology. Social problems 43-8263

"In this book, the Scotch economist Macfie presents a philosophical discussion of the relation between economics and ethics, with an argument for more emphasis upon social welfare in economics. He holds that Marshallian economics is dominated by the utilitarian background of its founder; hence it is individualistic. But, he argues, a social group is more than the sum of the individuals that compose it, and social welfare cannot be attained by a mere maximization of individual pleasures. We must therefore pay more attention to social values, which involve a moral problem." Ann Am Acad

"As a notable critique of an economics grounded on individualist ethics and politics, as an eloquent plea for a closer coöperation among those interested in the problems of society, and above all, as an appeal for students of society to make explicit their own philosophic assumptions, this book should be heartily welcomed." M. Q. Sibley
+ Am Pol Sci R 38:408 Ap '44 380w

Reviewed by R. T. Bye
Ann Am Acad 233:247 My '44 450w

"Dr. Macfie has written a suggestive, stimulating and valuable book, which makes a real contribution to economic thought."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p250 My 22 '43 480w

MCGARRIGLE, FRANCIS JOSEPH. My Father's will. (Religion and culture ser) 323p $2.75 Bruce pub.

248 Christian life 44-4553

"This spiritual treatise is a detailed commentary on the words of St. Paul: 'This is the Will of God, your sanctification.' Its main thesis is that the call to perfection is not a call to an élite few, but a divine invitation of the Son of God to all the children of men. Every soul can achieve sanctity if he wills it sincerely, and conforms his will to the will of God. Father McGarrigle, on every page, quotes with telling effect, the Sacred Scriptures, the Church's Fathers, the Saints, and spiritual writers of every school." Cath World

Cath World 159:477 Ag '44 140w
Christian Century 61:1027 S 6 '44 230w

MCGINLEY, PHYLLIS (MRS C. L. HAYDEN). The horse who lived upstairs; il. by Helen Stone. [48p] $1.25 Lippincott 44-9411

Saga of the discontented horse, Joey, who lived upstairs in a New York stable at night, and pulled a vegetable cart during the day. At last he was sent to live in the country, where Joey thought horses belonged. But, alas, Joey had to work harder than ever, and he was discontented all over again. At last the tire shortage recalled Joey to the city and the vegetable cart, and he was so happy he decided never to be discontented again.

"Phyllis McGinley has told a charming and satisfying story and Helen Stone's amusing illustrations add an inspired touch to this unusually good picture-storybook." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p11 Ja 14 '45 220w
Booklist 41:127 D 15 '44
Horn Bk 20:470 N '44 50w
Kirkus 12:508 N 1 '44 100w

Reviewed by Isabel McLaughlin
Library J 69:1104 D 15 '44 70w
N Y Times p6 N 12 '44 90w

"An agreeable book for a child of Manhattan. . . The author has dressed up her fable with some knowing New York detail, and the artist, a newcomer of distinction, has contributed delightful pictures."

+ New Yorker 20:80 D 16 '44 50w

"Every once in a while a new book comes along that brings a happy marriage of author and illustrator, that is exactly right in text, format, and pictures. Such a book is this story of Joey. . . Miss McGinley and Mrs. Stone have made a book that boys and girls everywhere will love. But it is the New York boys and girls, not to mention their fathers and mothers, who will love it best." M. G. D.
+ Sat R of Lit 27:42 N 11 '44 450w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p6 D 10 '44 230w

MCGOLDRICK, JOSEPH DANIEL, and others. Building regulation in New York city; a study in administrative law and procedure. 743p $4.50 Commonwealth fund [19s 6d Oxford]

692.9 Building laws 44-3324

"Traces the development of municipal control, and analyzes the powers and functions of the five agencies which at present regulate the construction, maintenance and use of buildings. The first two chapters are devoted to a history of the city's building laws from the early 17th century through 1940. Succeeding chapters are entitled: Delegation of powers; Rules and regulations; Order-making and hearings in the Departments; Hearings before the Board of Standards and appeals; Penalties, Procedure for judicial review; Finality of administrative determination; Conclusion." (N Y New Tech Bks) Table of cases. Index.

"In its examination of the actual operation of one important procedure and its consequences, the volume is a valuable contribution to the literature of administrative law. Its examination of the actual operation and consequences of one important administrative procedure helps to build up more background for a later synthesis from many fields which will continue to help establish criteria for a developing appraisal of the administrative process." J. P. C. Carey
+ Am Pol Sci R 38:790 Ag '44 750w

"The thinking is sophisticated, the writing is crisp and even sprightly. The volume in its conception and execution is a credit to the committee and the authors." C. S. Ascher
+ Ann Am Acad 233:251 My '44 500w

"While the student of administration may find in the book a wealth of information, students of housing and planning will find some parts of it perplexing." Charles Abrams
Columbia Law R 44:949 N '44 700w

Reviewed by Murray Seasongood
Harvard Law R 57:1146 S '44 2050w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:22 Ap '44

MACHINERY (periodical). Machinery's handbook for machine shop and drafting-room; a reference book on machine design and shop practice for the mechanical engineer, draftsman, toolmaker, and machinist [ed] by Erik Oberg and F. D. Jones. 12th ed 1815p il $6 Industrial press

621.02 Mechanical engineering—Handbooks, manuals, etc. 43-17180

"Twelfth edition of a standard reference book revised to meet new developments in engineering, and shop standards and manufacturing practice. New data includes planetary gear designing charts, class 5 thread fit, American standard pipe threads, revised 1942, revisions in S.A.E. steels, gage tolerances, standard speeds for motor reducers, etc." Library J

Booklist 40:255 Mr 15 '44

Library J 69:32 Ja 1 '44 60w

"Pagination is the same as in the 11th edition (1942). Changes are, for the most part, revisions of tables. Libraries having the 11th edition may not need this one."
N Y New Tech Bks 28:65 O '43

MACHLUP, FRITZ. International trade and the national income multiplier. 237p $3.50 Blakiston

382 Commerce. Income 43-5789

"Does foreign trade promote domestic prosperity? If so, by what process? Dr. Machlup supplies the answers in this deductive study of the effects of changes in exports and imports on national income. His skillful mathematical apparatus will not prove an obstacle to anyone competent in high school algebra." Foreign Affairs

"International Trade and the National Income Multiplier is a very useful book, but it requires in spots some theoretical supplementation." Hans Neisser
+ — Am Econ R 34:390 Je '44 2000w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:6 Ja '44 40w

Reviewed by D. B. Marsh
Pol Sci Q 58:465 S '43 700w

MACINNES, HELEN (MRS GILBERT HIGHET). While still we live [Eng title: Unconquerable]. 555p $2.75 Little [10s 6d Harrap]
44-2182

Another spy-adventure story by the author of Assignment in Brittany. Occupied Poland is the scene; the heroine is an English girl who stays behind in Poland when the last English escape-train leaves in August 1939.

"Like a well-dressed bride, Miss MacInnes's story wears something old and something new—with just enough of the new to keep the reader moving on through a great deal that has become old hat to followers of spy romances. The characters are well known and well worn, the action unashamedly melodramatic. It is a personal story of an individual's adventures, and it is at its best when it is not making pretenses at representing the indomitable spirit of the Poles." R. W. Anderson
+ — Atlantic 173:129 Je '44 420w

Reviewed by A. S. Ryan
Book Week p3 Mr 26 '44 360w

Booklist 40:270 Ap 1 '44

Bookmark 5:19 Mr '44

"Helen MacInnes is past mistress of the well-written spy-adventure story. . . Sheila Matthews is a heroine worthy of the MacInnes pen. Her adventures are absorbing, her love affair romantic." D. H.
+ Boston Globe p15 Mr 29 '44 250w

"The story calls for a large cast of characters, all presented with much clarity. Character portrayal and mystery heighten the interest of the narrative, but its chief hold on the emotions of the reader, appalled and indignant, is the account of Warsaw under siege and of the horror of the villages, helpless against attack from the sky; or in a different way, the account of the tenacity, daring, and ingenuity of the Poles. Even the charm and sincerity of the English girl, though providing some relief, has chiefly the effect of accentuating the devastation around her and the toughness of the people's endurance." W. K. R.
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Jl 8 '44 500w

"You get the feeling that Miss MacInnes is straining a bit, trying to do something more important than just another good mystery thriller about fighting Hitler. For such heavy-duty stuff it doesn't appear that she has quite enough artillery. She is always intelligent and interesting—well, nearly always—but outside the heroine, who is obviously Miss MacInnes and very charming, the characters are just a little too simple, a little too much like the people you meet in good mystery thrillers." J. C. Cort
+ — Commonweal 40:140 My 26 '44 350w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Horn Bk 20:400 S '44 50w

"A marketable enough tale, but one could wish the author had exercised a little restraint! It would be better if tightened up considerably."
+ — Kirkus 11:536 D 1 '43 210w

MACINNES, HELEN—Continued
Reviewed by Margaret Owen
Library J 69:203 Mr 1 '44 90w

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse
Manchester Guardian p3 S 29 '44 70w

"Miss MacInnes uses all her best ingredients for this novel—suspense, tight suspicion, faithful atmospheric detail and good characterization, and yet her story does not sing with the spirit of high adventure. Perhaps the odds are too heavily against romantic enterprise, quick wits and nimble maneuvering." Isabelle Mallet
+ — N Y Times p4 Mr 26 '44 600w

"Helen MacInnes's new novel is by far her best." R. E. Roberts
+ Sat R of Lit 27:71 Ap 15 '44 400w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 26 '44 410w

"The author's feeling for Poland's history and the ordeal of her people in this war comes out sharply and unaffectedly and gives an edge now and then to the secret agent adventures in the tale. These are handled in conscientious enough fashion, but scarcely with enough dash; the thrills, in fact, sometimes turn out to be a bit naive. Part of the trouble, which has to do with the mixture of genres, may be that the novel is altogether too lengthily circumstantial; anything with the flavour of a spy story requires to be more rapid in movement. Still, 'The Unconquerable' has its merits and something of timeliness as well just now."
Times [London] Lit Sup p461 S 23 '44 360w

"Good as this book is, it will lack for many readers the appeal of Miss MacInnes's former works. Its tempo is too slow; it is a little over-written; the plot seems strained. And, however magnificent the spirit of a people, for fictional purposes, the exploits and the courage of an individual are more dramatic than the exploits and the courage of a nation. While Sheila is an active force in the novel, her actions and her love story are dwarfed by the figures among whom she moves." Rose Feld
+ — Weekly Book Review p2 Mr 26 '44 850w

Wis Lib Bul 40:86 Je '44

MCINNIS, EDGAR WARDWELL. The war. 4v ea $2.50 Oxford

940.53 World war, 1939- (40-35128)

"The War, which now includes four volumes, each covering a one-year period between September 1939 and September 1943, was originally published in separate parts as The Oxford Periodical History of the War under the sponsorship of the Canadian Institute of International Affairs. . . The general arrangement of the volumes is as follows: introduction, text discussing progress of the war for the year, documentary appendix, chronology, index. . The text follows a chronological pattern with subheadings for the various events and war fronts and is written without bias in a clear, straightforward style." (Subscription Bks Bul) For volumes one to three see Book Review Digest, 1940, 1941, 1943. Except for excerpt from Subscription Books Bulletin, reviews below are for volume four.

"Twenty-three New York Times battle maps, a documentary appendix, a chronology, and a splendidly detailed index enhance the value of this excellent current history." Henry Reiff
+ Am Pol Sci R 38:1036 O '44 150w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 Ag 6 '44 180w

Booklist 41:16 S '44

Christian Science Monitor p12 D 9 '44 450w

Commonweal 40:404 Ag 11 '44 30w

Foreign Affairs 23:7 O '44 10w

Kirkus 12:311 Jl 15 '44 130w

"Professor McInnis' history suffers from the defect that is inevitable in any attempt at the presentation of contemporary events: much new and pertinent information about the major happenings has come to light during the period of preparation and publication of his book. But, with this limitation recognized, it must be conceded that he has ably organized the most reliable information that was currently available." Francis Scott
+ N Y Times p10 Ag 6 '44 400w

Reviewed by Donald Armstrong
Sat R of Lit 27:24 Ag 19 '44 480w

Social Studies 35:384 D '44 40w

Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 10 '44 220w

"The War; First-Fourth Year is recommended."
+ Subscription Bks Bul 15:35 Jl '44 600w

"It is no light task, while the significance of the military events described is continually being modified by the further progress of the war, to attempt, as Professor McInnis does, an orderly and connected narrative rather than a condensed factual record, and once again it must be said that he acquits himself extraordinarily well in the circumstances. He is sober and sensible in reviewing the broad course of military operations, cautious and dispassionate in comment, and a trained historical sense gives more than ordinary value to his narrative as a work of reference."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p388 Ag 12 '44 900w

Weekly Book Review p15 O 8 '44 350w

MCINTOSH, COLIN HUGH. Long-range flight. 177p il $2.50 McGraw

629.1325 Airplanes—Piloting 44-5050

"This book is intended to acquaint pilots and navigators with the special problems connected with long-range flights. It outlines the various factors affecting engine performance during such flights, and describes the techniques required to produce maximum efficiency. Emphasis is placed on the pre-planned flight and the methods of compiling the necessary data. Performance data and practical illustrations are limited to the DC-3 type of airplane." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 41:12 S '44

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:606 Jl '44 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:19 Ap '44

MACINTYRE, ELISABETH. Susan who lives in Australia [pictured by the author]. [32p] $1.50 Scribner

44-2099

Colored pictures and rhyme tell the story of a little girl who lives in Australia, describing in a few words her daily activities. For children six to eight.

"The book is good fun and the young reader (or listener) will learn a lot about life in Australia." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p10 Mr 12 '44 110w

Booklist 40:272 Ap 1 '44

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p10 My 29 '44 150w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 20:204 My '44 70w

Reviewed by B. W. Bell
Library J 69:307 Ap 1 '44 60w

"The pictures are gay and childlike, with a charming humor and an imaginative quality which make the reader feel that he has really seen a bit of Susan's country. A timely picture book for children from 5 to 7 and one that their elders will enjoy with them." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p6 Mr 5 '44 180w

New Yorker 20:54 Jl 8 '44 50w

"This is a good book, because it is amusing and entertaining and it paints a realistic picture of Australia and the children who live there." M. G. D.
+ Sat R of Lit 27:26 Mr 11 '44 270w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p5 Mr 12 '44 250w

MCIVER, M. E. and others, eds. Technologists' stake in the Wagner act; the National labor relations act in operation as it affects engineers, chemists and architects. 260p pa $2 Am. assn. of engineers, 8 S. Michigan av, Chicago 3

331.154 Industrial relations. Engineers. Labor laws and legislation—U.S. 44-8634

"The book incorporates the findings of the Mediation Committee of the American Association of Engineers, which has observed the operation of the Wagner Labor Relations Act since 1937 and has maintained close contact with technologists directly affected by the act. A large proportion of the text is quoted from statements of the National Labor Relations Board. An appendix includes a copy of the act, a bibliography, and statements of five national technological societies." Chem & Eng N

Booklist 41:146 Ja 15 '45

Chem & Eng N 22:1933 N 10 '44 90w

"One of the minor defects of the book is that this interpretation of the act and the board's application of it is overextended. Too much space is given to the authors' opinions, and in a few instances these are open to questions. . . These errors, however, detract little from the general value of the book. Especially valuable are the chapters in the latter part of the book on appropriate bargaining units, on selecting a representative and on the actual process of collective bargaining." V. T. B.

+ — Eng N 133:96 O 5 '44 360w

MACIVER, ROBERT MORRISON, ed. Group relations and group antagonisms; a series of addresses and discussions. (Institute for religious studies. Religion and civilization ser) 237p $2 Harper

323.1 Minorities. U.S.—Foreign population 44-3307

Symposium in which representatives of various minorities consider their problems from two general viewpoints: from the viewpoint of national welfare, rather than that of the specific minority; and from the viewpoint of the effects, intellectual and spiritual, within the minorities themselves. Partial contents: Eastern European nationality and ethnic groups, by Francis Deák; The Italian-Americans, by Max Ascoli; The Negro group, by A. L. Locke; The Chinese in the United States, by M. H. Lin; The Roman Catholic minority, by G. N. Shuster; The Jewish minority, by Louis Finkelstein; A religious minority in action: The Society of Friends, by D. V. Steere; Europe's conflict of cultures, by S. G. Cole, Minorities in Latin America, by Frank Tannenbaum; The Soviet solution of the minorities problem, by Jacob Robinson; Minorities and the autonomy of India, by Krishnalal Shridharani. Index.

Reviewed by Ernest Manheim

Am J Soc 50:248 N 13 '44 380w

Reviewed by K. H. Wolff

Am Soc R 9:331 Je '44 650w

"This small volume . . . has the distinction, in spite of its dry and flat title, of being the most recent and able introduction to the majority-minorities relationships in the United States and abroad. . . Few sociological works of recent years concerned with the problem of majority-minority relationships have been so absorbing on the one hand and so enlightening on the other, as is MacIver's volume." J. S. Roucek

+ Ann Am Acad 233:256 My '44 550w

Booklist 40:334 Je 1 '44

"As in most efforts to promote understanding among religious groups, the emphasis is all upon the abatement of Protestant prejudice toward Catholics; the reverse is seldom attempted, and not at all here. But in the generally excellent paper on 'Minorities in Latin America,' by Frank Tannenbaum, there is no mention of a Protestant minority or any group at variance with the officially predominant Roman Catholicism, but only of Negroes, Indians and some linguistic groups of European origin. But the discussions as a whole touch so many of the critical issues in the social order, and touch them so wisely and sensitively, that they shed much light and promote the development of the mood of reasonableness and good will in which these antagonisms must be resolved if they ever are."

+ — Christian Century 61:1078 S 20 '44 300w

"The volume is an appeal to recognize the rights of minorities, and it is well done. At times there is severe, but never unjust, criticism of the ignorance, indifference, and heartlessness of the majorities. The discriminatory exclusion and immigration laws are criticized, but not beyond their due. But in going through the volume, one question has frequently come to mind: how often are the minorities, themselves, for one reason or another, the aggravating causes of the bitter disappointments and the hardships which they are suffering? We have so developed the chivalrous tendency to fight for the underdog that sentiment sometimes tips the scale against justice." I. G. Matthews

+ — Crozer Q 21:268 Jl '44 700w

Reviewed by H. M. Magid

J Philos 41:614 O 26 '44 240w

N Y Times p26 Ap 30 '44 300w

Wis Lib Bul 40:83 Je '44

MACK, GERSTLE. Land divided; a history of the Panama canal and other isthmian canal projects. 650p il maps $6 Knopf

626.9 Panama canal. Canals, Interoceanic 44-3323

Detailed history of the Panama canal and other canal projects on the isthmus from the voyages of Columbus to the completion of the canal. The book is divided into four parts: part one describes the voyages of discovery, the earliest canal proposals, and the achievement of Latin American independence; part two, deals with the nineteenth century canal and railway transit projects; part three, contains the story of de Lesseps; and part four is the story of the American completion of the canal. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 40:314 My 15 '44

"A history which is history, politics, finance, science, and which ignores no phase and no detail of the accomplishment that was to unite the world."

+ Kirkus 12:60 F 1 '44 180w

"Although [the book] covers six hundred pages and is a scholarly piece of work it is most readable. Abundantly documented, has twenty special maps drawn by the author, a complete index and a bibliography. All college and metropolitan libraries will want it as well as many smaller libraries. Heartily recommended." Katharine Shorey

+ Library J 69:262 Mr 15 '44 110w

Library J 69:463 My 15 '44 30w

"It is the first definitive history of the Panama Canal, richly complete with colorful details of the explorations, conquests, intrigues, crackpot theories and engineering genius that went into the making of it. The book will startle some Americans who say comfortably, 'The Canal? Oh, yes, we built it. Fellow named Goethals or something.' . . 'The Land Divided' is an important book. It is history without tears, and history we Americans need to know." N. B. Baker

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 16 '44 1250w

"It seems hardly likely that many readers will want to become absorbed in six hundred pages about the Canal, no matter how interesting some of those pages happen to be, but, for those who do, this is definitely the book of the week."

+ New Yorker 20:91 Ap 22 '44 110w

"Mr. Mack has done one of those exhaustive jobs which leaves his readers breathless and grateful. Furthermore he has done it in so interesting a fashion as to make the record live for any reader. Here is blended in excellent fashion sound scholarship and first-rate reporting." Hubert Herring

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Ap 30 '44 400w

MACK, GWYNNE DRESSER. Broolin; il. by [the author]. 107p $1 Hebberd
43-11961

The "Broolin" was a tiny little creature, not an elf or a fairy, but something like that, "with big hands and feet . . . a wrinkly brown face and large gentle eyes" and "he lived in a log shack, high on a hilltop." This book recounts a number of his small adventures—how he bought some rubbers, gave a birthday party, went hunting for lost treasure, etc. Illustrated with cut-out pictures.

"An ideal bedtime story book for the kindergarten and primary age. . . Recommended for large libraries." J. E. Wooster
+ Library J 69:356 Ap 15 '44 80w

"The characters are not convincing, and I doubt if the book will appeal to many children." M. F. Cox
— Library J 69:356 Ap 15 '44 60w

"Children from three to seven will enjoy this as well as their adult readers. The charming silhouets cut free-hand by the author are delightful in their simplicity and clearness. The Broolin will dance in the hearts of his readers for a long time." J. P.
+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 7 '43 120w

MACKAY, MRS MARGARET (MACKPRANG). Homeward the heart. 227p $2.50 Day
44-3688

Romance of an American officer stationed in the Hawaiian Islands during the present war, and the lively young stenographer who fell in love with him, and discovered, too late, that he was married.

Reviewed by Edith Roberts
Book Week p4 My 7 '44 500w

"Light to lush."
Kirkus 12:177 Ap 15 '44 120w

"Both the merit and the shortcoming of 'Homeward the Heart' lie in the fact that the author has deliberately chosen average people. Here is a story that might easily happen to dozens of people. Yet because they are presented as ordinary people—without the electric spark that can make one buck private different from every other man in the company—you can't feel horribly worried about what happens to them. The book winds up with what is supposed to be a happy ending, and probably is for this set of characters." Barbara Bond
N Y Times p7 My 7 '44 380w

Springf'd Republican p4d My 7 '44 110w

"After some of Mrs. Mackay's earlier books, especially those of Chinese background, 'Homeward the Heart' is disappointing. It is entertaining enough, but it has little depth." George Conrad
— + Weekly Book Review p6 My 14 '44 350w

MACKAYE, DAVID LORING, and MACKAYE, JULIA JOSEPHINE (GUNTHER) (JULIAN DAVID, LORING MACKAYE, pseuds). We of Frabo stand; il. by Elsa Jemne. 242p $2.25 Longmans
44-8545

"This is a story of Gotland and the Goths and Danes in the fourteenth century. . . The hero is twelve-year-old Gylf, son of Gruf the Silent of Frabo—a village not far from the proud, wealthy island city of Visby." Sat R of Lit

Booklist 41:94 N 15 '44

Cath World 160:281 D '44 30w

"Humor lightens the tense and tragic situations, strikingly like the recent history of small villages at the mercy of a heartless dictator. Frabo may well stand as a symbol of the love of freedom inherent in all brave people."
+ Horn Bk 20:489 N '44 80w

Kirkus 12:405 S 1 '44 210w

Reviewed by Alice Vielehr
Library J 69:1051 D 1 '44 70w

"Richly dyed in medieval color, lively with humor and characterization, this is an exceptionally fine story for readers of 10 and up. Its theme of a people invaded, betrayed but undaunted, has special significance today."
+ N Y Times p6 N 12 '44 100w

"This is one of the books, and there are many of them this year, that older boys and girls will want to read and own. . . It is a well-made book with unusual, interpretative illustrations." M. G. D.
+ Sat R of Lit 27:40 N 11 '44 230w

Springf'd Republican p4d N 19 '44 130w

"The story is at once historical and up to date, with a style of uncommon distinction and the thrills of secret communications; it concerns peace-loving people who can call on a courage that makes quiet women, watching their men fall, give away their children to mothers standing by, join combat and die like men."
+ Weekly Book Review p38 N 12 '44 600w

MACKAYE, LORING, pseud. See MacKaye, D. L. and J. J. G.

MACKENZIE, COLIN. Sailors of fortune; foreword by Quentin Reynolds. 190p il $2.50 Dutton

940.5345 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American 44-4591

"Mackenzie shipped out of New York when the submarine peril was at its height. . . Mackenzie's tanker was torpedoed twice, the first explosion breaking his leg, the second sinking the ship. . . Back in the United States he got married, went on a morale lecture tour of war plants and, fed up with shore life, shipped out again. The invasion of Sicily capped his adventures on this trip." Weekly Book Review

Booklist 40:387 Jl 15 '44

"Good adventure, authentic psychlogical feel."
+ Kirkus 12:234 My 15 '44 80w

"Very poor writing makes this a weak addition to the too small set of Merchant Marine literature." H. G. Kelley
— Library J 69:402 My 1 '44 80w

"The best personal experience story of the American merchant marine in the war is 'Sailors of Fortune,' written with freshness by a seaman new at the games of both literature and following the sea." G. W. B.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Je 4 '44 550w

"Mackenzie's style fluctuates between the crudely vigorous and the crudely casual, but once you start the book you're bound to finish it. Mackenzie didn't miss much in the war—if there was any worthwhile fighting he generally got into it, and where there was no fighting he managed to find trouble on his own hook." Herbert Kupferberg
Weekly Book Review p12 My 28 '44 500w

MACKENZIE, COMPTON. Mr. Roosevelt. 256p il $3.75 Dutton [17s 6d Harrap]

B or 92 Roosevelt, Franklin Delano
44-3899

Biography of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, written by an Englishman, who stresses the fact that the President is the logical leader for post war world affairs. Considerable space is alloted to the history of the Roosevelt family in America, from the seventeenth century to the present. About three quarters of the book is devoted to Mr Roosevelt's life before he became president, the rest sketches the period from the New Deal to 1939. Copiously illustrated. Index.

"Having written 35 novels and 29 other assorted works, Compton Mackenzie approaches this familiar subject with a literary skill that will engross even the reader who knows the facts with which he deals." Robert Lasch
+ Book Week p4 My 14 '44 450w

Booklist 40:376 Jl 1 '44

"It is scarcely necessary to say that Mr. Mackenzie writes fluently and in a fashion to hold a reader. In this book he falls far short of making any great contribution to biographical writing, but he is not in any sense dull. And 'Mr. Roosevelt' is peculiarly enriched with illustrations, most of them interesting, whether or not you like the present occupant of the White House."

+ — Commonweal 40:114 My 19 '44 600w

"A book keyed for popular taste, essentially readable, and profusely illustrated with photographs, many of them in color."
Kirkus 12:214 My 1 '44 150w

"Popularly written, drawing heavily on Eleanor Roosevelt's autobiography, recapitulating facts of childhood, education, charm, background, radio genius, ability to attract the best men in any field, the book is uncritical. If widely read, may have influence in imminent election. For young people as well as adults in all libraries." J. M. Brittan
Library J 69:356 Ap 15 '44 120w

"A very lavishly illustrated book accompanied by a rather rambling narrative." D. W. B.
Manchester Guardian p3 D 17 '43 80w

Reviewed by Allan Spalding
New Repub 111:499 O 16 '44 20w

"In the project of portraying Roosevelt's life and work, and without once losing the thread of that discourse, Mr. Mackenzie has achieved the broader feat of painting a picture of the type of American life and thought which made 'Mr. Roosevelt' possible." Charles Hurd
+ N Y Times p6 My 14 '44 1050w

"A banal propaganda biography. . . The book does, however, have some value for us by reason of its one hundred illustrations, which include reproductions of color photographs of the family portraits at Hyde Park and constitute in themselves a kind of history of the Roosevelts."
— + New Yorker 20:92 My 20 '44 150w

"It is doubtful if any Englishman ever wrote more glowingly of an American leader than Mr. Mackenzie, in his breathless book, writes of Franklin D. Roosevelt. He could hardly have been more enthusiastic if he had been hired to write a campaign biography for the Democratic Party for 1944. And undoubtedly he is fundamentally right. Twenty-four excellently printed color illustrations, reproduced from paintings, engravings, lithographs, and photographs at Hyde Park and in the White House, add greatly to the interest and value of this book." Karl Schriftgiesser
+ Sat R of Lit 27:13 My 27 '44 950w

Discussion by W. R. Benet
Sat R of Lit 27:67 O 14 '44 280w

"This book will be found 'unsatisfactory' to all but the most ardent of Mr Roosevelt's admirers. Mr. Mackenzie has not written a formal Roosevelt biography at all: rather it is a perfervid tribute by a writer possessed of undeniable charm and a certain distinction, but in this instance, of a remarkable myopia as well." R. N. Fuller
Springf'd Republican p4d Je 18 '44 350w

"'Mr. Roosevelt' has more interest as a picture-book than a chronicle. The coloured illustrations mainly show that the Roosevelt family has been unlucky in its portrait painters, and a few of the other coloured plates have an air of being stills from some film in glorious Technicolor. Instead of a chronological table, eight pages at the back of this book are occupied by little coloured pictures of events happening in various parts of the world. Some of the pictures are amusing."
Times [London] Lit Sup p624 D 25 '43 180w

"A spirited tribute by a writer of great force and charm, rather than a formal biography or an impartial evaluation. It may well serve as an illustration of the impact which the President has made upon intelligent British opinion, for Mr. Mackenzie is by no means unaware of the forces which his hero has encountered during his political career, and the book demonstrates considerable familiarity with the techniques of American government." H. W. Baehr
+ Weekly Book Review p19 My 21 '44 800w
Wis Lib Bul 40:108 Jl '44

MACKEY, CHARLES OSBORN. Graphical solutions. 2d ed 152p il $2.50 Wiley

510.8 Graphic methods. Slide rule. Engineering—Tables, calculations, etc. 44-3847

"The chapter on the construction of alignment charts has been expanded by some fifteen pages over the previous edition [Book Review Digest, 1936] and a new chapter has been added which explains the fitting of empirical equations to periodic curves. For advanced engineering students and engineers." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:205 Mr 1 '44 30w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:27 Ap '44

MACKINTOSH, JAMES MACALISTER. War and mental health in England. 91p 85c Commonwealth fund

131.32 Mental hygiene. World war, 1939— Medical and sanitary affairs 44-40100

"A study of the psychological effects of war on soldiers, industrial workers, housewives, hospital patients, students and children. The author is less concerned about measuring the total impact or proving that people in general have stood it pretty well, as apparently they have, than about describing typical injurious effects and considering how they may be cured or prevented." Christian Century

"This little book of essays is presented in very scholarly fashion by one of England's most distinguished authorities in the field of public health." M. E. Kirkpatrick
+ Am J Pub Health 34:1113 O '44 320w

"Dr. Mackintosh writes well and gracefully, but he is inclined to be more philosophical than factual. He continually emphasizes the social factors both in the prevention and treatment of mental abnormalities. He emphasizes the fact that if the national mental health is to be improved, many economic, social, and educational advances must be made." Mandel Sherman
+ — Am J Soc 50:161 S '44 700w
Booklist 40:315 My 15 '44
Christian Century 61:622 My 17 '44 60w
School & Society 59:319 Ap 29 '44 40w

Reviewed by H. M. Davis
Springf'd Republican p6 D 12 '44 480w

MACLEAN, CATHERINE MACDONALD. Born under Saturn; a biography of William Hazlitt. 631p il $3.50 Macmillan [21s Collins]

B or 92 Hazlitt, William 44-3126

"This book, bursting with words, demonstrative and, at times, suffocating in its sympathy, is based on patient research; and if it produces no new facts, it reinterprets the already known ones with a whole-hearted solicitude such as no other biographer of Hazlitt has felt. I doubt if the case of Hazlitt profits by so many caresses. Some may think that Mr. Augustine Birrell's short Life was too inclined to look at the subject with the extreme lack of illusion that one experienced nonconformist is inclined to apply to another of that prickly community; but Mr. P. P. Howe's standard biography restored the balance and could not be improved upon this side of speculation. There, of course, Miss Maclean comes in." New Statesman & Nation

"Miss Maclean has conscientiously collected all the known facts. As a piece of scholarship her book is most commendable. But as a work of art it leaves something to be desired. It is too long. It is turgid and slow-moving. Only when she is recording his struggle against oppression does she seem to have any real warmth." Bergen Evans
+ — Book Week p3 Ap 23 '44 400w
Booklist 40:303 My 1 '44

MACLEAN, C. M.—Continued

"In writing about a man whose style was fervid and declamatory, and a period when 'sensibility' was still much the mode, Miss Maclean has imparted these qualities to her own style. Thus she has given her readers the 'feel' of the times; and though the style is out of tune with present-day precision and sophistication, it is often vivid." W. K. R.

Christian Science Monitor p8 Je 10 '44 650w

"Hazlitt has had to wait for more than a hundred years for a biographer with the understanding and the industry to tell his story as fairly and fully as it could be told. This, we think, Miss Maclean has done. As art her biography suffers from its very completeness. She has an astonishing capacity for assembling details, but less talent for selecting them. Occasionally, too, she allows personal comment to break through rather disastrously." H. I'A. F.

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 N 10 '43 330w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett

New Statesman & Nation 26:235 O 9 '43 1450w

"Why, in the midst of a major war, should one take the time to read a long account of the life of William Hazlitt (1778-1830). . . To this thoroughly impertinent question Miss Maclean's new biography provides a thoroughly satisfactory answer. For her book is timely in a triple sense. It is timely, first, because it has been done with so much care and skill that it will remain for many years the definitive life of Hazlitt. It is timely, second, because it rescues Hazlitt from the pale oblivion to which most formal essayists are eventually consigned, and etches his angry face against the dark turmoil of his own days. It is timely, third, because Hazlitt, as his wisest friends thought and as this book proves, was a spear in the hands of democracy in that epoch of revolutions when the democratic principle was only just becoming established as a new force in the world." Carlos Baker

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 30 '44 900w

"Hazlitt, who has never been studied so thoroughly as some of his contemporaries, has long needed a good biography. Miss Maclean has not filled this need, for all her earnest intentions, but anyone who wants to know more about one of the most interesting men in English letters will find her book extremely profitable."

+ — New Yorker 20:83 Ap 15 '44 90w

"This biography is packed with devoted scholarship, but written sometimes with the left hand. All the more, perhaps, 'we draw near to the hot heart of Hazlitt.' " Christopher Morley

+ — Sat R of Lit 27:11 My 6 '44 750w

"Miss Maclean's writing, apart from her amazingly deliberate imitations of Carlyle, is agreeable enough, even if we are disturbed occasionally by sentimental warbles, and on other occasions by an exaggerated manliness of diction. That her book is 'the final word on its subject and a work of art in itself,' as the publishers fatuously announce, may possibly be doubted. One might anticipate in a work of art a better use of such words as 'homunculus,' 'necromantic' and 'idiom.' " C. E. Vulliamy

— + Spec 171:388 O 22 '43 950w

" 'Born Under Saturn' is a work of fiery partisanship, but one lays it down with a new conception of how much more like present-day dictatorships was the England of a hundred years ago, and how truly contemporary in his reaction to tyranny, cruelty and repression, is William Hazlitt. Miss Maclean's fine work based as it is on thorough acquaintance with her subject, is at the same time a living portrait; and despite—or perhaps because—of its somewhat old-fashioned style and flavor is a rarely satisfying and memorable volume." R. J. Conklin

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 23 '44 1200w

"Whatever the facet of his life, his character, his writing, his association that attracts you to Hazlitt, it must seem impossible for anyone to write a dull book about him. Yet that is exactly what Catherine Macdonald Maclean has achieved in her over-long, over-wordy, over-sentimental biography."

— Theatre Arts 28:748 D '44 310w

Time 43:98 Ap 17 '44 1000w

Times [London] Lit Sup p534 N 6 '43 2650w

"Miss Maclean, whose earlier books on the Wordsworths laid the foundation for this one, has deeply immersed herself in the period of Hazlitt's life. She seems, indeed, to live in it, to range about in it with perfect freedom as Henry Adams did in the twelfth century, and she makes the reader live in it too. Even her excellent style is an ample nineteenth century style with plenty of elbow room, and an occasional Carlylean or Meredithian echo." C. G. Stillman

+ Weekly Book Review p3 Ap 16 '44 1350w

Wis Lib Bul 40:109 Jl '44

"Whereas 'Charles Lamb and His Friends' is a work of affectionate understanding, 'Born under Saturn' represents a fusion of passion and reason which serves not to divide but to unify the subject. . . It is fitting that the biographer of Hazlitt should give passionate description to the driving forces of his life and yet should provide an intellectual explanation of their nature and their results. Miss Maclean has done so, superbly." H. W. Randall

+ Yale R n s 34:175 autumn '44 950w

MACLEAN, CATHERINE MACDONALD. Farewell to Tharrus. 205p $2.50 Macmillan

44-4609

"Everybody who read Seven for Cordelia and The Tharrus Three has been waiting for another chronicle of Tharrus farm and the Scottish slum children brought there by the war. And here it is, carrying events down to January 1, 1943. Unlike its predecessors, it does not make the children the center of attention. It is a summing up of the changes the war has brought to the community, and a celebration of the things the war cannot touch because nothing can touch them—the beauty of nature and the inescapable love of man for his kind." Christian Century

---

"The word charm will, no doubt, be used in reviews of 'Farewell to Tharrus.' But it seems to me that the Maclean books have something much stronger than that. Throughout there is a spirit of just plain goodness, of human decency, that will make them stand out in years to come as important reading about World War II." Dorsey McCarthy

+ Book Week p6 My 21 '44 230w

Booklist 40:341 Je 1 '44

Bookmark 5:19 My '44

"Miss Maclean announces that this is the last of the series. One hopes that, a year hence, she will change her mind."

+ Christian Century 61:646 My 24 '44 100w

+ Kirkus 12:105 Mr 1 '44 170w

"A well-written, if sentimental, narrative." J. E. Cross

+ — Library J 69:354 Ap 15 '44 80w

"Catherine Macdonald Maclean has said goodby to the fictional Highland home in which she housed her 'wee bairns' from the Scottish Lowlands, from London and from other parts of England, for the duration. Now, in May, 1944, Tharrus, whose story has been brought down to just over a year ago, can appropriately be left. The homely kindliness, the rugged humor, the saltiness and innate dignity of its people have shown us democracy at work against an atmosphere of beauty, serenity and peace." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p16 My 14 '44 300w

"There is a peculiar charm to Miss Maclean's writing that is difficult to convey, a pure essence or flavor which must be tasted to be enjoyed. She has been a university lecturer for many years and gave it up some years ago to devote her time to writing." E. Y. Mohler

+ Springf'd Republican p4d My 28 '44 440w

" 'Farewell to Tharrus' is a fitting conclusion to one of the most charming and heartening stories the war has evoked." Mary Ross

+ Weekly Book Review p4 My 21 '44 800w

MACLEISH, ARCHIBALD. The American story; ten broadcasts. 231p $2 Duell

792 Radio plays. America—History—Drama 44-40231

Ten radio sketches, which taken together form a pageant of the discovery and exploration of America. Each script is based on historical documents and each is made part of a picture of "the common American experience which has given the Americas, in part, at least, a common past."

Reviewed by Sterling North

Book Week p2 D 17 '44 400w

Booklist 41:137 Ja 1 '45

Christian Science Monitor p14 D 30 '44 450w

"There are little known sources tapped, and rare tales—a rich literary heritage. But—why—oh why such a featherbed of pompous nonsense in which the nuggets are buried? Strung out in pseudo form with narrator, incidental music, no end of bombast, sentimentality, false dramatization. One can only conclude with Edmond Wilson that again 'Archie is wired for sound.' "

— Kirkus 12:463 O 1 '44 150w

"Recommended."

+ Library J 70:69 Ja 15 '45 40w

Reviewed by R. D. Altick

N Y Times p10 Ja 28 '45 950w

"Like anything else written for the air, it could be ruined by inept production; but in script form, intrinsically, it is a club sandwich full of good things; tangible proof that radio's publication of basic historical texts need not be dull; that America is bigger and older than the political boundaries of the United States; that radio in the hands of a poet who is also a craftsman can speak effectively for the commonness of ordinary solidarity, in a world notorious for division and dissent." Norman Corwin

+ Weekly Book Review p2 D 24 '44 1500w

MACLEOD, GRACE, ed. See Rose, M. D. S. Foundations of nutrition

MACLIESH, ARCHIBALD FLEMING (ARCHIBALD FLEMING, pseud). Cone of silence. 500p $2.75 Houghton 44-669

Story of an introspective young American, called only Michael, who roams about Europe in the thirties, and falls in love with an American girl who is filled with such a sense of foreboding that she almost loses her mind. In an accident in Vienna Michael breaks his back, and during his recovery much of his past filters thru his mind. The title is from a flying term, signifying flying on the beam.

Reviewed by Lucy Tompkins

Atlantic 173:131 Ap '44 330w

"When confronted with new writers, reviewers always credit them with 'promise'—just to be on the safe side. MacLiesh has more than promise, but he will have to find some way of moving his formidable literary equipment off the narrow gauge and into tracks worthy of bearing it." Alan Browne

Book Week p4 Ja 30 '44 430w

Booklist 40:213 F 15 '44

"Sections of book bound to offend most readers." H. G. Kelley

Library J 69:30 Ja 1 '44 70w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling

Nation 158:195 F 12 '44 90w

"A great bore of a novel intent on reviewing what its author has read (a good deal, and he should read it all again), and on revealing his sensitivity to political events ten years after they happen." Mark Schorer

— New Repub 110:154 Ja 31 '44 300w

"It is pitiful, in a way, that the most humanly moving thing in this long, long volume should be the description of the loss and the death of a dog. Tip lives as none of these characters live. A recital of a young man's wander years should sing. Wolfe sang until he died, even when he was most unhappy. This volume fails to touch the reader's sensibility." Eleanor Kittredge

— N Y Times p4 Ja 9 '44 1000w

"Mr. MacLiesh writes perceptively and with great feeling on a variety of subjects, but he might have turned out a better piece of work if he had worked this feeling into a simpler narrative."

+ — New Yorker 19:77 Ja 29 '44 140w

"The influence of Joyce is clear. Let those who have written him off as a passing mutation read this latest brilliant example of his influence in American writing. It should be added that Joyce proffered also the saving element—the exact immediate image—which might have leavened the vague and echoless stream of consciousness as MacLiesh uses it. When you employ Joyce you must employ him fully, his poetry as well as his psychology. Dublin in the minds of Bloom and Dedalus is as real as stone and flesh and air. Joyce pinned it there with the dynamic image. Michael's Paris, Vienna, Florence, are cities in a dream. The definitive touch of poetry would have made 'Cone of Silence' an even finer novel. It is, anyway, a very profound and fascinating one." N. L. Rothman

+ — Sat R of Lit 27:9 Ja 22 '44 700w

"The most pleasing sections are those where Michael recalls his boyhood and the affectionate fellowship with his father. There is a rollicking liveliness here that has a warmth and immediacy and a glow of hero worship that is infectious. Michael's father is seen with romantic exaggeration, surely and this treatment is in a way a key to the whole book. For the book is romantic, in spite of its scorn of such a label—and Michael's concern with all aspects of himself, his woes and joys and loves, is not unlike Lord Byron writing of a Byronic love." Lee Varley

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 23 '44 470w

" 'Cone of Silence' is a book that makes an immediate claim to attention for its profundity, its scholarship, its levels of characterization of a man lost in the complexities of his emotional and intellectual being. Many readers will find it difficult going; many will be alienated by the detailed portrayal of a person wandering back and forth between the past and the present, his own as well as the world's. But these are the people who find no pleasure in reading Proust or the Powys of 'Wolf Solent,' two writers with whom Mr. MacLiesh has literary kinship." Rose Feld

+ — Weekly Book Review p4 Ja 30 '44 750w

MCMEEKIN, MRS ISABEL (MCLENNAN). Juba's new moon; il. by Nicholas Panesis. 224p $2 Messner 44-8166

A sequel to the author's Journey Cake. This story tells what happens to the Shadrow family after they reach their new home in Kentucky.

Booklist 41:80 N 1 '44

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 11 '45 180w

Reviewed by Dorotha Dawson

Library J 69:938 N 1 '44 30w

"The author's ear for frontier talk makes the dialogue rhythmic and vivid. Exceptional too, in the dignity and warmth with which it is drawn, is the heroic character of Juba, the Negro nurse who has her 'freedom papers' and who holds the family together through every tribulation. This is a pleasant addition to the long shelf of stories about the beginnings of America." E. M. M.

+ N Y Times p14 N 12 '44 120w

MACMULLEN, JERRY. Paddle-wheel days in California; il. by the author. 157p $3 Stanford univ. press

386.3 Steam navigation. Steamboats. Rivers —California A44-4831

The story of a hundred years of steam navigation on the inland waterways of California. The main emphasis is on the steamers of the Sacramento and San Joaquin rivers. The concluding chapter is on ferry boats on these same rivers. Contains lists of steamboats of the California rivers, California steamboat builders, and California ferry vessels. Index.

"Generously illustrated and well printed, carefully documented but written with humor and color, this is a fine bit of local Americana." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 D 10 '44 80w

Booklist 41:119 D 15 '44

Kirkus 12:494 N 1 '44 90w

"The author, a former waterfront reporter now in the navy, tackles his job in an informal and even chatty spirit—an approach not usually adopted by writers on sober historical themes. It is probable that some readers will be disturbed by this levity, but even those who disapprove of the book's tone will have to admit that it is informative as well as lively and entertaining. Mr. MacMullen has an eye for the curious, the picturesque and the flamboyant, three qualities that were much in evidence during the heyday of the California river traffic." Oscar Lewis

+ Weekly Book Review p30 N 19 '44 800w

MACMURRAY, CLAIRE (MRS EDWARD DAVENPORT HOWARD). Out on a limbo; with drawings by Alice Harvey. 191p $2.50 Lippincott

818 44-6647

Brief sketches about the wartime doings of Dave, Stu, Dick, and their father and mother, who first appeared in And Beat Him When He Sneezes (Book Review Digest, 1941). The sketches are all about family life, the joys and sorrows of everyday life.

"The recognition flashes, when you read this book aloud to your own growing family, are good for an evening of laughter not unmixed with tears." Sterling North

+ Book Week p2 Ag 6 '44 180w

Booklist 41:38 O 1 '44

"Trivia that is rarely trite by virtue of fresh combination of words and thoughts and phrases."

+ Kirkus 12:229 My 15 '44 110w

"Readers who do not set their standards by Clarence Day's classic sketches of his father and mother and the series that made up 'My Sister Eileen' and 'Junior Miss' may find them amusing reading. Others will regard many of the incidents as too trivial to have been set down in black and white. Not every family can equal the Days when it comes to source material for laughs." Dorothy Stephenson

N Y Times p16 Ag 6 '44 240w

"Much nicer than its made-to-order title, Mrs. MacMurray's book is like a summer morning spent on the verandah in a small town, friendly, comfortable, and reassuring as one's favorite old clothes." Katharine Simonds

+ Sat R of Lit 27:12 S 2 '44 360w

" 'Out on a Limbo' is a gossipy, good-natured, somewhat hilarious book, pleasant to read aloud, to quote, to use as an incentive for conversation." M. D.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 6 '44 240w

"The author of 'And Beat Him When He Sneezes' has made happy package of more of the same—family humor and domestic philosophy. It's reading to enjoy like a raid on the refrigerator before bed time."

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Ag 27 '44 100w

Wis Lib Bul 40:126 O '44

MCMURRY, ROBERT N. Handling personality adjustment in industry. 297p $3 Harper

658.3 Employment management. Personality, Disorders of 44-640

"Poor morale among employees and consequent dissatisfaction on job which often lead to absenteeism, stalling on job and even sabotage are shown to be in many cases due to personality and emotional factors. Author here applies findings of clinical psychologists, psychiatrists and psychoanalysts to the relationship between employer and employee in an effort to discover basic sources of discord which often are not connected with the job itself. Special attention is given to 'problem' employee as well as directions in scientific-selection procedures, with particular attention to the interview." Library J

Booklist 40:229 Mr 1 '44

Library J 69:32 Ja 1 '44 30w

"Will be useful to top management, to supervisors and to many employees. Recommended." G. O. Kelley

+ Library J 69:30 Ja 1 '44 100w

Reviewed by D. A. Laird

Survey 80:143 Ap '44 150w

Wis Lib Bul 40:67 My '44

MACNAIR, HARLEY FARNSWORTH, ed. Voices from unoccupied China, by Liu Nai-chen [and others]. 107p $1.50 Univ. of Chicago press

951 China—Economic conditions. China—Social conditions A44-879

Short, informal discussions on modern China by Chinese authorities in their various fields. Contents: The framework of government in unoccupied China, by Liu Nai-chen; Problems of nutrition in present-day China, by Tsai Chiao; The modern public health movement in China, by C. K. Chu; The origin and development of public health service in China, by J. Heng Liu; Some social problems of Free China, by Fei Hsiao-t'ung; Economic reconstruction and planning: wartime and post-war, by Wu Ching-chao; Education in contemporary China, by Chin Yueh-lin. Index.

Reviewed by H. C. Loh

Ann Am Acad 236:180 N '44 310w

"I have found in this small volume more of the concrete, factual information I have wanted about modern China than I have discovered in any other book. . . There is abundant evidence here that the leaders of modern China are at once men of action and men of vision. I most earnestly recommend this little book to the many readers who sincerely want to understand China's problems. I promise, too, that they will find in it not only understanding of China but an occasional bit of wisdom that will illuminate our life in the United States as well." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p14 Mr 26 '44 280w

Booklist 40:316 My 15 '44

Reviewed by W. F. Sands

Commonweal 40:68 My 5 '44 210w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 22:667 Jl '44 10w

Reviewed by Franz Michael

Pacific Affairs 17:492 D '44 350w

MCNALLY, HAROLD JOSEPH. Readability of certain type sizes and forms in sight-saving classes. 71p $1.75 Teachers college

655.24 Type and type founding. Reading 43-14397

"This study was undertaken in an attempt to supply data on the relative readability of various type sizes for children with impaired vision. While no immediate practical results could be obtained with the techniques employed, the study performs an important service in pointing out the need for further refinement of such techniques in order to make progress in a field in which additional research is definitely worth while." (Library Q) Bibliography. No index.

"McNally's report has little direct value for the average teacher. It is highly technical, and the results are too inconclusive to affect actual practice in sight-saving classes. The study is significant, however, for it will stimulate research in a field where further experimentation is badly needed. Subsequent investigators are sure to benefit from McNally's detailed description of his approach and from his candid discussion of its shortcomings." R. L. McCaul
El School J 44:368 F '44 500w
Library Q 14:183 Ap '44 80w

"Because of its practical approach the study will be of particular interest to workers in the field of the visually handicapped—teachers, physicians, administrators, and research workers."
+ School & Society 58:80 Jl 31 '43 50w

MCNEER, MAY YONGE (MRS LYND KENDALL WARD). The covered wagon; il. by Florian. 30p 50c Grosset
44-8275

Brief, factual tale of a family of pioneers who journeyed west over the Oregon trail in the year 1853. For young readers.

Commonweal 41:257 D 22 '44 10w
Kirkus 12:342 Ag 1 '44 50w
Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Revew p5 Ag 13 '44 100w

MCNEER, MAY YONGE (MRS LYND KENDALL WARD). Gold rush; il. by Lynd Ward. 31p 50c Grosset 44-8195

"[This story] begins as Jim Marshall bids his mates lock the door before he shows what he has found in the dry river bed at Sutter's Fort: the cry of 'gold' runs round the world, touches off Bill Thompson, of Baltimore, and sends him with two companions in search of a rich claim. They find one at length; one takes his share to go into the pickling business, another to marry and take up farming, but Bill sets out to find another claim." Weekly Book Review

Kirkus 12:342 Ag 1 '44 130w
Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p5 Ag 13 '44 100w
Wis Lib Bul 40:134 O '44

MCNEER, MAY YONGE (MRS LYND KENDALL WARD). Story of California; lithographs by C. H. Dewitt. [32p] $1.50 Harper
979.4 California—Juvenile literature
44-9073

Picture book in color, showing graphically and in brief text, the history of the state of California.

Booklist 41:94 N 15 '44

"This text is an especially fine one."
+ Kirkus 12:431 S 15 '44 90w

"The history and geography of California written tersely and dramatically. . . A welcome addition for eleven- to thirteen-year-olds." E. W. Turpin
+ Library J 69:818 O 1 '44 50w
New Yorker 20:86 D 16 '44 50w

"This is a romantic story, well told. The title page is fascinating."
+ Sat R of Lit 27:49 N 11 '44 20w
Wis Lib Bul 40:162 D '44

MACNEIL, MARION GILL. Between earth and sky; pictures by Nils Hogner. 64p $1.50 Oxford
551.5 Weather—Juvenile literature 44-7031

Explanation, simple enough for nine-year-olds, of the meaning of climate, weather, clouds, winds, rain, and snow. The book has been checked for accuracy by the weather bureau, and contains descriptions of the work of the weather bureau.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p14 N 12 '44 100w

"There have been excellent books for older boys and girls, but this is the best we have seen for this age level, and is needed for classroom teachers."
+ Kirkus 12:404 S 1 '44 130w

"Recommended for readers in fourth and fifth grades." G. E. Joline
+ Library J 69:886 O 15 '44 50w

"There is an excellent account of the work of the Weather Bureau and Nils Hogner has drawn many attractive and enlightening pictures of weather phenomena." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p12 O 15 '44 80w

"An interesting and informing book."
+ Sat R of Lit 27:49 N 11 '44 20w

MACNEIL, NEIL. American peace. 276p $2.75 Scribner
940.531 World war, 1939—Peace. Reconstruction (1939-). U.S.—Foreign relations 44-9171

The volume "combines a summary statement of the problems the world will face at the end of the war with an appeal to Americans to play the major part in solving them. We have world leadership within our grasp, says Mr. MacNeil, and for the good of mankind we should boldly seize and use it. Our lend-lease program has placed us in a strong bargaining position. We alone can supply the goods the world vitally needs; we alone have the gold and credits to re-start the flow of world trade; we alone have the shipping and shipyards required to give commerce immediate volume. Holding these tremendous assets, we should use them (as we failed to do in 1918-19) with a realistic eye to the safeguarding of our future in a world organized for peace. 'We should employ them only to help nations that will cooperate with us in making the kind of world we shall need for American peace and prosperity.' " (N Y Times) Index.

"Draw up an easy chair in front of the fireplace one of these bleak November nights and talk over the peace with Neil MacNeil. You will be chatting with a newspaperman who knows his way around in the market place of ideas, an intelligent conservative who believes peace must be underwritten at home as well as abroad, a 100 per cent American who wants his own country, Britain and Russia to team together in peace as well as in war." Harvey O'Connor
+ Book Week p4 N 26 '44 650w
Booklist 41:105 D 1 '44

"Mr. MacNeil's book is full of stimulating thoughts, and it certainly is to be hoped that a great many of America's political ideas will be embodied in international regulations to come. But, just as his specific proposals concerning Germany's postwar treatment are highly debatable, so is his assumption that America's recent shift to international co-operation can be considered a permanent feature of the American character." E. S. P.
+ — Christian Science Monitor p12 Ja 13 '45 250w

Reviewed by J. S. Roucek
Commonweal 41:108 N 10 '44 250w
Current Hist 8:70 Ja '45 90w

"This [is a] well-written and shrewdly argued volume." Allan Nevins
+ N Y Times p5 O 22 '44 900w
Reviewed by Norman Angell
Sat R of Lit 27:5 N 25 '44 90w

"As intelligent and intelligible a blue print for a livable and workable world of tomorrow as has come our way." R. N. Fuller
+ Springf'd Republican p4d N 26 '44 460w
Reviewed by George Polk
Weekly Book Review p16 D 10 '44 400w

MCNEILLY, MILDRED MASTERSON. Heaven is too high. 432p $3 Morrow
Baranov, Aleksandr Andreevich—Fiction
44-2025

Historical novel of Russian-America, during the years from 1790-1810. The central character is Count Chernov, a Russian aristocrat, who fled from the wrath of the Empress Catherine, because of his liberal tendencies, and found freedom and love in the new land. Alexander Baranov, trader and administrator, is one of the leading characters.

MCNEILLY, M. M.—Continued

" 'Heaven is too high' is eminently readable, and is a good tradition. It is by no means a superlative novel, but it need not take second place among other contemporary books in the genre. It lacks something of the glamour of a 'Gone with the Wind,' it does not have the sustained interest of a 'Northwest Passage,' but it is an able, competently written first novel on a theme new to historical novelists, and a setting none too well explored by writers of fiction." August Derleth
+ Book Week p13 Mr 26 '44 320w
Booklist 40:284 Ap 15 '44
Bookmark 5:19 My '44
Kirkus 12:26 Ja 15 '44 160w

"A well-written, excitingly interesting first novel. . . Recommended." J. E. Cross
+ Library J 69:204 Mr 1 '44 70w

"The book is a good, workmanlike tale. Its long record of struggle, defeat and renewed effort is so consistent that it misses the crescendo of the big, carefully built up, crashing climax. Its special achievement lies in its portrayal of the gradual change in the Russians' attitude toward the new century." Beatrice Sherman
+ N Y Times p6 Ap 23 '44 420w

"Substantial and carefully documented historical novel. . . The novelist has gone to original Russian sources for much of her material. The style is forthright, almost plodding, with few flamboyant flourishes of romance or dosing with local color." R. A. Cord
Sat R of Lit 27:21 Ap 1 '44 400w

"Mrs McNeilly's account of these days of tribulation is absorbing and often exciting reading and should create new interest in a fascinating and neglected aspect of American and Russian history." W. H. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 2 '44 440w

"The patient work which underlies this novel sustains a story which seems close to our own traditions, especially in a year when Attu and the other fringes of Alaska have come nearer. Mrs. NcNeilly is also an able story teller. 'Heaven Is Too High' brings a convincing tale, and, more than that, an exciting picture of a little-known chapter in the making of our country." Mary Ross
+ Weekly Book Review p2 Mr 26 '44 750w

MCNICHOLS, CHARLES LONGSTRETH. Crazy weather. 195p $2 Macmillan
44-2654

The crazy weather was a spell of Arizona heat, when the mercury stood at 114, even in the morning. The American boy, called South Boy, was only fourteen; his father was in the north buying cattle; his mother, an invalid, was out on the Pacific coast. So it was up to South Boy to look out for himself. During the four days of crazy weather, South Boy joined his Mohave Indian friend, and went completely Indian for the time being. Then a rainstorm broke the heat wave; South boy went home, realizing that in that time he had grown from boyhood to man's estate.

"This is a novel which can be compared with Freuchen's Eskimo in being both an exciting piece of fiction and an extraordinary perception of the psychology of a native culture. . . The background of ethnography is wholly accurate: I did not note one error of fact or construal, nor one false note as to attitude." A. L. Kroeber
+ Am Anthropol 46:394 Jl '44 60w

"I have been so impressed with 'Crazy Weather' that it has sent me back to 'Laughing Boy' by Oliver LaFarge, and 'The Oregon Trail' by Francis Parkman. McNichols is less of a stylist than LaFarge, less of a historian than Parkman. But he approaches both as a student of Indian lore and as a story teller." Sterling North
+ Book Week p2 Mr 5 '44 480w
Booklist 40:251 Mr 15 '44
Bookmark 5:19 My '44

Reviewed by Francis Downing
Commonweal 40:20 Ap 21 '44 550w
Kirkus 12:23 Ja 15 '44 170w

"Similar to Laughing Boy but shorter and without love element. Recommended for adults and young people." Katharine Shorey
+ Library J 68:625 Ag '43 70w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling
Nation 158:400 Ap 1 '44 180w

"As fine a novel of adolescence as we've run into in a long time—jammed with character and color and packed like a movie thriller. But it is sound and solid and full of substance for all that." Hal Borland
+ N Y Times p3 Mr 5 '44 1000w

"This book is an illustration of the effect upon an author of writing for the screen. There is a great deal of dialogue and the story is presented atmospherically, as if for movie directors. This produces a somewhat flat and obvious effect upon the reader accustomed to a more subtle and more deliberate art." Stanley Vestal
Sat R of Lit 27:8 Mr 25 '44 450w
Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 5 '44 500w

"It is an ingratiating tale of youth in a field rarely touched by writers." Harry Hansen
+ Survey G 33:221 Ap '44 320w

"Mr. McNichols belongs in the great tradition of story tellers. I envy those who have ahead of them the utterly absorbing experience of following Mr. McNichols's South Boy through the four days that changed his world." J. H. Jackson
+ Weekly Book Review p1 Mr 5 '44 850w
Wis Lib Bul 40:71 My '44

Reviewed by Orville Prescott
Yale R n s 33:xii spring '44 320w

MCVICKER, DAPHNE ALLOWAY. Queen was in the kitchen. (Whittlesey house publication) 232p $2.50 McGraw 44-2991

Early in the 1920s, the author and her husband drew up an advertisement for "a refined white girl" to help with light housework and care of two children. This gayly written volume of family reminiscences is strung on the thread of the various answerers to their need, who came and went during the next two decades.

Reviewed by Dale Harrison
Book Week p6 Mr 26 '44 450w
Booklist 40:300 My 1 '44
Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '44

"Varied vicissitudes recaptured with gaiety. Fun and timely."
+ Kirkus 12:36 Ja 15 '44 180w

"The book is written in a style so delightfully personal that its author runs the risk of being visited by hundreds of readers who will want to tell her about their servants. This will be greatly to her disadvantage. Domestic harassments are among the most unbecoming of woes, but on Mrs. McVicker they wear well." Jane Cobb
+ N Y Times p7 Mr 19 '44 480w

"This is an hilarious book, one to take the mind off of the war; and will be enjoyed by anyone with a sense of humor, whether or not he had ever tusseled with the 'Servant Problem.' " M. D.
+ Spring'd Republican p4d Ap 2 '44 440w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p10 Mr 26 '44 400w

MCWILLIAMS, CAREY. Prejudice; Japanese-Americans: symbol of racial intolerance. 337p $3 Little

325.252 Japanese in the U.S. U.S.—Race question
44-8958

"The book is essentially a study of the problems which arose after Pearl Harbor. A hundred thousand men, women, and children of Japanese ancestry who lived on the West Coast were placed in 'protective custody' immediately after December 7, 1941. Total mass evacuations soon followed in an atmosphere of excitement and near hysteria. Two-thirds of these Japanese-Americans were citizens of the United States. McWilliams gives a vivid picture of what happened to them in the mass exodus from the West Coast, their concentration in the war relocation centers, and their desperate attempts to return 'back to America.' " (Sat R of Lit) Index.

Reviewed by Oscar Handlin
Atlantic 175:128 Ja '45 600w

"Carey McWilliams has written a book that should be required reading for all intelligent Americans, and particularly for those American parents whose children may be the hostages of another war because we proved once again to be blind to human realities." J. A. Brandt
+ Book Week p3 O 15 '44 1350w
Booklist 41:72 N 1 '44

"It is a harrowing un-American record that ought to make Americans uncomfortable. It is also, on the technical side, a valuable report of the immensely complicated problems involved in the greatest managed migration ever directed in America." L. M. Lyons
+ Boston Globe p15 O 25 '44 600w
Christian Science Monitor p16 O 26 '44 300w

"About as good a study of the Japanese American problem as one could ask for."
+ Commonweal 41:21 O 20 '44 20w

"A stirring, saddening account—which should (but may not be) read."
Kirkus 12:314 Jl 15 '44 190w

"Excellent account of how prejudice is manufactured and its effect on the victim. Carefully documented, vivid description of a national problem. A 'must' for all who believe in the practice of democracy." H. F. McGaw
+ Library J 69:882 O 15 '44 70w
Nation 159:535 O 28 '44 360w

Reviewed by Carroll Kilpatrick
New Repub 111:700 N 27 '44 240w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus
N Y Times p3 O 15 '44 1100w

"A well-presented, well-documented, judicious book."
+ New Yorker 20:84 N 4 '44 280w

"McWilliams has done something of even greater importance than tell this story accurately. He sets the current problem in its proper historical context. He traces the origin of antagonism between residents of California and Japanese immigrants from the turn of the century up to the present time. McWilliams is specific enough and names names yet the main outline of the story is never lost in the tangle of politics, prejudice, and competition. . . McWilliams is correct in treating the problem of the Japanese as a symbol of general racial intolerance. There will be those who will disagree with his general views and his specific proposals. No one will be justified in disagreeing with the conclusion that he has written a valuable book: readable, accurate, forthright, yet without a trace of sentimentality." L. D. Reddick
+ Sat R of Lit 27:27 O 14 '44 750w

"A lucid, carefully documented study, highly readable and highly controversial." C. G. Stillman
+ Weekly Book Review p1 O 15 '44 2150w
Wis Lib Bul 40:157 D '44

MADARIAGA, SALVADOR DE. Heart of jade. 642p $3 Creative age
44-2502

"Long romance by distinguished Spanish poet and scholar, author of a biography of Cortes. Setting is Mexico in time of Monteczuma, and covers the period before and after arrival of Spanish. Colorful, filled with characters many of whom are historical, and interesting for detailed descriptions of Aztec customs, dress, architecture and religion." Library J

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Book Week p4 Ap 2 '44 600w

"In Heart of Jade Salvador de Madariaga has admirably captured the immensity of those desert wastes which sear the vision, and toss it from the hell-flame of cactus blossoms to the natural spires of sandstone, virgin blue and immaculate white mountain peaks, common both to Mexico and to Spain." Josephine Hambleton
+ Canadian Forum 24:45 My '44 800w
Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '44

"The book will have a fascination for those who can lose themselves in its rich tapestry of the 16th century Aztec civilization, and a story full of adventure and exotic glamour. It is overlong, the names are difficult, the subplots and counterplots at times take precedence over the parallel streams of the story of Alonzo in Spain and Xuchitl in Yucatan. But for the Anthony Adverse market, starved in recent months, here is the answer."
+ — Kirkus 11:558 D 15 '43 220w

"Some readers may object to frankness about sex and others to length and descriptions of barbaric religious customs." Margaret Owen
Library J 69:160 F 15 '44 70w

"Narrative, struggling with erudition, always wins in this informed, fecund novel of Alonso the Christian in a Mexican Night's Entertainment. It is undoubtedly long. It is also big." Harold Brighouse
Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 28 '44 230w

"Withal, this book is as clumsily written and overelaborately contrived as the usual operatic plot. The reader longs for the deft pen of Sir Walter Scott, Hervey Allen, or even F. Marion Crawford. 'Heart of Jade' remains a fascinating book because of Salvador de Madariaga's scholarship, his personal comment on the past and the vitality with which he revivifies history. But it is an unsuccessful novel." Leo Lerman
+ — N Y Times p5 Ap 2 '44 500w

"Madariaga tries earnestly to weight the scales justly as to things Spanish and native, but scarcely succeeds. Aztec cruelties are presented with grim detail; but the slaughters by the Spaniards are unconsciously glossed over. . . In spite of all, the canvas is so large that much is to be learned from this volume. Although personally I find the old chronicle of Bernal Diaz or the ageless account of Prescott far more moving, in 'The Heart of Jade' Madariaga has given us an extended record of Aztec legends and customs; and his story of the Conquest (aside from motives and except for only a few licenses taken, with actual events in order to make his plot click) is based on accurate scholarship." Carleton Beals
+ — Sat R of Lit 27:9 Mr 25 '44 1100w

"We are bored—if we are looking for a novel. And seeing how great is the author's name, we are excused in asking for, from him, the thing he says he gives. But if we are just lazy persons, who cannot read history unless it is dressed up in a personal story of some kind, we shall certainly learn a lot of strange facts from this close-packed, learned book. But that does not mean that we shall have improved ourselves very much, or that we shall have undergone an aesthetic experience. We shall do much better by sticking to the true Madariaga, the historian, the scholar." Kate O'Brien
+ — Spec 172:392 Ap 28 '44 650w

"It is an exceedingly long novel, composed with obvious care and thoroughness, and anybody with a dim knowledge of the arts and craftsmanship of Aztec civilization . . . will find his curiosity powerfully stimulated by the abundant descriptive detail here. So methodically does Senor Madariaga appear to have soaked himself in the atmosphere of Aztec culture, indeed, that his visual imagination affords an ignorant reader the opportunity of acquiring quite a little learning without tears. The book is, in fact, always informative, often provocative of thought, and at its best as fiction pictorially vivid. . . Senor Madariaga orders his material with nice point and skill and now and then to sharply illuminating purpose. But the creative touch which is peculiarly the story-teller's is for the most part absent."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p209 Ap 29 '44 1000w

MADARIAGA, SALVADOR DE—Continued

"The reader who likes love and adventure with history as mere costume and decor, will too often lose sight of the lovers in the maze of subplots and the massive outlines of the main historical events. Those who like their history straight in historical novels will find 'novelesque' wonder enough in Prescott, Bernal Diaz or Madariago's own 'Cortés.' But those with voracious appetites for all sorts of marvels large and small, huge slices of truly epic history and an endless variety of incident, episode, intrigue, contrivance—'tragedy, comedy, history, pastoral, pastoral-comical, historical-pastoral, tragical-historical, tragical-comical' all-in-one—will get more than full measure in this oversized, and overloaded historical romance." B. D. Wolfe

+ — Weekly Book Review p2 Ap 9 '44 1150w

MADDEN, PAUL. Survivor; as told to Pete Martin. 68p $1 Bruce pub.

940.548173 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American 44-8162

"Of three aviators whose plane crashed in the Atlantic, and who struggled with wind and wave, hunger, thirst, for eleven days, only the author survived to tell the story. . . The point of his story is the religious interpretation given to his experience by Lt. Madden." Kirkus

Reviewed by Albert Durant

Book Week p18 N 26 '44 310w

Cath World 160:286 D '44 30w

Kirkus 12:497 N 1 '44 150w

"Lieutenant Madden's story is a plain, painfully simple account of that ultimate personal experience when death is temporarily the senior partner to life." C. B. Palmer

+ N Y Times p6 S 10 '44 440w

Springf'd Republican p4d O 29 '44 110w

MADGE, CHARLES. War-time pattern of saving and spending. 137p pa $1.50 Macmillan [6s Cambridge]

339.43 Saving and thrift. Social surveys 43-15579

"This . . . report is the work of an anthropologist supported by a 'supervising committee' including Professor Bowley, Lord Keynes, and Mr. Geoffrey Crowther. It embodies a quantitative analysis of working-class savings, based on a series of field studies in a succession of British cities." J Pol Econ

Reviewed by M. R. Pabst

Am Econ R 34:654 S '44 750w

Reviewed by A. G. Hart

J Pol Econ 52:377 D '44 1100w

"This broad result, when previously published in an article in the 'Economist,' had created quite a stir, but now that the full evidence is presented one is bound to say that the case is far from proven. The time and place chosen are not representative; only a minority of the interviews attempted was successful, and it cannot be said that the results stand up well to the test of external checks and internal consistency. The technique of the 'random sample' and the interview is of great potential value in social research, but it must be carefully handled before sweeping or even sensational conclusions are drawn from it. Mr. Madge should be prepared to try again and collect more satisfactory evidence."

Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 6 '43 220w

MAGDALENO, MAURICIO. Sunburst; tr. from the Spanish, by Anita Brenner. 290p $2.50 Viking 43-17979

Pitiful story of a poverty-stricken Mexican village, worn down by centuries of oppression. A man of their own people, who has risen to political power, comes to them with promises of better conditions and the peasants receive him as their savior. Then they discover that this man has betrayed them into absolute peonage. Even the name of their village is changed, and all hope dies.

"'Sunburst' is a beautifully written, desperate book which offers no solution to the problem of ignorance and poverty among the Mexicans. It has the fatalism which used to mark the Russians before the revolution. In blazing sunshine, it has the black despair of a Dostoevski. It is a challenging book." Sterling North

+ Book Week p3 Ja 9 '44 230w

Booklist 40:198 F 1 '44

"Anita Brenner presents us with a remarkably smooth and flowing translation of what we are told is regarded in Mexico as one of the finest novels ever produced in that country. . . Mr. Magdaleno's most impressive achievement is his interpretation of these simple and oppressed and blighted people. He knows their weaknesses and does not conceal them, he also knows their goodness and their faith, and he does not mock. . . His book is written in realistic fashion; it is certainly not for squeamish readers. And it is shot through with that deep Latin pessimism which we have come to accept as a sort of hallmark of Latin American literature."

+ Commonweal 39:330 Ja 14 '44 420w

"Strong novel, sometimes harrowing, without humor, but written with the intense sympathy and heat of an Uncle Tom's Cabin. No love interest. Recommended for large libraries." G. W. Hill

+ Library J 69:30 Ja 1 '44 70w

Reviewed by Lincoln Kirstein

New Repub 110:576 Ap 24 '44 180w

Reviewed by Mildred Adams

+ N Y Times p6 Ja 23 '44 420w

"Recommended to those who can enjoy a sombre and uncompromising talent."

+ New Yorker 19:66 Ja 8 '44 90w

"I have only praise for this book which tells the powerful, beautiful, and sad tale of the inner Mexico and its people. Almost equal praise is due Anita Brenner for her rich and intuitive rendition into English. Miss Brenner stands at the top of those equipped to bring us the great wealth of Latin American literature." Betty Kirk

+ Sat R of Lit 27:9 Ja 22 '44 700w

"'Sunburst' is deeply tragic. But it is a tale told with loving honesty and poetic feeling and sustained by the unstated premise of a still living hope: a movement that can be so fiercely self-critical is by no means ended. Not since 'Bottom Dogs' by Azuela and 'The Shadow of the Strong Man' by Guzman has the Mexican Revolution produced a novel to compare with it in truthfulness and artistic power. However it may differ from the novels we are accustomed to, its reading constitutes a deeply moving experience and one which will not be altogether alien to a generation of readers which could make a best-seller of 'Grapes of Wrath.'" B. D. Wolfe

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Ja 16 '44 950w

MAGUIRE, MRS JEAN SHEPARD. Beside the Point; il. by Jay Warmuth. 190p $2 Stewart

818 44-40229

The experiences of an American family during the depression years and the early stages of the present war. They met their difficulties with true American ruggedness and humor. Part of the time they lived on a wooded island in Puget Sound; but when the war came they drifted from camp to camp on the trail of Mr Maguire.

Booklist 41:149 Ja 15 '45

"Many human, humorous touches here that are contagiously ingratiating."

+ Kirkus 12:491 N 1 '44 120w

"This is a good 'cheer-up,' except perhaps for the bone-weary who may find the Maguires a little exhausting." E. M. B.

+ — Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 17 '45 220w

"This is a story of a happy marriage and a gay acceptance of living without too much comfort or security. It has an infectious and warming grace. The author does not hide the fact that she is a somewhat scatter-brained housewife, but her compensating qualifications appear to have suited her husband and her children."
+ Weekly Book Review p11 D 24 '44 80w

MAINWARING, DANIEL (GEOFFREY HOMES, pseud). Six silver handles. 219p $2 Morrow 44-5324

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p6 Jl 23 '44 140w
Booklist 40:378 Jl 1 '44

"Best of the Week."
+ Boston Globe p17 Je 14 '44 60w
Kirkus 12:155 Ap 1 '44 40w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p16 Je 18 '44 100w

"Numerous exciting moments, two very nice gals, a capable sleuth, and plot that gets rather cloudy at times. Satisfactory."
+ Sat R of Lit 27:33 Je 10 '44 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p15 Je 11 '44 50w

MAISEL, ALBERT Q. The wounded get back; with a foreword by Ross T. McIntire. 230p $2.50 Harcourt 940.547 World war, 1939—Medical and sanitary affairs. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American. Medicine, Military
SG44-98

A non-technical, anecdotal account of what the author, a lay writer on medical subjects, observed on a six months' trip to the hospitals and hospital ships serving the South-Pacific front.

"This is a book for the lay reader, but it is written so that any doctor will enjoy it. It can be recommended without reservation as an account of progress, the benefits of which will continue long after the war is over." Israel Davidsohn
+ Book Week p6 My 21 '44 300w
Booklist 40:315 My 15 '44
Bookmark 5:13 My '44
Christian Century 61:622 My 17 '44 60w
Cleveland Open Shelf p9 Je '44

"Of the moment, and up to the minute, medical reporting—all in all reassuring as well as interesting for the home front."
+ Kirkus 12:113 Mr 1 '44 170w

"The book is an interesting account of the successful application of medicine and surgery to the specific needs of modern warfare on our ultra-modern hospital ships and in base hospitals. The author describes the careful preparations made on combat vessels to meet any emergency and the conscientious work of our navy doctors, for whom he has nothing but praise."
+ New Repub 110:722 My 22 '44 90w

" 'The Wounded Get Back' is written for popular understanding, but with enough technical phrases and description to give it an air of authority, which I assume is merited, since it undoubtedly was passed by the Navy Department before publication... The book should be a comforting one to those whose relatives are fighting their battles for them, giving them reassurance that no detail is being overlooked to see that the wounded do get back—in as good shape as it is possible for America's best medical brains and hands to put them." Foster Hailey
+ N Y Times p5 My 21 '44 700w

" 'The Wounded Get Back' will appeal to both doctor and layman for its human interest, and for its accurate and honest portrayal of the heartaches and triumphs of American Naval medicine." W. M. Hitzig, M.D.
+ Sat R of Lit 27:26 Je 3 '44 700w

"The present book is a worthy successor to 'Miracles of Military Medicine' [Book Review Digest, 1943] and will find a ready response from the thousands who yearn so anxiously to know about the welfare of their loved ones in the far Pacific theater of war. It will be reassuring and inspiring reading, for Mr. Maisel spent six months gathering his information at first hand... 'The Wounded Get Back' contains his informal, enthusiastic and often moving tales of his journey."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 15:2 My '44 480w

Reviewed by H. M. Davis
Springf'd Republican p4d My 14 '44 650w

" 'The Wounded Get Back' is good war-time reading for the home front. It shows another sector in which courage, devotion and intelligence are demanded and given. It gives a comforting sense that our men are getting the best that medical science and our doctors have to offer." Mary Ross
+ Weekly Book Review p6 My 21 '44 850w
Wis Lib Bul 40:109 Jl '44

MALAN, ERNESTINE, and LEDIG, ALMA K. Cobwebs and clues. 244p $2 Dorrance 44-41888

Detective story.

"A more skillful presentation might have made a good story out of this material." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p14 D 31 '44 120w

"Soft-boiled, not too speedy, harmless." Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p16 Ja 21 '45 100w

MALAQUAIS, JEAN. War diary; tr. from the French by Peter Grant. 246p $2.75 Doubleday 940.548144 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, French
44-1464

A young Polish-French artist, who became a soldier in France during the general mobilization in 1939, describes in his diary his thoughts and reactions during the period of the phoney war, and after he was taken prisoner. Includes his jottings on his escape and return to Paris.

"If you want to know why France fell, read this book. As Andre Gide has said, this is 'an aching, poignant, frightening book—an extraordinary document on the collapse of France.' .. Don't miss this book. It is one of the first important case-histories to come out of the war." Sterling North
+ Book Week p2 Ja 30 '44 550w

" 'War Diary' is intensely moving, beautiful and sad. It is a book without hope. It is a book which gives a somewhat hysterical impression of French decadence, but then it was written in a dreadful moment. I have no objection to its having been written. I do not believe that depressing and horrible books about the war should only be written after the war is over, when everyone agrees that war is horrible and depressing. I think it gives a one-sided view of the French to foreigners. It will be best if it is read mostly by the French, for they know that their courage has held." C. G. Paulding
Commonweal 39:476 F 25 '44 1000w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:492 Ap '44 70w

"Another personal account of war but most interesting and exceedingly well written." Lena Ruppert
+ Library J 69:70 Ja 15 '44 110w

"I don't imagine that many readers will greatly cherish Jean Malaquais's war diary just now, even though it has been warmly commended by André Gide and admirably translated by Peter Grant. The diary pictures modern war—both the politics of it and the business of soldiering—in a starkly unheroic light reminiscent of Cummings's 'The Enormous Room'; and as everyone knows, the time to publish an 'Enormous Room' is after a war.

MALAQUAIS, JEAN—Continued
Furthermore Malaquais writes, at times, a pretty self-conscious prose; even under heavy shell fire he can produce glib rhetoric." F. W. Dupee

Nation 158:232 F 19 '44 850w

Reviewed by Isaac Rosenfeld
New Repub 110:288 F 28 '44 1150w

"Malaquais is a gifted and sensitive writer, and his book is unique in this: unique as a record of complaint, resentment and bitterness, objectifying as it does the incalculable power and the incalculable weakness of individual man." Kay Boyle

+ N Y Times p12 F 6 '44 800w

"Rather a bleak document on a stage of the war that today seems remote, but the last third of it, at any rate, is worth reading... When the French are defeated in May and the great retreat takes place, you are shown everything with a grim objectivity which disdains to drape reality with phrases and of which a Frenchman would perhaps not have been capable. . . All this story, with Malaquais's escape in the role of a pro-Nazi Alsatian, is exciting and very well written in the author's stern and metallic style. It is worth pounds of books by war correspondents." Edmund Wilson

+ New Yorker 19:75 Ja 29 '44 1300w

"It is a book that is all alive, with not a dead line in it. It is brutal, because filled with so much that its author loathes. It is ugly with the ugliness of man at his most beastly. It is deeply moving; and it is never heroic. . . Mr. Grant's translation is spirited, seldom clumsy, and apparently faithful. For a final estimate of this diary's full worth and significance we must wait until the time has passed when, 'To avoid being crushed, one must march with the rank and file, caw with the crows.' " B. R. Redman

Sat R of Lit 27:11 F 5 '44 1100w

"A literary document which will be studied after most of the war reports are last year's birds' nests. . . Peter Grant's translation is an achievement. It carries the author's peculiar and unique French, vivid, precise, masterful, into American English." Ernestine Evans

+ Weekly Book Review p2 F 13 '44 1000w

MALINOWSKI, BRONISLAW. Freedom and civilization. 338p $3.50 Roy pubs.

901 Civilization. Liberty. Democracy. Totalitarianism 44-8875

"A noted anthropologist's attempt to define freedom in objective terms. Published posthumously, this study examines freedom in both primitive and modern cultures. It defines freedom as 'the conditions necessary and sufficient for the formation of a purpose, its translation into effective action—and the full enjoyment of the results of such activity.' . . Freedom requires discipline but it is the nature of the authority, the way rules are enforced and the purposes behind them, which determines the presence or absence of freedom." Library J

Reviewed by Sterling North
Book Week p2 O 22 '44 270w

Booklist 41:168 F 1 '45

"This is a useful book. What is one of the greatest needs in this age of disorderly thinking and careless talking is clear analysis of ideas and clear definitions in the terminology that expresses them. In both these requirements Malinowski's work—left by the author's death lacking his final touches, and put into orderly shape by Madame Malinowski—is a good piece of work. It is orderly and lucid and makes easy reading despite the solid nature of the material of which it treats." T. F. W.

+ Commonweal 41:155 N 24 '44 600w

"That the present volume has suffered because of the death of the author is beyond doubt; there is not the same definite progress in the mechanics of the writing that distinguishes his previous work, and there is much repetition of thought, if not of words. For all that it is a lucid treatise on the subject, and an excellent argument for world organization to preserve, or shall we more truthfully say, to seek the rebirth of culture and freedom."

+ — Current Hist 8:68 Ja '45 800w

Kirkus 12:468 O 1 '44 120w

Reviewed by J. H. Berthel
Library J 69:761 S 15 '44 100w

Reviewed by H. H. F. Eulau
New Repub 111:698 N 27 '44 330w

"This is definitely not an easy book. It is not meant to be a hasty reader's quick lesson in what constitutes the world's safe future. Nor will it satisfy the reader looking for concrete steps toward the establishment of a post-totalitarian order. But the thoughtful reader who wants to turn to a basic consideration of the issues behind the world conflagration will find in Malinowski's work a substantial clarification of crucial concepts, a rewarding fund of knowledge, a challenging interpretation and a refreshing reassertion of the democratic belief in freedom and culture." Sigmund Neumann

+ N Y Times p16 Ja 7 '45 1400w

Reviewed by C. D. Kean
Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 14 '45 950w

"Malinowski's book is cogently thought, written with no lack of clarity and vigor. As with any scientist worth his salt, the first-hand illustrations are of commanding interest, even when we do not agree with the main thesis. There is no sacrifice to the graces: this is not a book for the casual reader, and not an easy one even for the student. It is a stern and competent taskmaster, from whom we part with respect and with gratitude." Albert Guerard

+ Weekly Book Review p30 N 26 '44 1600w

MALINOWSKI, BRONISLAW. Scientific theory of culture, and other essays; with a pref. by Huntington Cairns. 228p $3 Univ. of N.C. press

572 Culture. Anthropology. Frazer, Sir James George 44-8385

"The last work of the Polish anthropologist is an exposition of his theories of culture, based on extensive field work in various parts of the world. It is particularly a summary of his belief in the functional concept of culture. A final chapter is a biographical appreciation of Sir James George Frazer." Booklist

---

"Closed systems which explain all that they encounter and tie them up in a neat bundle for posterity's admiration are out of date, but the rich human sympathy and vivid appreciation of the way in which man has hewn for himself, out of basically similar materials but by many diverse methods, a cultural house in which to live, a house which because man has built it he can also rebuild, will never be outdated. This book, like Malinowski's many others, will serve the great purpose of communicating the concept of culture to others." Margaret Mead

+ Am J Soc 50:227 N 13 '44 750w

Reviewed by Ralph Linton
+ Ann Am Acad 237:247 Ja '45 600w

Booklist 41:73 N 1 '44

Reviewed by H. H. F. Eulau
New Repub 111:698 N 27 '44 330w

"The author calls the various chapters of this remarkable book 'essays,' which is rather misleading, for there is nothing here disjointed or unrelated. The procession of ideas and the development of his thesis go forward with unusual orderliness and continuity, with brief recapitulation where necessary, with analyses of theories other than his own, with frequent valuable critiques of the many problems facing the modern anthropologist." A. H. Compton & others

+ Scientific Bk Club R 15:1 Ag '44 1200w

"So long as Mr. Malinowski's theories do not become sectarian dogma which excludes the investigation of function in its dynamic as well as in its static sense, every student of culture will be grateful for the high standards for which he stood in his particular field of inquiry. The publication of this volume brings home once more the loss which has come to anthropology from his death." Ruth Benedict

+ Weekly Book Review p23 N 5 '44 800w

Reviewed by M. J. Herskovits

Yale R n s 34:377 winter '45 650w

MALLEA, EDUARDO. Bay of silence; tr. from the Spanish by Stuart Edgar Grummon. 339p $2.50 Knopf

44-2184

Story of modern Argentina, embodied in the life, thoughts, and emotions of a group of Buenos Aires intellectuals. The narrator and central character is one Martin Tregua, legal student, who addresses his book to an unattainable love, like Dante to his Beatrice.

Reviewed by R. W. Anderson

Atlantic 173:131 My '44 400w

"Unquestionably, 'The Bay of Silence' is a remarkable book (especially in the intelligent translation of Stuart Grummon, who has stripped the bulky original of much deadwood). It can be placed among the finest novels to have come out of Latin America and, of course, it is most revealing of the mores, psychological temperature and complex life of Argentina." Angel Flores

+ Book Week p9 Mr 19 '44 700w

Booklist 40:271 Ap 1 '44

Kirkus 12:7 Ja 1 '44 120w

"A real contribution to a slender list of South American novels by the outstanding contemporary novelist and literary critic of Argentina." J. M. Brittan

+ Library J 69:204 Mr 1 '44 80w

"I am afraid I cannot go along with Mr. Wilson in the generous assumption that it is ruthless cutting which makes the difference between a successful novel and a 'puzzling' and 'unsatisfying' one. It is annoying in the extreme to be given a book in which characters disappear while they hold, as it were, the center of the stage, but ignoring the gaps in the narrative and judging 'The Bay of Silence' by the 339 pages we are given, or any one of them, it is my guess that Mr. Mallea's novel might have been twice as frustrating rather than twice as rewarding if it had been twice as long." Diana Trilling

— + Nation 158:454 Ap 15 '44 550w

Reviewed by Lincoln Kirstein

New Repub 110:574 Ap 24 '44 420w

"Here at last is a South American novel that challenges comparison with good contemporary writing anywhere. Adult, intelligent, passionately concerned with the problem of Argentina today, its essential quality survives even when strained through the uncertain cheesecloth of translation." Mildred Adams

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 12 '44 600w

"I read 'The Bay of Silence' with eagerness in the hope of really exploring Argentina, but it left me unsatisfied and puzzled, as if the story were not all there, and what I heard about it from people who had read it in Spanish did not seem to fit what I had read. . . I then discovered that there was indeed something missing: a little matter of a hundred thousand words—in fact, almost half the book. . . Unfortunately I don't read Spanish: I can only make it out enough to identify the passages omitted. And that is why I cannot tell you what 'The Bay of Silence' is really like: the book has not been translated." Edmund Wilson

New Yorker 20:89 Mr 18 '44 1350w

"To one whose tastes allow for the novel of ideas this book has savor and body. It is talkative and disjointed; its characters are wooden and spend an undue amount of time making set speeches in bars and restaurants. They are jerked on and off stage like puppets on strings. But what they have to say is pertinent to the intellectual biography of the man whose mental direction we follow. They are relevant, too, in their revelation of the winds of doctrine and opinion that blow with balm or blast not only across Argentina but wherever there are human beings assembled in what we call modern society." W. S. Lynch

+ — Sat R of Lit 27:9 Mr 11 '44 650w

"The story is slow in starting and uneven in the realization of its diverse themes. Never for a moment does the 'platonic' love affair come to life or the attributes and sufferings of its object enlist our imagination. . . Whatever Mr. Mallea may be as critic, journalist and crusader (he is literary editor of 'La Nación' and an active campaigner for the regeneration of Argentina), his talents as a novelist seem to lie mainly not in characterization but in the field of awareness of the tragic dilemmas confronting an intellectual and man of good will in our time." B. D. Wolfe

Weekly Book Review p4 Mr 26 '44 900w

MALLESON, LUCY BEATRICE (ANTHONY GILBERT, ANNE MEREDITH, pseuds). Spy for Mr Crook. (Smith & Durrell bk) 241p $2 Barnes, A.S.

44-1707

Detective story.

"Anthony Gilbert's fine sense of humor provides a nice bonus. While his Waugh-like lampooning of the members of Parliament is at once devastating and sympathetic, one wonders if, in these times, it is not questionable taste to go as far as he does. It is well to remember—during your enjoyment—that the House of Commons must have taken its business considerably more seriously than he allows, or the war would not now be where it is." Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p6 F 13 '44 180w

Kirkus 12:29 Ja 15 '44 40w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Huling

New Repub 110:294 F 28 '44 70w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p8 Mr 5 '44 80w

"Rather weighty."

Sat R of Lit 27:37 F 5 '44 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p14 F 20 '44 200w

MALLESON, LUCY BEATRICE (ANTHONY GILBERT, ANNE MEREDITH, pseuds). Thirty days to live. (Smith & Durrell bk) 213p $2 Barnes, A.S.

44-9740

Detective story.

Boston Globe p19 N 8 '44 50w

Kirkus 12:413 S 15 '44 70w

"Arthur Crook is a lawyer-sleuth worth meeting." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p28 N 12 '44 120w

"Good."

+ Sat R of Lit 27:31 N 18 '44 40w

"The detective is an unorthodox and refreshing chap, and the story is flavored with quiet humor. One of the better whodunits." H. S. J.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d N 26 '44 110w

"Arthur Crook detects with a smile, the possible killers are amusing, and the whole hullabaloo is highly readable. Murder without tears, you might say." Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p21 N 5 '44 150w

MALLETTE, GERTRUDE ETHEL. Wenderley. 250p $2 Doubleday

43-15466

Lesley Farnham came home from college to the Farnham ranch, hoping for a peaceful summer. Instead she found herself keeping house for her father in a California trailer camp, near the defense project where he was working. The story is of Lesley's effort to straighten out the social problems of the huge camp. For older girls.

MALLETTE, G. E.—Continued

"This is a vocational novel in the better sense and no mere guidebook to a job. . . Not many girls will be faced with Lesley's particular problems, but the quality of her courage and her intelligence in meeting them is what makes the book so interesting and so solidly good." P. A. Whitney

+ Book Week p10 Ja 23 '44 270w

Reviewed by R. W. Stewart

Library J 68:823 O 15 '43 30w

"The background of Miss Mallette's book is fresh and timely and her description of life in a huge defense project has an authentic ring. In fact, the setting is better than the story and the characterization." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p16 Ja 23 '44 360w

Wis Lib Bul 40:13 Ja '44

MALLY, EMMA LOUISE. Mocking bird is singing. 394p $2.75 Holt

44-3050

Thérèse Beaumarc was seventeen in 1861, daughter of a wealthy, cultivated New Orleans Frenchman. Thérèse was in love with her cousin Charles, but the family was already too much intermarried. so Charles married Miriam, a beautiful Scottish girl, sister of his business partner. Thérèse, still loving Charles, married Charles' business partner. After the Civil war the two young couples moved to Texas, where Thérèse was never happy and where tragedy overtook her.

Reviewed by M. H. Lovelace

Book Week p1 Ap 9 '44 1450w

Booklist 40:319 My 15 '44

Kirkus 12:79 F 15 '44 210w

"On the side of character development and personal relationships this novel is from first to last dramatic, fully realized. There Miss Mally knows exactly what she is doing. In her social implications she seems less clear to this reviewer. This may be partly because her underlying philosophy has chiefly to be got at through the thorny hedge of the saloonkeeper's German-English. Or it may be because these deeper ideas remain so largely theoretical. Like the German himself they never are inside the story, shaping it and in turn being shaped by it." Frances Gaither

+ — N Y Times p6 Ap 16 '44 600w

"Miss Mally has used splendid and veracious American material in her description of the operations of nineteenth century American businessmen from blockade-running to railroad building. . . Against such robust material Miss Mally has written the sad story of Therese who loves but cannot marry her cousin. . . Miss Mally never ceases to adore her own heroine but the very romantic superiorities with which she endows her make Therese seem both not quite real and not quite honest. . . If Miss Mally has disastrously fallen in love with her own heroine, she has nevertheless drawn her in a real world of men and women straight out of the stream of American history. Altogether it is a book which misses distinction but lacks little else." Jonathan Daniels

+ — Sat R of Lit 27:15 My 13 '44 450w

"Miss Mally writes with fine appreciation of her people and the scene. The large Beaumarc family in all its ramifications is fascinatingly real, even the lesser members. Her panorama is large yet it achieves an intimacy with the characters and in her reflection of the history of the era, since she is primarily writing of people, what they think and do. Abstract ideologies are kept in their lesser place. A new author, Miss Mally does not merely 'show promise.' Her writing has stature and poise, as if she were sure of her material." L. S. Munn

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 30 '44 550w

"Both in its setting and its characters, this is an unusually interesting book. It is Miss Mally's first published novel and a thoroughly mature and substantial job. We are likely to think of the American melting pot as a matter of recent decades and city slums. Here the interplay of tradition shows another kind of cosmopolitanism which has gone into the making of the United States. And with it, dominant as it should be, is a rich and full-blooded story." Mary Ross

+ Weekly Book Review p2 Ap 16 '44 700w

MALOY, MRS LOIS. Yankee sails to China; an American adventure; il. by the author. 210p $2 Scribner

43-17345

"Two children of a sea captain have a great adventure when they are carried off by accident in their father's ship. The journey is described with color and liveliness, and the friends whom the children meet in China are introduced to youthful readers in a simple and warm-hearted manner. This is a book which could interest children between seven and [eleven]." Springf'd Republican

"Girls of ten will enjoy many of the story's details but boys will shy away from the 'boy and girl' background in spite of nautical illustrations and incidents of daily clipper ship life." K. H. McAlarney

+ — Library J 69:73 Ja 15 '44 70w

"A pleasant, well-illustrated story."

+ New Yorker 20:57 Jl 8 '44 80w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 12 '43 60w

Wis Lib Bul 40:40 Mr '44

MALTZ, ALBERT. The cross and the arrow. 449p $2.75 Little

44-7663

"Willi Wegler had been a decent German citizen all his life. In spite of hardships imposed by the state, he was a man who had faith in the superior wisdom of his betters. Willi remained a decent, solid German citizen, if an unhappy one, after his son was killed in the war, his wife disemboweled in the English bombing of Dusseldorf. Willi, in 1942, held a job . . . in a factory. . . To his fellow workers in the factory, Willi was a hero. Why, then, did Willi light an arrow of straw to direct English bombers to the plant that had just honored him? Why? This is the deeply searching and significant question that Albert Maltz probes in his new novel." Weekly Book Review

Booklist 41:78 N 1 '44

Kirkus 12:324 Ag 1 '44 250w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling

Nation 159:597 N 11 '44 180w

" 'The Cross and the Arrow' is a kind of allegorical detective story written with considerable verve and skill and making for exactly the same kind of impact as Maltz's well known labor plays." William Poster

+ New Repub 111:468 O 9 '44 350w

"Mr. Maltz, we find, has brought off his point. His book makes gripping reading, despite the fact that the Germany it offers is as ersatz as a New York rathskeller. Oddly enough the novel seems only a trifle less real than the spate of refugee comment that has poured forth this year in the guise of fiction. Not that a reviewer has the right to blame the refugee novelists—or even Mr. Maltz. No one can expect great, or even good, novels to emerge from a caldron. We are fortunate if we get melodrama that makes its effects as honestly as 'The Cross and the Arrow.' " C. V. Terry

N Y Times p6 S 17 '44 600w

"It has all the suspense of a good detective story, but it is much more than that, for the author, who combines a sharp awareness of contemporary social forces with excellent craftsmanship, is bent in piecing together the psychological as well as the physical factors behind the mystery."

+ New Yorker 20:78 S 23 '44 140w

"Mr. Maltz works hard and also nobly to drive home his point. But the harder he works, the more his novel loses of its original power. It lands at generalities. . . A fine story, well and even brilliantly told in parts, is thus weakened by quasi-theological velleities which are painfully out of tune with the hard and uninhibited realism of the rest of the book." Robert Pick

+ — Sat R of Lit 27:8 S 30 '44 900w

"The moral implications behind Mr Maltz's engrossing novel are tremendous. It is exciting reading, possessed of an intense element of suspense, but over and above all 'The Cross and the Arrow' is a strongly and sincerely purposeful novel. Here is compassionate understanding of people caught in evil, some through inertia, some deliberately, and the whole story is written with a tension and dramatic sense which makes the pulse beat faster and the mind think more deeply into the motives and deeds of men." L. S. Munn

+ Springf'd Republican p4d S 24 '44 800w

" 'The Cross and the Arrow' is a powerful book. It goes beyond the probing of one man's mind and one man's sense of guilt. It is a deep-sounding challenge that touches every human being who remains sleeping and unstirred in the belief that personal peace and integrity are things apart from mankind's peace and integrity. Maltz sounds this challenge with the force of a man who possesses rare and subtle gifts of dramatic story-telling." Rose Feld

+ Weekly Book Review p4 S 17 '44 900w

"A book that because of its diffuse structure and circling about in time has small suspense or drama. But it is done so well that its shrewd probings into German character have great interest in themselves." Orville Prescott

+ — Yale R n s 34:381 winter '45 360w

MAN AT THE MICROPHONE, pseud. Washington broadcast. 269p $2.50 Doubleday

973.917 U.S.—Politics and government—20th century. Statesmen, American. Washington, D.C.—Social life and customs 44-3106

An anonymous book of the Washington Merry-go-round type with an emphatic anti-new deal bias. In such chapters as: the new voodoodeal; corn Wallace; Donald (not a Duck) Nelson; Uncle Elmer and the Rover boys, the author sets out to debunk practically every high official in Washington.

Reviewed by Sterling North

— Book Week p2 Mr 5 '44 400w

Kirkus 12:37 Ja 15 '44 160w

"There are so many names in the book that it takes on the appearance of a city directory, with most of the inhabitants living on the wrong side of the war-correspondent, radio-commentator author's railroad tracks. Reviewer objects to all-black and all-white delineations." H. G. Kelley

— Library J 69:202 Mr 1 '44 100w

" 'Washington Broadcast' is so superficial (and so careless in its effort to be entertaining) that it can only be recommended as a time-killer—and that with reservations." J. H. Crider

— N Y Times p10 Ap 9 '44 480w

"The wonder grows that in a country where such a book as this can be published, De Tocqueville is out of print and is to be had only after searching the second-hand bookstores. Thus, by a kind of Gresham's law of publishing, bad books drive out the good." David Cohn

— Sat R of Lit 27:10 Mr 18 '44 180w

"Surprisingly little of this is new and there is nothing outright defamatory in the rest, so one wonders why the author chose to cloak himself in anonymity. There is, we suppose, a certain kind of amusement to be had from the spectacle of seeing leading actors on the Washington scene pelted with ill-smelling verbiage from the undisclosed shadows of the balcony, but our sporting blood would incline us to wish that the author (described as 'a prominent author, war correspondent and radio commentator') had at least accepted a billing on the program." R. N. Fuller

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 26 '44 550w

"It is difficult to see what useful purpose is served by concealing the writer's identity. There are no startling revelations; no characterizations more caustic than have often appeared in print or been uttered on the air. Probably the tradition of 'Washington Merry-Go-Round,' the product of an era which had just begun to deal in personalities, is partly responsible; guessing at the real figures hidden behind pseudonyms is always considered good, clean fun—and helpful to sales." H. W. Baehr

Weekly Book Review p8 Mr 26 '44 430w

MANCE, SIR HARRY OSBORNE. International telecommunications; assisted by J. E. Wheeler [issued under the auspices of the Royal inst. of int. affairs]. (Int. transport and communications) Am ed 90p pa $1 (7s 6d) Oxford

384 Communication and traffic 44-41861

"This book is part of a larger study on international communications and transport now being made by the Royal Institute of International Affairs. Fully half of the book is devoted to the make-up and workings of the International Telecommunications Union. . . The last formidable chapter of the book is entitled 'The Future World Organization of Telecommunications.' . . The last few pages, dealing with possible combinations of radiotelegraphy, radiotelephony and cables, are of interest because of the present plan of the Interstate Commerce Committee of the United States Senate to look into the same problem." Pacific Affairs

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p2 O 1 '44 50w

Reviewed by S. G. Cameron

Canadian Forum 24:243 Ja '45 350w

Reviewed by G. W. Gilman

Pacific Affairs 17:127 Mr '44 650w

MANDEL, WILLIAM. Soviet Far East and Central Asia. 158p maps $2.50 Dial press

957 Russia, Asiatic 44-2067

"The Soviet Far East, the vast, bleak, sparsely settled territory between Lake Baikal and the Arctic and Pacific Oceans, is one of the least known regions of the world, so far as the developments of the last ten or fifteen years are concerned. Ever since the Japanese seizure of Manchuria the Soviet Government has regarded this area as an advanced military zone and has not extended facilities for detailed study to any foreign observer. . . So it is useful to have a compilation of the information that is available from Soviet sources about economic development and settlement and population policies. This is what Mr. Mandel has prepared in this little book. . . While the author concentrates his attention on the Soviet Far East he includes some material bearing on Soviet central Asia." N Y Times

Booklist 40:268 Ap 1 '44

Canadian Forum 24:44 My '44 550w

Current Hist 6:436 My '44 100w

Foreign Affairs 23:17 O '44 10w

"Another valuable study prepared under the Institute of Pacific Relations. . . An object lesson for the democracies, but not a book for the average layman who might be looking for a descriptive travel book."

+ Kirkus 12:92 F 15 '44 160w

New Repub 111:53 Jl 10 '44 120w

"While the reader will find interesting information on a little-known part of the world in this book, two limitations must be noted. The first (for which the author is, of course, not responsible) is the absence of first-hand foreign information. The second is Mr. Mandel's extremely uncritical attitude toward the Soviet regime. The czarist practice of sending political prisoners to Siberia is frequently mentioned; but there are no references to the much larger employment of forced labor under the Soviets. And it is highly questionable, to put it mildly, whether Soviet Uzbekistan is, in Mandel's words, 'a State comparable to Sweden in economy, culture and national statehood.' " W. H. Chamberlin

+ — N Y Times p16 F 27 '44 500w

Reviewed by M. P. Price

Pacific Affairs 17:503 D '44 650w

Reviewed by Emil Lengyel

Sat R of Lit 27:18 Mr 11 '44 750w

MANDONNET, PIERRE FELIX. St Dominic and his work; tr. by Sister Mary Benedicta Larkin [with notes and critical studies by Marie-Humbert Vicaire and Reginald Ladner]. 487p $5 Herder

B or 92 Dominic, Saint. Dominicans 44-28588

"This is an excellent translation by a Dominican Sister of Sinsinawa, Wis., of Father Mandonnet's St. Dominique: l'idée, l'homme, et l'oeuvre. His confrères, Fathers Vicaire and Ladner have edited the fragmentary sketches left by the author, adding many valuable critical and historical notes. . . In Part One a score of chapters treat of the character of St. Dominic, the nature of the order he founded, its academic organization, its apostolic work, its literary productivity, its intimate association with the Holy See. Part Two is devoted to a detailed study of the two texts of the Rule of St. Augustine, and the primitive legislation of the Order of Preachers, edited for the first time in 1885 by Father Denifle." Cath World

"If you are looking for a complete biography of St. Dominic you will not find it in this book. If you wish to know from an outstanding Dominican historian the status of the Catholic clergy and laity in the twelfth century, the efforts of Pope Innocent III. to promote academic reform, to extirpate heresy, and to help found, organize and spread the Order of Preachers, you will find an answer to your every question in these scholarly pages." B. L. Conway

+ Cath World 160:187 N '44 230w

"The translation by Sister Mary Benedicta Larkin, O.P., is smooth and convincing. It doesn't read like a translated work. The book itself is nicely made. In every sense of the word this is an easy book to hold and to read." Johanna Doniat

+ Commonweal 40:380 Ag 4 '44 650w

MANLY, HAROLD PHILLIPS. Drake's refrigeration service manual; an instruction and reference book covering maintenance, trouble shooting and repair; domestic and commercial systems. 301p il $2 Drake, F.J.

621.56 Refrigeration and refrigerating machinery 44-10276

"This manual is primarily an instruction book on accepted methods of servicing and repairing electric refrigerators and refrigeration systems. The first six chapters explain the construction and operation of complete systems and of all their parts. The remaining nine chapters consist of information and detailed instructions relating to installation, testing, trouble shooting, adjustment, removal, replacement, and repair. For performing the great majority of service operations directions are given in numbered steps outlining the exact order of procedure." (Foreword) Index.

Library J 69:815 O 1 '44 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:49 Jl '44

MANN, CARL. Air heraldry. 255p il $3.50 McBride

358.4 U.S. Army air forces—Insignia 44-40120

Photographs of hundreds of insignia of the United States army air forces of the second World war, and of aero squadron insignia of the first World war. Contains an introduction explaining the use of insignia in the first war and today. Color index for World war I squadrons.

Booklist 40:334 Je 1 '44

Kirkus 12:282 Je 15 '44 130w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 69:606 Jl '44 50w

MANN, HEINRICH. Small town tyrant. 255p $2.50 Creative age

44-4457

"Professor Unrat, written forty years ago, was among first literary successes of Thomas Mann's older brother. It gained new popularity when movie The Blue Angel (with Emil Jannings) was based on this story of unhappy school dictator and his actress wife. Translation, under film title, was published in England only in 1932. Since some other novels of Heinrich Mann have reached wide American audience, this apparently new rendering of his early masterpiece ought to be welcome, particularly because it catches spirit of German original." Library J

"It is all sound fiction—soundly conceived, soundly thought out. It happens to be done with a certain heaviness, the writing being often rather densely explicit. The development of the professor's attachment to the singer whom he had set out to 'catch' three of his pupils playing around with, at the Blue Angel, is done with fine irony and skill. The means by which he finally gets revenge on the town—by corrupting and bankrupting half the residents in a gambling establishment he opens—is distressingly flimsy, dramatically, and supported by a painfully high rate of coincidence. But on the whole this is an intelligent and absorbing tale." Peter De Vries

+ — Book Week p3 My 21 '44 400w

Kirkus 12:125 Mr 15 '44 130w

"Recommended for public libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 69:404 My 1 '44 90w

Reviewed by Marjorie Farber

N Y Times p6 Je 4 '44 750w

"The author's portrait of a man whose cruel jealousy springs from a perverted sexuality would probably be approved by a good psychiatrist, but sound psychiatry may not make up to the lay reader for an essentially disagreeable story."

New Yorker 20:70 Jl 15 '44 130w

"Renewing our acquaintance with Professor Unrath we soon find out that 'Old Garbage' has lost nothing of his vitality in the twenty-five odd years which have passed since he made his first appearance, but, on the contrary, has gained a new aspect of timeliness and reality for today's readers. . . An anonymous translator has perpetrated a veritable crime on the author and his American readers. This reviewer does not underestimate the difficulty of finding an adequate English expression of Old Garbage's funny latinized idiom. But does this difficulty permit the translator to mutilate narrative passages, to eliminate the spirit of irony, to change the meaning of whole sentences and paragraphs, and to omit essential characteristics? . . Throughout the whole novel satire is castrated and irony dulled and disfigured. It is, to put it bluntly, a pity and a shame." F. C. Weiskopf

+ — Sat R of Lit 27:24 Je 24 '44 900w

MANN, MARTHA. Nathan Hale, patriot; il. by Victor J. Dowling. 343p $2.50 Dodd

Hale, Nathan—Juvenile literature 44-8683

Fictionized biography of Nathan Hale, based on all the known facts of his brief life. His boyhood days, his college years, his term as teacher, and as an officer in the Continental army, are covered, as well as his brave death. For junior and senior high schools.

Booklist 41:111 D 1 '44

Cath World 160:281 D '44 20w

"Martha Mann has succeeded in her desire to make the young hero real and living."

+ Horn Bk 20:479 N '44 80w

"Good book for libraries and schools."

+ Kirkus 12:322 Jl 15 '44 150w

"A most complete story showing careful research and study, giving not only the real facts but many legends of this truly great American patriot. . . Recommended for ages twelve to sixteen years." S. J. Robinson

+ Library J 69:1006 N 15 '44 70w

Weekly Book Review p14 N 12 '44 350w

MANN, THOMAS. Joseph, the provider; tr. from the German for the first time by H. T. Lowe-Porter. 608p $3 Knopf

Joseph (patriarch)—Fiction 44-5709

The last volume in the tetralogy about Joseph, son of Jacob, the first volume of which was Joseph and His Brothers (Book Review Digest, 1934). In this volume the old story of Joseph's imprisonment, his later rise to power, his reunion with his brothers and his father, Jacob's settlement in the land of Egypt and his death, are all recorded.

"Joseph the Provider is after all not a separate novel; it is the concluding book of a vast and leisurely fable on the nature, state, and destiny of man. The whole constitutes a work which in encyclopedic scholarship, imaginative power, and magnitude of conception can hardly be approached by any other literary product of our time." J. F. Fullington

+ Atlantic 174:133 S '44 550w

"It is regrettable that the author so often turns, in almost private address, to the Egyptian gods and goddesses, as did the poets of earlier centuries to Greek and Latin deities. Occasionally the allusions float on clouds far above the earth on which the story is so firmly planted, and the average reader may resent this tendency to the obscure and the secretive. Yet even these passages fill the interstices with a strange beauty and reawaken in one the feelings which must have prevailed in those early times. For the hand of the master is everywhere in 'Joseph the Provider.' Like a fine symphony, it will have to be heard and read many times before we shall have sensed every nuance and understood every symbolism. For the moment it is enough to record that a great creative work has been completed and that America will read it proudly." Louis Zara

+ — Book Week p1 Je 25 '44 1400w

Booklist 40:377 Jl 1 '44

Cath World 159:571 S '44 180w

"One feels that whatever else Thomas Mann writes, this tetralogy will stand as a symbol of his distinguished contribution to twentieth-century literature." M. J. T.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Jl 1 '44 500w

Kirkus 12:101 Mr 1 '44 260w

"A great creative work." H. S. Taylor

+ Library J 69:554 Je 15 '44 100w

"Now that Thomas Mann has brought his Joseph cycle to an end, there can remain no doubt, it seems to me, that it is one of the great imaginative efforts of our time. I know there is a growing tendency in this country to disparage the work of Mann. . . It must be admitted that there is some ground for such reaction, especially in Mann's political pronouncements, which are full of an overheated spirituality that is not only thoroughly platitudinous but also quite indistinguishable from the Sunday rhetoric of philistinism. Even in his fiction there are occasional lapses into a sheer posture of profundity; this concluding volume of the tetralogy is marred by many dreary passages of spiritual rumination. Mann, in an apparent effort to wind up the series, has overrun his subject. Still, despite these failings, he clearly towers over his contemporaries, and it would be nothing but a piece of provincial spite to deny Mann's central place in modern writing." William Phillips

+ — Nation 159:47 Jl 8 '44 1150w

Reviewed by Harry Levin

New Repub 111:49 Jl 10 '44 2100w

"'Joseph the Provider' is replete with overtones of beauty, insight and every form of humor from delicate irony to heartiest comedy. Yet our laughter always brings wisdom in its train. Perhaps the greatest achievement of this book is that spirituality becomes real, reality becomes spirit, and the boundary lines between the two melt away." A. E. Meyer

+ N Y Times p1 Je 25 '44 1400w

"While I am perfectly willing to admit that this is one of the more remarkable literary performances of our time and an amazingly sustained effort, I find that I still like the Genesis version better. . . The great load of learning and philosophical inquiry with which Mr. Mann has burdened his story, and which some reviewers have found enchanting, enchants me almost not at all. I have, possibly to my discredit, never been particularly impressed by Mr. Mann as a thinker, and while I share the general opinion that he is one of the greatest living writers, I also find him an extremely clumsy one who at times comes very close to being one of the greatest living bores." Hamilton Basso

— New Yorker 20:53 Jl 22 '44 1700w

"Now that this great work of the distinguished exile has reached its end, it is only fitting to pay tribute to the achievement of its translator. Mrs. Lowe-Porter has succeeded admirably in reproducing the archaic colloquialism of the German text—and thus secured an immediate place in literature to a work which for some time to come must remain unknown to its author's one-time compatriots." Robert Pick

+ Sat R of Lit 27:11 Je 24 '44 1400w

"In a style of limpid beauty, in prose whose rhythm verges on poetry, Mann relates the story of Pharaoh's dreams, Joseph's canny interpretations and their consequences. . . The greatness of Thomas Mann as a writer is not to be measured alone by even so splendidly conceived a novel as this one. His genius as a writer is Germany's good and surpassing gift to a world it has sought to destroy, and his literary stature in our own generation is assured. Mann requires no encomiums—merely appreciation—for to read his books is to become aware of greatness, a greatness that transcends the told story." L. S. Munn

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Je 25 '44 750w

"Few readers will want to know all of Mann's retelling of the story, the resuscitation of Egyptian and Hebrew thought and customs with which he surrounds it, the lessons for the modern world he derives from it. But no contemporary reader can afford not to know what is in Thomas Mann's version of the life of Joseph."

+ Time 44:90 Jl 3 '44 1500w

Reviewed by Rose Feld

Weekly Book Review p3 Jl 2 '44 1400w

Reviewed by Orville Prescott

Yale R n s 34:189 autumn '44 300w

MANNHEIM, KARL. Diagnosis of our time. 195p $3 Oxford [10s 6d Routledge]

304 Sociology. Education. Sociology, Christian 44-4809

"This book consists of a series of essays written, with one exception, in wartime and read as Papers at Conferences and discussions held during the last two years. The Papers represent what is described by the author as an attempt 'to apply the method and the accumulated knowledge of scientific sociology to our reality.' Titles of various Papers are: the Problem of Youth in Modern Society, the Problem of Social Awareness, Mass Education and Group Analysis, and Nazi Group Strategy. The most substantial essay in the book, entitled Towards a New Social Philosophy and described as a challenge to Christian thinkers, was written for discussion by a group of friends." (New Statesman & Nation) Indexes.

Reviewed by Lewis Mumford

Am Soc R 9:592 O '44 850w

"This is a fighting book, and quite different in character from the previous works of Dr. Mannheim which have been translated into English. It contains a strong plea for the participation of sociologists and other social scientists in creating a militant democracy which, to the author, represents the only desirable alternative to chaos or totalitarianism." J. H. Barnett

+ Ann Am Acad 235:143 S '44 400w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p2 S 10 '44 30w

"The state the world is in is so depressing that a description of its failings, however salutary, hardly makes inviting reading. Hardly inviting, that is, unless the analyst, bold enough to venture a statement as to just what is the matter, is brilliant and original and sound. Even then his observations may seem footless

MANNHEIM, KARL—Continued
to many unless he points to certain feasible ways out of our sorry pass. It is gratifying to be able to report that Karl Mannheim qualifies on both scores in his 'Diagnosis of Our Time.' "
+ Commonweal 40:136 My 26 '44 750w

Reviewed by Sidney Hook
Nation 159:596 N 11 '44 450w

Reviewed by H. W. Ehrmann
New Repub 111:139 Jl 31 '44 480w

"It is difficult, as one reads, or, rather, as one begins to read—for further reading modifies first impressions—to restrain a gesture of impatience. Is Dr. Mannheim, one wonders, merely parading platitudes with pomp? . . . I shall continue to read Mannheim's book, for when you have swallowed the pomposities and stripped away the platitudes, you come upon an underlying sanity which rises on occasion to the height of wisdom and which enables you to understand the massive scale of Dr. Mannheim's reputation. 'Massive,' indeed, is the apt word; so, for once, is the reviewer's cliché 'the book will repay study.' It will indeed, especially the treatment of the problem of 'Youth.' But it must be added that it will need the study that it repays." C. E. M. Joad
+ — New Statesman & Nation 25:405 Je 19 '43 900w

"Out of his discussion of philosophies at odds with one another, the author draws revealing socio-analyses of their nature, profound penetrations that integrate the accumulating findings of sociology and psychology. Recognizing the dynamic quality of modern society, he turns to youth and education in Britain for a brilliant study of attitudes that are evolving and functions that must be accepted if the societal reserves of youth are to be drawn upon. To the modern man of religion the author of 'Diagnosis of Our Time' presents a challenging sociological interpretation of the Christian church and its place in the modern world." W. S. Lynch
+ Sat R of Lit 27:10 My 27 '44 500w

Reviewed by Philipp Weintraub
Social Forces 23:98 O '44 2250w

Special Libraries 35:100 Mr '44

Reviewed by C. D. Kean
Springf'd Republican p4d Je 11 '44 1300w

"Dr. Mannheim's reputation as a sociologist stands deservedly high, and nothing that appears in this new volume of his endangers it in any way. . . The essays, lucid and methodical in exposition, exhibit the tightly packed thought and the breadth of vision characteristic of the author's entire work."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p189 Ap 17 '43 850w

MANNING, MARIE (MRS HERMAN EDWARD GASCH) (BEATRICE FAIRFAX, pseud). Ladies now and then. 254p $2.75 Dutton

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 44-3599

Autobiography of Marie Manning, better known as Beatrice Fairfax. It is the story of her career as a newspaper woman, which goes back over a period of forty-six years; and includes anecdotes of many of the great or near-great whom she has met in those years. Index.

"Entertaining enough, as a sidelight on journalism and one woman's angle, but not a very personal story, though she writes briefly of her marriage, of Europe, of temporary retirement until the stock market crash brought her back to her Beatrice Fairfax role."
Kirkus 12:186 Ap 15 '44 130w

"Sufficiently entertaining and popular in style to be suitable for all but small libraries." M. C. Manley
Library J 69:353 Ap 15 '44 70w

"Beatrice Fairfax—or Marie Manning, to use her real name—has written a good-humored and sensible account of her experiences." Jane Cobb
+ N Y Times p21 Je 25 '44 500w

"Readers will find this book gay, serious, humorous, with a sparkling personal touch." M. D.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d My 7 '44 500w

Reviewed by Rose Feld
Weekly Book Review p8 My 21 '44 600w

Wis Lib Bul 40:108 Jl '44

MANNON, M. M. pseud of MARY ELLEN MANNON and MARTHA MANNON. Murder on the program. 310p $2 Bobbs 44-3665

Detective story.

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p12 Ap 9 '44 120w

"The characterization is excellent, the description realistic, and on the whole the entire writing is above average." H. J. S.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 16 '44 80w

"We defy any fan living to keep his mind on this story, once he gathers that some twenty-five characters are named after various mystery authors. . . Sheriff White, untouched by all this whimsy, turns in the right answer to an ingenious puzzle. Some fun." Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p15 Ap 9 '44 100w

MANSFIELD, T. C. Border in colour. 235p il col pl $4.50 Dutton [21s Collins]

635.932 Flowers

An English book. It consists of half-a-dozen brief chapters on the building and care of the herbaceous border, plus a lengthy "Glossary" listing and describing plants that can be used in such borders. The work is profusely illustrated in color.

"'For the sake of argument, flowers can be divided into two kinds, the majestic and the homely. Into the same categories fall their growers and the writers of garden books. Mr. Mansfield, as readers of other volumes in this series already know, belongs to the former group; he is aloof, professional, yet gracious to the amateur."
New Statesman & Nation 27:343 My 20 '44 180w

" 'The Border in Colour' is doubtless an excellent and useful volume in its native England. It should have been left there." R. S. Lemmon
— Weekly Book Review p17 Ja 7 '45 70w

MANSFIELD, T. C. Roses in colour and cultivation. 264p pl $3.75 Dutton [21s Collins]

635.93337 Roses [43-12090]

Study of roses and their cultivation which is of English origin. The first part of the book is on propagation and cultivation of roses. The remaining two thirds of the book is a glossary, or descriptive list of rose varieties, many of which are unobtainable in this country. Copiously illustrated with colored plates.

+ New Statesman & Nation 25:326 My 15 '43 240w

"It is difficult to see a justifiable place for this obviously English volume among American gardening readers unless they happen to be confirmed rose book collectors and, as such, on the lookout for additions to their personal libraries. Not that it isn't authoritative and undoubtedly useful to gardeners in its own country. The trouble is that, in numerous horticultural respects, England is not America and never will be. . . . But if you are looking for practical information on making and keeping a rose garden in this country better be prepared for the difficult task of modifying or completely disregarding much of the cultural advice you will find on these pages." R. S. Lemmon
Weekly Book Review p18 Ap 30 '44 200w

MANTLE, BURNS, ed. Best plays of 1943-44; and the Year book of the drama in America. 548p il $3 Dodd

808.82 Dramas—Collections. American drama—Collections. Theater-Yearbooks (20-21432)

Condensed versions of ten plays which were successful on Broadway in the 1943-1944 season. Contents: Winged victory, by Moss Hart; The searching wind, by Lillian Hellman; The voice of the turtle, by John Van Druten; Decision, by Edward Chodorov; Over 21, by Ruth Gordon; Outrageous fortune, by Rose Franken; Jacobowsky and the colonel, by S. N. Behrman; Storm operation, by Maxwell Anderson; Pick-up girl, by Elsa Shelley; The innocent voyage, by Paul Osborn. Contains also complete records of theatrical productions in other parts of the United States.

Reviewed by H. T. Murdock
Book Week p2 D 24 '44 360w

Booklist 41:121 D 15 '44

"Highly recommended."
+ Library J 69:1001 N 15 '44 30w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch
Nation 160:78 Ja 20 '45 90w

"If any unfavorable criticism could be made, it is only that the title 'Best Plays' fails to indicate the chief value of the book, even though that chief value is now suggested in a subtitle. When the series was first started the abbreviated versions of ten plays selected by Mr. Mantle as the best of the season may well have seemed the most important feature. It was almost certainly the best-selling point to be made for the book, and the well-made condensations do remain very convenient for anyone who wishes to refresh his memory in connection with any of the 250 plays now thus presented in the twenty-five existing volumes. But the indispensable feature is the complete record of theatrical production and theatrical runs for any given season." J. W. Krutch
+ N Y Times p7 D 24 '44 950w

Theatre Arts 29:64 Ja '45 220w

Weekly Book Review p8 Ja 28 '45 250w

MANTLE, BURNS, and SHERWOOD, GARRISON P., eds. Best plays of 1899-1909; and the Year book of the drama in America. 624p il $5 Dodd

808.82 Dramas—Collections 44-1990

Condensed versions of ten plays, outstanding during the years 1899 and 1909. Contents: Barbara Frietchie, by Clyde Fitch; The climbers, by Clyde Fitch; If I were king, by J. H. McCarthy; The darling of the gods, by David Belasco and J. L. Long; The county chairman, by George Ade; Leah Kleschna, by C. M. S. McLellan; The squaw man, by E. M. Royle; The great divide, by W. V. Moody; The witching hour, by Augustus Thomas; The man from home, by Booth Tarkington and H. L. Wilson. Includes brief biographical sketches of the dramatists; and a list of plays, with their casts, produced in New York from July 12, 1899 to June 14, 1909. Indexes.

"A fascinating work in stage archeology, an interesting commentary on Father's taste in theatricals and a most valuable, factual record of the world's most active theatrical thoroughfare." H. T. Murdock
+ Book Week p8 F 27 '44 270w

Booklist 40:248 Mr 15 '44

Library J 69:263 Mr 15 '44 90w

Reviewed by L. H. Robbins
+ N Y Times p7 Mr 5 '44 650w

Theatre Arts 28:382 Je '44 200w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
Weekly Book Review p43 N 12 '44 600w

MAPES, MARY A. Fun with your child. 191p il $2.50 Howell, Soskin

793 Amusements. Play 43-18511

"Material from Ruth Zechlin's Bed-time fun for boys and girls [Book Review Digest, 1934] English version of Beschaeftigungen fuer das kranke kind and How to play with your child [Book Review Digest, 1938] has been reedited to produce this book, although no indication is given in the book itself. It is a simply written, intelligent, practical handbook for parents on children's play needs from infancy to high school, with full instructions and nice illustrations, but it is not new. Partial contents: Games for the preschool and school child, the out-of-sorts and ill child, for children in groups or playing alone; things to do with paper; handicraft articles; family and holiday celebrations; presents children can make. A table of occupations possible with different sicknesses adds value." Booklist

Booklist 40:208 F 15 '44

Bookmark 5:9 Mr '44

Reviewed by Helen Henley
Christian Science Monitor p10 S 5 '44 70w

"A handy manual for parents with more children than ideas about how to play with them. . . This is a book which should certainly be of value to any family." W. H. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 13 '44 220w

Weekly Book Review p9 Mr 5 '44 80w

MARCELIN, PHILIPPE THOBY-. See Thoby-Marcelin, P.

MARDIKIAN, GEORGE. Dinner at Omar Khayyam's. 150p $2.75 Viking

641.5 Cookery, Near Eastern 44-9487

A famous Armenian Hollywood restaurateur and chef has gathered some of his specialties into an unusual cookbook. Index.

"Mardikian, a rambunctious, amusing showman if one ever breathed, is a true fugitive from Hayastan. His book is charming, and full of the best smell and taste of life. He gives many recipes, well classified." M. F. K. Fisher
+ Book Week p14 D 3 '44 550w

Booklist 41:134 Ja 1 '45

Boston Globe p36 N 29 '44 20w

"Particularly appealing are some of the suggestions for using meats in unusual ways, which make possible a de luxe flavor for cuts that can be found. An off-the-track cookbook."
+ Kirkus 12:532 N 15 '44 100w

MARIANOFF, DIMITRI, and WAYNE, PALMA. Einstein; an intimate study of a great man. 211p $2.75 Doubleday

B or 92 Einstein, Albert 44-6194

Biography of the great modern mathematician and physicist written by his former son-in-law.

Reviewed by Rufus Oldenburger
Book Week p6 Ag 13 '44 800w

Kirkus 12:228 My 15 '44 150w

"A chatty, informal, slightly over-affectionate biography."
New Yorker 20:60 Ag 5 '44 90w

"That this record is disappointing is due to a number of reasons. One is the quality of the writing itself. Aside from the misuse of American idiom, the prose is replete with paragraphs of rhetoric, studded with exclamation points. . . Another hindrance to the emergence of a clear portrait is the obtrusive personality of Mr Marianoff. He reveals himself as a confused, rather unresolved personality. . . And finally, though the period is fully described, and the background of each member of the family filled in, somehow there is no animation, no life, and certainly no warmth, in the final picture." L. S. Burack
— Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 13 '44 550w

"This is a loving sketch, sometimes sentimental, occasionally lavish but often generous and understanding of the scientific spirit. One regrets a little the lightness of the touch, the absence of the great sweep and meaning of cosmic mathematics." D. O. Woodbury
Weekly Book Review p10 Jl 30 '44 700w

MARIL, LEE. Savor and flavor: berries in fact and fancy; il. by [the author]. 63p $1.75 Coward-McCann

634.7 Berries 44-4975

Small book giving description, location, and uses of fourteen American wild berries, with legends and stories about each one. The berries included are: blackberry, huckleberry, elderberry, gooseberry, juniper berry, juneberry, mulberry, bayberry, sweetbrier rose, bearberry, strawberry, swamp red currant, cranberry and blueberry. For ages twelve to sixteen.

"A dainty and attractive book which may stimulate a taste for plant study." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 20:212 My '44 80w

"Here is an excellent blend of story, legend and information about wild berries, linking scientific data and story—good for special reference. In format it is a companion volume to Spice and Scent. In content it seems somewhat less original, though again the publishers have made a charming book of it, with three color pictures."

+ — Kirkus 12:218 My 1 '44 70w

"Similar in form to Spice and Scent [Book Review Digest, 1943], it will have the same limited use but should be introduced to botany teachers and their classes. Pastel colored illustrations unsatisfactory for identification purposes." Gertrude Andrus

Library J 69:465 My 15 '44 70w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton

N Y Times p23 Jl 23 '44 120w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p6 Jl 23 '44 160w

MARIO, QUEENA. Death drops Delilah. 206p $2 Dutton

44-5666

Detective story.

"Although the story starts out well enough, characters and plot become less and less plausible as it continues." Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p6 Ag 27 '44 90w

Kirkus 12:355 Ag 15 '44 40w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p12 Ag 6 '44 100w

"Over-talky yarn with spy trimmings, some knowledgable dope on singers, and much high spirited badinage. Minor."

— Sat R of Lit 27:22 Ag 12 '44 40w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 6 '44 220w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p10 Ag 6 '44 100w

MARIO, THOMAS. Face in the aspic; tales of club life among the overfed. 194p $2 Simon & Schuster

817 44-1238

The executive chef and maître d'hotel of an exclusive New York club regales his audience with thumbnail sketches of those human oddities, the members of the club.

"The book's failure to impress may be due to the anonymity with which Mario surrounds the club and the members he portrays. If it is the Union League Club of New York of which he speaks, he would be more effective if he said so; and interest would increase tenfold if he had named his characters instead of hiding them behind fictitious cognomens. Somehow the book lacks that 'inside' ring it should have. It misses being either a soberly factual account or a gay satire of a dying phase of American life." Dale Harrison

— Book Week p9 F 27 '44 400w

"Definitely a caviar item."

Kirkus 11:570 D 15 '43 170w

New Repub 110:422 Mr 27 '44 60w

"Mr. Mario has seen with his naked eye enough imbecile extravaganza to make the Sphinx faint. Far too many gentlemen who possess vast quantities of earthly goods, it seems, do not have brains enough to crowd a medium filbert. One is inclined, especially in these times, to share Mr. Mario's view of them, which, I take it, could be expressed by the aphorism, Let them choke on their cake." Philip Wylie

N Y Times p5 F 27 '44 650w

"One perceives clearly that Mr. Mario is a great admirer of Mr. Bemelmans, a sentiment that does him credit. Had his admiration been more judicious he would have realized that only Bemelmans can write Bemelmans." Julian Street

Sat R of Lit 27:27 Mr 18 '44 340w

Reviewed by Helen Lowe

Springf'd Republican p7e F 20 '44 160w

"Sardonic and neatly turned little volume. . . In dealing through the years with these queer fish Mr. Mario must have suffered greatly. It's his turn now. He now gives them, as they say in the trade, the works." Stanley Walker

+ Weekly Book Review p12 Mr 5 '44 600w

MARION, ELIZABETH. Keys to the house. 247p $2.50 Crowell

44-3823

A psychological mystery story. For twenty-five years after her husband's strange disappearance Margaret Kenny kept the doors of her house locked day and night. When her son, burying an old dog in the orchard, discovers human bones and his father's watch, he begins unraveling the old mystery of his father's going.

"Always close to the peaceful serenity of the farm lands, painted on a large canvas with beautiful skill, the gathering force of the story is by contrast almost overwhelming. And when, at the end, all the truth has been laid bare, the reader has been through a strong emotional experience." Rachel Hastings

+ Book Week p10 Ap 16 '44 320w

Booklist 40:356 Je 15 '44

"Nice handling of self reproach, self torment, humanly approached."

+ Kirkus 12:27 Ja 15 '44 140w

Reviewed by E. P. Potter

Library J 69:263 Mr 15 '44 70w

"Here is a strangely moving novel—admirable in its suspense, subtle and artful in its writing." Frances Witherspoon

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 2 '44 550w

" 'The Keys to the House' is a novel of quiet power, deep feeling and mounting dramatic tension in which there are no false tones." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ap 16 '44 350w

Wis Lib Bul 40:71 My '44

MARITAIN, JACQUES. Christianity and democracy; tr. by Doris C. Anson. 98p $1.25 Scribner

261 Christianity and politics 44-4835

"Mr. Maritain states that he wrote the present essay in 1942 'from hope and from a deliberate will to hope,' when the outcome of the war 'could still seem very disquieting.' . . The war, in Mr. Maritain's opinion, is the end of the modern order of the world. . . Democracy, he thinks, has tragically failed. This is because anti-democrats never lay down their arms, and also because democracy has not accomplished the right social reforms, but most of all because it has not been founded on the Christian gospel. . . The correct program for democracy is therefore a reform of its policies and institutions, whereby these are to be harmonized with the gospel." N Y Times

Reviewed by B. L. Conway

Cath World 159:474 Ag '44 270w

Reviewed by Norman Thomas

Commonweal 40:186 Je 9 '44 900w

Reviewed by E. A. Burtt

Crozer Q 22:74 Ja '45 650w

"Should command a wide reading not only among religionists but among all thoughtful Americans."

+ Kirkus 12:253 Je 1 '44 130w

"In the face of the enigmatic 'neutrality' of Mr. Maritain's church toward democracy in the world today, we may indeed rejoice that so good a Christian is so good a democrat, and set that fact to the credit of his faith as over against the debits against it on democracy's ledger. But his central thesis, the alleged sine qua non relationship of Catholicism to democracy, remains wholly unconvincing." H. A. L.
+ — J Philos 41:388 Jl 6 '44 650

"The essay is filled with humane fervor and with the eloquence which has gained many admirers for Mr. Maritain. Doubtless it might be a more telling stimulus to political reform than many a learned treatise. Whether it could be more than a stimulus must be questioned, on account of serious inconsistencies and oversights." P. A. Carmichael
+ — N Y Times p23 Je 11 '44 900w

"Mr. Maritain brings both lucidity and intelligence to his discussion, and even the secular-minded, who will naturally not agree with everything he says, may find a certain amount of profit in his pages."
+ New Yorker 20:83 Je 3 '44 70w

Reviewed by F. G. Bratton
Springf'd Republican p8 Jl 20 '44 490w

MARKHAM, SYDNEY FRANK. Climate and the energy of nations. rev & enl ed 236p maps $3.50 Oxford
551.5 Climatology. Anthropogeography 44-8119

"Accepting the general principle that a kindly climate is favorable to the growth of culture, the author inquires what factors have caused the movement of the centers of civilization to new locations away from those in which it had formerly flourished. . . Markham discusses the criteria by which the energy of nations and of smaller cultural groups can be evaluated—the death rate, infantile mortality, per capita income, and per capita proportion of world trade—and finds confirmation of the effect of climate and of climate control." (Chem & Eng N) This is a revised edition of a book which appeared in England in 1942. In this revision three chapters dealing with climate and energy in the United States have been added. Index.

" 'Climate and the Energy of Nations' is a lush example, in full flower, of the fairly familiar phenomenon of a useful theory pressed too far. It is hard to see why the book should have been taken seriously, except that so many people can never be happy without some complete, dogmatic system for the explanation of history. The climate enthusiasts—like the food faddists—are far less obnoxious and less menacing than the racial determinists, but they are not much less absurd." J. T. Frederick
— Book Week p2 D 31 '44 300w

"This is a book for those who are interested in the effect of technological and engineering advances upon the growth and progress of culture. It is a book for students of the process of history, for statesmen, administrators, and engineers. . . This is an important book, well and truly reasoned, clear and impartial in its findings. Students of the times and prophets and broad planners ought to read it." T. L. Davis
+ Chem & Eng N 22:2216 D 25 '44 650w
Kirkus 12:388 S 1 '44 90w

"The author says very little about China, and should adjust his views by further thought about that remarkable civilisation, but his book is highly suggestive and makes no pretence to do more than sketch one factor among many." H. J. Fleure
Manchester Guardian p3 D 30 '42 200w

"This little book is packed tight with suggestion. Not only should it be read by every historical student. It is a book for statesmen, administrators, planners and engineers. It is an excitement to read it. It is a happiness to think of the prospect of returning to it for ideas, and facts, and stimulus, and comfort and joy in good hope for the future of man." Ernest Barker
+ Spec 169:532 D 4 '42 850w

"The author is an Englishman who has traveled all over the world, read widely, and talked with authorities in many fields so that his work is well thought out and documented. . . The book is well written, it is easy to read, the facts underlying the argument are there, and the subject is one that deserves consideration by anyone interested in the future of mankind, whether or not he agrees with this author's conclusions." W. B. Kirkham
+ Springf'd Republican p4d O 22 '44 700w

"There is much to stimulate interest and controversy in this well-written book, and the author is to be congratulated on the vigour and freshness of his treatment of one of the oldest as well as the most popular subjects of conversation."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p92 F 20 '43 420w

MARKLEY, JAMES M. Fundamentals for the aircraft mechanic. (Whittlesey house publication) 345p il $4 McGraw
629.134 Airplanes 43-17491

"A textbook for use in basic and introductory courses. Chapter titles are: Sketching and blueprint reading; Shop mathematics; Theory of flight and design; Airplane construction and materials; Hydraulics; Electricity; Propeller operation and maintenance; Engine principles. The author is Supervisor of Mechanics' Training for Eastern Air Lines, Inc." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 40:264 Ap 1 '44
Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 68:1007 D 1 '43 20w
N Y New Tech Bks 28:59 O '43

MARKLEY, KLARE STEPHEN, and GOSS, WARREN H. Soybean chemistry and technology. 261p il $3.50 Chemical pub. co.
665.3 Soy bean 44-5628

"Part 1 deals with the properties of soybeans and the physical and chemical characteristics of soybean oil; part 2 treats of the soybean processing industry and describes the various methods of producing oil and meal by means of expellers and screw presses, hydraulic presses, and solvent extractors. There are chapters on the production of soybean phosphatides, and on the processing of soybean oil for food uses. Processing mills in the United States are listed, also the manufacturers of mill equipment. There is a six-page bibliography which includes references to patents." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:606 Jl '44 50w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:32 Ap '44

MARKMAN, SIDNEY DAVID. Horse in Greek art. 211p il $5 Johns Hopkins press [30s Oxford]
709.38 Art, Greek. Horses in art 43-16466

"Hallmarks of Indo-Europeans when they entered Greece are the horse, battle-ax, and Indo-European speech. The horse thus played an important role in Greek life from the beginning. In this study, unusual for a dissertation in its range and handling of material, Markman dates Greek monuments on the basis of the artist's rendering of the anatomy, proportions, and gait of the horse. This new method, not always infallible, has produced interesting and usually acceptable results." Am Hist R

"Markman is to be congratulated on a stupendous task well achieved. Only those who have wrestled with problems presented in each chapter can appreciate the magnitude of this study, which will prove useful to many scholars and in its general chapters and illustrations to a wider public. If the artistic quality of the monuments is occasionally obscured by the technical language of equestrian anatomy, one must remember this is not an aesthetic treatise but a method for dating and undating Greek monuments." M. H. Swindler

MARKMAN, S. D.—Continued
+ Am Hist R 49:465 Ap '44 480w

Reviewed by F. P. Johnson
Class Philol 40:48 Ja '45 1400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p322 Jl 1 '44 480w

MARKS, EDWARD BENNET. They all had glamour. 448p il $4 Messner

780.973 Music—U.S. Theater—U.S. Singers. Actors and actresses 44-4384

Rambling account of the legendary women of the American stage, beginning with Jenny Lind and ending with Adah Isaacs Menken. Includes a long reference list of brief biographies of men and women connected with the theater. List of old-time colloquialisms. Brief index.

Reviewed by Jack Conroy
Book Week p3 My 14 '44 550w

Booklist 40:353 Je 15 '44

"Mr. Marks' reminiscences are fond and mellow and he cloaks them in a mass of detail and anecdote, rather strangely organized. . . 'They All Had Glamour' is completed with rare pictures, a literally stupendous set of reference lists embracing old songs from 1814, a Roll of Honor, repertoires of famous singers, songs of early American family entertainers, minstrel songs, singers and their teachers, critics of the period, great opera casts, and so on ad infinitum." J. W. Riley
+ Boston Globe p17 My 24 '44 330w

"A potpourri of the theatrical scene of the past, inducive to nostalgia on the part of oldsters, with some fresh charm for moderns. Entertainment quality plus valuable reference material for writers, radio and theatre and picture research."
+ Kirkus 11:567 D 15 '43 170w

"The book is vastly entertaining. . . However, the volume is inadequately indexed, particularly true of the lists of minstrel songs, biographies of famous or neglected performers (though their dates are often missing), etc. Recommended with reservations." George Freedley
+ — Library J 69:262 Mr 15 '44 100w

"The writing of the volume is more commendable for its clarity than for its style, which is hearty and ingenuous. It is sprinkled with home-made witticisms which occasionally verge on the macabre." M. A. Schubart
+ — N Y Times p25 Ap 30 '44 700w

"Mr. Marks, who apparently holds to the barrel theory of literature, has dumped everything he could lay his hands on into his book, but, thanks to his own enthusiasm and to a series of lists he has compiled that include everything from a 'Who's Who' of theatrical figures to a catalogue of old ballads and songs, it will probably be of interest to those who have an antiquarian enthusiasm for the American theatre."
+ — New Yorker 20:87 Ap 29 '44 110w

Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 9 '44 220w

"With his second book Edward B. Marks takes his place as an eminently readable historian of the American musical stage in the nineteenth century. It is a chatty, discursive book, written from the author's acquaintance with many of the opera and musical comedy producers of a past day and from his long study of old reviews and playbills." Stewart Holbrook
+ Weekly Book Review p4 Ap 30 '44 1450w

MARKS, PERCY. Shade of Sycamore. 296p $2.50 Reynal

44-961

Gayle Kent, daughter of a midwestern college professor, married Bruce Bartlett, handsome and glamorous son of one of New York's wealthiest families. Bruce was a social idol, but at heart he was a coward and worse. After her son's birth, Gayle determined at all costs to keep her son and bring him up with better morals than his father's. The world war came in time to prevent a divorce, but even when Bruce was killed in action, Gayle's troubles were not ended.

"This is a not-to-be-put-down-till-you've-finished-it novel about some rather improbable people doing some terribly probable things. It's a little strange that Percy Marks' very authentic sense of values should permit him to oversimplify his characters till they are rather more typical than real. But that's a small plaint about such an engrossing book." Edith Roberts
+ — Book Week p7 F 6 '44 440w

"One might, I suppose, dignify Percy Marks' latest gift to the circulating libraries by calling it a problem novel. 'Shade of Sycamore' embroiders the old Cinderella theme, beginning where the fairy tale left off. As fiction, it is slick, flashy stuff; as social commentary, it is arrant nonsense." Ruth Boorstin
— N Y Times p10 F 6 '44 310w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p12 Ja 30 '44 270w

MARLATT, EARL BOWMAN. Lands away. 179p $1.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

804 Literature 44-8822

"Dean Marlatt is professor of the philosophy of literature, as well as dean, in the Boston University School of Theology. The description of his field is also a description of the content of the book, which however has none of the qualities of a textbook—at least none of the odious qualities—but more of the flavor of a series of lectures. Much of the material was, in fact, delivered as Mendenhall lectures at De Pauw in 1941. The purpose is to sustain belief in the abiding spiritual values toward which individual and collective human life should be oriented, and to illustrate these from modern literature." Christian Century

Christian Century 61:1230 O 25 '44 300w

Reviewed by R. E. Keighton
Crozer Q 22:92 Ja '45 300w

MARLETT, MRS MELBA. Escape while I can. 192p $2 Doubleday

44-51326

Detective story.

"Best of the week."
+ Boston Globe p15 Ja 3 '45 60w

Kirkus 12:488 N 1 '44 110w

"This is a closely knit story with keen characterization that will baffle all but the very best armchair detectives." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p32 D 3 '44 150w

"Well plotted, and written in a cozy style which will appeal principally to the ladies."
+ New Yorker 20:118 D 9 '44 90w

"[Mrs] Marlett swings the trick with a handsome brand of writing full of suspense and superior narrative gambits. Wild doings well told." Will Cuppy
+ Weekly Book Review p14 D 10 '44 150w

MARMUR, JACLAND. Sea duty, and other stories of naval action. 168p $2 Holt

44-8302

Collection of thirteen short stories of war at sea: twelve of them dealing with the present war in the Pacific; the thirteenth is about the battle of Jutland.

Reviewed by W. H. Fetridge
Book Week p4 O 29 '44 200w

"Don't pass this up as just another volume of short stories. It is much more than that—a really memorable collection, with scarcely a let-down. . . For a Conrad—a Forester market, men and women."
+ Kirkus 12:412 S 15 '44 190w

Reviewed by Kenneth Fearing
N Y Times p6 O 8 '44 440w

"Mr. Marmur writes agreeably if somewhat sentimentally, and a mere landsman can tell that his nautical stuff is authentic."
+ New Yorker 20:77 S 30 '44 50w

"Mr. Marmur is not only one of the most vivid of contemporary writers of short stories of the sea, he has had the unusual opportunity, in preparing the material in this collection, of service with several units of our farflung squadrons in the Pacific. So it is not strange that he brings to his treatment of thirteen episodes of action afloat a rare and timely gusto, which does not suffer from the crispness of his style or from observance of the necessary restrictions of the magazine formula." A. D. H. Smith
+ Sat R of Lit 27:29 N 18 '44 400w

"Mr. Marmur is a sound, if not a brilliant writer, and 'Sea Duty' is probably the best collection of American naval stories that has been written about this war. It seems worthy to stand beside C. S. Forester's fine stories of the British navy." G. K. Moriarty
+ Springf'd Republican p4d O 8 '44 280w

Reviewed by Herbert Kupferberg
Weekly Book Review p8 O 1 '44 550w

MARRIOTT, SIR JOHN ARTHUR RANSOME. Federalism and the problem of the small state. 125p $1.75 Norton [5s Allen, G]

321.021 States, Small. Europe—Politics. Reconstruction (1939-). International federation [43-10494]

Brief manual "on the idea of federalism as a possible preventative of war, with the corollary that small states under modern conditions can hardly hope to survive except within a framework of ordered and guaranteed peace. Though no new facts are presented, and no new arguments brought forward, it is convenient to have under one cover so many historical data bearing on the problem. The genesis of modern nationalism is briefly traced from the fall of Rome to the second World War, and a short summary given of projects for peace from those of Sully and Penn to those of Clarence Streit and George Young. There is also a study of the practical procedures which have actually been tested by time (such as the Holy Alliance, the League of Nations, the Court of International Justice) and of such local federations as the American, Canadian and Australian." (Pol Sci Q) Index.

Reviewed by Henry Reiff
Am Pol Sci R 38:813 Ag '44 300w

"A compact and useful little manual." Preston Slosson
+ Pol Sci Q 59:314 Je '44 450w

Times [London] Lit Sup p282 Je 12 '43 1150w

MARRIOTT, SIR JOHN ARTHUR RANSOME. Short history of France. 291p maps $2.75 Oxford [15s Methuen]

944 France—History 44-2804

A political history of France from the beginning of the Christian era to the present. The author's secondary purpose is to show "where the development of France runs parallel with, and where, when, and why it has diverged from that of England"

Reviewed by William Miller
Am Hist R 49:148 O '43 400w

Booklist 40:268 Ap 1 '44

"Sir John Marriott's 'Short History of France' does not aim at the subjective genius of 'Bernard Shaw.' Its object is to instruct and improve; and this it accomplishes very cleverly." Harold Hobson
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 D 19 '42 160w

Commonweal 39:654 Ap 14 '44 350w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:662 Jl '44 20w

"Sir John Marriott's evident fear of Rousseau's teachings and of 'the Gospel of Karl Marx' seems to have prevented him from completing the political with the economic approach. His sympathy for and understanding of France stop short and a chill creeps in whenever he touches on any of the big popular upheavals; the word 'rabble' comes easily to his pen as it did to Carlyle's. To one reader at least his book has gone a long way to explain the English conservative's instinctive shrinking from French popular traditions and some of the deep-rooted and dangerous misunderstandings which only the finest statesmanship on both sides of the Channel can eliminate." Jerome Jenatton
+ — New Statesman & Nation 24:308 N 7 '42 750w

"Here we are offered an epitome of French history, with the imprint of Oxford, by a veteran who has a score of authoritative books to his credit. We may accept the author's decision to restrict his field to politics: an old-fashioned but defensible attitude. We may easily discount his bias—by no means anti-French or egregiously pro-British but conventional and conservative to an incredible degree. But we are appalled at the vacuity of a book which appears under such august auspices. There is no freshness of thought or style: the whole thing has a stale and musty odor. And, as a mere repertory of facts, it is incomplete, jumbled and unreliable." Albert Guerard
— N Y Times p13 Ap 9 '44 750w

"The writer of text-books is usually supposed to take the cash and let the credit go, but any experienced teacher knows how great an art, how rigorous a discipline must be practised and obeyed by the text-book writer who does his job well. Sir John Marriott is an old, an experienced and a most competent practitioner of this very difficult craft, and all his skill and self-control are needed and applied in this excellent specimen of a useful type of book."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p538 O 31 '42 800w

MARSHAK, IL'IA IAKOVLEVICH (M. ILIN, pseud), and SEGAL, E. A. A ring and a riddle; tr. by Beatrice Kinkead; il. by Vera Bock. 65p $2 Lippincott

44-5211

A Russian fairy tale about Ivan who sets out on a journey and is helped in his progress by the gifts presented by a beautiful maiden. The gifts are a magic ring, a saw which cuts down a whole forest, boots which carry him swiftly on his way, etc. The second part of the story explains the riddle: the ring is a compass; the boots are the railroad, and so on thru the list of modern inventions.

"The format of 'A Ring and a Riddle' and Vera Bock's stunning illustrations and decorations make this one of the most beautiful books of the spring season. It has the virtue, as well, of being a fascinating fairy story with a most unusual postscript."
+ Book Week p5 Je 4 '44 270w

Booklist 40:360 Je 15 '44

"The story conforms to Soviet theories of education, practical and disillusioning. It is quite possible that American children will discard the second part of the book." A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 20:284 Jl '44 110w

Kirkus 12:233 My 15 '44 80w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
N Y Times p20 Ag 6 '44 100w

"This reader's guess is that American children will find it pretty dreary fare but that many parents and teachers will urge it upon them."
New Yorker 20:56 Jl 8 '44 90w

"What will American boys and girls think of this? It will be interesting to find out. Will it convince the realists? Will it dismay the potential poets and artists? The wise reader will go to the shelves and see that the 'Russian Wonder Tales' and 'Skazki' and 'The Seven Simeons' are there in their right place." M. G. D.
Sat R of Lit 27:28 Je 10 '44 320w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p5 Je 4 '44 450w

Wis Lib Bul 40:132 O '44

MARSTON, WILLIAM MOULTON, and FELLER, JOHN HENRY. F. F. Proctor, vaudeville pioneer. 191p il $3 Smith, Richard R.

B or 92 Proctor, Frederick Freeman. Vaudeville 44-155

"Marston and Feller have presented a thoughtful and discriminating documentation of Frederick Freeman Proctor's more than 50 years as a theatrical producer. Born in 1851 in Dexter, Me., Proctor as a boy made his first appearance on the variety stage as a juggler and acrobat. . . After a number of years on the American and European stages, he entered into his first theatrical venture as manager by converting the old Leland theater in Albany into a vaudeville house. His success was phenomenal in a field in which B. F. Keith and E. F. Albee became his bitterest rivals and later his associates, in the introduction and promotion of what became popularly known as 'polite vaudeville.' " Springf'd Republican

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 29 '44 360w

Reviewed by H. O. Austin
+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 6 '44 450w

"It is the portrait of a life lived earnestly, usefully, cooperatively, prosperously and at the same time happily and gaily among men and women of the theatre world as well as in the heart of his own family."
+ Theatre Arts 28:192 Mr '44 400w

MARTIN, A. E. Sinners never die. 279p $2 Simon & Schuster

44-7210

Mystery story.

"Martin (whose first novel this is) is to be commended for a devastating psychological study. And there is A-1 drama, too: witness the scenes in which Carlos Boldini, an itinerant showman specializing in mind-reading, gives two performances displaying his abilities even as the story approaches its climax. It's quite an experience." Elizabeth Bullock
+ Book Week p10 O 15 '44 250w

"Quiet and steady."
+ Boston Globe p17 S 27 '44 60w

"An out-of-the-groove Inner Sanctum item that has the appeal of a mystery without any woolpulling."
+ Kirkus 12:289 Jl 1 '44 150w

"The author of this remarkable first novel has a deft touch in characterization and a genuine talent for plot construction and storytelling. Let us have more of his stories, and soon." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p18 S 17 '44 160w

"A good, wry character study and fine local color, too."
+ New Yorker 20:84 S 16 '44 60w

"Off the beaten track—and worth reading."
+ Sat R of Lit 27:31 S 30 '44 90w

Springf'd Republican p4d S 24 '44 160w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p16 S 17 '44 80w

MARTIN, HUGH, and others. Christian counter-attack: Europe's churches against Nazism. 125p $1.50 Scribner [6s Student]

940.53152 World war, 1939—Religious aspects. Germany—Religion 44-4443

"Four responsible scholars and able writers —the others are Douglas Newton, H. M. Waddams and R. R. Williams—tell the story of spiritual resistance to tyrannical totalitarianism by the churches of Germany, the occupied countries and Germany's 'uneasy allies,' Italy, Finland and Hungary. The details of persecution are not stressed. This is no book of martyrs. Only so much of this is indicated as is necessary in order to show the relevance of the measures of resistance." Christian Century

Reviewed by B. J. Sheil
Book Week p6 My 28 '44 600w

"There is little rhetoric in this survey, but there is a wealth of facts. This goes on the shelf for permanent record and reference."
+ Christian Century 61:699 Je 7 '44 180w

"This book does an excellent job by showing that the only true and coherent, well organized and directed opposition is the conscientious opposition of Catholic and Protestant Christians. We hope that it finds many thousand attentive readers. It is based on facts, written with charity and justice, and it breathes an irenic spirit which should prevail among all Christians." H. A. Reinhold
+ Commonweal 40:379 Ag 4 '44 350w

Foreign Affairs 23:12 O '44 20w

"Encouraging reading for all Christians, which reveals the real inner strength of the Church."
+ Kirkus 12:253 Je 1 '44 150w

MARTIN, JOHN BARTLOW. Call it North country. 290p $3.50 Knopf

977.49 Michigan 44-4952

This story of the "North Country" deals with that wilderness section whose heartland is the Upper Michigan peninsula. The author, in a rambling, anecdotal style, tells tales of the Jesuit missionaries, of the early land surveyors and settlers, of lumber jacks, fur traders, copper and iron miners. The country, he says, was and is "tough" and the men who lived there had to be tough too to survive. Index.

"A vigorous and dramatic book, to which maps and many fine photographs add illustration and color." August Derleth
+ Book Week p4 My 28 '44 350w

Booklist 40:353 Je 15 '44

"Vigorous portrait, for the Holbrook market, rather than conventional regional book market."
+ Kirkus 12:136 Mr 15 '44 130w

"John Bartlow Martin is a well-contented fugitive from journalism who makes Chicago the headquarters of his free-lance campaign. He has contributed articles and stories on a variety of subjects to Harper's, Outdoor Life and Esquire. 'Call It North Country' is his first book. These pages, in their detailed and precise analysis of many scientific operations and many ways of life, reflect Mr. Martin's interest in the social sciences. His early training as a reporter for The Indianapolis Times is evident in the idiomatic fluency of his style and in the expertness with which he organizes his material, refusing to let it sprawl in the sprawling manner of the Peninsula itself." James Gray
+ N Y Times p3 My 21 '44 1000w

"A pleasant, unpretentious book. . . It's unfortunate, though, that Mr. Martin decided that rough-and-tumble situations, of which the early history of upper Michigan was full, call for rough-and-tumble prose. His best chapters by far are his quieter ones."
+ — New Yorker 20:83 My 27 '44 110w

"Here is one of the best regional books to come out of the woods in a long time, a careful, well written, and understanding job." Stewart Holbrook
+ Weekly Book Review p5 My 21 '44 1150w

MARX-ENGELS-LENIN INSTITUTE, MOSCOW. See Moscow. Institut Marksa-Engel'sa-Lenina

MARY CATHERINE, SISTER, originally KATHLEEN AGNES CICELY ANDERSON (S.M.C.) Once in Cornwall; being an account of Friar Peter's journey in search of the saint and dragon legends of the land. 179p $2 Longmans

44-40078

Stories and legends of Cornwall, supposedly collected by Friar Peter, a young priest who travelled about that land sometime in the thirteenth century. The author is a member of the English Dominican congregation of Saint Catherine of Siena.

Booklist 40:283 Ap 15 '44

"The author's particular gift for the sober telling of quaint tales is finely exemplified in some of these chapters; and she has been thoughtful enough to add an index which renders her interesting book even more easy to talk about."
+ Cath World 159:186 My '44 120w

"Grownups who like fairy tales may enjoy this retelling of Celtic saints' legends."
+ Christian Century 61:307 Mr 8 '44 30w

" 'Brother Petroc's Return' is one of my favorite books; yet much as I admire the author, S. M. C., her latest publication may be qualified as one for those who know Cornwall or who revel in legend. All local legends, glittering as they must be with symbolic truths and fascinating as they are to those who live among them, have certain geographical limitations." E. V. R. Wyatt
Commonweal 39:660 Ap 14 '44 280w

"It is the rare literary ability of this Dominican sister, the whimsical touch which she brings to these tales of the saints, dragons and pixies of Cornwall that gives to it a much wider appeal than to Catholics only."
+ Kirkus 12:66 F 1 '44 110w

"Rather tedious reading in spots but will be of use in Junior and Senior High School classes studying the early middle ages or early England." E. T. Dobbins
Library J 69:265 Mr 15 '44 100w

"Whoever this almost anonymous nun is, she has an overmodest wit and a charm that flickers through her prose like dancing feet. This is her fifth book, and with it, like Friar Peter, her present hero, she grows in skill and wisdom. . . 'Once in Cornwall' is a shy, modest book, but warm and good to think about in times like ours." Thomas Sugrue
+ N Y Times p14 Jl 16 '44 500w

Reviewed by Clare Godfrey
Weekly Book Review p19 My 14 '44 600w

Wis Lib Bul 40:83 Je '44

MARY THERESE, SISTER, originally FLORENCE MAE LENTFOEHR. Give Joan a sword [poems] pref. by Jacques Maritain. 98p $1.50 Macmillan 811 44-1114

Collection of poems by a religious of the Congregation of the Sisters of the Divine Saviour. "There are poems of the world's beauty, of the beauty created by man, poems of religious exaltation, poems of friendship, poems of love. And in the poem entitled 'Hummel Pilgrims,' inspired by a Berta Hummel painting, there is the happiest song of God's love for children to be found in a score of anthologies." (Weekly Book Review)

Booklist 40:386 Jl 15 '44

"Two symbols begin moving through Give Joan a Sword—the wing (of the dove of peace) and the sword (of the martyred Joan). With the paradox of these two, the poet could have done a great deal; but both fade out in a contemplation of the beauty of a mass, a painting of the Annunciation, or a statue of Our Lady. Through most of the book the non-Catholic reader is left outside, for there is no opportunity for participation. Religious poems need not be exclusive. . . Her poems are of childlike simplicity, sometimes touching on the sweetness of a hymn, sometimes cliché-ridden and sentimental." Mona Van Duyn
Poetry 64:172 Je '44 240w

"In these fifty new poems of Sister Therèse the emotions and inspiration occasionally soar above the craftsmanship. . . For all the delicacy of its workmanship, this is not the fragile, evanescent verse which is usually associated in our minds with the writings of mystics. Sister Therèse is a mystic in the sense that she perceives the being of God in all that touches life, but there is a robustness, a warmth in her mysticism which, so simply, so eloquently expressed, brings it within the range of common experience."
+ — Weekly Book Review p10 Ap 23 '44 230w

Wis Lib Bul 40:108 Jl '44

MASON, FRANK W., pseud. See Mason, V.

MASON, MIRIAM EVANGELINE. Little Jonathan; il. by George and Doris Hauman. 128p $1.25 Macmillan 44-7721

Story of an American boy, who lived in Indiana more than a hundred years ago. Jonathan was the youngest of twelve brothers and sisters and was bothered by the fact considerably, until an opportunity came to prove his ability. For boys and girls of six to eight.

Booklist 41:62 O 15 '44

Kirkus 12:341 Ag 1 '44 110w

Reviewed by E. T. Dobbins
Library J 69:816 O 1 '44 70w

Sat R of Lit 27:32 N 11 '44 20w

Springf'd Republican p4d O 1 '44 120w

"In happy bits of little-boy experience in a loving family in Mississippi steamboat days, a little child unconsciously practices reading. For this is a book that keeps this end in mind —and disguises it completely."
+ Weekly Book Review p36 N 12 '44 280w

Wis Lib Bul 40:149 N '44

MASON, MIRIAM EVANGELINE. Timothy has ideas; il. by Berta and Elmer Hader. 127p $1.50 Macmillan 43-16581

The story of a cocker spaniel puppy with ideas. Timothy went to live with seven-year-old Peter, and at first his ideas ran to chewing things up, chasing cats, and trying to keep up with Peter when he went roller skating, but in time Timothy's ideas became more sedate. For children seven to nine.

Booklist 40:256 Mr 15 '44

"Like this author's previous books, this one has large print, short sentences and a story which will make reading it a pleasure for any third-grade reader. The many illustrations by Berta and Elmer Hadër are just right." A. M. Anderson
+ Library J 68:1050 D 15 '43 80w

"Miriam Mason is a writer who knows children and who writes of animals with a gentle humor and a sympathetic understanding of all that a pet means in a child's life. . . The short sentences, large type and well-leaded pages make this an excellent book for beginners in reading. Engaging drawings by the Haders illustrate each happening in the story." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p16 Ja 23 '44 160w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p6 Ja 23 '44 180w

Wis Lib Bul 40:40 Mr '44

MASON, SARA ELIZABETH. House that hate built. 198p $2 Doubleday
44-6202

Detective story.

"A pleasant, easy-going mystery containing a pleasant amount of love interest. The only unpleasant note is an air of condescension, of superciliousness toward the colored servants which many may find offensive—especially so in these times." Elizabeth Bullock
+ — Book Week p7 S 3 '44 130w

"Best of the week."
+ Boston Globe p15 Ag 9 '44 60w

Kirkus 12:240 Je 1 '44 40w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p21 Jl 23 '44 90w

MASON, S. E.—Continued
"Average."
Sat R of Lit 28:40 Jl 22 '44 40w

"Miss Mason, whose first mystery promised great things, has lined up with those authors whose characters stare and stare, sometimes at one another and sometimes into space. This reduces her personae to a pulp, leaving the customer to get what he can out of the puzzle interest." Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p12 Jl 30 '44 150w

MASON, VAN WYCK (GEOFFREY COFFIN, FRANK W. MASON, WARD WEAVER, pseuds). Pilots, man your planes! il. by Frank Beaudouin. 213p $1.75 Lippincott
44-3752

Story of the American army air force in the present war, written for high school age. The action takes place on two fronts: the Pacific, and the Mediterranean. The central character is Captain Hugh Steel, who later becomes Major Steel.

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p12 Jl 27 '44 50w
Kirkus 12:197 Ap 15 '44 150w

"Boys and girls who ask for books about this war will not put this one down until the last page is read." M. G. D.
+ Sat R of Lit 27:22 Jl 8 '44 180w
Springf'd Republican p4d Je 25 '44 110w

MASSIE, CHRIS. Love letters. 289p $2.50 Random house
44-7922

A beautiful young English girl, victim of almost total amnesia, is the heroine of this psychological novel. A veteran of the first World war, himself much shaken by his experiences, is the hero. The novel shows the development of the man's character as he falls in love with the girl, and unravels the mystery of her past, in which a murder plays an important part.

Reviewed by A. C. Spectorsky
Book Week p3 N 5 '44 600w

"Psychological mystification whose chromatic skill in linking chaotic fates is hurt by a too sweetly solemn approach. . . [It] presents an exposition of abnormal psychology, in mannered elaboration of style that has reminiscent flavor of Poe and DeQuincy."
Kirkus 12:352 Ag 15 '44 170w

Reviewed by Marjorie Farber
New Repub 111:633 N 13 '44 140w

"All in all, this is a worthy book and one which raises many important questions—its only failure being the author's lack of a complete artistic consciousness, his tendency to drop into generalizing statements and needless repetitions as well as whole passages which do not contribute visibly to the movement of events. The achievement is still far above the average." Marguerite Young
+ — N Y Times p6 O 29 '44 440w

"[The story's] faintly embarrassing connotations aside, Mr. Massie has in the present book created a thoroughly convincing picture of a peculiar type of English World War I veteran, and this, in my opinion, is the chief merit of a novel of many virtues and diversified drawbacks. . . There are two pages in this book which need not blush in the small company of first-rate battlepieces in modern literature; the few paragraphs of a flashback in the narrative that conveys to the civilian reader much of the misery and the grandeur of man's fight both against man and against himself." Robert Pick
+ — Sat R of Lit 27:15 O 28 '44 650w

"Don't be put off by the fact that the narrator, Maurice Quinton, devotes some ninety pages to himself before starting the mystery. When it comes it's startling." Will Cuppy
+ Weekly Book Review p18 O 29 '44 200w

MATHER, KIRTLEY FLETCHER. Enough and to spare; Mother Earth can nourish every man in freedom. 186p maps $2 Harper
333 Natural resources 44-8520

"A practical postwar plan based on the theory that there is 'enough and to spare' of nature's resources to last as long as man shall need them, provided he uses them wisely and recognizes the need for interdependence. . . Only a democratic world organization he concludes can liberate man for his fullest enjoyment of freedom, an ideal which he believes will be reached as soon as each man understands its truth and works towards it." (Library J) Index.

Christian Century 61:1230 O 25 '44 300w

Reviewed by William Agar
Commonweal 41:42 O 27 '44 750w

Reviewed by Eugene Ayres
Crozer Q 22:72 Ja '45 800w

Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook
Current Hist 7:497 D '44 70w

"Simply and clearly written, this book should have the attention of all those giving any thought to the nature of the post-war world."
+ Kirkus 12:500 N 1 '44 180w

"Mather's survey of the world's resources is presented in entertaining language understandable to the layman. . . Recommended for libraries concerned with the postwar world." H. R. Forbes
+ Library J 69:602 Jl '44 120w
Management R 33:38 Ja '45 100w

"Although well documented with factual data, it is written for the general reader and sets forth its important scientific principles in clear, non-technical phraseology. The statistical data and more technical considerations are assembled in appendices which together with the pictographs and other illustrations admirably support the generalizations in the main text. . . [Mather's] book is a significant contribution to the political thought of the day—especially so because its ideas are established upon a firm foundation of knowledge about the resources of the earth and the geological history of mankind."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 15:4 O '44 420w

MATHIAS, FRED S. Amazing Bob Davis; his last vagabond journey; with il. by the author. 326p $3 Longmans
917.3 U.S.—Description and travel. Mexico—Description and travel. Davis, Robert Hobart 44-6575

Account of an automobile trip to Mexico, taken by the author and Bob Davis, in 1941. The trip is pictured day-by-day, as the New York businessman and the famous columnist of the New York Sun, drove thru the South, Southwest, and into Mexico, stopping to eat and visit with the many friends of Bob Davis.

"An amazingly entertaining book, one that will be widely read by Americans who love to travel and to eat." Eddie Doherty
+ Book Week p3 Ag 20 '44 270w

Reviewed by B. L. Conway
Cath World 160:277 D '44 180w
Christian Science Monitor p14 S 11 '44 250w
Kirkus 12:272 Je 15 '44 150w

"As another slant on phases of newspaper life, it has much interest. Altogether it is good reading anywhere and any time." M. C. Manley
+ Library J 69:649 Ag '44 70w

"It is an amiable, leisurely book, more like an expanded diary than anything else, without much to recommend it to those who had no acquaintance with the 'Bob Davis Reveals' columns. . . Mr Mathias's admiration for his companion, on what was for Mr Mathias a sentimental journey, shines from every page." R. F. H.
Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 15 '44 280w

"A pleasant travel book, full of anecdote, incident and reminiscence. Mr. Mathias also has written a brief but well turned chapter giving a biography of Mr. Davis. Unfortunately

Mr. Mathias is not the careful reporter that Mr. Davis was, and his amiable travelogue is marred by scores of minor inaccuracies."
+ — Weekly Book Review p16 S 17 '44 250w

MATTHIESSEN, FRANCIS OTTO. Henry James: the major phase. 190p $2.50 Oxford
813 James, Henry 44-47752

Critical examination of Henry James' last novels: The Ambassadors, The Wings of the Dove, The Golden Bowl, and the unfinished book, The Ivory Tower. In preparation for this study Mr Matthiessen has read thru Henry James' as yet unpublished Notebooks, covering the years 1878-1914.

Reviewed by Bergen Evans
Book Week p2 D 10 '44 400w

Booklist 41:136 Ja 1 '45

Boston Globe p30 N 29 '44 50w

"Important contribution to the fresh approach to Henry James."
+ Kirkus 12:544 D 1 '44 100w

"I cannot think that the kind of language with which Mr. Matthiessen concludes his fine book—and does something less than justice to it—is the right kind of language to use of James. Granted that James is, as Mr Matthiessen everywhere shows, the great novelist of a society at the sad end of a phase, still it is not with words like 'gradation' or 'rigorousness' or 'dogma' that one should describe his achievement, but rather with words expressive of his passionate sorrow, his tragic indignation and his loving kindness. But if Mr. Matthiessen's concluding words are in error one has been taught to see their mistake by almost everything that Mr. Matthiessen has previously said in his exposition of James." Lionel Trilling
+ N Y Times p3 N 26 '44 1700w

Reviewed by Edmund Wilson
New Yorker 20:94 N 25 '44 150w

"This is not a book for the general reader, nor for anyone far gone in idolatry of James. Still less is it calculated to please the votaries of Van Wyck Brooks, whose literary method in general and treatment of James in particular are anathema to Mr Matthiessen. Rather it is a book for the critic or historian of literature who wishes to know more about the detailed artistic procedure and achievement of a monumental figure in our national letters." Alexander Cowie.
Springf'd Republican p6 N 29 '44 650w

Reviewed by Clifton Fadiman
Weekly Book Review p1 Ja 14 '45 1000w

MATTIELLO, JOSEPH J., ed. Protective and decorative coatings; prepared by a staff of specialists; 5v; v. 4, Special studies. 419p il col pl $5 Wiley
667.6 Paint. Varnish and varnishing (41-19399)

"Chapter titles in the present volume of this important work include: The theoretical and practical aspects of wetting; The adhesion of dried coatings; Adsorption, permeability, water resistance, and structure of organic surface coatings; High-vacuum technology; Emulsions. Each chapter is written by one or more experts and has appended to it a bibliography of the pertinent literature." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 41:12 S '44

Reviewed by John Marshall
Chem & Eng N 22:1322 Ag 10 '44 350w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:205 Mr 1 '44 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:10 Ja '44

"The book is interestingly illustrated and well indexed. It is authoritative and up to date. The editor, moreover, has not allowed the present necessity for extraordinary conservation and the present demand for substitutes to warp his emphasis." T. L. Davis
+ N Y Times p18 Jl 23 '44 100w

MAUGHAM, WILLIAM SOMERSET. Razor's edge. 343p $2.75 Doubleday
44-40090

Character study of a young American, a flyer in World war I, who returns to his home in Chicago in 1919, vaguely conscious that he is missing something. To the horror of the girl who wants to marry him, he will not take a job; he wants to "loaf." He goes to Paris and then to India in search of his ideal, and finds a certain measure of personal peace, but succeeds in making life even more difficult for those who have tried to make him lead a conventional life.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks
Atlantic 173:127 My '44 550w

"Maugham, with a skill which is almost obscenely spectacular, twists [the story's] tail and puts it through its paces with a flick of the wrist. He tells the story in the first person, making us privy to his expensive and delightful peregrinations about the globe; he writes of whatever interests him at the moment, making long and always intriguing excursions into philosophy and the arts, he pauses to dissect and pin out for all to see one character after another. His tone throughout is mildly pontifical and rather acid, except in his descriptions of Larry, which are what Thomas Mann's character in 'Death in Venice' might have written about the beautiful boy with the unpronounceable name." A. C. Spectorsky
— Book Week p4 Ap 23 '44 1100w

Booklist 40:305 My 1 '44

Reviewed by Dorothy Hillyer
Boston Globe p17 My 3 '44 300w

Cath World 159:284 Je '44 180w

Christian Science Monitor p10 My 13 '44 500w

"In his latest novel Mr. Maugham gives no evidence that the degenerative process which set in after he had finished 'Of Human Bondage' has ceased. 'The Razor's Edge' in its total effect is unbelievably cheap and trifling. . . The one redeeming thing about the book is that Maugham's knack of sparkling characterization is still occasionally in evidence, particularly when he is dealing with Elliott Templeton, the expatriate American uncle of Larry's once betrothed." H. L. Binsse
— + Commonweal 40:44 Ap 28 '44 300w

"One of the most challenging books Somerset Maugham has given us. Those who look to him for a colorful, romantic story will find this slow-paced at the start; but in the final analysis even they will find that he has told a good story—more than one, in fact, and that he has given them something else as well."
+ Kirkus 12:77 F 15 '44 260w

"This is a cynical sophisticated, typical Maugham story and is far from required reading these days when time and paper are precious." K. T. Willis
— Library J 69:354 Ap 15 '44 60w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott
Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 21 '44 350w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling
Nation 158:547 My 6 '44 200w

"The book is to be remembered chiefly for its portrait of an elderly American snob. . . His principal purpose in life is giving or being invited to brilliant parties; his principal occupation is gossip. He is a comic and even a repulsive figure; yet Maugham makes him likable in a curious way, not only for his loyalty to his sister's family, but also for his innocence and single-mindedness in pursuit of trivialities." Malcolm Cowley
New Repub 110:609 My 1 '44 1100w

"This is Mr. Maugham's best novel since Cakes and Ale, and, appearing at a time when the decline in literary quality is fairly matched by the decline in literary taste, it breathes the atmosphere of another world." Cyril Connolly
+ New Statesman & Nation 28:140 Ag 26 '44 1440w

"The story is carried forward with Maugham's usual deftness and ingenuity of manipulation. Everything has been provided for from the start: no loose ends are left trailing. In some points the technique is tiresome and outmoded—the set elaborate descriptions of persons and places, nothing left to the imagination, and the stark materiality of every circumstance, a heritage from the French realists of the age of positivism. The writing is direct and idiomatic, without affectation or 'impressionism' and almost without flavor." J. W. Beach

MAUGHAM, W. S.—Continued

+ — N Y Times p3 Ap 23 '44 900w

"Everything is so neatly fitted together, and the author writes with such ease, that the reader is almost lulled into forgetting that Mr. Maugham, by even very lax critical standards, has turned out an inferior job—one that suggests that if he keeps on writing with his tongue in his cheek, it may well become permanently stuck there."

— + New Yorker 20:89 Ap 22 '44 180w

"I believe that 'The Razor's Edge' will be enthusiastically and politely received. No one else could have written it except Mr. Maugham with that superb and contemptuous arrogance that is displayed by the skilled matador. He has, this devout admirer of his believes, put into this novel more than he cared to say today. In his next book is it too much to ask that he will use all of his knowledge of men and women and of Europe and of the white empires he has seen decay and will tell us admiring Americans in what he thinks we may believe and in what we may hope?" Harrison Smith

+ Sat R of Lit 27:7 Ap 22 '44 1750w

"This solid, skilful, accurately calculated book will not only give pleasure and food for reflection to a great number of people, but must also re-stir critical consideration of a formidable talent, a formidable sum of talents." Kate O'Brien

+ — Spec 173:64 Jl 21 '44 650w

"The characters of the novel are colorful and perhaps exaggerated. The dialogue is smart and fashionable—even the long, sermonizing speech of Larry's in the next to the last chapter. The writing is highly polished and skillful. Even so, notwithstanding advertisements to the contrary, it does not 'stand with "Of Human Bondage" as one of the great English novels of our time.' It does however read as well as 'Theatre.' " Lee Varley

+ — Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 23 '44 750w

Time 43:99 Ap 24 '44 800w

"Mr. Maugham's new novel is extremely interesting and a pleasure to read."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p341 Jl 15 '44 1000w

"Reading W. Somerset Maugham's new novel is like greeting an old friend who has regained his health after a long illness. In 'The Razor's Edge,' Mr. Maugham is himself again, the man who can tell a story that strikes a deep chord of feeling because it is wrung out of his own depths, who writes with personal emotion which carries the art of impersonal detachment, who is warmly sympathetic toward human divagations and sardonically cynical of human pretensions. It is Maugham again with the sense of theater which can crystallize a character or a mood in a few lines of setting and dialogue." Rose Feld

+ Weekly Book Review p2 Ap 23 '44 900w

"Mr. Maugham has written a novel that is much superior to its two or three immediate predecessors on his list, but one that still remains a disappointment." Orville Prescott

— + Yale R n s 33:765 summer '44 270w

MAURIAC, FRANCOIS. Eucharist; the mystery of Holy Thursday; tr. by Marie-Louise Dufrenoy; with an introd. by Thomas F. Burke. 75p $1.50 Longmans

265.3 Roman Catholic church—Eucharist. Maundy Thursday 44-3903

"Here are seventy-five pages, thirteen short chapters, devoted to various aspects and doctrines of the Holy Eucharist and tied together by their reference to the events of Holy Thursday. The author alludes to his first impressions of the Day, as he lived through it as a child, in Bordeaux. He was impressed by the visits to many churches, the lavish embellishment of the altars of repose, and the devotion of the multitudes, but his boyish soul saw through the trappings to the reality; with matured conviction he is able to write: 'The Eucharist is what is most real in the world.' " Commonweal

---

"When Mauriac writes of spiritual things it seems that he sees more and sees more deeply than other people. As a result, this little book about the mystery of Holy Thursday is fraught with beauty and inner vision. . . The style is simple and lucid, and the translation is smooth and expert."

+ Cath World 159:93 Ap '44 200w

"A series of devotional reflections, which often become veiled theological arguments, by a highly regarded French Roman Catholic writer. The argumentative portions are blurred with what most Protestant and non-Roman Catholic readers will consider a fog of pious words, to which an excellent literary style contributes a certain charm and the genuinely devout spirit disarms criticism, as it is doubtless intended to do."

+ — Christian Century 61:595 My 10 '44 70w

"This little book has a delectable sweetness distilled from the soul of a man who, while writing like a poet, knows the hard and unlovely facets of the modern world." Richard Flower

+ Commonweal 39:572 Mr 24 '44 350w

"It is beautifully written and translated from the French and should be treasured by all faithful Catholics. The author states, however, that in writing he had been thinking of 'the non-Christian reader, of the hostile or indifferent man, who, perhaps, will thumb this little book'. In that case, the author apparently is unaware of how impenetrable a mystery the Catholic conception of the Eucharist appears to be even to a non-Catholic, to say nothing of a non-Christian. Even beautiful writing by a well known author cannot make a non-Catholic see the Eucharist through Catholic eyes. Recommended largely for Catholic readers and for others who seek to understand the Catholic faith."

+ — Kirkus 12:141 Mr 15 '44 170w

MAURICE, SIR FREDERICK BARTON. Armistices of 1918; issued under the auspices of the Royal inst. of int. affairs. 104p $2 (7s 6d) Oxford

940.439 European war, 1914-1918—Armistices A43-2791

"This documented study untangles the steps by which the armistices were negotiated with the Central Powers in 1918. There is also a chapter on the interval between the armistices and the peace treaties, as well as documentary appendices." Foreign Affairs

---

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:4 Ja '44 40w

Reviewed by J. P. Mayer
New Statesman & Nation 25:357 My 29 '43 420w

Reviewed by Simon Harcourt-Smith
Spec 170:504 My 28 '43 750w

"Sir Frederick Maurice has done an inestimable service in compiling a concise factual narrative—dramatic for all its documentation—of how the several armistices of the Four Years War came about. Few fictions have served the ends of evil so efficiently and direly as the German 'stab-in-the-back' explanation of defeat in the field has. In 'The Armistices of 1918' Sir Frederick exposes the utter hollowness and shamelessness of the myth."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p169 Ap 10 '43 1350w

MAUROIS, ANDRE. Miracle of America; tr. from the French by Denver and Jane Lindley. 428p il maps $3.50 Harper

973 U.S.—History 44-5532

"A satisfying picture of the development of the United States in which the presidents stand out with definite individuality and the characteristics of the different eras are clarified by the dispassionate but sympathetic understanding of a European." Library J

"He has not assembled our history by stringing into prose the sum of categorized file cards, as did Curti; he does not seek the unusual or bizarre, however remarkable, as does Woodward; nor is he attempting to establish tracts of enduring interpretation as do the Beards. He is just Maurois, without pretense, voicing admiration for a country that, unlike his own, was constructed to survive Hitler without essentially changing its form. He has sought the reasons for this survival and found them. That is excuse enough for history." Ralph Peterson

+ Book Week p1 Je 18 '44 1700w

Booklist 40:374 Jl 1 '44

Reviewed by L. M. Lyons

Boston Globe p19 Jl 5 '44 550w

Current Hist 7:134 Ag '44 70w

"Neither in content nor manner is [this book] up to the standard Maurois set in its predecessor, Miracle of England. Parts of it are distinctly—and confessedly—derivative, based not on primary but secondary sources, but nonetheless revealing wide knowledge and pervading affection and interest. The first part is dull reading. . . I found the most interesting part of the book that dealing with the part taken by the French not in Colonial but in Revolutionary America—and the effect of that Revolution on susbequent European history, and almost immediately on the history of his own country."

+ — Kirkus 12:156 Ap 1 '44 260w

"Of great interest and widespread in its appeal at this time." M. C. Manley

+ Library J 69:502 Je 1 '44 70w

Reviewed by Albert Guerard

Nation 159:328 S 16 '44 750w

"Except for a few slips which a careful editor could have prevented, it might have been written by an American in English for Americans. In that case it would have been considered a pretty good book—readable, comprehensive, pleasantly styled, but conspicuous only by its newness among a great many one-volume American histories. The real miracle is that M. Maurois has translated himself, for the moment, into a competent Mr. Maurois who resembles a lot of other American historians." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p5 Je 18 '44 900w

Reviewed by George Genzmer

Sat R of Lit 27:15 Jl 1 '44 1050w

"Mr. André Maurois has written four-fifths of a good book; and the slump into mediocrity of the remaining fifth is perhaps more interesting than the brilliant major portion. . . From [1492] through the administration of Grover Cleveland, his book is as sound as can be expected of any work of such small compass and at least five times as readable as most one-volume histories. There are occasional errors but they are usually trifling. . . More serious are the imputations (p 148) that the Constitution granted the Supreme Court interpretative power, the statement (p. 165) that Washington opposed a third term as a matter of principle, and (p. 205) that Jackson opposed the Bank of the United States even before he took office as President; but even these are by no means unforgivable. Such blemishes sink into insignificance when one sets over against them Maurois's capacity to turn on incisive phrase and his well-nigh infallible ability to choose the anecdote or the saying that illuminates a character or a situation. Here are 350 pages of American history accurate in the main, always clear and frequently sparkling. It is a triumph of no small magnitude." G. W. Johnson

+ — Weekly Book Review p5 Je 25 '44 1250w

Wis Lib Bul 40:128 O '44

MAUROIS, ANDRE. Seven faces of love. 243p $2.75 Didier pubs

843.09 French fiction—History and criticism. Women in literature and art. Love 44-576

"M. Maurois has taken romantic love at something not too much less than its face value and put together a small volume on the phenomenon as it is described by seven French novelists from Madame de LaFayette to Marcel Proust. . . The five writers who come between the two already mentioned are Rousseau, Choderlos de Laclos, Stendhal, Balzac and Flaubert. In the treatment of each M. Maurois summarizes the plot of at least one novel and points out both the differences and the similarities between the various conceptions of love with a capital L." Weekly Book Review

"Whatever issue the individual reader may take with Maurois, 'Seven Faces of Love,' ably translated by Chevalier, is entertaining and stimulating. Its pace is leisurely, its insight typically Gallic, with its occasional profundity hidden beneath Maurois' light manner. Indeed, 'Seven Faces of Love' may send many a reader all the way back to Mme. de La Fayette, but if it sends only a handful back to Proust, it will have demonstrated its excuse for being." August Derleth

+ Book Week p4 F 6 '44 550w

"Great novels are deftly summarized in this excellent little textbook. Biographical elements appear without pedantic obtrusiveness. The method of presentation and the style are models of never-failing smoothness and elegance. No wonder a disciple of Anatole France —reviewing the many volumes of André Maurois' work 'with irony and pity'—could call it 'the Galeries Lafayette of French literature.' " Albert Guerard

+ N Y Times p3 Ja 30 '44 1000w

Reviewed by S. L. McGee

Sat R of Lit 27:31 F 12 '44 650w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 30 '44 500w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch

Weekly Book Review p2 Ja 30 '44 1200w

MAY, GEORGE OLIVER. Financial accounting; a distillation of experience. 274p $3 Macmillan

657 Accounting 43-22873

"Limited to discussion of accounting that leads to presentation of statements for guidance of directors, stockholders, grantors of credit and others, the book considers historically and critically the concepts and practices relating to various items in balance sheet and income account. Also shows background of change in whole nature of financial reporting due to transformation of the corporation, increased importance of the investor, volume of security transactions, and introduction of broader concepts of public interest in governmental regulation." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 40:336 Je 1 '44

"The book is a great deal more than a book on accounting—it is a basic philosophy of finance in which accounting is skillfully integrated with economics, law, taxation, price regulation and other phases of the economy. Mr. May is endowed with an analytical mind, a catholic curiosity, an encyclopedic memory and extraordinary powers of expression." J. L. Dohr

+ Columbia Law R 44:467 My '44 550w

"Treatment of principles and rules of accounting shows rich experience of author. Recommended for business and economics libraries." Walter Hausdorfer

+ Library J 68:844 O 15 '43 110w

MAYNARD, HAROLD BRIGHT, and STEGEMERTEN, GUSTAVE JAMES. Guide to methods improvement. 85p $1 McGraw

658.01 Factory management 44-2534

"This book shows how, by systematic adoption of the questioning attitude—by saying 'Why?' to every operational element in the shop—many improvements in production and methods may be made. It indicates the 10 points of opportunity for operational improvement, gives over 400 questions that may be applied to these points, and cites examples of their use and the benefits derived in actual situations." (Management R) Index.

Booklist 40:314 My 15 '44

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 69:205 Mr 1 '44 30w

MAYNARD, H. B.—Continued
"Recommended to methods engineers, foremen, and workmen who wish to make their jobs easier and more productive."
+ Management R 33:107 Mr '44 70w

MAYNARD, SARAH KATHERINE (CASEY) (MRS THEODORE MAYNARD). Rose of America; il. by Richard Bennett. 143p $2 Sheed

Rose of Lima, Saint—Juvenile literature
43-16161

Story of St Rose of Lima, the first American to be canonized, told for older girls.

Cath World 158:318 D '43 70w
Kirkus 11:531 D 1 '43 80w
Wis Lib Bul 40:41 Mr '44

MAYNARD, THEODORE. Orestes Brownson: Yankee, radical, Catholic. 456p $3 Macmillan

B or 92 Brownson, Orestes Augustus
43-17961

Biography of an American philosopher and author. He was born in 1803 in Stockbridge, Vermont, and most of his life was spent in a continual search for truth, especially in the matter of religion. He was a Presbyterian, a Universalist, an independent, a Unitarian minister, and finally became a Roman Catholic. "His interest during the thirties and early forties in Transcendentalism and Brook Farm, his liberal and socialistic projects, his original and controversial and often farsighted thoughts on social and political issues, his biting and vigorous expository style in the magazines he guided—these made his name, as time went on, a by-word for everything that smacked of 'radicalism.'" (Sat R of Lit) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Tremaine McDowell
Am Hist R 49:796 Jl '44 320w

"Maynard has given careful study to Brownson's writings, especially those of the period after his conversion, and has made use of the extensive collection of Brownson papers at the University of Notre Dame. His biography is most valuable in its presentation of Brownson's later career and of his personal and theological controversies with other Catholics. Maynard has given less thorough attention to Brownson's earlier development than did Arthur M. Schlesinger Jr. in his 'Orestes A. Brownson: A Pilgrim's Progress', and his portrayal of Brownson as a person, a tempestuous, courageous, provocative and attractive human being, seems to me less vivid and less substantial than that given us by Doran Whalen in 'Granite for God's House.'" J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p4 Ja 9 '44 250w

"Mr. Maynard does not belong to the objective school of historians, he is rather a literary biographer. He writes an essay on Brownson, interpretative and subjective. He argues with him and talks back to him, and to Brownson's other biographers as well. This makes for a very readable type of book. At the same time, with access to original documents which earlier biographers did not have, or did not use, he has been able to correct several previous errors and to shed new light on disputed passages in his subject's life." Wilfrid Parsons
+ Cath World 159:85 Ap '44 1100w

"Free-lance journalist Maynard has written another book in the style of his The Story of American Catholicism—challenging, startling, disturbing, daring, disarming, clever, inimitable and grand as propaganda for his church." C. H. Moehlman
+ Christian Century 61:696 Je 7 '44 1050w

"This is a remarkable portrait of a remarkable man." M. S. Enslin
+ Crozer Q 22:92 Ja '45 400w
Library J 69:646 Ag '44 20w

"The occasional carelessness of detail should not discourage attention to Maynard's book, which, especially in the discussion of the Catholic years, is a keen and stimulating study of a keen and stimulating man." A. M. Schlesinger, Jr.
+ — New Eng Q 17:128 Mr '44 1000w

Reviewed by G. N. Shuster
N Y Times p3 F 20 '44 550w

"This life is written by one who, like Brownson, was a convert to Catholicism, and has therefore certain advantages of insight. One is nevertheless thrown badly off balance in attempting to review a biography wherein the author dismisses the first forty years of his subject's life—enormously busy and important ones—in the first quarter of his book, having declared in the foreword that they are interesting 'only for a false start' before the final conversion. But such obvious limitations being taken for granted, there is much in the volume that is fresh and useful." T. H. Johnson
+ — Sat R of Lit 27:6 Ja 29 '44 1100w

"An ably written, scholarly and badly needed biography." Cyril Clemens
+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 6 '44 750w

"As is usual in anything he writes, Mr. Maynard has given us the delight of a pleasing prose and has illuminated much of it with his delicate wit. However, we might wish that he had adhered to his original intention of simply giving us a well rounded portrait of an American whose social thinking had a concreteness and practicality far in advance of his time. Brownson will continue to be a study for the theologians. We will one day have a well rounded portrait of him." Clare Godfrey
+ — Weekly Book Review p10 F 13 '44 800w
Wis Lib Bul 40:37 Mr '44

MAYORGA, MRS MARGARET (GARDNER), ed. Best one-act plays of 1943. (V7) 231p $2.50 Dodd

812.08 Dramas—Collections (38-8006)

Contents: Letter to Jackie, by Maxwell Anderson; God and Texas, by Robert Ardrey; Quiet—facing the park, by J. C. Holm; A tribute to gallantry, by Ben Hecht; Where e'er we go, by J. B. O'Dea; Mid-passage, by Arnold Sundgaard; The death of Aunt Aggie, by Ranald MacDougall; Murder is fun! by Catherine Blankenship; They asked for it, by Del Smith; Journey for an unknown soldier, by Doris Frankel; The bridegroom waits, by Marrijane and Joseph Hayes. Contains a list of selected plays of the year and other bibliographies of one-act plays and new collections of one-act plays.

Reviewed by H. T. Murdock
Book Week p10 Ap 23 '44 80w
Booklist 40:300 My 1 '44

"The seventh volume of this excellent series is by far the best to date. . . Recommended."
+ Library J 69:263 Mr 15 '44 60w

"This reviewer, who plays an active part in the little theater movement, was frankly disappointed in the plays as a whole. They are not applicable to the needs of the average Little theater. The text of the plays is too morbid for these times, the settings too impractical and costly. The plays make for interesting reading, but let's have some plays which we can do, for a change." A. K. Gary
— Springf'd Republican p6 S 29 '44 300w
Theatre Arts 28:382 Je '44 300w

"Among the better known contributors are Robert Ardrey, Ben Hecht and Maxwell Anderson. The book is a boon to the amateur theater." W. P. Eaton
+ Weekly Book Review p17 Ap 30 '44 80w

MAYORGA, MRS MARGARET (GARDNER), ed. Plays of democracy. 310p $2.50 Dodd

812.08 Dramas—Collections 44-1360

An anthology of short plays suitable for high school and junior college students. Among the authors included are: Alfred Kreymborg; Fred Eastman; Paul Green; Carl Carmer; Doris Halman; and Betty Smith.

Booklist 40:265 Ap 1 '44
Library J 69:263 Mr 15 '44 50w
Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
Weekly Book Review p43 N 12 '44 140w
Wis Lib Bul 40:108 Jl '44

MAYORGA, MRS MARGARET (GARDNER), ed. World's a stage; short plays for juniors. 272p $2 French

812.08 Children's plays 44-2132

Contents: A Greek loses his dog, by T. and I. Broadhurst; The chess party, by Pauline Benton; Dear little Lord Jesus, by Iva Broadhurst; Caesar's spirit, by William Shakespeare; Little Lincoln, by C. B. Chorpenning; Oregon for America, by Betty Smith; Eighteen ninety, by Robert Wilson; Jinsey, by Margaret Bland; Old King Solomon, by Weldon Stone; Never mind the baby, by Howard Buermann; Lost years, by Marcus Bach; The sound-effects man, by Alice Gerstenberg.

Booklist 40:256 Mr 15 '44

Bookmark 5:16 Ag '44

Library J 69:264 Mr 15 '44 40w

"This collection should prove very helpful to schools and dramatic clubs." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 5 '44 160w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p5 Ap 2 '44 200w

MEAD, JAMES MICHAEL. Tell the folks back home. 298p $3 Appleton-Century

940.548173 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American. World war, 1939—U.S. 44-3953

In the summer of 1943 five United States senators—Lodge of Massachusetts, Chandler of Kentucky, Russell of Georgia, Brewster of Maine, and Mead of New York, visited the battlefronts of a world at war. This report in diary form gives the New York senator's reactions to what they saw on that strenuous two months' trip. Index.

"Senator Mead says that he wrote the book 'because I want to share as widely as I can the great experience of this trip around a war-torn world.' This is all he set out to do. This he has done, and his book should give quiet amusement and satisfaction to thousands who are weary of reading the more complex, erudite theories of writers who think it their duty to arrange a postwar world all by themselves. This isn't a great book, but it's a 'nice' book written by an average American who enjoyed his trip abroad very much but who was very glad to get home again, and who is now quite willing to tell the neighbors all about it." Quentin Reynolds

+ Book Week p1 My 7 '44 900w

Booklist 40:339 Je 1 '44

Reviewed by Dorothy Hillyer

Boston Globe p19 My 17 '44 550w

Foreign Affairs 23:8 O '44 40w

Kirkus 12:186 Ap 15 '44 130w

"Author is a New Deal Democrat, just in his criticisms, intelligent in his conclusions. Recommended." Thelma Brackett

+ Library J 69:402 My 1 '44 110w

"There are patches in Senator Mead's book which contain fresh, interesting information—notably his vivid account of the famine conditions in Calcutta. On the whole, however, his work can be recommended most enthusiastically to those who have read no other war book, and then only if the prospective readers don't mind the Senator's style of dictation, which betrays his fondness for Time." Marcus Duffield

— + Nation 158:600 My 20 '44 330w

"Senator Mead's book [is] palatable to many to whom his criticism would be so many red rags. It is sentimental, occasionally acrimonious, but never dull." F. S. Adams

+ — N Y Times p3 My 14 '44 650w

"The humors of the expedition, and of the contact of thousands of American G.I.'s with the fantastic environments to which war has carried them are by no means slighted. If there is a certain 'Innocents Abroad' flavor about this phase of the book, there is even greater evidence of a sincere desire on the part of Senator Mead to understand the peoples whom he visited and their problems. As a result he has produced a book which is informative and heartening." H. W. Baehr

+ Weekly Book Review p10 My 21 '44 400w

Wis Lib Bul 40:128 O '44

MEADER, STEPHEN WARREN. Long trains roll; il. by Edward Shenton. 259p $2 Harcourt 44-40175

Railroad and adventure story for boys of grades seven to nine. Seventeen-year-old Randy MacDougal, youngest member of a railroad family, passes his examinations for fireman, and does a fine job, even to discovering a plot to sabotage war transportation.

Booklist 41:44 O 1 '44

"All boys will enjoy the story as much as any of the author's many previous books."

+ Boston Globe p36 N 29 '44 40w

Horn Bk 20:486 N '44 80w

"Good adventure yarn."

+ Kirkus 12:404 S 1 '44 110w

"The story has colorful background and good action, but lacks the convincingness of Mr. Meader's earlier books. Since it is timely and offers a new theme in war stories, it should be useful with boys twelve and up." M. M. Clark

+ — Library J 69:887 O 15 '44 50w

"Mr. Meader has succeeded not only in telling a good story but in conveying the stirring quality of railroads and railroading, that quality which, as he says, 'makes every man and boy breathe quicker at the sight and sound of a big locomotive storming down the rails.'" A. T. E.

+ N Y Times p14 N 12 '44 150w

"A well-written thriller for boys of from ten to fourteen, with the added interest of an inside picture of American railroading."

+ New Yorker 20:90 D 16 '44 50w

Reviewed by Muriel Gilbert

Sat R of Lit 27:34 D 9 '44 140w

Springf'd Republican p4d O 8 '44 80w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p5 D 24 '44 280w

MEADOWCROFT, MRS ENID (LAMONTE). Silver for General Washington; a story of Valley Forge; il. by Sandra James. 138p $2 Crowell 44-4499

The hero is a brave boy, Gilbert Emmet, sent by his father to live with an aunt in Valley Forge, while the elder Emmet takes a trip abroad to get money for the Continental army. When the terrible winter of 1777 comes Gilbert does his bit and gets a large sum of money for General Washington. For ages eleven and twelve. Short bibliography.

"Enid La Monte Meadowcroft builds her books on a solid historical foundation and 'Silver for General Washington' makes a grand story for boys and girls from 8 to 12." P. A. Whitney

+ Book Week p7 Ag 20 '44 160w

Booklist 40:393 Jl 15 '44

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p8 Jl 31 '44 150w

"A gallant story for the middle-age group." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 20:288 Jl '44 100w

"A good plot, nicely paced, and a dramatic picture of Washington and his starving, shoeless army."

+ Kirkus 12:118 Mr 1 '44 110w

"A vivid and realistic picture of one phase of the American Revolution, skillfully interwoven with an exciting plot. Of especial significance at this time as a well-written story portraying a convincing picture of some of the sacrifices that have gone into the making of America." Marian Herr

+ Library J 69:464 My 15 '44 120w

MEADOWCROFT, ENID—Continued
"The courage and sheer determination of the soldiers, the good humor with which they accepted hardships, the readiness of most of the townsfolk to cooperate and to stint themselves in order that the troops might have more, the danger that lay in the disunity and indifference of a few—all this makes an impressive picture. This is an American story that boys and girls from 9 to 12 will enjoy." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p25 Ag 20 '44 160w

New Yorker 20:57 Jl 8 '44 50w

Springf'd Republican p4d Je 25 '44 110w

MEANS, MRS FLORENCE (CRANNELL). Peter of the mesa; il. by Janet Smalley. 120p $1; pa 60c Friendship press 44-5275

"A children's book about American Indians, especially Hopi and Navajo. The point is to show the contacts of white teachers, doctors and nurses with them. There is a Junior Teacher's Guide, by Frances Dunlap Heron, to go with it." Christian Century

Christian Century 61:726 Je 14 '44 30w

Springf'd Republican p4d Je 25 '44 140w

MEARS, ELIOT GRINNELL. Pacific ocean handbook. 192p il maps pa $1 J. L. Delkin, box 55, Stanford University, Calif.

551.465 Pacific ocean 44-3710

"Professor Mears has provided us with [a handbook] of the physical geography of the Pacific Ocean, well illustrated with some 60 maps. After a short discussion of the main geological features of the ocean floor and mountain rim of the Pacific, the author deals with the American and Asiatic sides of the ocean, particularly with the main ports. He expands his observations on the Asiatic side to cover briefly the economy of the various countries, and the importance of the hinterland of the various ports. Another chapter is devoted to Oceania, the island world of the Pacific, in which the author also includes Australia and New Zealand. There follow chapters on such general features as volcanoes and earthquakes, tides and tidal waves, ocean currents, winds, storms, temperature, precipitation, fog and visibility, navigation sea water, and geomagnetism." Pacific Affairs

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:666 Jl '44 10w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:606 Jl '44 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:47 Jl '44

"An extremely useful pocket handbook. . . The reviewer has a few critical remarks. The value of some of the maps has been impaired because too great a reduction has made them very difficult to read—and in some cases unreadable. The author has used the Dutch spelling of such place names as Soenda and Soerabaya." K. J. Pelzer

+ — Pacific Affairs 17:368 S '44 210w

School & Society 60:96 Ag 5 '44 20w

MEARS, FREDERICK. Carrier combat. 156p $2 Doubleday

940.544 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American. World war, 1939—Aerial operations 44-450

First-hand account of our fliers' activities in the South Pacific, during the battle of Midway, the occupation of the Solomons, and the battle of Stewart Island. The author was a navy flier who was killed in action in June, 1943.

Booklist 40:196 F 1 '44

Reviewed by F. S. Adams
N Y Times p12 Ja 16 '44 480w

"The author writes better-than-average journalism and has a good eye for detail, but his attempt to weave the adventures of the members of his squadron into an integrated picture of group experience doesn't quite come off."

+ — New Yorker 19:67 Ja 8 '44 90w

"Buoyant good spirits pervade this book—torpedo pilots evidently take hard drinking, hard fighting and hard dying in a rather jaunty stride." Herbert Kupferberg

+ Weekly Book Review p23 Ja 23 '44 250w

MEDARY, MARJORIE. Buckeye boy; decorations by James MacDonald. 265p $2.25 Longmans 44-7722

Tom Kenyon, orphaned son of an itinerant printer, living with a stingy uncle, decided to run away and work on the Ohio and Erie canal. But canaling days were almost over, so Tom hired out as apprentice on an Ohio paper, The Western Reserve Gazette. Little by little he learned his trade, until he finally turned westward to become a journeyman printer. For older boys and girls. Bibliography

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p24 N 12 '44 320w

Booklist 41:62 O 15 '44

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p4 D 14 '44 140w

"A straightforward picture of the times and of a boy who made good."

+ Horn Bk 20:487 N '44 90w

"Marjorie Medary is uneven. This is a 'down' for her—uninspired, lacking that final umph, thin plot, mild adventures and an empty ending. . . [There are] interesting bits of canal life, some good gang fights, a glimpse into the printing and politics of the day. But not good enough to hold it together as a top-drawer story."

— + Kirkus 12:299 Jl 1 '44 170w

"Recommended." A. M. Wetherell

+ Library J 69:1051 D 1 '44 70w

"A quietly sustained drive and an excellently drawn background make this unusual story an absorbing one for older readers." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p15 S 24 '44 160w

"Clearer than any 'vocational' story, this vivid and well written tale of an Ohio boy in the middle of the last century reveals the struggle and the growth of youth. . . There are many characters in this absorbing story of American life. Marjorie Medary has drawn on memories of her grandfather and on wide research for the background of her story. It is a story of adventure and of growth." B. W. Shaffer

+ Sat R of Lit 27:34 D 9 '44 250w

"Good characterization with excellent historical background and exciting scenes."

+ School & Society 60:192 S 16 '44 30w

Social Studies 35:384 D '44 20w

Springf'd Republican p4d O 29 '44 110w

MEESE, MRS MILDRED (FOULKE). Mary Carstens, M.D; her interne year at Victory hospital; il. by Sandra James. 313p $2 Bobbs
43-14821

Fourth book in a series which began with The Wagon to the Star (Book Review Digest, 1939). It traces the career of Mary Carstens from her orphanage home, thru her nine years of training to become a doctor. In the present volume Mary's ambition is realized and she has won her M.D. The book closes with her marriage. For older girls.

Booklist 40:200 F 1 '44

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p8 N 21 '43 180w

MEHRING, WALTER. No road back; poems; trs. from the German by S. A. DeWitt; il. by George Grosz. 163p $2 Curl 831 44-7067

"Twenty-five of Mehring's books were banned in Germany and ten were among those 'officially burned' by the Nazis before the University of Berlin. In the present volume is reprinted the allegorical poem entitled 'The Saga of the Giant Crab' in which Mehring, a German by birth, courageously set down his fears for the future of the individual in Europe as well as for civilization itself if ever the 'giant crab' broke loose. The poem was first printed in Nazi Germany in 1933 in the liberal magazine Weltbuehne, edited by Carl von Ossietzky. . . Homage is paid to Ossietzky's memory in poem number X of Mehring's 'Odyssey Out of Midnight,' the thousand-line epic which is printed in its entirety in 'No Road Back.' " N Y Times

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Book Week p2 S 3 '44 400w

Kirkus 12:366 Ag 15 '44 110w

"Except for the 'Collected Poems' of the Prague-born Austrian, Franz Werfel, 'No Road Back' is the most important volume of German verse written in exile. And as most German poets of rank left the Third Reich and those who stayed have become mute or obtuse, that is to say the best German book of poetry in a decade." Hermann Kesten
+ Nation 159:474 O 21 '44 1500w

"There is certainly much to be said for the belief that a man must experience physical as well as spiritual ordeals before it is possible for him to become a creator in the highest and purest sense of the word. But however true or untrue a generality that may be, let it be stated here, and with rejoicing, that no matter how much empty, formless and pretentious writing has been and will be offered us as poetry in the year 1944, the publication of Walter Mehring's poems assures us that at least one volume of authentic and important poetry has appeared." Kay Boyle
+ N Y Times p4 S 3 '44 650w

New Yorker 20:79 S 30 '44 60w

MELANCON, ALEX. Carl. 219p $2 Macmillan
44-9337

Carl is a seven-year-old who lives in Louisiana. Some time ago he decided to adopt a Soldier Boy, and picked out the author of this book, who was in the South Pacific at the time. The book is made up of stories about Carl, based on his letters to Soldier Boy, and the more detailed letters which his mother sent, plus Soldier Boy's own ideas about Carl, his pranks, and his family.

"The idea had possibilities, and I do not doubt that Carl is a good, lovable and faithfully devoted small boy. But any resemblance this book may have either to literature or childhood is purely coincidental." Sterling North
Book Week p29 N 12 '44 130w

Booklist 41:109 D 1 '44

Kirkus 12:411 S 15 '44 120w

"Carl (and at times, one suspects, Private Mélançon) is never at a loss for new adventures. The list is varied and delightful. And if occasionally they seem a little far-fetched . . . they are usually just the kind of escapades that an imaginative small boy tumbles into. They are presented with gentle humor and intuitive understanding of children, and anyone who likes small boys, if only at a distance, will find Carl delightful." Jennings Rice
+ N Y Times p10 D 3 '44 440w

"The book of Carl had, I think, a better idea behind it than was worked out. It could have been made a very moving and genuine account of a child's image in the mind and heart of a lonely soldier. But Carl does not emerge in these pages with the authentic appeal that he had for Private Mélançon. The story has been dressed up too much." S. H. Hay
Sat R of Lit 27:15 D 23 '44 650w

Springf'd Republican p4d D 10 '44 140w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p8 N 26 '44 700w

MELLOR, WILLIAM BANCROFT. Sank same. 224p il $2.50 Howell, Soskin
940.54516 U.S. Civil air patrol. World war, 1939—Naval operations. World war, 1939—Aerial operations 44-9674

Description of the work of the American Civilian Air Patrol and the Coast Guard Reserve in and above the waters off the Atlantic coast, during 1942 when the German submarines were sinking Allied ships with increasing success. These two organizations, manned often by over-age civilians and businessmen, did a great work in holding off attacks until the army and navy could organize their forces. Illustrated with photographs.

Booklist 41:105 D 1 '44

"The book pays tribute where tribute is overdue, to the groups of volunteers who worked with little recognition or remuneration, in danger and unarmed at first, whose work consisted chiefly of routine patrols—with occasional spots of excitement. Too bad the style isn't more professional—crisper—and more interesting, for there's a story there."
Kirkus 12:424 S 15 '44 90w

"Although Mr. Mellor is often overenthusiastic in his language, 'Sank Same' is so well documented with names and facts and dates and deeds done that no American can read the book without a deep sense of pride in these unsung, mostly over-age civilian heroes who left their businesses, their families and the ease to which their years entitled them to fly and cruise the waters of the north Atlantic in good weather and bad for so many weary months, and with no thought of award except a job well done for their country." Foster Hailey
+ N Y Times p6 N 19 '44 480w

"This is a thrilling story. It cannot be treated adequately in a brief review. Read it yourself, and your spine will tingle with pride, your eyes will not always be dry, and you probably won't stop reading until you have finished it." R. A. Brown
+ Springf'd Republican p4d N 5 '44 350w

"With this sort of tragic background, it's no wonder that Mr. Mellor ranks the feats of the C. A. P. with those of the Minute Men of the Revolution. It is an altogether inspiring story and one that may be told even more fully when the war is over." Herbert Kupferberg
+ Weekly Book Review p28 N 19 '44 500w

MELVILLE, HERMAN. Selected poems; ed. by F. O. Matthiessen. 30p $1 New directions 811

Selections from Herman Melville's four volumes of verse, and from unpublished manuscript discovered after his death. The first group is composed of poems about the Civil war.

"These poems were the product of a man arguing with himself, convincing himself by laborious bareness that he was in port at last. But the great answers a man sets down in his journal are tied to the problems of which he is the only text. Melville is wonderful because of the questions he asked; the answers he found at the end are entirely his own, and there are richer ones." Alfred Kazin
+ New Repub 111:841 D 18 '44 300w

New Yorker 20:95 N 18 '44 90w

MELVIN, ARTHUR GORDON. People's world. 115p $1.50 Day
301 Social problems 43-14190

Discussion of the constructive changes which must come in the United States after the present war is ended.

MELVIN, A. G.—Continued

"This book is not likely to be widely read, and among professional theorists at least, will certainly not be entirely popular. Its central message is too easy to understand. Professor Melvin carries on in its pages what amounts to a public love affair with mankind. Whatever the coming world may be, he says, it will be a people's world. The thought is not original, but it is profound, and if Professor Melvin has succeeded in clarifying that point alone he has made an invaluable contribution. . . The hold this book has on the reader's mind comes not from its style, which is labored and jerky, but from its theme." E. L. M.

+ — Canadian Forum 23:214 D '43 280w

School & Society 58:336 O 23 '43 10w

MENDELL, BROOKS IRVING. Protect yourself; the secret of unarmed defense. 91p il $2.75 Essential bks.

796.8 Fighting, Hand-to-hand. Self defense 44-40154

Photographs and step-by-step instructions for self defense against a variety of personal attacks—jujitsu, judo, mugging, etc.

Booklist 40:385 Jl 15 '44

"It is all a bit terrifying, but it is best, no doubt, in a brutal world to learn how to protect ourselves. Dr. Mendell's authority is unimpeachable. He covers just about the whole field—from repelling a simple-minded masher to disarming a thug or a Jap. Good stuff, but the sedentary person must not think he is all set merely by reading the book. Practice, and lots of it, seems called for."

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Jl 16 '44 150w

MENKE, FRANK GRANT. Encyclopedia of sports; il. by Willard Mullin. rev ed 628p $3.50 Barnes, A.S.

790.3 Sports 44-8381

"Additional data enlarges this history of sports, last revised in 1939 [Book Review Digest, 1939]." Booklist

Booklist 41:60 O 15 '44

"The author—or compiler—is a master sports statistician and historian. Masculine public—young and old—clubs and P.L.'s."

+ Kirkus 12:395 S 1 '44 60w

Wis Lib Bul 40:158 D '44

MERCER, CECIL WILLIAM (DORNFORD YATES, pseud). An eye for a tooth. 247p $2.50 Putnam [9s 6d Ward, Lock]

44-2599

An adventure tale laid in Austria sometime before the outbreak of the second World war.

"Literary and exciting." Elizabeth Bullock

+ Book Week p8 Mr 5 '44 180w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p16 Mr 5 '44 150w

MEREDITH, WILLIAM MORRIS. Love letter from an impossible land; with a foreword by Archibald MacLeish. (Yale ser. of younger poets) 50p $2 Yale univ. press

811 A44-1309

Some thirty-four poems by a young American poet, a recent Princeton graduate, who is now a navy flyer in the North Pacific.

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p6 Ap 23 '44 250w

Booklist 40:353 Je 15 '44

"The reader of this note is entitled to know that Mr. MacLeish thinks 'it is work of which any young poet might well be proud.' This reviewer thinks less well of it, especially the earlier part which has all the flavor of undergraduate poetry (which it is) written imitatively with strict avoidance of old conventional patterns and strict adherence to new ones which are just as conventional. But in the later poems, written when the author had become a navy flier and had seen strange places from a new angle, he comes to life and proves that he is an authentic poet after all, in promise if not in present performance. These poems born out of the war are true, and often eloquent and revealing."

+ — Christian Century 61:498 Ap 19 '44 120w

"Despite the somewhat pompous foreword by Archibald MacLeish and the not negligible sanction of the publisher in including this in the Yale Series of Younger Poets, we cannot see this small book of verse of young flight lieutenant William Meredith achieving a large sale. The volume includes, in its first part, verse written while Meredith was an undergraduate at Princeton. . . The second half shows definite advance. It consists of poems much less derivative in literary influence, freshly and keenly drawn from his flying experiences in Alaska."

+ — Kirkus 12:89 F 15 '44 180w

"Intellectual, sensitive, highly personal revelation like this seems somewhat unnecessary equipment in the Navy Air Corps. Good in spots but not recommended." E. L. Lewis

+ — Library J 69:303 Ap 1 '44 30w

"Lieutenant Meredith is not the spokesman for the fighters who 'wanna go back to wherever it was they were.' His friends are not fighting for huckleberry pie. If there are enough of them like his 'Air Heroes,' the rest of us are saved, vicariously." Willard Thorp

+ N Y Times p4 My 7 '44 600w

"It is kindest to pass over briefly the earlier pieces, which inevitably and quite frankly derive from the Latin and Metaphysical poets, or are sheer imitations of Auden, Spender, Rukeyser and other contemporaries. The more formal or traditional the pattern, the more cramped, mannered and rhetorical they are. Too often they bear the awkward burden of abstract intellectual concept, seldom the exact, salty flavor of genuine experience. But when William Meredith leaves the book-shelves and becomes the flyer, he becomes also a poet in his own right." Ruth Lechlitner

+ — Poetry 64:227 Jl '44 550w

Reviewed by W. R. Benét

Sat R of Lit 27:24 Ap 29 '44 340w

"From the Aleutians—the Impossible Land—and from his job as an aviator, the poet has drawn a depth of experience that is vivid, exciting and immediate. Perhaps that could be said of many fliers, but Lieut Meredith is articulate about his experience." Lee Varley

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ap 14 '44 600w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Drew

Weekly Book Review p44 D 3 '44 370w

Reviewed by Louis Untermeyer

Yale R n s 34:342 winter '45 170w

MERGENDAHL, CHARLES. Don't wait up for spring. 276p $2.50 Little

44-9098

Novel of young love written by a very young author. The hero is an unsuccessful playwright living at first in Greenwich Village; the heroine is a wealthy Southern girl whom our hero marries before he joins the navy. When Harry comes back on leave, he finds things in a mixup, but he soon straightens them out.

"The prose is filled with Biblical 'and's,' monotonous, lulling rhythms, and frequent allusions to God. Now, a young man's style is his own affair, but when he becomes more concerned with manner than with matter, we cease to be interested. Infatuation with the sound of your own voice eventually leaves you singing to yourself." Charles Jackson

— Book Week p14 O 29 '44 650w

Kirkus 12:350 Ag 15 '44 110w

"The difficulty with 'Don't Wait Up for Spring' is that its experience is presented as something of value in itself. There is no selection and no emphasis, and hence not enough clarity of meaning." Ruth Page

N Y Times p12 O 22 '44 440w

"The author apparently belongs to that large group of contemporary novelists who believe that a pencil and paper are all that is needed to write a book. In addition to this equipment, Mr. Mergendahl has great enthusiasm for beautiful, clean sex and a conviction that Greenwich Village offers a quaint, Murgeresque background for a love story."

— New Yorker 20:97 O '44 180w

Springf'd Republican p4d N 12 '44 230w

"It is a bleak little tale, yet at the same time reassuring as well as—like any true tale of youth—rather pitiful. . . Lieutenant Mergendahl's study of his contemporaries is extremely unpretentious and curiously effective. He has a keen ear for conversation and its subcurrents, and a sharp eye for the motives and compulsions that underlie ordinary behavior. Fundamentally a romantic rather than a cynic, his nervous style more than compensates for a marked, possibly deliberate, looseness and airiness in his approach to his material. And he is a most serviceable interpreter of one generation to another." Iris Barry

+ Weekly Book Review p3 O 29 '44 700w

MERILLAT, HERBERT LAING. The island; a history of the First marine division on Guadalcanal, August 7-December 9, 1942. 283p il $3 Houghton

940.542 World war, 1939—Solomon islands. U.S. Marine corps. 1st division 44-9188

Detailed history of the Guadalcanal campaign, from August 7 to December 9, 1942, recounting what was done, day by day, by each company and platoon of the marines. An appendix contains lists of receivers of citations. Index.

Reviewed by W. F. Morse
Book Week p14 N 26 '44 180w

Booklist 41:105 D 1 '44

"Considerable military and factual detail for a book which is not for the general—the war reader—but rather for the record."

Kirkus 12:336 Ag 1 '44 150w

"This is the real story, soberly, honestly, authoritatively told. There have been many stories, even books, written about the fighting on Guadalcanal. All of them have various virtues, and all of them this fault, that some of the material was based on little information and not subject to check. As a consequence many legends have arisen having some basis in fact but containing what the marines and Navy call 'bum dope' and through repetition gained an authority that is not merited. Captain Merillat's book sets the record straight." Foster Hailey

+ N Y Times p5 O 29 '44 1300w

"Phraseology is official in style, the minuteness of telling now and then becomes tedious to a non-participant, there is a colorless monotony about the words; but behind and above all this is a tale of dogged resistance, courage and sacrifice that will remain imperishable in our history." P. J. Searles

Weekly Book Review p2 O 29 '44 750w

MERRIAM, CHARLES EDWARD. Public and private government. 78p $1.75 Yale univ. press

320.1 Political science. Democracy A44-1310

"In these five lectures, delivered at the University of Indiana a year ago, one of the wisest contemporary students of the science of government approaches from a fresh angle such vexed questions as the relation of power to politics, the conditions of efficient action in a democratic society, and the possibility of creating 'an adequate and effective jural order of the world' without sacrifice of true national sovereignty. Just as 'the struggle between absolute individualism and absolute collectivism is intellectually a sham battle,' because these extreme alternatives have no objective existence, so there is no sharp cleavage between public and private interests and no absolute distinction, in practice, between public and private government. There are 'zones of cooperation and cohesion in the common cause and on a common basis in many fields of human action.' The individual exists within a complex of 'private' social structures which guide and control him without legal or forcible compulsion." Christian Century

"Not all the propositions set forth in this little book are new, but many of them are more cogently expressed here than they have been elsewhere. As a militant defense of the democratic processes of government, written in a lively, entertaining style, with more than occasional flashes of humor, these chapters were well worth writing, and being so, they are equally well worth reading." W. B. Munro

+ Am Pol Sci R 38:780 Ag '44 600w

Reviewed by L. W. Lancaster
Ann Am Acad 235:148 S '44 400w

Booklist 40:313 My 15 '44

Canadian Forum 24:142 S '44 280w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
+ Christian Century 61:621 My 17 '44 650w

Reviewed by Francis Downing
Commonweal 40:159 Je 2 '44 1700w

Current Hist 6:514 Je '44 80w

Reviewed by H. W. Schneider
Ethics 55:64 O '44 1000w

Foreign Affairs 23:4 O '44 10w

J Philos 42:54 Ja 18 '45 350w

"Serious thinking for students of political philosophy primarily."

Kirkus 12:58 F 1 '44 130w

Reviewed by J. P. Mayer
New Statesman & Nation 28:309 N 4 '44 550w

"A decidedly unsystematic and enjoyable series of spontaneous, one would almost say extemporaneous, remarks. . . Merriam's book is a tempting invitation to go on thinking." A. H. Pekelis

+ Sat R of Lit 27:22 S 2 '44 1900w

Reviewed by Marshall Bragdon
Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 15 '44 900w

MERRIAM, HAROLD GUY; MOORE, JOHN E., and HATHAWAY, BAXTER, eds. Readings for an air age; training in oral and written thought. 420p $2 Macmillan

808 Aeronautics—Collections. American literature—Collections 43-18280

"Collection of articles, essays and speeches for use in training men in the Armed Services in courses in oral and written thought. Selections bear directly upon the types of work men in the Armed Forces are studying in aircraft and related fields. A few selections cover broader subjects." Library J

Library J 69:119 F 1 '44 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 28:58 O '43

MERRY Christmas! il. by Natasha Simkhovitch. 87p $1.50 Knopf

394.268 Christmas 43-18262

"There are eleven stories and two narratives of the Nativity from the Gospels. The stories begin with the Cratchits and go as far afield as the Christmas Day when Lincoln Steffens thought he wasn't going to get a pony—and did. . . There are fourteen short poems—Christina Rossetti, Louise Garnett, the unforgettable 'Christmas Morning' of Elizabeth Madox Roberts, and the nursery classics—and eight favorite carols complete with voice and piano parts." Weekly Book Review

Reviewed by J. D. Lindquist
Library J 69:73 Ja 15 '44 70w

" 'Merry Christmas' is a rather puzzling and unsatisfactory collection, for the illustrations give it the air of a picture book for young children while the appeal of the stories and poems is to a much older audience." A. T. Eaton

— + N Y Times p6 D 19 '43 220w

"An ideal Christmas anthology for children as they begin to grow." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 D 19 '43 300w

MESERVE, FREDERICK HILL, and SANDBURG, CARL. Photographs of Abraham Lincoln. 30p pl $3.50 Harcourt

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham—Portraits 44-40041

"Here, gathered together by the lifelong patience of Frederick Hill Meserve, are all the known and authenticated photographs of Abraham Lincoln. The first picture shows an obscure young Congressman; the last, the aging war President, on the day after Appomattox when he had less than five days to live. The photographs, which are arranged chronologically, make it possible to trace the transformation that life and destiny wrought during the years when Lincoln rode to fame and glory. Many of them are unflattering; none is slicked up or retouched; all are testimony to the camera's value as the preserver of historical fact." (Sat R of Lit) Includes an introduction by Carl Sandburg.

Reviewed by Helen Nicolay
Am Hist R 49:755 Jl '44 550w

Reviewed by Elmer Gertz
Book Week p4 F 13 '44 600w

Booklist 40:234 Mr 1 '44

Bookmark 5:17 Mr '44

Reviewed by Meyer Berger
N Y Times p5 F 13 '44 600w

"The book is of prime importance to anyone interested in the subject, which in portraiture as well as in biography has been a pretext for much sentimental nonsense. There are some remarkable photographs of Lincoln visiting the Union Army at Antietam."
+ New Yorker 20:95 Mr 11 '44 180w

"If one were to own only half a dozen books on Lincoln this should be among them. It is an essential reference work and it is also an invaluable companion to have on hand when reading about Lincoln or his contemporaries." P. V. Stern
+ Sat R of Lit 27:6 F 12 '44 450w

"What Mr. Meserve, with his huge collection of Civil War photos and his knowledge of Lincoln, has meant to historians, Mr. Sandburg establishes in factual, direct and simple English. He builds, in brief, the portrait of the New Yorker who was and is a great zealot, a great collector and a man 'openly free-handed with friends and ungrudgingly generous with strangers.'" Lloyd Lewis
+ Weekly Book Review p1 F 13 '44 1400w

Wis Lib Bul 40:54 Ap '44

METCALF, CLYDE HILL, ed. Marine corps reader. 600p $3 Putnam

359.96 U.S. Marine corps. World war, 1939—Pacific ocean 44-6395

Anthology by and about the United States marines. Contains sketches about their history, and stories about their activities from one end of the earth to the other. Lists of marines who have won citations in the war, marine heroes for whom warships have been named, and an index of authors.

Booklist 41:9 S '44

"From the modest preface by Col. Clyde H. Metcalf of the corps, stating his reasons for compiling the book, to the last section quoting the citations accompanying awards of Congressional Medals of Honor to marines and of unit citations, there is not a dull page—not if you are a devotee of the corps. All of the writing isn't of the best, although there are snatches of nice prose." Foster Hailey
+ N Y Times p24 Ag 13 '44 480w

New Yorker 20:60 Ag 5 '44 90w

"Tales of Guadalcanal, Makin, Bougainville and other areas of intense fighting come directly from participants and add a dash of excitement to what otherwise is an informative but not very lively volume."
+ — Weekly Book Review p8 S 3 '44 200w

METCALF, KEYES DE WITT and others. The program of instruction in library schools. (Contributions to librarianship) 140p $1.50; pa $1 Univ. of Ill.

020.71 Library schools and training A44-39

"The report of a study financed by the Carnegie Corporation and made for the University of Illinois Library School on the occasion of its 50th anniversary." School & Society

Reviewed by R. A. Miller
Library J 69:548 Je 15 '44 650w

"It is in the general appraisal of methods and suggestions for their improvement that the report is most brilliant and most fertile. Lectures, question-and-answer recitation, problems, papers, field work and observation, special lectures, seminars—all receive searching scrutiny. Syllabuses, textbooks, and examinations are taken apart. The working load of students and the optimum size of classes in different subjects are for almost the first time the subject of special attention. . . When it comes to the more specific analysis of objectives and methods course by course, it is difficult not to feel some slight disappointment." J. H. Foster
+ — Library Q 14:252 Jl '44 1600w

School & Society 59:64 Ja 22 '44 30w

METCALFE, JUNE M. Copper, the red metal. 104p il $2 Viking

622.343 Copper—Juvenile literature 44-9811

"A clear account of the making of copper from the time the ore leaves the earth till the finished copper penny is inspected and passed at the Mint. The history of copper is given, too." (Sat R of Lit) For grades seven to nine.

Booklist 41:127 D 15 '44

"Excellent supplementary material for schools and libraries."
+ Kirkus 12:406 S 1 '44 90w

"Extremely useful and interesting book. Good photographs. . . Recommended." S. J. Johnson
+ Library J 69:1104 D 15 '44 30w

"The format is very attractive and the photographs that illustrate it are well selected and beautifully reproduced."
+ Sat R of Lit 27:49 N 11 '44 50w

METZGER, BRUCE MANNING. Saturday and Sunday lessons from Luke in the Greek Gospel lectionary. (Studies in the lectionary text of the Greek New Testament) 101p pa $1.50 Univ. of Chicago press

226.4 Bible. New Testament—Texts—Greek A44-2688

"A technical study, part of a Ph.D., thesis, in New Testament textual criticism. The particular problem was to determine the nature, affiliations and origin of the text of the indicated portion of the lectionaries used in the Greek church, by a comparison of the variant readings of many manuscripts with each other and with the textus receptus and the Western and Byzantine texts of the Gospels." Christian Century

Christian Century 61:646 My 24 '44 70w

"It is regrettable that this series is not printed, for planographing is undoubtedly far more trying on the eyes, but the prospective readers are too few to warrant the more expensive method. In any case, this volume must certainly be read by all who are interested in the history of liturgical use of the Greek New Testament, as well as by those concerned with its textual variants." Silva Lake
Class Philol 40:61 Ja '45 500w

Reviewed by Allen Wikgren
J Religion 24:301 O '44 100w

MEYER, AGNES ELIZABETH (ERNST) (MRS EUGENE MEYER). Journey through chaos. 388p $3 Harcourt

309.173 U.S.—Social conditions. World war, 1939—U.S. 44-7941

During 1943 and part of 1944 Mrs Meyer, wife of the publisher of the Washington Post, visited twenty-six war centers in the United States. This is the report of her tour, during which she studied such problems as juvenile delinquency, race conflicts, inadequate housing, and other evidences of social chaos among civilians in wartime. No index.

Reviewed by Sterling North
Book Week p2 S 24 '44 480w

Booklist 41:72 N 1 '44

Reviewed by L. M. Lyons
Boston Globe p17 S 27 '44 400w

Christian Science Monitor p16 S 20 '44 400w

Commonweal 41:109 N 10 '44 150w

"Excellent club program market."
+ Kirkus 12:423 S 15 '44 190w

New Repub 111:574 O 30 '44 120w

"This is a good book to be published when we are winning victories abroad, and when, quite rightly, we ascribe those victories in some part to American teamwork and organizing ability. One can't read Mrs. Meyer's field reports . . . without being convinced that we need to win some victories at home before becoming complacent. . . Another reporter might reach different conclusions and even see more deeply into causes. But Mrs. Meyer is a good reporter and it will be good for all concerned to ponder her report." R. L. Duffus
N Y Times p5 O 1 '44 1000w

"Not a very pretty book, but one of the best reportorial jobs of the past few years."
+ New Yorker 20:82 S 23 '44 90w

"Agnes E. Meyer has written the best, most nearly comprehensive report on social conditions in war-time America that I have yet read. . . One cannot read this book through without realizing that the leadership of which she dreams is now rising primarily from enlightened management and from vigorous community leadership rather than from over-all government. That is, to me, the brightest hope." Hal Borland
+ Sat R of Lit 27:9 S 30 '44 1650w

Reviewed by L. M. Hacker
Weekly Book Review p3 S 24 '44 1600w

Wis Lib Bul 40:146 N '44

MEYER, DICKEY. See Chapelle, G. L. M.

MEYER, GEORGE WILBUR. Wordsworth's formative years. 265p $3.50 Univ. of Mich. [15s Oxford]

821 Wordsworth, William 43-53132

"Mr. Meyer's book deals with Wordsworth's work up to 1798—though he says this is only the first of a projected series devoted to the reinterpretation of Wordsworth's complete work. He has not used 'The Prelude' as a primary source of information; indeed, he appears to think that what Wordsworth recollected in tranquillity is not the best evidence. He bases his study on the early poems and letters and Ernest de Selincourt's discoveries of unknown manuscript versions." Times [London] Lit Sup

"Many readers of Wordsworth will probably think there is less that is importantly new about Meyer's views than he believes and that he does not disturb the common opinion that the poems written before Lyrical Ballads are of light weight in comparison with the poet's work as a whole. Yet it is worth something to have attention called to the material on which Meyer's claims are based; and many students will welcome his detailed analyses in this book and will look forward with curiosity to the promised iconoclastic attack on The Prelude as truthful autobiography." G. L. Marsh
+ — Mod Philol 42:60 Ag '44 950w

Times [London] Lit Sup p42 Ja 22 '44 2150w

MEYER, GLADYS ELEANOR. Magic circle. 314p $2.50 Knopf

44-2898

Story of two women, one an American; the other part American, part European, with a European upbringing. They shared experiences in school, in college, in Germany, and social work in North Carolina. Then their ways parted, Kate, the American, made a happy marriage; Alix, the European, seeking for a safe way of life, became a Carmelite nun.

" 'The Magic Circle' is an original first novel on a theme many an older hand might have hesitated to attempt. That Gladys Meyer brings it off as well as she does is a tribute to her skill in writing and her penetrating delicacy of perception." August Derleth
+ Book Week p4 Ap 16 '44 470w

Booklist 41:22 S '44

"There is depth to the writing and characterization. Distinctive but limited."
Kirkus 12:106 Mr 1 '44 130w

"Miss Meyer's story is a first novel that is at times overwritten, that is at times fuzzy and is inept technically, but that rings with a conscientious honesty." Ruth Boorstin
+ — N Y Times p20 Mr 26 '44 280w

"There is not very much that is original and effective. On the whole, a creditable first try, which is marred by the author's weakness for telling all."
+ — New Yorker 20:97 Mr 25 '44 90w

" 'The Magic Circle' has more to recommend it than that it is an unusual story, beautifully told. It is written by a person richly endowed with a tender and profound understanding of youth and the various worlds youth inhabits." Rose Feld
+ Weekly Book Review p3 Ap 9 '44 700w

MEYER, MARTIN. Science of explosives. 452p il $4.50 Crowell

662.2 Explosives 44-18

Relatively simple explanation of the chemistry, production, and analysis of explosives. Includes discussion of the packing, shipping, and storage of explosives. Bibliography. Index.

"From the standpoint of people engaged in work with explosives, this book contains many items of reference which will be useful, although the omissions will be regretted. People inexperienced in the science of explosives will be presented with a fair picture of the broad aspects of the field, although they may be confused by certain inconsistencies. The book is well printed with very few typographical errors." Ralph Connor
+ — Am Chem Soc J 66:1233 Jl '44 700w

Booklist 40:208 F 15 '44

"The exposition is clear and the whole field is well covered. . . On the whole, a competent job seems to have been done by the author and a worthwhile addition made to the literature of a subject of considerable wartime importance."
+ Chem & Met Eng 51:207 S '44 130w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:653 Ag '44 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 28:63 O '43

"Meyer's book is complete in itself and handles the whole subject in a well-balanced manner. It supplies for students who have had some chemistry and physics an excellent introduction to explosives, to their background in theoretical science, and to their relationships in war, in industry and in the useful arts. . . Meyer's book is such that a solitary student, without benefit of a professor, can get much from its pages." T. L. Davis
+ N Y Times p23 My 14 '44 260w

"An excellent introduction to the subject There are technical details, and much general material as well, so a person with a background of elementary chemistry will be able to obtain from it a good understanding of the things that go bang. Though modern, it does not contain any account of new super-explosives developed in the war." James Stokley
Weekly Book Review p6 D 26 '43 250w

MEYNENG, MRS MAYETTE (BOUCHANGE). Broken arc. 277p $2.50 Harper
44-3317

Love story of two young French people which reaches its tragic ending with the fall of France.

"This story, we hardly need to be informed, was written by a Breton who, like many Bretons, is a poet. Mrs. Meyneng is a granddaughter of Anatole le Braz. This is her first book. It is no less remarkable in its craftsmanship and no less beautiful in its spirit for being also a true story. Lt. Jean Meyneng was killed in action in 1940. Mrs. Meyneng is now a student at Santa Barbara State College, Calif." John Erskine
+ Book Week p7 Mr 19 '44 600w

Booklist 40:284 Ap 15 '44

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Horn Bk 20:400 S '44 60w

"Oversweet for some, but nice."
+ — Kirkus 12:6 Ja 1 '44 120w

"In spite of the worthy theme the book is disappointing. The story lacks depth and the characterization is too poor to make a convincing novel. Too superficial to create much demand in public libraries. Not recommended." E. P. Nichols
— Library J 69:204 Mr 1 '44 60w

"'The Broken Arc' is a fragile story, a miniature, simply and compassionately told by a young Frenchwoman whose own story bears a compelling resemblance to that of her heroine. . . Glimpses of life in Pors Gwen, student days in Rennes, the nostalgic evocation of the last 'triomphe' at St. Cyr, the description of the Brittany landscape, are sensitively told, and well-woven into the body of the story." C. M.
+ N Y Times p14 Ap 16 '44 400w

"An artless and touching story. . . The foreign background and a certain prim freshness in Madame Meyneng's writing give the book a charm which so usual a story might not otherwise have."
+ — New Yorker 20:94 Mr 18 '44 90w

"The story back of 'The Broken Arc' is found in our newspapers every day. It is a touching version of a tragedy that strikes at many young lives. Any one who has known love and grief in quick succession will find this interpretation an extraordinarily moving one." Rosemary Benet
+ Weekly Book Review p2 Mr 12 '44 650w

Wis Lib Bul 40:86 Je '44

MEZERIK, AVRAHM G. Care and repair of buildings and equipment; a manual of how to make things last. 221p $2.50 Harper

647.9 Building—Repair and reconstruction. Home economics 44-40114

Manual on the cleaning and maintenance of hotels, restaurants, and public buildings, both outside and inside. Contents: Cleaning and cleaning methods; The electrical system; Equipment—gas and electric; Equipment—general; Plumbing and heating; Materials; Furnishings; Interior maintenance; Exterior; Operation; Tools; Protective; Automobiles.

Booklist 40:336 Je 1 '44

Kirkus 12:112 Mr 1 '44 160w

Library J 69:463 My 15 '44 40w

"Despite its emphasis on hotel and restaurant problems, the manual contains an array of valuable facts that can be applied to plant and office maintenance."
+ Management R 33:248 Jl '44 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:31 Ap '44

Wis Lib Bul 40:157 D '44

MICAUD, CHARLES ANTOINE. French Right and Nazi Germany, 1933-1939; a study of public opinion. 255p $3.50 Duke univ. press

944.08 Public opinion—France. France—Politics and government 43-17240

An intensive study of French domestic politics and foreign policies during the 1930s. The author is a young French political scientist who came to the United States in 1936. He is now an instructor at West Point.

Reviewed by T. K. Ford
Am Hist R 49:723 Jl '44 480w

"Here is a real study, and it is one of the first to come to grips with the problems involved in the 'fall of France.' . . To his job Micaud brought une instruction solide. Wedded to American graduate school methodology, one recognizes, in the book itself, true French 'balance,' language intimacy, and keen awareness and discriminating use of sources of Rightist opinion. The tone is exalted throughout, and the theme does not progress by means of the prosecution of charges against personal devils or upon 'intimate revelations to the author by high officials.'" J. G. Heinberg
+ Am Pol Sci R 38:572 Je '44 600w

Current Hist 6:259 Mr '44 100w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:497 Ap '44 30w

"Recommended for college and public libraries stressing foreign affairs." F. E. Hirsch
+ Library J 68:623 Ag '43 130w

Nation 158:344 Mr 18 '44 200w

New Repub 110:421 Mr 27 '44 180w

"Dr. Micaud presents a melancholy and enlightening picture, even in this somewhat dispassionate and dimly lit version, where a discouraging mosaic of quotations is held together in the slightest of patterns, supported by a minimum of analysis and interpretation." J. S.
N Y Times p12 Ja 23 '44 400w

MICHELON, LENO C. Composite aircraft manufacture and inspection; certain chapters written with the collaboration of Raymond J. Devereaux. 547p il $6 Harper

629.134 Airplanes—Design and construction. Airplanes—Inspection 44-5159

"A discussion of each of the materials used in aircraft. Important sections are devoted to aircraft inspection and specifications. Charts, tables, sample inspection forms, reports, flight data, weight and balance figures, AN specifications, logs and trigonometric tables. Some chapters written with the collaboration of Raymond J. Devereaux." Library J

Booklist 41:12 S '44

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:606 Jl '44 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:20 Ap '44

Reviewed by J. M. Juran
N Y Times p36 N 26 '44 40w

MICHELSON, CHARLES. Ghost talks. 245p il $3 Putnam

973.917 U.S.—Politics and government—20th century 44-3334

An intimate story of the news behind the news in Washington, by a man who has been an unofficial "ghost" of the Democratic party for many years. Mr Michelson took the position of publicity director for the Democratic national committee in 1929, and the bulk of the book is about politics since that time. Index.

"There are several instances of reverting to closed incidents to add new material when the story supposedly has been finished following a natural sequence of events. . . A somewhat tedious biography is introduced to explain how Michelson gets his 'ringside seat.'. . Ralph Waldo Emerson advised that no book be read until it was a year old. Michelson's book, when years have passed and much that he presents as revealing today is lost in the obscurity of time, may be more appreciated. It is a book to be filed for future reference rather than one to be read today." M. P. Ackers
Book Week p4 My 14 '44 370w

Booklist 40:302 My 1 '44

"The interest in this book should not be confined to democrats. 'Charlie the Mike' has retired from the front line of politics; this is no nostalgic looking back, nor is it a cynical 'now it can be told'. He sees things in perspective, and tells the truth as he sees it, even to criticizing those at the top. A real contribution to political history."

+ Kirkus 12:111 Mr 1 '44 210w

"The chief fault of this pleasant narrative is its random, unorganized form. It is never dull, but it is sometimes exasperating in the way it jumps about from one thing to another, often taking the reader to the point of letting him in on a big secret, then wandering off to something else. Historians will not like 'The Ghost Talks,' but they will not find it dull. . . As philosophy, the book is far from great; as journalism it is very good indeed." Carroll Kilpatrick
+ — New Repub 110:636 My 8 '44 600w

"Mr. Michelson tells his story with a wry humility and a side-long style which makes it clear why Democratic politicians of the old hee-haw persuasion feared him almost as much as the Hooverite Republicans. His book is neither confessional, tattling, scandalous, defensive nor now-it-can-be-told. To many politicians it will reveal nothing importantly new. But it will set them straight on a number of things they thought they knew. . . It's no simple task to review 'The Ghost Talks.' It flows too fast, tumbles over too many boulders, foams down too many rapids and swirls around too many bends." Walter Davenport
N Y Times p5 My 7 '44 1100w
New Yorker 20:87 My 6 '44 100w

"Being a first-rate journalist as well as a student of politics, it is inevitable that Michelson should write with realism instead of sentimentality. Those who want to understand American political life as it really is will find valuable material in 'The Ghost Talks.'" H. F. Pringle
+ Sat R of Lit 27:22 My 6 '44 850w

"Introduces [the reader] to more of the leading characters with their hair down and without makeup, than any similar book yet written by a Washington correspondent, member of the administration or hanger-on. But it is a book to be read, because of inaccuracies, with one's fingers crossed. Nor does it leave the best taste in one's mouth. . . This is the sort of book which, because it professes to be based on intimate knowledge of men and events—as it undoubtedly is to a large degree—and because it adopts a cynical or hard-boiled tone of truth-telling, will probably receive indiscriminate praise in undiscriminating quarters. As indicated, it is readable and not without some historical value." R. H.
— + Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 30 '44 1400w

"The book is not a long one. It is not evenly written; Mr. Michelson obviously enjoyed sitting down and writing some chapters, particularly those where he wallops some one he doesn't like, more than he did others. But it is an enthralling and appalling presentation of hard-boiled politics and political maneuvering." Bert Andrews
Weekly Book Review p3 Ap 30 '44 1200w

MICHIE, ALLAN ANDREW. Keep the peace through air power. 196p $2 Holt

341 Police, International. Aeronautics, Military. World war, 1939—Peace. World war, 1939—Germany 44-6803

The author, after showing the truth of the warning that Germany actually won after the last war and will do so again after this war, unless the United Nations are wiser than the Allies, presents his arguments for an international air force dedicated to the task of preventing Germany or Japan from starting yet another war of aggression. Bibliography.

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin
Atlantic 174:131 S '44 480w
Reviewed by J. I. Greene
Book Week p4 Ag 6 '44 450w
Booklist 41:36 O 1 '44

"An informed and sensible writer, Michie makes an impressive case. His book must rate with the important discussions of how to make the next peace last." L. M. Lyons
+ Boston Globe p15 Ag 9 '44 500w
Cath World 160:286 D '44 180w
Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 15 '44 400w
Current Hist 7:227 S '44 90w
Foreign Affairs 23:3 O '44 20w
Kirkus 12:317 Jl 15 '44 170w

"Book is compact, closely reasoned, sufficiently detailed, readable. Recommended." Thelma Brackett
+ Library J 69:602 Jl '44 120w
Reviewed by Allan Spalding
New Repub 111:138 Jl 31 '44 480w

"Mr. Michie's proposals demand serious consideration, and it is to be hoped that they will receive it." W. R. Deuel
+ N Y Times p3 Jl 30 '44 850w

"This book offers one solution for the most pressing problem that faces the united nations after winning the war. Russia's recently announced support of the plan to keep the peace through air power should intensify our interest in Mr. Michie's thoroughly documented and clearly presented project. His proposal and his thoughtful analysis of the real German menace to peace are a most important contribution to sound thinking in the post-war world." Donald Armstrong
+ Sat R of Lit 27:13 S 2 '44 750w

"In his book, 'Keep the Peace through Air Power,' Mr. Allan A. Michie, a well-known American journalist, suggests a method which will appeal to many as sound common sense and which deserves serious consideration from the allied authorities, for it has much to recommend it."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p505 O 21 '44 1450w
Reviewed by George Polk
Weekly Book Review p3 Jl 30 '44 1250w

MIERS, EARL SCHENCK. Grass roots. 404p $2.75 Presbyterian bd.

44-40098

"Peter was almost grown up before he realized that there was a seamy side to the political machine, built by his grandfather and continued by his father. To him it had meant power that took care of friends, handed out charity and built a great medical center. Then outsiders, and particularly his college friends, awakened Peter to the corruption of the regime to which he was heir, and love brought him the strength to break with his family. The time is the period just before the first World war." Booklist

"Despite Miers' good intentions and unquestionable earnestness, 'Grass Roots' fails to coalesce either as a successful story or as a social tract. Too much of its moral is presented in the form of oratory or dialectical conversation." Tim Brennan
— + Book Week p2 Ap 30 '44 550w
Booklist 40:319 My 15 '44
Kirkus 12:183 Ap 15 '44 130w

"The novel is interesting as a chart of American politics in recent decades, a sort of fictional flashback through newspaper files." Lisle Bell
+ Weekly Book Review p19 My 28 '44 100w

MILHOUS, KATHERINE. The first Christmas crib [il. by the author]. 47p $1.25 Scribner

Francis of Assisi, Saint—Juvenile literature. Christmas stories 44-8908

"This story of the first crèche, made by the good Saint Francis of Assisi on Christmas eve in the church of the little village of Greccio, has been woven from various source materials and pleasingly illustrated by the author." Booklist

"Not essential, but nice for the Christmas collection. All ages."
Booklist 41:94 N 15 '44

MILHOUS, KATHERINE—Continued

"A treasurable little book with the indefinable charm of medieval Italy."

+ Cath World 160:279 D '44 20w

Commonweal 41:256 D 22 '44 20w

"Katherine Milhous brings the right sense of wonder into the tender story and her pictures are keyed to the same feeling."

+ Horn Bk 20:472 N '44 80w

Kirkus 12:431 S 15 '44 40w

"A perfect combination of story and charming colored illustrations. Recommended for boys and girls ten to fourteen years of age. Adults, too, will like it." A. H. McGinity

+ Library J 69:940 N 1 '44 70w

"Weaving together source material and using her familiarity with the St. Francis country, Katherine Milhous has given her story an authentic and appealing setting, and her pictures in color have a child-like quality." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p26 D 3 '44 60w

New Yorker 20:86 D 16 '44 30w

Sat R of Lit 27:34 D 9 '44 180w

Springf'd Republican p4d N 26 '44 80w

"The story with its reverent little colored pictures makes an appropriate holiday book, but it is a year-round one as well." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p5 D 24 '44 180w

Wis Lib Bul 40:162 D '44

MILIUS, WINIFRED. Here comes daddy; a book for twos and threes. [22p] il $1 Scott, W.R.

44-8303

Picture-story book telling what Peter saw while he waited on the corner for Daddy's bus to come by.

Booklist 41:95 N 15 '44

Cath World 160:278 D '44 20w

"Very successful book for tiny tots beginning to talk, to whom one of the big events of the day is watching for Daddy to come home. Definitely a city child's book, as the ordinary succession of things seen belong to a city street."

+ Kirkus 12:398 S 1 '44 60w

Reviewed by R. O. Bostwick

Library J 69:938 N 1 '44 50w

"The age known as 'two's' and three's' seldom has stories printed especially for them, but this one they might almost have dictated for themselves." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 O 15 '44 120w

MILLAR, KENNETH. Dark tunnel. 241p $2 Dodd

44-8261

Detective story.

"Although you may be slightly dissatisfied with the initial implausibility of Millar's plot, his politically progressive views and the more than liberal sprinkling of anti-reactionary ironies in the book will reward you handsomely." Elizabeth Bullock

+ — Book Week p10 O 8 '44 230w

Booklist 41:109 D 1 '44

"Breath-taking."

+ Boston Globe p17 S 27 '44 30w

"A humdinger—and well written to boot."

+ New Repub 111:502 O 16 '44 60w

"It is a thrilling story told with consummate skill." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p12 O 1 '44 80w

"Good thriller."

+ Sat R of Lit 27:42 S 16 '44 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p16 O 8 '44 100w

MILLAR, MRS MARGARET. Fire will freeze. 225p $2 Random house

44-3680

Detective story.

"Sometimes amusing, sometimes gruesome, and always charged with excitement." Elizabeth Bullock

+ Book Week p10 Ap 2 '44 140w

"Fine entertainment."

+ Kirkus 12:30 Ja 15 '44 80w

"Readers who remember Mrs. Millar's extraordinary 'Wall of Eyes' last year are going to be disappointed in her new book. It starts off auspiciously enough . . . but the wispy and unconvincing plot is totally unable to support the promise of the delightful cast."

— + New Repub 110:478 Ap 3 '44 70w

"Here is a crime puzzle that is guaranteed to hold your attention from beginning to end." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p14 Mr 26 '44 140w

New Yorker 20:84 Ap 1 '44 90w

"Bang-up thriller and excellent character study of group of conflicting personalities. Puzzle is rewarding, 'tho it tends to solve itself. Worthwhile."

+ Sat R of Lit 27:24 Mr 25 '44 40w

"Margaret Millar goes right to the head of the class with this serio-comic thriller about a bus-load of ski enthusiasts snowbound in a Canadian mansion of mystery." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p15 Mr 26 '44 130w

MILLER, ARTHUR. Situation normal. . . 179p $2 Reynal

355.12 U.S. Army—Military life 44-47726

"A story within a story. Lester Cowan, the producer, wanted 'GI Joe,' his picture based on the columns of Ernie Pyle, to be the true account of America's ground soldiers; one that was free of flag-waving and film cliches, one that our fighting men themselves could see with belief and pride. For the script he hired a twenty-nine-year-old New York playwright who was unspoiled by the traditional Hollywood treatment of the war. Then Mr. Cowan got permission from the War Department to send Mr. Miller through several army camps in this country for authentic raw material. 'Situation Normal . . .' is a bundle of notes compiled by Mr. Miller as he watched and talked to American soldiers as inductees, infantrymen, tankmen, paratroopers, and officer candidates at work and at ease in places like Fort Dix, Camp Croft, and Fort Benning." Sat R of Lit

" 'Situation Normal' is a fine book and what it does it does so quietly that the net effect sneaks up on you in that subtle way that has you suddenly reading the last line and then jumping up and clicking your heels in sheer ecstasy. From the first page, Miller is in there punching, and every time he shakes a haymaker loose, it goes into the Hollywood body politic, and the celluloid structure dents very easily." Ralph Peterson

+ Book Week p3 D 17 '44 650w

Booklist 41:133 Ja 1 '45

"A record which holds a general human interest and sympathetic appeal."

+ Kirkus 12:419 S 15 '44 150w

Reviewed by Marcus Duffield

Nation 160:50 Ja 13 '45 210w

"Mr. Miller saw a great deal and has recorded it racily and informatively, considering that he seems to have been in pretty much of a hurry all during his tour. . . [He] is at his best—and that is really good—when he is describing actual happenings rather than stalking ideas or impressions. I have never seen the excitements and bewilderments of basic training better recorded, and the good Lord knows practically every reporter in this country has had a try at doing it." Russell Maloney

+ N Y Times p3 D 24 '44 650w

"You would hardly expect to find one of the most important books about America and the war in the notes of a virtually unknown young movie writer to his Hollywood producer; but that is just what happens in this unheralded little volume." Maurice Basseches

+ Sat R of Lit 27:64 D 2 '44 700w

"As a report of civilians learning to be soldiers . . . 'Situation Normal . . .' is first-rate. Mr. Miller is an excellent reporter: he has an eye for the little things that give meaning to the big ones. . . One minor annoyance stems from the job Mr. Miller set out to do. He was, after all, not out to write a book but to view the Army in terms of a motion picture. And he mars his book by wondering just how this incident or that soldier can best be worked into the picture." Herbert Kupferberg

+ — Weekly Book Review p8 D 17 '44 550w

MILLER, BERNARD WILLIAM; BOOKWALTER, KARL WEBBER, and SCHLAFER, GEORGE EZRA. Physical fitness for boys; a manual for the instructor of the service program. 457p il $3 Barnes, A.S.

371.732 Physical education and training 44-218

"Book intended for the use of those in charge of physical training programs. Emphasis at the present time is on the need for fitness; at the same time the ranks of available physical education teachers are being depleted. The authors, three members of the Indiana University faculty, have prepared the book with this situation in mind." (Wis Lib Bul) Index.

Booklist 40:227 Mr 1 '44

Wis Lib Bul 40:52 Ap '44

MILLER, MRS CAROLINE (PAFFORD). Lebanon. 234p $2.50 Doubleday

44-6204

"Pictures the spiritual growth of a beautiful young girl, reared in the backwoods of Georgia, who found herself through heartbreak and suffering. It is a story of frontier life, when Jefferson was yet alive and before Liberty Bell was cracked tolling for Chief Justice John Marshall." Weekly Book Review

"The words of the book are lovely words. The winds and the trees and the black water of the cypress creeks are fragrant and authentically beautiful. Mrs Miller loves first the dark, secret earth—and perhaps that is why the human beings who people it must inevitably come out second-best." Frances Woodward

+ — Atlantic 174:131 Ag '44 300w

"Caroline Miller's writing, so spirited and so replete with specific and telling detail, deserves encouragement. Those who admire sheer creation devoid of artifice will enjoy her novel." Sterling North

+ Book Week p2 Jl 23 '44 230w

Booklist 41:23 S '44

"Mrs Miller has created an unforgettable character in the person of Lebanon Fairgale, beautiful woods-wise daughter of the Georgia Lowlands. And in the doing, the author confirms the talent of which she gave so much promise in her first novel, the Pulitzer prize-winning 'Lamb in His Bosom' [Book Review Digest, 1933]." L. L. Marchand

+ Boston Globe p15 Jl 26 '44 380w

"Though this story has tragic elements, they never seem sad, because overdrawn and because the characters are not real. The speech is strained too, so that whatever beauty the novel might have had is spoiled by the exaggerated effects the author strives after."

Cath World 159:572 S '44 180w

"A story with emotional values thinly spread —but with a primitive beauty and rhythm in the telling."

+ — Kirkus 12:220 My 15 '44 170w

"Though laid in the early decades of the last century, Lebanon is so close in spirit to the mid-Victorian romances, with their wronged and virtuous heroines, that the speech of the characters seems archaic. The quaintness is justifiable, but to modern ears the quaint and curious is apt to sound affected. To call gloves 'brown chamois garments' seems needlessly indirect. . . Mrs. Miller has a fund of information concerning life in the South a hundred years ago. From it she has drawn many vignettes that have a romantic charm. . . But too often Mrs. Miller either does not build up a scene or is afraid of its drama, so that the narrative as a whole is less satisfying than many of its parts." Edith Pope

— + N Y Times p3 Jl 16 '44 750w

"The author is probably to be commended because she has, achieving a patriotic economy of paper, taken her heroine through enough adventures to fill a couple of good old double-deckers in a matter of just two hundred and thirty-four pages."

— New Yorker 20:70 Jl 15 '44 140w

"Mrs. Miller, author of the Pulitzer prize novel, 'Lamb in his Bosom,' does not add materially to her stature in her present book. Lebanon, for all the subjective analysis which the author lavishes upon her, does not emerge as a flesh and blood woman, but rather as a character in a folk tale. Perhaps this is what Mrs. Miller wished to do, but there is a quality of unreality about this book, not entirely due to the fact that it deals with a period which has faded into the realm of romance. It is because, I think, Mrs. Miller has been more concerned with the style of her writing than with the characters she was writing about." S. H. Hay

— + Sat R of Lit 27:11 Ag 12 '44 650w

Reviewed by C. M. Sauer

Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 30 '44 500w

"Caroline Miller's 'Lebanon' is written with all of the exquisite cadence of her Pulitzer Prize winner, 'Lamb in His Bosom.' . . This is a multiple story—of refinements and coarse lusts, of unexpected kindnesses, of fierce loyalties, of friends turned enemy. . . It holds an abundant knowledge of human nature, and is not without its sharp-tongued humor. It must, surely, be the story of many a lonely pioneer whose spirit went to make this country great, in far-off little cabins planted around with mulberry trees and shrubs and lilies brought from England." R. Y. Williams

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Jl 23 '44 700w

Wis Lib Bul 40:131 O '44

MILLER, DOUGLAS PHILLIPS. Via diplomatic pouch; with a foreword by William L. Shirer. 248p $3 Didier pubs.

330.943 Germany—Economic policy 44-40133

The author of You Can't do Business With Hitler (Book Review Digest, 1941), who was formerly United States commercial attache in Berlin, here presents selections from his official reports from Berlin from November, 1931, to October, 1937. Arrangement is chronological. The book contains a bibliography on "racial science," but no index.

Reviewed by Eric Dale

Am Pol Sci R 38:1248 D '44 450w

Reviewed by Emil Lengyel

Ann Am Acad 237:207 Ja '45 310w

"Mr. Miller, for the second time in a decade you have done your country a great service. Congratulations." Quentin Reynolds

+ Book Week p3 Je 18 '44 700w

Booklist 40:354 Je 15 '44

Reviewed by Otto Zausmer

Boston Globe p17 Je 7 '44 380w

"Due to its conciseness and lucidity, the book is a valuable contribution to the history of prewar Naziism, even though it does not offer much new material." E. S. P.

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Jl 18 '44 450w

Current Hist 7:133 Ag '44 130w

Foreign Affairs 23:11 O '44 40w

Kirkus 12:190 Ap 15 '44 150w

Reviewed by Franz Hoellering

Nation 159:131 Jl 29 '44 550w

"There is nothing dull about 'Via Diplomatic Pouch.' A good many official reports are better written than most people realize, and this is notably true in the case of Mr. Miller's

MILLER, D. P.—Continued
reports. They are written in much the same easy, informal style that made 'You Cant Do Business With Hitler' so easy to read, and they cover a good many subjects besides strictly economic and financial ones—such, for example, as Nazi race policy. There is much to interest the general reader as well as the scholar. . . Once again, Douglas Miller has deserved well of his country." W. R. Deuel
+ N Y Times p4 Je 4 '44 700w

"Mr. Miller has not been able to infuse 'Via Diplomatic Pouch' with the exciting quality he put into 'You Can't Do Business with Hitler.' He is just as astute and scholarly. His writing is as smooth and lucid. His judgment seems as level-headed and objective. But most of what he wrote in 1931-37 for the secret files of the State Department is academic now and more than a shade dated and incomplete. Blame it on the war." Frederick Gruin
+ — Sat R of Lit 27:16 Je 10 '44 650w

"Not all of the material is new, and the style, of necessity, is that which Washington imposes upon its representatives for formal reports. But the book traces the lines of economic policy adopted, discarded and changed by the Nazi government in the immediate years after it first came to power." Beach Conger
+ — Weekly Book Review p4 Je 11 '44 650w

MILLER, FRANCIS TREVELYAN. Eisenhower, man and soldier. 278p il $2 Winston
B or 92 Eisenhower, Dwight David
44-5555

Biography of General Dwight D. Eisenhower, which traces his ancestry back several generations to the first of his name in this country—sometime before the Revolution. The book brings the story of Eisenhower's life up to the time of the present invasion.

"This book is a 'quickie' which would gain by rigorous editing. But it concerns a man whose life should inspire many boys—for whom, I take it, this book was written." Sterling North
Book Week p2 Jl 2 '44 230w
Booklist 40:376 Jl 1 '44

"The material is colorful and there is every reason to accept the record as authentic."
Christian Century 61:776 Je 28 '44 120w
Kirkus 12:249 Je 1 '44 190w

"Mr. Miller's biography includes much human-interest material—Gen Eisenhower's early hobby of cooking, his ability to sing 50 verses of 'Abdul the Bulbul Amir,' and so on. Unfortunately, the book is rather repetitious and confused in arrangement, with marks of hasty preparation."
Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 1 '44 400w
Weekly Book Review p6 Jl 30 '44 150w

MILLER, HENRY. Sunday after the war. 300p $3 New directions
818 44-8815

"This miscellany of essays, critical opinions, personal observations, and autobiographical sketches may serve as a good introduction not only to the author's literary processes but to his philosophy. There are fragments from two 'works in progress' on America: 'The Rosy Crucifix' and 'The Air-Conditioned Nightmare.' Included in the former is an account of the author's return to his family in Brooklyn after a self-imposed exile of 10 years duration, and in the latter there is described a visit to Mecca Apartments for Negroes, South Side Chicago. Among the literary essays are one on an obscure Greek writer not yet translated into English and another on the role of sex in the work of D. H. Lawrence." Book Week

Reviewed by Jack Conroy
Book Week p9 O 8 '44 500w

Reviewed by C. G. Paulding
Commonweal 41:306 Ja 5 '45 950w

"Miller came to this country several years ago and he has published several volumes here. The present one, which is a miscellany, is the first of these I've read. The best things in it, as far as I'm concerned, are Reunion in Brooklyn and a mad piece which is described as another fragment from 'The Rosy Crucifixion,' one of Miller's 'works in progress.'" Margaret Marshall
+ Nation 159:562 N 4 '44 450w

Reviewed by Nicola Chiaromonte
New Repub 111:751 D 4 '44 1900w

"I have not found anything in [this book] I liked quite so much as his picaresque novel, 'Tropic of Cancer,' or certain chapters of his book on Greece, or his essay on Proust and Joyce. But it is very representative of Miller and full of interpretations, visions, impressions, of a kind that no one else is writing. Though he disassociates himself from his time and declines to be racked by its strain, he is exceptional in feeling to a high degree, in relation to the world at large, the moral responsibility of the writer, and all his work has its own kind of relevancy to our world of great modern cities and great mechanical wars that wreck them." Edmund Wilson
+ New Yorker 20:87 O 21 '44 700w

MILLER, JOHN HOMER. Take a look at yourself. 200p $1.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury 150.13 Psychology, Applied. Conduct of life.
44-472

"These chapters are like heart-to-heart talks on the conduct of life and the building of a wholesome personality. Formal psychology is kept in the background, while good sense, good cheer and applied religion are prominent." Christian Century

Christian Century 61:403 Mr 29 '44 40w

"Dr. Miller writes in a direct, straightforward manner about the weaknesses and possibilities of ordinary men and women and shows the way to more satisfactory living. He leads you from what you are to what you would like to be. Life becomes an adventure and achievement worth the effort." H. B. Marsh
+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 14 '43 500w

MILLER, JOSEPH HILLIS, and BROOKS, DOROTHY V. N. Rôle of higher education in war and after. 222p $2.50 Harper
378 Education, Higher. World war, 1939— Education and the war 44-4029

Statement of the effects of the war on higher education in this country. Contents: Changes in student enrollment; The impact of the selective training and service act; Changes in faculty personnel; Legal and administrative changes in wartime; The pressure for acceleration; The demands for curriculum changes; Provisions for special training programs; The responsibility for civilian morale; New York State faces its problems of higher education; Financing students through college; Anticipating the needs for higher education; The shape of things to come. Index.

Booklist 41:9 S '44
Current Hist 6:514 Je '44 80w
Kirkus 12:90 F 15 '44 110w

"Every person connected with a state system of education will want to read, and read carefully, what they have to say about New York's plans. And every thoughtful faculty and administration member of a private college or university would do well to read their review of what has happened and their analysis of what lies ahead for higher education." J. W. Nason
+ Library Q 14:354 O '44 800w

Reviewed by E. C. Richards
N Y Times p32 N 26 '44 400w
School & Society 59:288 Ap 22 '44 80w

"This volume constitutes a valuable addition to the literature of higher education and will be useful to those who wish to inform themselves about any one of the many services that academic institutions performed during the war period." E. J. McGrath
+ School R 53:56 Ja '45 1550w

Reviewed by S. L. Jackson
Springf'd Republican p6 S 2 '44 450w

MILLER, MARY BRITTON. Crucifixion; a poem. 27p $1.75 Scribner
811 Jesus Christ—Crucifixion—Poetry
44-2481

"This volume examines, in the light of this war, the true meaning of the Christ story—the significance of sacrifice that the poor and the exploited may live again. The poem though it is not precisely orthodox, is deeply religious in the best sense. For this poet Christianity, to mean anything, must mean true brotherhood." N Y Times

"One feels on reading this poem that the poet is herself at the heart of the religious experience that is necessary for many in these days. . . It is, I think, Mary Britton Miller's best poem. A knowledge of modern poetry is indicated in its rhythms, but essentially, Miss Miller uses her own simple and direct imagery, her own innate rhythms. Although she might easily be didactic, she so directly conveys her own feeling, through the 'myth,' that she escapes any dogma and gives you true experience." E. L. Walton
+ N Y Times p18 Ap 16 '44 500w

" 'The Crucifixion' has the authentic passion of poetry. It has the economy of emotion purely, selflessly and deeply felt; the compassion of all those who have stood in the solitude of great grief, great love, or great warfare. . . The world is learning an old, old lesson. In the deep stress of changing cycles the old logic is at work again. This profound poem transcribes the symbols for the changeless truth." Kathleen Coyle
+ Weekly Book Review p4 F 27 '44 400w
Wis Lib Bul 40:53 Ap '44

MILLER, MAX. Daybreak for our carrier. (Whittlesey house publication) 184p il $2.50 McGraw 940.545 Airplane carriers. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American 44-5036

Detailed account of life aboard a United States airplane carrier. Illustrated with many photographs.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks
Atlantic 174:127 S '44 180w
Booklist 40:374 Jl 1 '44
Cleveland Open Shelf p10 Je '44
Kirkus 12:131 Mr 15 '44 170w

"Will be very popular with boys and men and with those women whose men-folk are serving on a carrier. Recommended." E. F. Kelly
+ Library J 69:459 My 15 '44 70w

" 'Daybreak for Our Carrier' is no blood-and-thunder thriller. No desperate enemy attack is beaten off. There is little opposition over the target. Most of the fliers get back safely. No mock heroics are introduced. Those who like their war à la Richard Harding Davis will be disappointed. Those who would like to know war at sea as it is, written in a prose that often sings, will like this book very much." Foster Hailey
+ N Y Times p6 Je 4 '44 550w
Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 16 '44 160w

"This is no prosaic story nor is it an overly dramatized tale of battle and destruction. Rather it is a narrative, plain yet poignant, of human beings, how they live and act in the face of daily danger." P. J. Searles
+ Weekly Book Review p4 Je 18 '44 550w

MILLER, PAUL EDUARD, ed. See Esquire (periodical). Jazz book

MILLER, RANDOLPH CRUMP, and SHIRES, HENRY HERBERT, eds. Christianity and the contemporary scene; jubilee volume on the fiftieth anniversary of the Church divinity school of the Pacific, Berkeley, California, 1943. 231p $3 Morehouse
230 Christianity 43-15823

A volume of essays by a number of writers, treating in general the subject of the place of Christianity in the present scheme of things. Contents: Some trends in American theology, by R. C. Miller; Recent contributions of continental theology, by George Morrel; The return to Old Testament theology, by James Muilenburg; The Jesus of history today, by Pierson Parker; An inquiry into the origin of religion, by H. H. Shires; Modern American Christianity in the light of history, by H. M. Shires; The growing church-mindedness of today, by W. B. Stevens; Church unity, by E. L. Parsons; The hardest problem for Christian ethics, by J. C. Bennett; The times that try men's souls, by M. E. Deutsch; A Christian analysis of Western political philosophy, by Everett Bosshard; Some fresh techniques in pastoral care, by C. R. Barnes; The social task of the church, by E. M. Springer; Christian education today, by R. C. Miller; Recent developments in theological education, by H. H. Shires. Index.

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 61:593 My 10 '44 1250w

"This Jubilee Volume of the Church Divinity School of the Pacific is an encouraging sign of a changing theological emphasis upon the transforming power of God's love in redeeming humanity." W. F. Thompson
+ Churchman 158:16 Ja 15 '44 120w

MILLS, CLARK. Circus [poems]. 76p $2 Press of James A. Decker
811 44-37790

"In poem after poem Clark Mills brings the circus, with the spring weather, to town; presents the people who make it leap and twirl and sparkle with grace and color and tinsel; describes the beasts in the cages who glower at the white arrangements of observer faces; foretells the three-ringed performance consummated under the Big Top. Through it all runs the theme of Jack Stone, a kind of Conrad Aiken Punchinello, who is at once animal tamer, juggler, performer, little-man-in-the-audience and author, in quite the prescribed if confusing manner one has come to expect of such poem sequences." Book Week

Book Week p15 N 19 '44 230w

"In spite of its minor shortcomings and confusions, The Circus, as an experiment in form, is well worth serious attention." Ruth Lechlitner
+ — Poetry 65:152 D '44 480w

MILLS, JOHN. Electronics; today and tomorrow. 178p il $2.25 Van Nostrand
621.38 Electronics 44-6188

"An introduction to the new art of electronics. Each phenomenon is undertaken in easy steps and described. . . The order of treatment is easiest things first. And all the material has been carefully chosen for its value as a quick introduction to the new things electronics is producing." (Pref) Index.

" 'Electronics' is scientifically accurate, yet reads like a fantastic tale from Jules Verne. You will like it." Rufus Oldenburger
+ Book Week p6 Jl 30 '44 180w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:663 Ag '44 30w

"To the layman, confronted with the wave of wartime advertising showing the 'revolutionary, ubiquitous and dazzling electronic world of the future,' Mills's book will prove a fascinating clarification." Bernard Jaffe
+ New Repub 111:842 D 18 '44 650w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:24 Ap '44

"Mr. Mills [is] an old and practiced hand at popularizing science clearly and accurately. . . He gives us enough history of atomic physics to provide the proper background. He dissects electric sparks and lighting. He shows what electron tubes are and how they do their work in television, radio, the factory, the physician's office. He unfolds the new world of the electron microscope, which is now an indispensable instrument in industry and in the biological sciences. And, lastly, he tells us what we ought to know about cyclotrons, the atom-battering machines that hurl particles at high speed at bits of matter and disrupt them." Waldemar Kaempffert

MILLS, JOHN—Continued

+ N Y Times p14 O 22 '44 400w

"The author has succeeded in giving an accurate picture of electronics in simple terms which are guaranteed to hold the interest of the reader. This book can be recommended wholeheartedly to a layman who desires a good, nonmathematical description of electronics. It should be required reading for scientists and engineers who are using electronic devices, but who have not yet had opportunity to delve into their 'innards.'" W. E. Stephens

+ R of Scientific Instruments 15:260 O '44 500w

Reviewed by James Stokley
Weekly Book Review p16 O 29 '44 200w

MILTON, GEORGE FORT. Use of presidential power, 1789-1943. 349p $3 Little

353.03 Presidents (U.S.)—Powers and duties. U.S.—Constitutional history 44-3756

"A study of the American Presidency and of some of the men, from George Washington to Franklin D. Roosevelt, who have held that office. Mr. Milton, while primarily concerned with showing how the power of the Presidency has continually increased, has also drawn sharp pictures of the Presidents he discusses." (New Yorker) Bibliographical notes. Index.

"Doubtless Mr. Milton is entitled to receive from political scientists some such gracious compliment as the late James Harvey Robinson paid the amateur historian when he wrote: 'Mr. Wells manages to humanize the past.' . . The method of treatment, then, is episodical rather than philosophical, and events illuminate the subject while they reveal the author's pattern of interpretation and justify his judgment of particular presidents." W. E. Binkley

+ Am Pol Sci R 38:996 O '44 600w

"Milton spends more space, naturally, on Franklin D. Roosevelt's three administrations than on any other single President, and no one can quarrel with that arrangement. Yet many readers—particularly those who have forgotten how Washington, Jackson and Lincoln were reviled as 'autocrats'—may find it equally rewarding to refresh their memories of the earlier constitutional struggles. Here in the record is the story behind the fact that the American presidency—though a Chief Executive without the people is nothing—has become one of the most powerful executive offices on earth." Willard Shelton

+ Book Week p5 Ap 23 '44 650w

Booklist 40:296 My 1 '44

Bookmark 5:5 My '44

"If any one book published this season deserves a place at the top of the nonfiction Best Seller list, this is it; particularly so in a Presidential election year. George Fort Milton has conceived and executed a remarkable work." L. L. Marchand

+ Boston Globe p17 My 10 '44 270w

Current Hist 6:512 Je '44 100w

Foreign Affairs 23:10 O '44 20w

"Perhaps the most important and fascinating book of the spring. In viewpoint, singular and successfully objective, it can be read by advocates of both parties with equal enthusiasm."

+ Kirkus 12:108 Mr 1 '44 170w

Reviewed by Irving Brant
Nation 159:48 Jl 8 '44 650w

Reviewed by Walton Hamilton
New Repub 110:819 Je 19 '44 1450w

Reviewed by Carl Bridenbaugh
N Y Times p4 Ap 30 '44 850w

"His book, besides providing a fresh approach to a more or less familiar subject, is an excellent reminder that the author, without kicking up any fuss about it, is on his way to becoming one of our major historians."

+ New Yorker 20:90 Ap 22 '44 130w

Reviewed by F. L. Paxson
Pol Sci Q 59:637 O '44 650w

Reviewed by Lindsay Rogers
Sat R of Lit 27:8 My 13 '44 2850w

Springf'd Republican p4d Je 4 '44 750w

"This is a wise book filled with shrewd and penetrating analysis. It emphasizes the fact that executive power under modern conditions is essential to good government and that the kind of man we place in the White House will determine not only the welfare of this nation but, to a growing degree, the fate of mankind. It is a sobering thought for all Americans at this time." Avery Craven

+ Weekly Book Review p3 Ap 23 '44 1900w

MINEKA, FRANCIS EDWARD. Dissidence of dissent; the Monthly repository, 1806-1838, under the editorship of Robert Aspland [and others] with a chapter on religious periodicals, 1700-1825. 458p $4 Univ. of N.C. press

052 Monthly repository (periodical). Unitarianism 44-9291

"The Monthly Repository was an English Unitarian magazine for something more than twenty years and an organ of liberal social and political thought during its last decade until it expired under the editorship of Leigh Hunt. It was also a mirror of the intellectual and literary movements of its time. The author gives, first, a brief sketch of the rise of Unitarianism and the infiltration of Socinian ideas into the orthodox churches before 1800; second, . . . a rather full and well studied account of English religious periodicals from 1700 to 1825; third, a survey of the contents and influence of the Repository and its eminent contributors." (Christian Century) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 D 31 '44 90w

"It was a worthy enterprise to give belated recognition to this journalistic champion of liberal thought and of what was the 'youth movement' in literature in the first third of the nineteenth century."

+ Christian Century 61:1257 N 1 '44 180w

"Mr. Mineka's study is well-written, well-balanced, and authoritative. It contains, among other matter, as good a biographical sketch of the Rev. William J. Fox as is anywhere to be found. It is a book for serious students of nineteenth-century thought, and it is unlikely that it can be displaced in its field." H. M. Jones

+ Sat R of Lit 27·23 N 25 '44 320w

"Mr. Mineka's is more than a useful book, more than a contribution to the history of ideas. It enlightens for us the whole vital question of the role of thoughtful radical journalism, thus helping us to understand what men are thinking and saying today." Oscar Maurer, Jr.

+ Yale R n s 34:375 winter '45 750w

MINGOS, HOWARD L. American heroes of the war in the air. v 1 557p il maps $10 Lanciar pubs, inc, 10 Rockefeller plaza, N.Y. 20

940.544 Aviators. World war, 1939—Aerial operations. U.S. Army air forces. U.S. Navy. Air service. U.S. Marine corps (44-116)

"Essentially a history of air warfare in the first 21 months of World War II, and a record of officers and enlisted men of the Army, Navy, and Marine Air Services who have been decorated for service and valor. The book is divided into twelve chapters, each devoted to some important air campaign, beginning with Pearl Harbor and ending with the events of August 1943. Each chapter includes a discussion of the particular campaign, e.g., 'The Campaign in the North Pacific,' and a list of air force personnel decorated for outstanding achievement in that campaign. Information on approximately 6400 airmen whose achievements have won them decorations is given. The official citation for 1000 awards is quoted; the remaining citations are listed with the name of the recipient, his home address, and the award. Neither biographical information nor flying record is given. The list of citations is not complete." Subscription Bks Bul

---

"The volume is strongly bound in cloth. The paper is of good quality. The print is readable and clear; the margins are wide. An index of 35 pages and alphabetical lists of illustrations and maps are included. The book will be of most interest to large public libraries or libraries which specialize in aeronautics. For such libraries it is recommended."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 15:41 O '44 340w

MINSHALL, THOMAS HERBERT. Future Germany. 216p $2.75 Norton [8s 6d Allen, G]

940.5314443 Reconstruction (1939-)—Germany. Germany—Politics and government A44-586

In this book an English author discusses both the general and particular aspects of the problem of the treatment of Germany after victory has been won.

"Colonel Minshall has rendered yeoman service to the United Nations by setting out clearly the major difficulties of their dealings with a defeated Germany. His book is a real contribution to the solution of post-war problems." Elroy Bardon

+ Spec 171:508 N 26 '43 1000w

"Almost all that Colonel Minshall has to say here is stamped somewhere or other by his plain good sense, and much of it would be very well worth quoting. But at the same time Colonel Minshall is given on this occasion to excessive simplification, and the book suffers accordingly."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p556 N 20 '43 900w

MISES, LUDWIG, edler von. Bureaucracy. 125p $2 Yale univ. press

353.01 Political science. Industry and state A44-4402

"This little book is an incident in a long campaign the distinguished economist has been waging against Marxian Socialism. . . Mr. von Mises is not concerned with the historical or contemporary manifestations of bureaucracy in the currently accepted sense: the accumulation, layer upon layer, of functionaries and officeholders who interfere with and slow up enterprise, empty the public purse and end by thwarting the popular will. His preoccupation is almost entirely with theoretical economics. . . The current conflict, in Mr. von Mises's eyes, is one between profit management and bureaucratic management; between liberal capitalism and totalitarian socialism; between freedom and bureaucracy." Weekly Book Review

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 O 22 '44 270w

"Capitalism and the profit system have not within recent years had a more clear-cut defense, or socialism a sharper attack, than this Austrian economist presents. . . In elaborating [his] propositions the author states with dispassionate clarity the inherent difficulties of a system in which the control of production, prices and marketing is in the hands of government bureaus; it is not so certain that he faces with equal frankness the difficulties which developed under uncontrolled 'free enterprise' and in the unrestricted operation of the profit motive."

+ — Christian Century 61:1201 O 18 '44 300w

"'Bureaucracy' is, in fact, one of the most amazing exhibitions seen in these parts in many years. The professor is no dunce. He delivers a critique of socialism that is clever, penetrating and often damaging. He is a well-read, cultivated man who knows his Plato and can quote Goethe's tribute to double-entry bookkeeping without even stopping for breath. But then the Professor turns to his eulogy of pure, unregulated capitalism, and suddenly, right there before your eyes, he disintegrates completely and begins babbling the most absurd and vicious nonsense. It is really a nerve-shattering spectacle. One minute you see before you the sound, cultivated scholar; the next minute a dangerous character frothing at the mouth." J. C. Cort

— + Commonweal 41:78 N 3 '44 1000w
Kirkus 12:359 Ag 15 '44 110w

"Professor von Mises' penetrating analysis is closely reasoned. Though much shorter in length and nominally narrower in scope it is a fitting companion to his recent 'Omnipotent Government' and to his great critical work, 'Socialism: An Economic and Sociological Analysis.' Published on the day after F. A. Hayek's 'The Road to Serfdom,' Professor von Mises' 'Bureaucracy' once more calls attention to the ironic fact that the most eminent and uncompromising of defenders of English liberty, and the system of free enterprise which reached its highest development in America, should now be two Austrian exiles." Henry Hazlitt

+ N Y Times p5 O 1 '44 950w

"There is great merit in much of what Mr. von Mises has to say about the political and psychological dangers of state interventionism; the stultification that follows from an expansion of the governmental bureaus, the fear of innovation and the cynical contempt for the popular will—these are real dangers against which enough warnings cannot be raised. But Mr. von Mises weakens his case when he puts it completely on theoretical ground." L. M. Hacker

+ — Weekly Book Review p6 O 22 '44 700w

Reviewed by W. A. Orton
Yale R n s 34:379 winter '45 490w

MISES, LUDWIG, edler von. Omnipotent government; the rise of the total state and total war. 291p $3.75 Yale univ. press

321.6 Totalitarianism. Germany—Nazi movement A44-1787

"Former professor of Vienna and Geneva attempts explanation of Nazism. Deals extensively with Germany's social and economic development of last hundred years. An outspoken adherent of economic liberalism he traces most of the evils of our times, such as wars, unemployment, inflation, anti-semitism and Nazism back to 'etatism' either in the form of (state) interventionism or socialism." (Library J) Index.

"Though this reviewer cannot agree with Professor von Mises on a number of important subjects, he certainly recommends the reading of his book. It is highly stimulating and, in these times of indiscriminate advocacy of government intervention and of popular belief in the wisdom and power of bureaucracy, this book might have a sobering effect, inducing the reader to consider more critically the rôle of the government in economic life." Antonin Basch

+ — Am Econ R 34:899 D '44 2400w

"The author, here as in his earlier analysis of socialism (first published in 1922), displays considerable dialectical skill. Readers cannot well deny the effectiveness of some of his challenges of the whole complex of recent socialist and liberal-collectivist ideas. Yet (the reviewer believes) Professor Von Mises has not considered, broadly and dispassionately, either the moral implications or the practical economic consequences of his own extreme doctrine." F. W. Coker

Am Pol Sci R 38:1003 O '44 750w

Reviewed by H. C. Simons
Ann Am Acad 236:192 N '44 800w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 S 10 '44 180w

"Omnipotent Government has been praised as one of the great books of our generation and dismissed as a 'dreary morass of monopoly capitalism apologetics.' It is neither. Rather it is a keen and penetrating analysis of the socio-economic conditions of our time, occasionally a little one-sided and even dogmatic in its leaning toward economic individualism. . . Even those who will not agree fully with Von Mises—and the reviewer is one—must be impressed by the vigor of his argument and the wealth of logic and history in it." J. D. Squires

+ — Christian Century 62:112 Ja 24 '45 900w

Reviewed by H. A. Reinhold
Commonweal 40:329 Jl 21 '44 1100w

Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook
Current Hist 7:497 D '44 110w

MISES, LUDWIG—Continued
"Controversial—dogmatic—tough reading"
Kirkus 12:131 Mr 15 '44 190w

"Exaggeration often diminishes value of otherwise interesting work. Recommended for University and larger public libraries." H. H. A. Bernt
+ — Library J 69:303 Ap 1 '44 70w
Nation 159:530 O 28 '44 420w

" 'Omnipotent Government' is less an indictment of tyranny than an epitaph, from the pen of the most dismal practitioner of the dismal science of an age long dead and forever past recapture." F. L. Schuman
— N Y Times p22 My 21 '44 950w

"Professor Von Mises has written one of the most thoughtful and challenging books published for a long time. It deals primarily with the cause and cure of the menace which Germany offers to the contemporary world. Many sharp and surprisingly well formulated observations and penetrating judgments will be accepted even by those who, like the present reviewer, regard the author's explanations as rather one sided." Hans Kohn
+ Sat R of Lit 27:21 S 9 '44 360w
Time 43:99 Je 19 '44 300w

"Professor von Mises is above all, uncompromising in both the style and the substance of what he has to say. He is dogmatic, not to say pedantic, in the manner, both of many Teutons and of many teachers. He has the relatively high regard for the power of economic motives in men's lives and the relatively low regard for other motives toward which all professors of economics seem to be inclined. His spirit and address are in the too frequent manner of the classroom—intransigeant, testy, dry, often acidulous and not infrequently sententious. . . Professor von Mises' whole political and economic philosophy is reminiscent of that of a good many academic economists of the era which ended in 1929. That seems a long time ago." W. R. Deuel
— Weekly Book Review p8 Ag 20 '44 1150w

Reviewed by C. E. Merriam
Yale R n s 34:179 autumn '44 1050w

MISSOURI. UNIVERSITY. SCHOOL OF JOURNALISM. Journalism in wartime. See Mott, F. L., ed.

MITCHELL, DAVID RAY, ed. Coal preparation; editorial advisory bd, Howard N. Eavenson, chairman [and others]. 729p il $6 Am. inst. of mining & metallurgical engineers
622.7 Coal preparation 44-3479

"This volume contains papers on the handling and preparation of coal after it is mined and before it has reached the consumer. The twenty-three chapters, written by thirty-five specialists, include the following topics: Economics of coal preparation; Characteristics of coal; Screening; Breaking and crushing; Coal washers; Pneumatic coal cleaning; Froth flotation; Dewatering and drying; Plant operation; Loading. There are chapter bibliographies." N Y New Tech Bks

Library J 69:119 F 1 '44 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:42 Jl '44

MITCHELL, RUTH COMFORT (MRS W. S. YOUNG). They shall come again. 344p $2.50 Appleton-Century 44-4611

The time is just before and after Pearl Harbor. The story concerns a San Francisco woman radio broadcaster, whose isolationist views die a hard death.

Reviewed by Edith Roberts
Book Week p2 Je 18 '44 270w
Kirkus 12:149 Ap 1 '44 130w

"Appeal: to readers of light war novels and to those who enjoy romance." Thelma Brackett
Library J 69:354 Ap 15 '44 70w

"A story which is unhappily artificial and definitely outdated." Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p12 My 21 '44 70w

MIXTER, GEORGE WEBBER. Primer of navigation; with problems in practical work and complete tables. 2d ed 508p il $4.50 Van Nostrand
656 Navigation 44-464

Second edition of a work first published three years ago (Book Review Digest, 1941). "A new chapter on Sumner lines, an expansion of the treatment of the compass, and new problems are the chief changes. . . The Primer of Navigation Key by George W. Mixter and Ramon O. Williams (1943. 203p. Van Nostrand, $3. 44-464) is a supplementary volume for classroom instruction or independent study." (Booklist)

Booklist 40:287 Ap 15 '44

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:306 Ap 1 '44 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:10 Ja '44

Reviewed by J. M. Juran
N Y Times p3 D 17 '44 100w

MOCK, JAMES ROBERT, and THURBER, EVANGELINE (WHITMORE). Report on demobilization. 257p $3 Univ. of Okla. press
940.314473 Reconstruction (1914-1939)—U.S. Reconstruction (1939-)—U.S. 44-2803

A survey of the demobilization period following World war I, pointing out the lessons Americans should take to heart for the coming demobilization period after World war II. Contents: Democracy mobilizes for modern war; Peace overtakes democracy; Private panaceas; State and local planning; Bureaucracy at the helm; Blueprinting by Congress and the Executive; Getting the men out of uniform; Industry in transition; A new dignity for the toiler; The plight of the Federal employees; Performance versus plan; Blueprinting the future. Index.

"Here and there are certain findings that invite dispute, for Dr. Mock and Miss Thurber are not word-mincers, and air-castle builders are notoriously resentful of criticism. On the whole, however, Report on Demobilization is reasonable and persuasive, and unless a malign fate continues to decree that people may not learn from the past, or even profit by experience, it is bound to serve a great and useful purpose." George Creel
+ — Am Hist R 49:764 Jl '44 700w

"It is excellent history. It is a scholarly, well-documented and well-written performance." R. H. Rovere
+ Book Week p9 Mr 19 '44 500w
Booklist 40:282 Ap 15 '44
New Repub 110:770 Je 5 '44 90w

Reviewed by John MacCormac
N Y Times p8 Ap 23 '44 500w

"This is a careful, scholarly book, which speaks out against the folly of ditching every wartime control the instant that the All Clear sounds, of priding ourselves upon the speed of demobilizing soldiers and sailors and laborers from the tasks of war without providing a cogent answer to their question, 'Where do we go from here?' Well meriting the time of any thoughtful reader, this book suffers from one considerable flaw. Its materials are laid down page after page in a factually pedestrian way, which suggests that long and exclusive study of government documents carries for the historian a certain occupational hazard. It is, nonetheless, a valuable tract for the times and a jolt for the complacent." Dixon Wecter
+ — Sat R of Lit 27:15 My 6 '44 1000w
Springf'd Republican p6 Mr 13 '44 330w

MOEHLMAN, CONRAD HENRY. School and church: the American way. 178p $2.50 Harper 377.1 Church and education. Roman Catholic church in the U.S.—Education 44-4370

"An historical approach to the problem of religious instruction in public education." (Subtitle) Contents: The American Protestant age;

The fundamental surrenders of the Protestant age; On the way to the Constitution; The radicalism of the first amendment; The collapse of Protestant parochial education; Is the parochial school an island within American life? The sectarian school of yesterday and the free school of today; Can the Bible return to the classroom? Facing the facts. Bibliography. Index.

"Moehlman's energetic book, which adduces many cogent grounds for rejecting attempts to reintroduce religious teaching into public education, is an impressive restatement of the principles guiding the Founding Fathers in their judicious separation of church and state." Ephraim Fischoff

+ Ann Am Acad 235:169 S '44 180w

Booklist 40:371 Jl 1 '44

"In refuting the arguments for religion in the public schools and in defending the nonsectarian public school the author covers the field of practical difficulties and theoretical objections, based on the principle of separation of church and state. He also includes a good deal of valuable historical information on the relationship between church and state in America from 1620 to the present. Unfortunately, Professor Moehlman is not content with having both hands full. He undertakes a handbook of theology as well. He sits confidently in supreme judgment on all Christian creeds. He is master of the higher criticism of the Bible. He is the authority on the true meaning of Christianity, which is not the dogmatism of particular sects but a spirit of values, perhaps best expressed today by American democracy. But these digressions do not destroy the timeliness and importance of the book, and it would be a mistake to dismiss it as a diatribe. No Catholic would disagree with his principal point that sectarian differences make it impossible to teach the Bible or formal religion within the framework of the American public school." Emerson Hynes

+ — Commonweal 40:164 Je 2 '44 650w

"This book is an interesting, scholarly, and courageous attempt to analyze and describe the changes that have taken place in this country in the relations between church and state, with special reference to the question of religious education." A. J. Jones

+ Crozer Q 21:339 O '44 1000w

"The author is a professor in the Colgate-Rochester Divinity School. His thesis will not prove acceptable to Catholics generally, nor to all Protestants, but he does offer food for thought."

Kirkus 12:166 Ap 1 '44 130w

Reviewed by H. M. Kallen

Sat R of Lit 27:10 Je 3 '44 2000w

School & Society 59:288 Ap 22 '44 60w

Reviewed by F. E. Johnson

Survey 81:31 Ja '45 290w

Wis Lib Bul 40:125 O '44

MOFFATT, JAMES. The thrill of tradition. 201p $2 Macmillan

230 Tradition (theology) 44-1206

"Many will be surprised to find a thrill in tradition. A retired professor of church history, Union Theological Seminary, and translator of the Bible into everyday language, is well qualified to interpret tradition historically and currently. Book is based on the Richards' Lectures delivered before the University of Virginia in April, 1933. Correcting the conception of tradition as something 'dull and dragging,' author expresses conviction that it is a 'source and resource of life.' It is a living thing which links one generation to another." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 40:277 Ap 15 '44

Reviewed by R. C. Miller

Christian Century 61:751 Je 21 '44 800w

"A valuable study of a field which has probably never been studied in this way. It covers a wide range of thought, is full of stimulating quotations, and presents the true balance between tradition and growth."

+ Churchman 158:16 Mr 15 '44 180w

"To read this book is to find the enjoyment and insight, the literary skill and spiritual penetration which we associate with Moffatt. Here is the colorful warp of the author's thought with an encyclopaedic woof of other writers. The late Professor Ropes once urged us in class to check the references in books and thereby to learn much of the methods and resources of the author. To locate Moffatt's quotations is an enlightening labor. Not many men can range so confidently over the long landscapes of tradition. Nor would many call it a 'thrill.' In fact 'thrill' in the title was a hurdle to the reviewer even as occasional figures of speech ('rock of ages,' p. 156) needed definition more than a halo. Not intended as homiletic help, still the iron of this volume will strike many a spark from ministerial flint." D. M. Beck

+ Crozer Q 21:259 Jl '44 600w

"The profound scholarship and classic style which characterizes all of Dr. Moffatt's writings are here brought to bear upon a study of the continuity of Christian thought and practice from generation to generation. In these days when extreme changes are taking place with bewildering rapidity, it is well to be reminded that real progress is made by a nice balance of 'things both new and old'. This will appeal particularly to thoughtful inquirers concerning the continuing place of religion in a changing world."

+ Kirkus 12:67 F 1 '44 120w

"Recommended for mature readers in all types of libraries." O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 68:1049 D 15 '43 90w

Reviewed by H. G. Wood

+ Spec 173:342 O 13 '44 340w

Times [London] Lit Sup p454 S 16 '44 550w

MOLLARD, WESLEY. Essentials of precision inspection. 207p il $3; text ed $2.40 McGraw

621.9 Machinery—Inspection. Measuring instruments 44-3013

"Use and application of precision tools and instruments. Detailed instruction in use of various measuring instruments; technical and related information on checking location of holes, threads, gears, etc. and procedures to be followed in checking to specifications. Author is instructor in George Junior Trade School, Detroit." (Library J) Index.

Library J 69:119 F 1 '44 40w

Management R 33:108 Mr '44 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:7 Ja '44

MOLLOY, ANNE STEARNS (BAKER). Decky's secret; il. by George and Doris Hauman. 120p $2 Houghton

44-8681

A small boy living near the railroad track in a Vermont town is the hero. Decky was lonely because his father worked in a war plant, but the engineer of a daily train, who tossed him packages from the train, and a lonely little girl changed things for Decky. For ages nine to twelve.

Booklist 41:171 F 1 '45

Cath World 160:280 D '44 30w

"A simple little story, which is fun to read, with an underlying moral skillfully disguised."

+ Kirkus 12:402 S 1 '44 90w

"Good characterization and nice relationships throughout." E. G. Mullan

+ Library J 69:886 O 15 '44 50w

"A charming story of the 10-to-12 age, for which it was the October choice of the Junior Literary guild." L. R. S.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d O 22 '44 110w

Weekly Book Review p20 N 12 '44 300w

Wis Lib Bul 40:149 N '44

MOLONEY, MICHAEL FRANCIS. John Donne, his flight from mediaevalism. 223p $3; pa $2.50 Univ. of Ill.

B or 92 Donne, John A44-899

"The leading thought [in this study] is simple; it takes a middle stand between those who would see in Donne a belated medievalist,

MOLONEY, M. F.—Continued
or an out and out man of the Renaissance. Donne wrote as he did because of 'the perturbation and uncertainty that overtook him as he turned from Thomistic thought to the antithesis of that thought in a new-yet-old form.' . . To prove his point, Dr. Moloney employs an unusual technique. Instead of making an exhaustive study of Donne's deviations from the earlier spirit, he presents a long and captivating study of that spirit, in two magnificent chapters, one dealing with medieval synthesis and one with mysticism. Against this picture his briefer outline of Donne himself stands in clear perspective, not belittled but revealed." Cath World

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 D 24 '44 60w

"Those who write of poetry should have enough feeling for it to reflect its beauty in their own style. Dr. Moloney writes of Donne in a style suggestive of his subject, a prose at once smooth and powerful, set with poetic words and images. Behind this controlled and arresting expression lies a scholar's wealth of fact, and the sure, synthetic vision of a thinker." Margaret Williams
+ Cath World 160:89 O '44 360w

MONAGHAN, FRANK. World war II; an illustrated history. v 1 547p maps $5; de luxe ed $7.50 c1943 J. G. Ferguson & associates, 122 S. Michigan av, Chicago

940.5497 World war, 1939—Pictorial works (43-13309)

For descriptive note see Annual for 1943.

"The text is well written, but the excellent and abundant illustrations, e.g., 'The Destruction of Rotterdam,' 'Tragedy in a Polish Field,' 'Five Guilty Faces' at Munich, and the book stacks of the twice-destroyed Louvain Library, are the feature that distinguishes this volume from other accounts. . . World War II is recommended."
+ Subscription Bks Bul 15:39 Jl '44 500w

MONSELL, HELEN ALBEE. Dolly Madison: Quaker girl; il. by Sandra James. 182p $1.50 Bobbs

B or 92 Madison, Dorothy (Payne) Todd—Juvenile literature 44-3793

Stories of the childhood of Dolly Madison, with a few brief glimpses of her two marriages and the burning of Washington during the War of 1812. For grades three to five.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p7 Ag 20 '44 230w
Booklist 40:360 Je 15 '44

"This is delightful, and interesting. The material has a freshness of approach; it tells not only stories of Dolly Payne's Quaker childhood, but gives a feel of the times and the personalities."
+ Kirkus 12:171 Ap 1 '44 170w

"A merry, rather charming little book, it does much to further the cause of biography among those of tender years." S. J. Johnson
+ Library J 69:703 S 1 '44 70w

"Do not feel this necessary to public library collection, since it has no literary value and historical figures and background would mean little to children of eight to ten. Do not recommend." L. K. Johns
— Library J 69:703 S 1 '44 80w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell
N Y Times p11 Jl 2 '44 120w

"Like all the popular series 'Childhood of Famous Americans,' this large-type book for children from six to twelve goes but a little way into biography and concentrates on life and society surrounding the early years of its subjects. . . There are already fifteen of these pleasant little books; school libraries can make good use of them." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ap 23 '44 150w

MONTAGU, MONTAGUE FRANCIS ASHLEY-. See Ashley-Montague, M. F.

MONTGOMERY, MRS ELIZABETH RIDER. Story behind great inventions; drawings by Vartanian. 254p $2 McBride

608 Inventions—Juvenile literature 44-9764

Brief stories of the inventions and discoveries which go to make up modern civilization. Partial contents: Printing for poor people (movable type—1456?); Lines o' type (linotype—1885); Magic messengers (telephone—1876); When wireless became radio (audion tube—1906); The mystery of the chemical cabinet (photo developer—1839); Movies don't move (motion-picture projector—1894); "The fire engine" (steam engine—1769); Three Jennies (spinning jenny—1767); The cotton cleaner (cotton gin—1793); Mechanical seamstress (sewing machine—1845); The eye that never sleeps (photoelectric cell—1887-1924); The struggle with aluminum (aluminum extraction—1886); Bedrooms on wheels (Pullman sleeper—1859); Quantity cars (Ford—1892-1912); "Fulton's folly" (steamboat—1807); Anchored airplane (Link trainer—1928). General bibliography. For junior and senior high schools.

Booklist 41:156 Ja 15 '45

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 41:129 N 17 '44 10w

"Excellent content material for social studies, and should appeal tremendously to students whose special interest is science, stimulating interest in further research."
+ Kirkus 12:436 S 15 '44 90w

"Will appeal to junior high school age. Recommended for public and school libraries." E. T. Dobbins
+ Library J 69:1107 D 15 '44 70w
Springf'd Republican p4d D 17 '44 70w

MONTGOMERY, RUTHERFORD GEORGE (EVERITT PROCTOR, pseud). Big Brownie; il. by Jacob Landau. 222p $2 Holt

Bears—Legends and stories 44-3047

The big brown bears of Kodiak Island are the subject of this book. The villain of the story is a sheep rancher, who plans to exterminate the bears. The daughter of a nearby rancher loves the big brown bears and plans to outwit the sheep raiser.

"One gets a feeling of the bears as almost human, yet at no time does the author descend to endowing them with unbelievable human qualities."
+ Kirkus 12:98 F 15 '44 70w

"Not a necessary book but useful for its descriptions of the country and its almost extinct big bears." A. M. Anderson
Library J 69:464 My 15 '44 80w

"In 'Big Brownie,' the tale of a Kodiak bear, Rutherford Montgomery combines an authentic picture of the ways of the largest flesh-eating animal in the world, with an excellent story of life in the open." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p25 Ag 20 '44 160w

"The story is based on a dramatic true story of the successful fight of nature lovers and conservationists to protect the Kodiak bear, and older girls and boys will enjoy it although it is not as well written as some of the author's earlier books." L. W. K.
+ — Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 2 '44 110w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p5 Je 11 '44 350w
Wis Lib Bul 40:134 O '44

MONTGOMERY, RUTHERFORD GEORGE (EVERITT PROCTOR, pseud). Last cruise of the Jeannette. 195p $2 Presbyterian bd. 44-6669

"When in the late seventies, the 'Jeannette' sailed on her ill-fated voyage to the North Pole, fifteen-year-old Danny O'Hara went with her as a stowaway. Caught in the ice and held for two years, the ship finally sank leaving surviving officers and crew to make their way back to civilization. During the long trek through the Arctic wilderness, Danny proves himself worthy of his seafaring ancestors. A stirring tale of hardship and peril based on historical records. For boys thirteen to fifteen." Library J

"Danny O'Hara's adventures are told in a swift-moving sequence which will grip and hold young people who like Arctic exploration. The main facts of the story are true, but the hardships and suffering have not been made too painful for the reader." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 20:289 Jl '44 80w

"The author glosses over—unnecessarily—some of the grimmer aspects of the story as it actually happened. But it is, in any guise, good reading."
+ Kirkus 12:234 My 15 '44 110w

Reviewed by E. D. Briggs
Library J 69:556 Je 15 '44 100w

MONTROSS, LYNN. War through the ages; decorations by L. K. Hartzell. 941p maps $5 Harper

355 Military art and science. Military history 44-9217

"A survey of the art and science of killing people in large numbers, as developed between 490 B.C. and 1944 A.D. Mr. Montross tells the whole story of war, from Alexander and the spear to Rommel and the buzz bomb, and has not missed a chance to map a battle or diagram a campaign. The refinement of the technics of warfare, as the author shows, has been steady and constant and there is no reason to suppose, on the basis of this record, that it will be halted." New Yorker

---

"'War Through the Ages' has far more merits than faults, and I hope it finds a wide reading." J. I. Greene
+ Book Week p10 N 5 '44 650w
Booklist 41:147 Ja 15 '45

Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook
Current Hist 7:496 D '44 110w

"Good as a general source, not so good as a scholarly analysis of any of the wars, the market for this is conjectural—falling between the permanent and the popular. A previous interest in the subject would seem to be a prerequisite for a thorough reading of the book which is very long."
+ — Kirkus 12:335 Ag 1 '44 170w

"Recommended."
+ Library J 69:1003 N 15 '44 60w

Reviewed by I. D. W. Talmadge
N Y Times p20 D 17 '44 480w

"The author has not written a preachment against war; he has left the grim implications of his tale alone. Military strategists, amateur and professional, should find his book something in the nature of an answer to their prayers."
+ New Yorker 20:85 N 4 '44 130w

"Few leaders of any repute and few battles or campaigns of importance are omitted though, necessarily, the mention is brief with rarely more than a page being devoted to any single engagement. Whether the selection and emphasis are entirely satisfactory will depend upon the reader's inclinations. To this reviewer it seems unnecessary to devote 50,000 words to World War II. . . There is a further unbalance in that notice is entirely lacking of Assyria and Babylon and of Egypt, a nation that controlled the Near East for centuries. On the other side of the ledger Mr. Montross, rightly, is alert to the importance of Genghis Khan, Bajazet, Tamerlane and other medieval Orientals whose conquests and depradations had such momentous and lasting influence upon Europe." P. J. Searles
+ — Weekly Book Review p2 Ja 7 '45 1250w

MOODY, MILDRED OLIVIA. See Eakin, M. O. M.

MOOK, HUBERTUS JOHANNES VAN. Netherlands Indies and Japan; battle on paper, 1940-1941. 138p map $2 Norton [6s Allen, G]

327.9 Netherlands Indies—Foreign relations—Japan. Japan—Foreign relations—Netherlands Indies. World war, 1939—Netherlands Indies 44-6578

"A chronicle of facts concerning the relations between the Netherlands in Asia and Japan during the last two years before the outbreak of war in the Pacific. Its scope is limited to political and economic affairs of which the author has a firsthand knowledge." (Pref) The author was formerly director of economic affairs in the Netherlands Indies, until the time of the Japanese invasion. No index.

Booklist 41:54 O 15 '44

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
N Y Times p12 Ag 13 '44 440w

"If the booklet is not 'history' in the academic sense, it nevertheless will be an important source for future historians, for Dr. Van Mook offers here a lively chronicle of the events in which he himself took such a prominent part. The story was known in its broad outlines, but this volume contains the principal documents and interesting details of the negotiations heretofore unknown." J. O. M. Broek
+ Pacific Affairs 17:500 D '44 390w

"Its scope is limited to political and economic affairs of which the author has first-hand knowledge; there is little comment, for the facts speak eloquently enough for themselves, but they are admirably documented."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p314 Jl 1 '44 420w

Reviewed by F. R. Dulles
Weekly Book Review p3 Ag 27 '44 650w

MOORE, CHARLES ALEXANDER, ed. Philosophy—East and West. 334p $3.50 Princeton univ. press

104 Philosophy A44-5406

"Thanks to the wise encouragement of President Gregg M. Sinclair of the University of Hawaii, we have in this volume the fruit of a conference of philosophers held at that institution during the summer of 1939. Eight competent scholars, representing China, Japan and the United States, share with us their earnest and profound reflections regarding relations in the higher life of man. As expressed by the editor, the general purpose was 'to determine the possibility of a world philosophy through a synthesis of the ideas and ideals of East and West, and to reach conclusions in the form of specific suggestions concerning the most fruitful ways in which such a synthesis could be effected.'" Christian Century

---

"Considering the present conflict of ideals in both East and West, some world consensus on values is a consummation devoutly to be wished. We are in great need of an international ethos to bear the strains of a truly international society. The volume before us can scarcely be said to have achieved the end in view. That must enlist the labors of many more minds. Yet it represents a courageous and thoroughly intelligent attempt to do something in the direction of world philosophical perspective." C. H. Hamilton
Christian Century 62:19 Ja 3 '45 650w
Current Hist 8:71 Ja '45 100w

MOORE, GERALD. Unashamed accompanist. 84p $1.50 Macmillan [6s Ascherberg, Hopwood & Crew]

781.66 Musical accompaniment 44-47423

"This book was written in the fond hope that it might indicate the lines along which a would-be follower of the gentle art of accompaniment should work; it was written to arouse more interest in—and to show the importance of—the accompaniment." (Pref) The author is a professional pianist and accompanist, born in England, whose work has taken him all over Europe and this continent.

MOORE, GERALD—Continued

Booklist 41:135 Ja 1 '45

Christian Century 61:1386 N 29 '44 90w

Kirkus 12:388 S 1 '44 90w

"Mr. Moore attacks the misconceptions about his job from a positive angle, accusing no one, blaming no one; but merely describing in sober, sensible terms what the accompanist's job is, some of the problems he encounters and why accompanists are so important. In this way not only has he written a very useful book but, since Mr. Moore is a capable writer, a reasonably entertaining one." M. A. Schubart

+ N Y Times p12 Ja 21 '45 360w

"The author's style of writing is almost conversational in its directness and simplicity. Piano students and amateur pianists will learn much from this little book which is unique in its field, and music lovers will profit by a new appraisal of the accompanist and his contribution in music-making." Willard Rhodes

+ Sat R of Lit 28:32 Ja 20 '45 500w

"Delightfully humorous and instructive book." O. P. Rice

+ Springf'd Republican p4d D 24 '44 500w

"The world, as Mr. Moore was told when he was young, is overstocked with brilliant solo pianists, but there are precious few good accompanists in the field. If this delightful little book gets into the hands of pianists early enough in their careers, the balance of nature will be adjusted. For it not only tells what a good accompanist means to a singer, and how he is to develop his powers, his tact and his musical understanding, but it is so full of the particular pleasure of being a first-rate, top-flight accompanist that it makes any pianist want to try it."

+ Weekly Book Review p8 D 24 '44 300w

MOORE, GRACE. You're only human once. 275p $2.50 Doubleday

B or 92 Singers—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 44-2958

Autobiography of the American operatic and concert star, who also attained fame in films and on the stage. She begins with her childhood in Tennessee, and brings the story of her career up to date.

Reviewed by H. T. Murdock

Book Week p2 Mr 26 '44 450w

Booklist 40:282 Ap 15 '44

Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '44

"There should be a wide popular audience for this informal, often entertaining autobiography. Throughout names and more names, names of bigtime show business, social, artistic and musical, stories of her many beaux, the whole a pattern of ambitions achieved and a good time had by all. Definitely a popular—rather than a musical—autobiography."

+ Kirkus 12:33 Ja 15 '44 280w

"Her autobiography is lively, humorous, remarkably honest and forthright. It is reasonably well written. . . Recommended." George Freedley

+ Library J 69:202 Mr 1 '44 100w

Reviewed by Jack Gould

N Y Times p7 Mr 19 '44 500w

"In writing, Miss Moore has succeeded in really humanizing her own lacquered and brittle personality, and presented glimpses of the girl from Tennessee who has always been impressed with her entrance into the land of theater and opera, and at the same time been able to find frank enjoyment in her own colorful career." L. S. Munn

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 19 '44 600w

Theatre Arts 28:320 My '44 150w

"It's hard to stop reading Grace Moore's autobiography; when you reach the last page you may feel as if you had been pulling out the contents of one of those vast piece-bags that accumulate in the workroom of a theatrical dressmaker. For here, too, are bits and pieces of stage stuff, all shining and some spurious, tossed happily together without pattern but creating an effect of unity because every piece in the pile holds some hint of excitement and a good time." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p12 Ap 2 '44 650w

MOORE, HARRY F. S. Shed a bitter tear. 142p $2 Doubleday

44-5992

Murder mystery story.

Boston Globe p19 Jl 5 '44 60w

Kirkus 12:184 Ap 15 '44 70w

"What the author has tried to present is a psychological study of murder, and to a certain extent he has succeeded. It is unfortunate that the story is marred by badly drawn characters and eccentric dialogue." I. A.

+ — N Y Times p10 Je 25 '44 70w

"Odd—but good."

+ Sat R of Lit 27:52 Jl 17 '44 40w

"H. F. S. Moore's characters are average dwellers in Mystery Land. Writing is by main strength." Will Cuppy

— Weekly Book Review p14 Je 25 '44 150w

MOORE, MRS ISABEL. It's time to say goodbye. 250p $2 Farrar

44-735

Story of the present war and a group of American women, most of whom were left at home when their husbands went to war. Especially it is the story of Tessa Barnes who grew up during the months when her Johnny was in Africa, and was able to face even the prospect of losing Johnny to another woman.

Kirkus 11:558 D 15 '43 120w

"However superficial and conventional, 'It's Time to Say Goodbye' nevertheless stands up to some of the realities of a world at war, and by its grain of truth makes its chocolate coating respectable." Katharine Simonds

+ — Sat R of Lit 27:24 Ap 1 '44 270w

"Isabel Moore handles her theme with skill; the touch is light but the brew is bitter." Lisle Bell

+ — Weekly Book Review p18 Mr 12 '44 100w

MOORE, MARIANNE. Nevertheless. 14p $1.25 Macmillan

811 44-8821

Six poems by the author of What Are Years (Book Review Digest, 1941). All the poems have been previously published in periodicals.

"Impeccable verse." Leo Kennedy

+ Book Week p6 O 15 '44 180w

Christian Century 61:1355 N 22 '44 50w

"Marianne Moore's little book, really a pamphlet in hard covers, is filled with tight-lipped, well worked poems. Miss Moore does not utilize the social consciousness, the theatrical philosophy or the passion of her younger peers, but she has the wisdom to stick to the niche of syllabic patterns she has created for herself. 'Nevertheless' is more of our highly esteemed Marianne Moore. There is no doubt that in her 'In Distrust of Merits' she is not only at her best, but gives us one of the finest war poems we have had by a first-line poet." Oscar Williams

+ New Repub 111:534 O 23 '44 100w

Reviewed by W. H. Auden

+ N Y Times p7 O 15 '44 900w

"Marianne Moore's fifth book of poetry is her best." Louise Bogan

+ New Yorker 20:95 N 11 '44 600w

"T. S. Eliot said of Marianne Moore that her poems form part of the small body of durable poetry written in our time, and that it was poetry 'in which an original sensibility and alert intelligence and deep feeling have been engaged in maintaining the life of the English language.' The unique qualities of it are all in this tiny collection of six poems: her concentration, her toughness, her delicacy of insight and observation." Elizabeth Drew

+ Weekly Book Review p3 O 22 '44 430w

MOORE, THOMAS VERNER. Nature and treatment of mental disorders; foreword by Edward A. Strecker. 312p $4 Grune

616.8 Psychological, Pathological 43-15718

"This book is presented by the author to clarify the field of psychopathology for physicians, psychiatric social workers, and psychiatric nurses. It is divided into four parts dealing with 'Psychopathology, Therapy of Psychological Analysis, Miscellaneous Techniques and Organic Emotional Disorders.' At the end is an appendix giving 'Classification and Definition of the Clinical Entities of Psychiatry.' " Am J Pub Health

---

"In this book Father Moore has made a worthy effort to summarize a vast field of psychological and psychiatric theory, and has accompanied this summary with case material illustrating his use of theories in practical work with individual cases. The author is frank to utilize what he can of theories that these fields present. The reader is at liberty to go further if he wishes, but he is not encouraged toward a goal of therapy that is more than he can take in the face of his common sense and individual experience." E. L. Richards

Am J Pub Health 34:289 Mr '44 230w

"Wide experience, high professional reputation as a specialist and the unique advantage of combining in himself the vocation of a priest with thorough medical training give Dom Moore the right to speak with peculiar authority in the field of clinical psychiatry."

+ Cath World 158:510 F '44 90w

"The reader is impressed with the thoroughness with which the author has thought out his point of view and the systematic way he presents his theory of personality disorders and his methodology of treatment. The book includes a helpful appendix classifying and defining the clinical entities of psychiatry." E. R. Groves

+ Social Forces 23:218 D '44 160w

MORAES, F. R., and STIMSON, ROBERT. Introduction to India; il. by C. H. G. Moorhouse. 176p maps $2 Oxford

915.4 India 43-51342

For descriptive note see Annual for 1943.

Bookmark 5:13 Ja '44

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 22:501 Ap '44 20w

"An excellent book that can be read with pleasure and profit not only by foreign soldiers now stationed in India but by everyone interested in and unfamiliar with the Indian scene. This is the briefest and best introduction to India in the English language that I have seen." Krishnalal Shridharani

+ Nation 158:314 Mr 11 '44 300w

"The authors write with great understanding of the value of words and the reading list and glossary of Hindu terms are an invaluable complement to the excellent text. This little book is integrated and informative, well worth the reading." John Stigall

+ Pacific Affairs 17:355 S '44 120w

"The alphabetically 'Classified Information,' covering the last seventy pages, provides brief answers to almost any question which may arise in conversation on Indian matters; but some of the space given to biographical notices of relatively minor figures would have been better utilized by brief descriptions of the great cities and outstanding sights of a land so rich in monuments of the past. The comparative diagrams, as for instance of rural and urban populations in India, the U.S.A. and this country, are a helpful feature."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p371 Jl 29 '44 210w

"The authors appear to have little sympathy for the Moslem interests and the sketch of the constitutional issues since 1919 is absurdly inadequate; but the presentation of the social picture could hardly be bettered. One cannot be other than grateful for such an eminently usable compendium." C. H. Driver

+ — Yale R n s 33:565 spring '44 140w

MORAIS, HERBERT MONTFORT. Struggle for American freedom; the first two hundred years. 320p $2.75 Int. pubs.

973 U.S.—History. U.S.—Politics and government 44-9822

"This volume, which covers the period from the founding of Jamestown to the election of Jefferson to the presidency (1607-1801) is intended first of all to relate the salient political, social, and cultural facts of American history to material forces at play. Secondly, it seeks to give the reader an understanding of how democracy was built in this country. . . Thirdly, the book attempts to show how the struggle for freedom in America was connected with that in Europe." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"All in all Mr. Morais's book will not be especially stimulating to the general reader for whom it was intended. Somehow it falls short of portraying the vivid colorful nature of the American nation's beginning." J. B. Gibson

— Am Hist R 50:131 O '44 650w

" 'The Struggle for American Freedom,' reflecting Marxist assumptions, is also somewhat pedantic in its literary style. One of its flaws is indicated by the fact that in adopting Beard's economic interpretation of the American Constitution, the author inadequately explains the tremendous freedom which that document allowed the democratic impulse. Still, one gets a satisfactory background for our own struggle for freedom today." Willard Shelton

+ — Book Week p10 Jl 30 '44 140w

Reviewed by S. L. Jackson

Springf'd Republican p8 My 26 '44 450w

MORE, LOUIS TRENCHARD. Life and works of the Honourable Robert Boyle. 313p $4.50 Oxford

B or 92 Boyle, Robert 44-1405

Biography of the most famous son of the wealthy Earl of Cork, reputed to be the wealthiest man in Great Britain in his day. His son, the Honorable Robert Boyle, altho of delicate constitution, became a great scholar, and was instrumental in effecting the change "from scholastic to modern natural philosophy." Index.

Reviewed by Walter Hendricks

Book Week p7 Mr 19 '44 340w

Booklist 40:234 Mr 1 '44

"Strangely, it can be disappointing to read what one must admit is a very fine book. Such is my reaction to this brilliant work emanating from a comprehensive understanding of what truly constitutes relevant biographical material. Here in the twilight of his life, when most men would be indolently or irritably awaiting the end, More has produced yet another work which displays his remarkable capacity to take cognizance of all related facts before favoring a given interpretation. . . This reviewer is sad, because actually all of the contributions that More has made are basically as stimulating and commendable as is this one. It was his fearlessness that robbed them of influence." J. Mc A. Kater

+ Commonweal 40:306 Jl 14 '44 600w

"The first seven chapters present a superbly vivid and absorbing account of the family, social and political background of Robert, the seventh son of that 'captain of industry,' the Earl of Cork. . . The story of the Invisible College of Baconians . . . is skillfully retold. The rest of the book offers a more unified account of Boyle's scientific, moralistic, theological and literary claims to posterity than one would think possible, to judge from the scattered condition of the ideas of the celebrated virtuoso." P. P. Wiener

+ N Y Times p20 Ap 2 '44 1050w

"Dr. More reviews Boyle's accomplishments and place in science in a biography which is intended for scholars who are interested in the history of science, but which can be read with profit by any one." Waldemar Kaempffert

+ Sat R of Lit 27:26 My 20 '44 450w

MORE, L. T.—Continued

"Many direct quotations, giving Boyle's ideas in his own words, are skilfully woven into the general account, so that by the time one finishes the book one feels he knows the man. . . This book is highly recommended to all who are interested either in 17th century England or in the background of modern experimental science." W. B. Kirkham

+ Springf'd Republican p8 F 29 '44 470w

MORECOCK, EARLE MONROE. Direct-current circuits. (Rochester athenaeum and mechanics inst. Rochester tech. ser) 387p il $3.25 Harper

621.3132 Electric currents. Electric circuits 44-7704

"The fundamentals of electricity and electric circuits are presented as a text for use in vocational and technical schools and junior colleges. The author has kept in view the practical objectives of such a course by emphasizing the importance of laboratory practice. Thus, experiments, problems, questions and sample data sheets are given at the end of each chapter. The first two chapters are a general discussion of the principles of electricity and magnetism, followed by material on instruments for measuring voltage, current and resistance, power and energy, conductors and insulation, batteries, the magnetic circuit, electromagnetic induction and capacitance." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 69:700 S 1 '44 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:43 Jl '44

MOREHEAD, ALBERT H. Modern Hoyle; rules and instructions for all the most popular games. 308p $2 Winston

795.4 Cards. Games 44-8808

"Instructions for approximately 250 card and board games. Reasonably simple and easy to follow." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 41:135 Ja 1 '45

New Yorker 20:86 O 14 '44 50w

MORGAN, ARTHUR ERNEST. Edward Bellamy. 468p il $5 Columbia univ. press

B or 92 Bellamy, Edward A44-5392

"First full-length biography of the Chicopee Falls utopian and social reformer, based on the unpublished Life by Mason Green, recently deciphered manuscripts of Bellamy's and information from the latter's widow, son and daughter. The picture emerges of a courteous but reserved recluse, living almost entirely on eggs, milk and whiskey and (rather strangely) fond of playing war games with his young son. Half of book is devoted to Looking Backward, the perennially fascinating and seminal prophetic romance, though Bellamy's other literary work, notably the unfinished novels, The Duke of Stockbridge and Eliot Carson (unpublished), receives due attention." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

"This straightforward, thoughtful biography of Edward Bellamy depends almost entirely upon fresh source material for its facts. It is an appealing picture of a man a century ahead of his contemporaries in his thinking—a man who changed the lives of Veblen and John Dewey and profoundly influenced Edouard Benes and Aristide Briand. Read this biography, then read Bellamy's 'Looking Backward,' one of the few really prophetic books of the 19th century." Sterling North

+ Book Week p2 D 17 '44 320w

Booklist 41:123 D 15 '44

Boston Globe p34 N 29 '44 110w

"Very fully documented from personal papers, the book is a valuable contribution to the social and intellectual history of a perplexing period. Some readers will feel that efforts to be scrupulously fair on all possible points of disagreement have made it longer than necessary, and others may feel that the author has been too self-effacing, that he might have given more of his own views on such questions as Bellamy's ambiguous loyalty to the church, or the problem of incentives." S. L. Thrupp

+ — Canadian Forum 24:237 Ja '45 550w

"At long last, here is a vivid, scholarly life of Edward Bellamy." E. W. MacNair

+ Christian Century 62:17 Ja 3 '45 800w

Reviewed by Francis Downing

Commonweal 41:276 D 29 '44 1450w

"A book for any type of library." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 69:812 O 1 '44 110w

Reviewed by McAlister Coleman

Nation 159:803 D 30 '44 1050w

"Although Edward Bellamy was one of the most influential writers of modern times, he has never had an adequate biography. Nor has Dr. Morgan, in spite of careful work upon materials that might have made the definitive study, given him one. Instead he has turned out a series of topical essays, generally informative but often repetitious, on various phases of Bellamy's life." Richard Hofstadter

New Repub 112:58 Ja 8 '45 950w

"As a biography this is neither orthodox nor wholly satisfying in its unorthodoxy. Organized on philosophical rather than chronological principles, the book makes a partial concession to chronology: the first five chapters are devoted, respectively, to the New England setting, Bellamy's family background, some boyhood lucubrations, a skeletal account of the chief events of his uneventful life, and some valuable information on his personal appearance and habits. These chapters are repetitious and mechanical, but they give a fairly memorable picture of the sage of Chicopee Falls and a general orientation toward the quality of his mind. The result is an important spade-work book—an oddly frustrating conglomerate of sound material and intellectual junk." Carlos Baker

+ — N Y Times p7 Ja 28 '45 800w

"A valuable book, based on unpublished documents, by the remarkable hydraulic engineer who has been both president of Antioch College and chairman of the T. V. A."

+ New Yorker 20:67 D 23 '44 130w

"While the book would have been more readable had some of the large number of quotations been omitted and repetitious statements avoided, and while the reader might not follow the biographer's appraisals of Bellamy's contributions in certain fields of endeavor, the American public owes a debt of gratitude to Mr. Morgan for writing so authoritative, complete, valuable, and absorbing a biography of one of America's foremost seers and prophets." H. W. Laidler

+ Survey G 34:26 Ja '45 650w

MORGAN, CHARLES. House of Macmillan (1843-1943). 248p $3 (8s 6d) Macmillan

655.473 Macmillan, firm, publishers, London 44-4670

History of the publishing house of Macmillan, covering its first hundred years. Founded by two brothers, Daniel and Alexander Macmillan, in 1843, the firm flourished and spread until there were branches in New York, Canada, and India. The book begins with the poverty-stricken childhood of the brothers Macmillan in Scotland, describes the founding of the first bookshop in Cambridge, and then the years of expansion, when the best-known English writers were on their lists. Index.

Reviewed by Sterling North

Book Week p2 Je 4 '44 230w

Booklist 40:385 Jl 15 '44

"Charles Morgan's story of the great publishing house of Macmillan is one of the most absorbing books issued in Britain this fall. It brings in many of the most eminent literary names of the last century—Tennyson, Hardy, Kipling, Walpole who were all Macmillan men; and Shaw and Barrie, who might have been, but were rejected; and it modestly omits one contemporary author who certainly does not lessen the luster of the firm, Charles Morgan himself." Harold Hobson

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 22 '44 900w

"Charles Morgan, the distinguished author of 'The Fountain,' has written, carefully, this success story, 'The House of Macmillan,' and we find it all the things a success story is supposed to be: illuminating, inspiring, stimulating to our own effort, tending to reestablish whatever may have been impaired of our faith in man."
+ Commonweal 40:186 Je 9 '44 650w
Current Hist 7:54 Jl '44 70w

"The Macmillan imprint has graced many important works . . . but the value of this particular book, especially during wartime, is dubious. The material covered, veering from biography to catalogue to criticism, demands a great deal more space and a more genuinely uncommissioned interest from the author."
— New Repub 111:54 Jl 10 '44 150w

"The only objection I can find to Mr. Morgan's book is that on p. 213 he allows himself a petulant outburst, surprising in its unfairness. (What contemporary writer has ever reproached the Georgian poets with being 'unselfpitying'?) Otherwise, the book is as sensible as it is interesting and carefully written, a chronicle worthy of the illustrious enterprise it celebrates." Raymond Mortimer
+ — New Statesman & Nation 26:340 N 20 '43 950w

" 'The House of Macmillan' is a volume that publishers, authors and critics will read with pleasure and profit, and one that book-lovers will relish. Written con amore, it suffers from the defects of this merit: Mr. Morgan has little to say about the firm's weaknesses and is generous in his assessment of its mistakes. But his warmth never becomes effusion, and his modesty is conspicuous in this day of wholesale ballyhoo." C. J. Rolo
+ — N Y Times p24 Je 11 '44 1050w
New Yorker 20:66 Jl 1 '44 300w

"An entertaining story of the book world's liveliest centenarian."
Time 43:98 F 14 '44 1200w

"The subject of Charles Morgan's orderly, gracious and limpid narrative is the House of Macmillan—a 'long-term' publishing business, of which endurance is the aim and continuity the life-blood. . . An outstanding merit in Mr. Charles Morgan's book is his skilful care to keep in touch with the history of thought, of which the lists of such a firm of publishers are a necessary reflection."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p560 N 20 '43 1750w
Weekly Book Review p6 Jl 9 '44 300w

MORGAN, EDMUND SEARS. Puritan family; essays on religion and domestic relations in seventeenth-century New England. 118p il $1.50; pa $1 Boston public lib, Copley Sq, Boston 17

917.4 New England—Social life and customs. Puritans 44-7048

"The six chapters deal with various aspects of Puritan domestic relations, such as love and marriage, parenthood, the education of children, dealings with servants, and the family as a unit in the general social structure. The book is based on wide research among printed and manuscript sources, largely in the Prince Collection in the Boston Public Library but also elsewhere." Am Hist R

"This small volume is the outcome, as the author states, of a Ph.D. thesis but it has none of the all too usual characteristics of that type of literature. It is a fine work of scholarship, not at all pedantic or immature, and is well written and interesting. The critical 'apparatus' is all there although Dr. Morgan, young as I presume he is, has a style and knows how to write a book and not just do spade work." J. T. Adams
+ Am Hist R 50:133 O '44 480w

Reviewed by E. W. Burgess
Am J Soc 50:160 S '44 550w

"These essays are well documented with abundant sources and helpfully illustrated with facsimiles from the sources. The material has been well assimilated and the result is entertaining and instructive." A. W. Calhoun
+ Am Soc R 9:594 O '44 350w

MORGAN, THOMAS BRYNMOR. Listening post; eighteen years on Vatican hill. 242p $3 Putnam

282 Popes—Temporal power. Roman Catholic church—Relations (diplomatic) 44-3061

An American correspondent, who represented the United Press in Rome for many years, describes the machinery by which the Vatican is informed of news. He includes some autobiographical material. Index.

"The book contains many stories of the difficulties of day-to-day coverage of the Vatican and reveals some hitherto deeply guarded secrets on how news is obtained. Morgan's editors would have done him a service if they had rearranged his material in the interests of better continuity, for in its present form the book hops from one subject to another a little too abruptly to prevent confusion in the mind of the reader." Harold Ettlinger
Book Week p6 Ap 2 '44 400w
Booklist 40:295 My 1 '44

"Written in an engaging style and compressing an enormous amount of historical information and gossipy detail into its two hundred and thirty pages, Mr. Morgan's book will surely be read with interest by persons of every class and creed in all quarters of the world."
+ Cath World 159:189 My '44 180w
Library J 69:263 Mr 15 '44 20w

Reviewed by Nicola Chiaromonte
New Repub 110:610 My 1 '44 550w

"The book is rambling, sometimes unnecessarily concerned with trivial matters, and often very personal. Nevertheless, it is beguiling and interesting. Its pages reflect a shrewd observer and a hard head. No one who is concerned with the policy of the Pope will wish to forego the pleasure and the profit of its company." G. N. Shuster
+ — N Y Times p6 Ap 2 '44 900w

"There are many engaging chapters in this intimate and readable book. It is crowded with amusing anecdotes and fascinating historical details on American-Papal relations during the last 50 years. Mr. Morgan paints remarkably graphic portraits of the Cardinal Merry del Val and his successors, of several Popes, of American diplomats and bishops who came to Rome. He describes luxurious banquets and ostentatious audiences in Vatican City. The history of the Vatican is told with accuracy." H. B. Kranz
+ Sat R of Lit 27:29 Ap 22 '44 600w

"It is hardly an important book; but it does provide a pleasant way of acquiring some human sense of a great and, in this world, a very important institution." Walter Millis
+ Weekly Book Review p4 Ap 2 '44 800w

MORGAN, WILLARD D., ed. See Complete photographer

MORISON, STANLEY. English prayer books. (Problems of worship) 142p $1.75 Macmillan [6s Cambridge]

264.039 Church of England—Liturgy and ritual [44-5420]

"An introduction to the literature of Christian public worship." (Subtitle) "This is the first volume in a series entitled Problems of Worship and edited by the Deans of St. Paul's and Liverpool. . Mr Morison's book is concerned with facts rather than values, and he has compressed a great amount of information into fewer than 150 pages." (Spec)

Reviewed by Anselm Strittmatter
Commonweal 40:381 Ag 4 '44 210w

"Here and there, Mr. Morison is open to criticism. . . The implications of the phrases 'the royal religion' and 'the royal Church' are such as most Anglican historians and theologians would repudiate. In such passages highly controversial issues are latent; but they are not characteristic of a volume which is concerned to trace the development of Christian worship from the beginning."
+ — Spec 172:108 F 4 '44 190w

MORISON, STANLEY—Continued

"The Alcuin Club, which for fifty years has made so valuable a contribution to practical liturgical study, has cooperated in the production of a book worthy—even in war-time—of its traditions and of those of the Cambridge University Press."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p621 D 25 '43 650w

MORLEY, CHRISTOPHER DARLINGTON. Middle kingdom: poems, 1929-1944. 118p $2 Harcourt

811 44-8228

Collection of some hundred poems which "include light verse, vers de société, light verse with a serious undertone, pieces on literature or literary figures, and a number of the 'translations' from the Chinese, most of which are prose epigrams divided into lines for concise effect." (N Y Times)

"Christopher Morley's verse is strictly and unassumingly light-weight, and it has its charm and uses." Leo Kennedy

Book Week p6 O 15 '44 130w

Booklist 41:87 N 15 '44

Reviewed by Elizabeth Drew

Commonweal 41:282 D 29 '44 70w

"There are a few stray bits of sheer beauty, fragmentary lines; the range is from serious lyrics to nonsense—I liked the nonsense best."

+ Kirkus 12:467 O 1 '44 90w

"Since Mr. Morley is an expert technician, ranging through couplets, sonnets, ballades, and stanzas with equal ease, I find his verse more satisfying than his 'Chinese' selections. Yet among these epigrams are many casual fancies which charm one especially by the random thoughts they capture, thoughts which strike one frequently with the pleasure of recognition. In short, they are pleasant, hardly weightily important, and such, I suppose, is just what Mr. Morley intended." Robert Hillyer

+ N Y Times p8 O 22 '44 420w

"Mr. Morley, a master of light occasional verse, manages to keep fresh and interesting—no mean feat, considering the tendency to fade instantly which usually afflicts verse of this kind. His good humor and firm sense of language help."

+ New Yorker 20:88 O 14 '44 90w

Weekly Book Review p18 N 5 '44 450w

MORLEY, CHRISTOPHER DARLINGTON. Morley's variety; a selection from [his] writings made by Louis Greenfield. (Forum books) 636p $1 World pub.

44-40210

"An omnibus reprint, including three complete novels: Thunder on the left, The Trojan horse, Kathleen; sections from novels; short stories; poems; and essays." Booklist

Reviewed by Warren Beck

Book Week p16 N 26 '44 550w

Booklist 41:125 D 15 '44

Library J 70:70 Ja 15 '45 30w

MORLEY, CHRISTOPHER DARLINGTON, ed. Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson. See Doyle, A. C.

MOROSCO, MRS HELEN (MCRUER) MITCHELL. Life of Oliver Morosco. See Morosco, O.

MOROSCO, OLIVER. Life of Oliver Morosco, the oracle of Broadway; written from his own notes and comments by Helen M. Morosco and Leonard Paul Dugger. 387p il $4.25 Caxton printers

B or 92 44-8083

This book written by Oliver Morosco's third wife and a collaborator, takes the form of autobiography as it is told in first-person narrative from Morosco's own notes and comments. It covers his childhood and early career in San Francisco and his later career as a successful theatre manager and producer in Los Angeles and New York.

Reviewed by Leo Lerman

Atlantic 174:139 N '44 550w

"Any lover of the theatre will find this good reading. One of the authors is Mr. Morosco's third wife and the book may be somewhat balanced in his favor. It is, however, valuable as a record of practical experience and accomplishments in the field of American entertainment." Alan Creighton

+ Canadian Forum 24:242 Ja '45 210w

Kirkus 12:192 Ap 15 '44 130w

"Fascinating reading for theatre people, it is of no interest whatsoever to the general public. Marred by misspellings and frequent distortions of fact, unfortified by dates and lacking an index, it has no reference value." George Freedley

— + Library J 69:502 Je 1 '44 110w

"A task done candidly and with affection, it is written in the form of an autobiography by his wife and a friend, with details from Morosco's own notes and comments, with convincing enough result. It brings back vividly days and nights when the American theatre was at its most glamorous period." L. H. Robbins

+ N Y Times p16 S 17 '44 360w

"The book suffers from a stuffy, sanctimonious style which may be the fault of the authors but is also somewhat a reflection of the producer's personality. The writing is often pedestrian, and the treatment of important events vague and superficial. There is a good deal of trivia and irrelevant matter, and the recital of controversial incidents is obviously one-sided and stacked throughout. Yet for all its glaring faults the book holds one's interest, a revealing chronicle of show business for both the stage-wise and the stage-struck." Arthur Bronson

+ — Sat R of Lit 27:25 S 2 '44 800w

"Many of the 'facts' in the book need checking for accuracy, but with that warning it may be recommended for those who wish to look into the troubled waters of our commercial theater."

+ — Weekly Book Review p18 N 26 '44 250w

MORRELL, ROBERT SELBY, ed. Synthetic resins and allied plastics. 2d ed 580p il $12 (35s) Oxford

668.4 Gums and resins, Synthetic. Plastic materials 43-14962

"A thorough revision and expansion of the first edition (1937) [Book Review Digest, 1938]. Of the four authors contributing to the first edition, one, Mr. T. Hedley Barry, did not contribute to this one; but the list of contributors has increased to ten, each one being responsible for one or more signed chapters." N Y New Tech Bks

Chem & Eng N 22:473 Mr 25 '44 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 28:68 O '43

MORRIS, BERTRAM. Aesthetic process. 189p $2.25 Northwestern univ.

701 Esthetics. Art—Philosophy 43-13437

"Meandering rather than drawing straight furrows the writer ranges over the wide field of esthetics, taking up problem after problem in a loose sequence of argument, illustration, and criticism of divergent views. First he explores the two aspects of the esthetic phenomenon: its genesis in the mind and its objective manifestation. Chapters III through V repeat the order which leads from the mind to an objective correlate and elaborate the scheme of thought outlined in the earlier part. The discussion of the two concluding chapters, straddling over the dichotomy of subject and object, investigates the logical character of the esthetic judgment and the nature of art criticism." J Philos

"Although there is careful analysis in this book, it moves with a flow of insight to buoy the reader over technicalities." Van Meter Ames

+ Christian Century 60:1232 O 27 '43 380w

"With all its brilliant qualities, the book seems destined alternately to please and exasperate the student. He is prevented from ever feeling completely at ease by a certain elusiveness and intricacy, by a reasoning faculty which is deft and circumspect in picking up, splitting, and recombing fine threads of thought but neither robust nor resolute in plotting out a compact argument. There is much skirmishing but no pitched battle ensues." Helmut Kuhn

+ — J Philos 41:160 Mr 16 '44 1500w

MORRIS, COLTON G., and CAVE, HUGH BARNETT. "Fightin'est ship"; the story of the cruiser Helena. 192p il maps $2.50 Dodd

940.545 Helena (cruiser). World war, 1939— Naval operations 44-5343

Chronicle of the life of the United States light cruiser Helena, from September, 1939, until July 6, 1943, when she sank in Kula Bay. The Helena had figured in so many battles, and fought so well in all of them, that she was dubbed the "fightin'est man-o'-war that ever scoured the seas." The book contains a list of the Helena's skippers, and a chronology of her history.

Book Week p6 Jl 9 '44 90w

Booklist 41:16 S '44

"A gallant and thrilling story, and like all stories of ships it is also a personal and affectionate account of the men aboard her—American fighting men, all." Dorothy Hillyer

+ Boston Globe p16 Je 14 '44 300w

"From the opening paragraph to the end, 'The Fightin'est Ship' is clearly, crisply, vividly, honestly written. Indeed, it is so smoothly written that despite its record of the stifling heat, the strain and labor, the terrible tension and suspense, the misery suffered by the Helena's men at the last, it still makes life on the Helena seem like an attractive, exciting adventure." D. H. J.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Je 12 '44 600w

"A thrilling narrative. . . It has literary merit as well as dramatic tension. . . Recommended to all." F. L. D. Goodrich

+ Library J 69:502 Je 1 '44 110w

"Her story is a stirring one, of battle against great odds. It is too bad it was not told with more restraint. The title is an index to the writing and a classification that will be disputed by many other fine ships in the Pacific that still are floating. When the men of the Helena themselves are talking, the understatements are effective and true to life." Foster Hailey

+ — N Y Times p19 Je 25 '44 130w

"It is a fine, heroic story, well told, and it seems too bad to have to suggest that it could be a better story and better told. It could be better told because the book is pretty much all high moments, the heroics of battle or the near approach to it and the reaction from it; and because amid these heroics the authors have an unfortunate tendency toward the hackneyed metaphor." Fletcher Pratt

+ — Sat R of Lit 27:25 Jl 8 '44 450w

"A story of great gallantry and effective service, well told." R. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 16 '44 110w

"An interesting story of a fighting ship, in a style that is as personalized and human as a letter from the battle front." George Polk

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Je 11 '44 500w

MORRIS, IRA VICTOR. Liberty street. 280p $2.50 Harper

44-2022

A group of refugees stranded in a Central American republic find their entrance into the United States frustrated due to red tape and the American minister, a cynical diplomat. When the minister is murdered by an Armenian, who had tried for twenty-five years to join his brother in the United States, the way is opened for some of the refugees to get their visas.

"There is a novel in this problem, but Morris hasn't written it. He has simplified and distorted the picture until it appears that only the ingrained and pointless villainy of an old-line American diplomat stands between a group of refugees and the good life. Warfield Harrington, the American minister to the Central American country whose capital Morris calls Santa Rosa, is, in fact, the only real villain I can recall in the past 30 years of American literature. He laughs dryly, fixes people with icy stares, leaves his cocktail untasted before him, snubs waiters, and just can't be bothered with refugees." Russell Maloney

— Book Week p7 F 20 '44 390w

Booklist 40:252 Mr 15 '44

Bookmark 5:19 Mr '44

Cath World 159:187 My '44 150w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Jl 8 '44 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '44

"'Liberty Street' tries its heavy hand at very fresh and important material which may provide a brilliant and genuinely political novel in this decade: the conflict between democratic and anti-democratic elements in our State Department. Mr. Morris attempts to dramatize this conflict through the efforts of a group of refugees, mainly a Viennese family, to get visas from a Caribbean island where they are stranded; but his handling is about as apt, on the level of fiction, as it would be apt, on the level of diplomacy, to send William Saroyan out to head up an embassy somewhere because Mr. Saroyan is so nice." Mark Schorer

— New Repub 110:286 F 28 '44 330w

"It is a bright and moving story, and for this reason it hits the mark at which it is aimed. Mr. Morris, who has written two previous novels, is here to be congratulated on executing a mission which is essentially didactic, in a manner which is genuinely artistic." Thomas Haynes

+ N Y Times p6 F 27 '44 650w

"The fact that Mr. Morris warns us against the Fascists who sometimes represent us and expresses a warm and commendable regard for kindliness and simple decency does not, unfortunately, make this a good novel. Perhaps it's only fair to tell you that the book is fervently recommended by a number of successful writers."

New Yorker 20:86 F 19 '44 140w

"Mr. Morris had a great idea and he could have made out of it a profound and heartbreaking novel, but he chose his characters badly, and his arguments, at least so it seems to me, without long enough reflection." Struthers Burt

— + Sat R of Lit 27:10 Mr 25 '44 1150w

"'Liberty Street' is a romantic novel, written warmly and sympathetically, and despite the underlying tragedy of its theme, it is bright with humor. Nestor Kerjanian, with his courage and friendliness and his unsullied dream, is a character to cherish in the memory." E. M. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 27 '44 460w

Reviewed by Rose Feld

Weekly Book Review p4 F 20 '44 700w

Wis Lib Bul 40:56 Ap '44

MORRIS, JOHN. Traveller from Tokyo; foreword by Joseph C. Grew. 253p $2.75 Sheridan [10s 6d Cresset]

915.2 Japan. World war, 1939—Japan 44-6446

"An English professor of English, in a Japanese University tells of his experiences in Tokyo from 1938 to July, 1942. Japanese manners, customs, language, system of education, mode of living, of thought, are described." Library J

MORRIS, JOHN—Continued

Reviewed by W. F. Morse

Book Week p10 Jl 30 '44 80w

Booklist 41:18 S '44

Foreign Affairs 23:17 O '44 40w

"A balanced appraisal, noting good and bad, and—by its sense of proportion—an informed warning for quiet digestion."

+ Kirkus 12:249 Je 1 '44 270w

Reviewed by H. A. Wooster

Library J 69:502 Je 1 '44 80w

"Mr. Morris's account of his four years as teacher in a Tokio college, in close contact with the masses of everyday Japanese, is of outstanding interest and merit." O. M.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 N 5 '43 200w

"Mr. Morris provides a welcome antidote to the hate-books. In a few particulars he gives a somewhat too rosy view of Japan's economy and educational level. He has also, of course, chosen to deal with a relatively narrow field. Within his deliberate limits, however, he offers a good deal of useful and interesting information." Helen Mears

+ — New Repub 111:252 Ag 28 '44 360w

"This is the best account of Japanese life to be read in English. Primarily it is a skilful record of a personal experience; it only becomes a political analysis because Mr. Morris was in Japan at the time of the attack on Pearl Harbour and for seven months after it." Dorothy Woodman

+ New Statesman & Nation 26:404 D 18 '43 750w

"Among the many books about Japan that have appeared since Pearl Harbor few are more worth reading than this unpretentious story of an Englishman who spent four years in Tokyo as a teacher and technical adviser to the Foreign Office." W. H. Chamberlin

+ N Y Times p7 Jl 30 '44 500w

"Former Ambassador Grew, who, in a foreword, pays enthusiastic tribute to Mr. Morris's skill as an observer, might have gone even farther and said that this is as good a book on the subject as there is in English."

+ New Yorker 20:70 Jl 15 '44 90w

"A most readable little book." Bruno Lasker

+ Pacific Affairs 17:234 Je '44 210w

"Mr. Morris reports in detail and interprets in his own penetrating and urbane manner. His easy, gentlemanly prose wears better than the high-powered, slap-bang journalese of the average war book. He makes an interesting, human story of every phase of Japanese life that he touches—what the Emperor's subjects eat, read, and wear, how they carry their liquor, why so many of them wear glasses, what music they hear and mountains they climb, how boy meets girl in the marriage that is the duty of every Japanese." H. C. Wolfe

+ Sat R of Lit 27:9 Jl 15 '44 850w

Reviewed by Simon Harcourt-Smith

Spec 171:508 N 26 '43 500w

Reviewed by Frederick Reinstein

Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 23 '44 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p496 O 16 '43 700w

" 'Traveler from Tokyo' is in fact a travel tale but an unusually absorbing one because Mr. Morris visited Japan at a particularly critical time. He does not pretend to have any inside political knowledge of events but this is rather the plain story of a keen observer who was interested in all aspects of the life about him and whose interest led him to look deeper than at the mere surface of things." Wilfrid Fleisher

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Jl 23 '44 1350w

Wis Lib Bul 40:146 N '44

MORRIS, PERCY A. They hop and crawl. 253p il $3.50 Cattell

598.1 Reptiles. Batrachia 44-40184

"Many excellent photographs embellish the pages of this reference book on the serpents, lizards, crocodilians, turtles, frogs, toads, and salamanders of the United States, with special attention to those occurring east of the Mississippi River. Beneath the camouflage of its title, it is completely factual; individual species are listed under both their popular and scientific names, and their habits of life—distribution, food, natural enemies, economic value, and specific traits—are described." (Scientific Bk Club R) Index.

Booklist 41:55 O 15 '44

"An authoritative handbook on reptiles and amphibians found in the United States. . . The price is high, but the material is very good." Dorotha Dawson

+ Library J 69:940 N 1 '44 70w

"In nontechnical and readable style, with humor and a wealth of fascinating detail, and with many photographs of the subjects in their natural environment, Mr. Morris describes the principal reptiles and amphibia of the United States, especially east of the Rockies." Anita Moffett

+ N Y Times p20 D 17 '44 500w

"Morris has written an excellent popular work which ought to dispel the illusions of the city dweller in particular and teach him to look on any serpent or lizard as he would on deer or for that matter a cow, that is as a living creature which has its place in the economy of nature." Waldemar Kaempffert

+ Sat R of Lit 27:25 O 28 '44 400w

Scientific Bk Club R 15:3 O '44 90w

"Don't let the juvenile-seeming title fool you. Here is a book that will be found interesting and helpful by a wide range of readers." E. W. Teale

+ Weekly Book Review p16 N 5 '44 550w

MORRISON, HERBERT STANLEY. Prospects and policies. 170p $2.50 Knopf

330.942 Great Britain—Economic policy. World war, 1939—Great Britain. Reconstruction (1939-)—Great Britain 44-3977

Speeches and papers by the English Minister of home security and Secretary of state for home affairs, in which he discusses war-time problems and post-war plans. In them he answers criticism of Britain's participation in the Pacific theater, talks about her remarkable arms production, and describes the measures taken by the government for home defense. Partial contents: Social security and national welfare; Post-war trade, home and export; The future of the Labour party; Economic questions after the war; The post-war future; To the Anglo-American press association; The wide issues of civil liberty in war-time; Winding up the debate on the conditional release of Sir Oswald Mosley; A public appeal to the American people; A survey of the air attack on Britain.

Book Week p6 Je 18 '44 210w

Booklist 40:334 Je 1 '44

"Forthright and forceful statements of controversial, contemporary problems."

+ Kirkus 12:134 Mr 15 '44 170w

"Herbert Morrison, son of a policeman, wearing no school tie, beginning his career as errand boy, to become Secretary of State for Home Affairs, member of the War Cabinet, instrument of that national unity without which England could never have stood up against the Nazi hordes, is in his own person and career no bad example of embodiment of that political genius upon which the maintenance of freedom depends." Norman Angell

+ Sat R of Lit 27:7 My 27 '44 2200w

"Like his chief, the Home Secretary is a staunch defender of the empire. But if he would allay American fears regarding imperialism in the post-war world, he will have to do better than assure us that Britain's empire of today is one of peculiar benevolence, and that it is owing to the foolish squabbling of her leaders that India owes her continued lack of freedom." Frances Witherspoon

Weekly Book Review p23 My 21 '44 350w

MORRISON, IAN. Our Japanese foe [Eng title: This war against Japan]. 129p $1.50 Putnam [7s 6d Faber]

940.542 Japan. World war, 1939—Japan. Eastern question (Far East) 43-15011

This book, based on the author's many years of residence in the Orient, shows the difficulties of the war with Japan and what it entails for the Allies. "He examines the economic position of Japan—at present the richest 'have' nation in the world—and reaches the conclusion that her economic difficulties were not in the first place a cause of Japanese nationalism, but rather a result. Mr. Morrison has some first-hand accounts of the conditions and fighting in Papua, which bring home to the reader something of the difficulties with which our troops were faced." (Times [London] Lit Sup)

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:503 Ap '44 30w

"A telling account, terse, lucid, and full of interest." O. M.
+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 5 '44 130w

"Our Japanese Foe is a chatty, informative volume in which the author attempts to discuss Japanese history and culture, the military campaigns of the current war and the solution of postwar problems—all in the brief compass of 129 pages. Although the author, Ian Morrison, a correspondent of The Times, (London) has observed Japan and the Japanese both as a teacher in Japan and as a war correspondent with the Australians in the Papuan campaign, at no point does he get far beneath the surface of the topic discussed." Andrew Roth
Pacific Affairs 17:351 S '44 120w
Times [London] Lit Sup p592 D 11 '43 240w

"In a book of 129 pages it has not been possible for the author fully to develop some of the world problems which he has discussed. But, despite its brevity, the book is well worth reading for any one interested in present and post-war developments in the Far East." Victor Keen
+ Weekly Book Review p28 N 7 '43 950w

MORRISON, THEODORE. Devious way. 134p $2 Viking

811 44-7625

"[This novel in verse] has a theme as well as a story. It is a modern variant of the Troilus and Cressida legend, and the chief characters are symbols of constancy and inconstancy, as well as figures in a slight story of the sexual emotions and adventures of ordinary people. The author emphasizes this by prefacing the sections of the poem with quotations from Chaucer and Shakespeare." Weekly Book Review

Reviewed by Ellery Sedgwick
Atlantic 174:137 N '44 420w

"Theodore Morrison's love novel of Christina and David has been earnestly worked at but it would have been much better in prose." Leo Kennedy
Book Week p15 O 1 '44 90w

"Fiction set in verse of quality. Characters lifelike but not compelling. Contains graceful passages of description."
Christian Science Monitor p13 O 21 '44 30w

"This is trash. It is trashy in content and verse form."
— Kirkus 12:316 Jl 15 '44 130w

Reviewed by Robert Hillyer
N Y Times p29 D 10 '44 120w

"The author's third volume of poetry, this is a product of careful, thoughtful, creative effort. 'The Devious Way' is a provocative love story, skilfully and beautifully told—a picture in contemporary language of contemporary people." C. M. Sauer
+ Springf'd Republican p4 D 26 '44 500w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Drew
Weekly Book Review p14 O 22 '44 750w

MORSE, SAMUEL FRENCH. Time of year; a first book of poems introduced by Wallace Stevens. 52p $2.75 Cummington press

811 44-3405

"Mr. Morse's poems are introduced by Wallace Stevens, who considers him an anti-transcendentalist and a realist. 'Rectitude,' says Mr. Stevens, 'characterizes everything that he does.' His work is formal, correct, not so far, very illuminating; perhaps it needs more than rectitude. . . Rather more than do the poems themselves. Mr. Stevens stresses a New England quality in Mr. Morse's work." N Y Times

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries
N Y Times p24 Ap 23 '44 90w

"Morse's faults as a poet stem not from the mask he has used to cover his sensitivity (poetry being a play of masks, almost any one will serve a poet) but from the weakness of the original poetic impulse which has made it easy for him occasionally to fall into other men's ways of seeing things and speaking of them. . . Morse's virtue as a poet lies in the occasional drama which he achieves in his verse. . . But the poet is too often on the edge of lapsing into triteness to give the reader that comfortable feeling of security in surprise which comes on reading for the first time the volume of an original writer." Milton Hindus
+ — Poetry 64:337 S '44 650w

"In 'Time of Year' a first book by Samuel French Morse, are some of the finest poems to come from New England in many a year. Mr. Morse owes the essential flavor of his realism to Thoreau, his studies of men and creatures are framed by the particularities and necessities of place and season. His observations are so exact, so acutely compressed, that they demand the reader's close attention: there is no horizontal landscape prettiness, but a kind of blunt, vertical integrity that strikes down to the essential ore." Ruth Lechlitner
+ Weekly Book Review p10 Jl 16 '44 250w

MORTON, MRS JANE. Blackbirds on the lawn. 194p $2.50 Coward-McCann

44-40101

This short novel of present day Kentucky combines three interwoven threads—there is the story of a feud between two land-loving families; there is the story of a lawsuit brought against a young doctor; and finally there is the story of the approaching hour of crisis in the life and career of Henry Tarnol, one time editor of the town's newspaper, middle aged and a cripple who is called upon to take up again the fight for justice and truth.

"A quiet, powerful novel which concerns itself with timeless values rather than temporal upheavals. The style is at once homely and beautiful." Edith Roberts
+ Book Week p11 My 21 '44 430w
Booklist 40:319 My 15 '44

"Miss Morton's sincerity and her readable, almost lilting, style lead this reviewer to hope that she will do a longer novel with more of the unique Kentucky rural scene woven therein. It must be added of the present volume that it is in excellent taste, without objectionable scene, word, or incident—an unusual commendation these days." M. W. B.
+ Christian Science Monitor p13 Jl 29 '44 450w

"A warmly human picture of small town interplay of personalities."
+ Kirkus 12:104 Mr 1 '44 170w

"Quietly charming and sensitively told first novel. . . In making the story always sympathetic, always believable, the author achieves no small triumph. The device of a family feud as a back-drop for conflict is neither new nor startling, and her principal character is a man past middle age and a cripple. Yet, with an acute awareness for words, by subtle characterizations, and by avoiding over-emphasis, she makes this material serve rather than hinder her." Andrea Parke
+ N Y Times p7 Ap 30 '44 260w

MORTON, JANE—Continued

" 'Blackbirds On the Lawn' is Jane Morton's first novel, but it is the work of an artist whose warmth and insight stem from deep sources of creative understanding." B. T. Anderson

+ Weekly Book Review p6 My 7 '44 650w

MORTON, WALTER ALBERT. British finance, 1930-1940. 356p $4 Univ. of Wis. press

332.4 Finance—Great Britain 43-53008

"Professor Morton's chief interest, in this analysis of a decade of British financial policy, lies in the material which it offers for an evaluation of the policy of cheap money as an instrument for the control of business depression. As a background for this analysis, he devotes nearly one third of the text to a careful description of the events leading up to the suspension of gold payments by Great Britain in September 1931. . . The middle section of the book is devoted to the international aspects of the situation which followed the suspension of 1931. . . The course of domestic finance in the thirties is described in the final third of the volume." Pol Sci Q

"Although this scholarly work was written for those primarily concerned with the highly specialized subject of money and credit and international finance, it holds a large measure of interest and pertinence for the political scientist. The influence of practical political factors upon economic theory and practice is continually stressed." J. A. Perkins

+ Am Pol Sci R 37:960 O '43 230w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 22:665 Jl '44 20w

"This is a careful and thoroughly documented work in a highly controversial field. Although the author's conclusions may seem overly cautious to some enthusiastic disciples of the newer schools, even they will find it useful as a summary of recent events. The intelligent layman with some knowledge of finance should also find it profitable reading." M. G. Myers

+ Pol Sci Q 59:142 Mr '44 600w

MOSCOW. INSTITUT MARKSA-ENGEL'SA-LENINA. Vladimir I. Lenin; a political biography. 288p $2.50 Int. pubs

B or 92 Lenin, Nikolai 44-3811

"The book is an official version of the history of the Bolsheviks, or, at least, of Lenin's leadership up to his death in 1924, and is based very largely, Lenin's works apart, upon the official History of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union. As such it covers the ground methodically and with the special purpose, it would seem, of exposing the record of the various 'opposition groups' of the twenties and thirties and of exhibiting Stalin's right to the succession." Manchester Guardian

Reviewed by G. H. Bishop

Book Week p9 F 6 '44 340w

Foreign Affairs 22:664 Jl '44 10w

Manchester Guardian p3 S 29 '43 250w

"This new Lenin is no longer 'the amazingly attractive man' of whom Gorky spoke, nor the fallible human being with moments of self-doubt and anguish. He is here presented as a man who was never wrong, never acknowledged a mistake or learned by one. Instead of enlarging, this pious emendation actually seems to diminish his indubitably great stature and give it an air of unreality." B. D. Wolfe

N Y Times p19 Mr 5 '44 420w

"The book under review would seem to have been written since Russia's entry into the war, although, contrary to custom, nothing is said to indicate whether it represents a condensation or revision of any existing text in Russian. It is necessarily to be regarded as an official publication. . . As a consequence, the biography thrashes out all over again those seemingly scholastic differences and points of controversy in Russian Social-Democratic circles which to-day bear witness to the crucial phases of Lenin's practical leadership and of the development of Bolshevism. This, while it has its authoritative uses, does not make for novel or specially pleasurable reading."

Times [London] Lit Sup p412 Ag 28 '43 850w

MOSELEY, NICHOLAS. Teacher's manual for military, marine, vocational, and industrial training. 208p il $2 Cornell maritime

371.3 Teaching 43-17651

"Designed as a practical aid for the man with vocational skill or special knowledge who has been detailed as an instructor of trainees and who may lack the necessary teaching experience to present his subject effectively. The author analyzes and explains how students learn; why the instructor must select, organize and adapt his material; the technique of handling a class; the practical aspects of tests and records; special practices in industrial training; and, for the benefit of foreign-bound troops, some intensive methods of teaching foreign languages. A two-page bibliography is included." N Y New Tech Bks

Cath World 158:412 Ja '44 70w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 68:1007 D 1 '43 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 28:62 O '43

MOSER, MRS EDWA. Wedding day. 218p $2.50 Duell

44-4326

On her daughter's wedding day, Eugenia Fersen has to face several emotional crises and in her attempts to face them in her usual calm and serene fashion she analyses her whole past history. In the end all ends happily but for Eugenia life has become quite different.

Library J 69:263 Mr 15 '44 10w

" 'Wedding Day' is an agreeable enough little tale, if somewhat brittle and over-polished—too talky, too glib, none too believable, but suavely written and fairly good fun." E. H. Walton

— + N Y Times p21 Ap 9 '44 240w

"A little too much goes on to be quite credible, but the book is swift moving and readable. . . Eugenia's regal composure, her 'goddess-profile' and what her husband's irritation calls 'her damned detachment, her ice-cold, unassailable assurance' is perhaps too overdone to make her subsequent humanization and the happy ending seem possible. 'Wedding Day' starts out as a light, amusing picture of a family and ends on the same note. The middle turns into a more sombre picture of emotional complications." Rosemary Benet

+ — Weekly Book Review p11 Ap 9 '44 550w

MOTHER GOOSE. Berta and Elmer Hader's picture book of Mother Goose. new ed 144p $3 Coward-McCann

44-7996

"Happy are the children who make their first acquaintance with the Mother Goose characters as they are pictured by those talented artists, the Haders. This is a new edition, somewhat smaller in size, with new plates made from the original drawings. Pages are now numbered and an index added." Library J

Booklist 41:96 N 15 '44

Cath World 160:280 D '44 50w

"This is one of the most charming and colorful collections of favorite nursery rhymes." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 69:816 O 1 '44 70w

N Y Times p10 N 12 '44 40w

"Small boys and girls will enjoy the pictures, and mothers will find a wealth of entertaining material in each of the four sections." M. L. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d S 3 '44 100w

MOTHER GOOSE. Mother Goose; a comprehensive coll. of the rhymes made by William Rose Benét; arr. and il. by Roger Duvoisin. new ed 112p $1.95 Heritage

44-162

A new edition, in smaller format, of an edition of Mother Goose first published by the Heritage press in 1936 (Book Review Digest, 1937).

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p10 F 27 '44 70w
Booklist 40:258 Mr 15 '44

"While this is an interesting edition, we cannot recommend it for first purchase. The meaning of some of the rhymes is changed as in 'The Story of Jenny Wren.' Language has been modernized in some, while lines have been changed in others. However, many of the original versions are included. Recommended for large libraries with a number of editions." B. W. Bell
+ — Library J 69:33 Ja 1 '44 110w

"The delightful illustrations are by Roger Duvoisin and they are entirely new. The old favorite of many generations gains fresh charm in this new dress, and this year's crop of babies will be grateful."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 12 '43 60w

MOTHER GOOSE. Mother Goose; seventy-seven verses with pictures by Tasha Tudor. 87p $2 Oxford

44-8553

Seventy-seven Mother Goose rhymes, newly illustrated in color and in black and white.

"The Tasha Tudor touch is inimitable and the pictures in this Mother Goose possess a delicacy and grace, a lovely color quality, which makes the familiar rhymes seem even more beloved." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p18 N 12 '44 50w
Booklist 41:95 N 15 '44

"This is the most beautiful Mother Goose ever printed."
+ Boston Globe p36 N 29 '44 20w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p10 N 27 '44 100w

"This is a book to be treasured in many homes."
+ Horn Bk 20:475 N '44 30w

"This is a lovely little Mother Goose, quite off the beaten track."
+ Kirkus 12:479 O 15 '44 90w

Reviewed by M. C. Skinner
Library J 69:863 O 15 '44 30w

"Perfect in flavor and spirit for the young child and delightful from the adult standpoint." Dorotha Dawson
+ Library J 69:938 N 1 '44 40w

"For seventy-seven of the best known rhymes Tasha Tudor has drawn exquisite pictures which, with their lovely color, their gaiety and childlike humor, their suggestion of place and season, make the Mother Goose country and its inhabtants a very real delight." A. T. E.
+ N Y Times p10 N 12 '44 40w
New Yorker 20:78 D 16 '44 50w

"You can tell at a glance, without glancing at the text, which rhyme [each picture] illustrates. For the characterization is perfect, and sometimes one feels she has seen deeper into the character than many of her predecessors."
+ Weekly Book Review p12 N 12 '44 150w
Wis Lib Bul 40:162 D '44

MOTHER GOOSE. Old Mother Goose nursery rhyme book [il. by Anne Anderson]. 127p $2.50 Nelson

44-1740

"A reprinting of the 1925 edition with a slightly different arrangement and the omission of some of the rhymes and illustrations." Booklist

Booklist 40:258 Mr 15 '44

Reviewed by M. A. Webb
Library J 69:120 F 1 '44 70w

MOTHER GOOSE. This is the milk that Jack drank. See Scott, W. R.

MOTT, FRANK LUTHER. Jefferson and the press. 65p $1 La. state univ. press

B or 92 Jefferson, Thomas. Journalism
43-16530

For descriptive note see Annual for 1943.

"The greatest authority on the history of American magazines and newspapers has written a sound and useful little book on the relations of Jefferson with the press." Dumas Malone
+ Am Hist R 49:498 Ap '44 480w

"Dr. Mott's volume is close-packed with the facts of his subject's dealings with the press and newspaper editors, as well as with all of Jefferson's relevant comment on press-governmental relations. The style is excellent." R. D. Casey
+ Am Pol Sci R 38:795 Ag '44 800w

"The story of Jefferson's experiences with newspapers and his attitude toward them is told authoritatively and entertainingly in 'Jefferson and the Press,' by Frank L. Mott. One of our greatest scholars in the field of American literary history, author of the great 'History of American Magazines' in three volumes, Frank Luther Mott is also one of the few really good writers in a field too often disgraced by the pedantry and dullness of the works which deal with it. Whatever the subject to which he directs his attention, the reader can count on finding in his treatment of it all the important facts, clearly presented and firmly grasped, with a dividend of humor, color and plain good writing." J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p4 My 21 '44 260w
Booklist 40:234 Mr 1 '44
Christian Science Monitor p9 Mr 4 '44 600w
Nation 158:604 My 20 '44 70w

MOTT, FRANK LUTHER, ed. Journalism in wartime. 216p $3; pa $2.50 Am. council on public affairs

070 Journalism 43-16492

"This is a collection of pieces by thirty-three newspaper men and women on their profession in war. Ordinarily these papers would have been read at the University of Missouri's annual 'Journalism Week,' but this year it was decided to call off the forum and print the symposium, under the auspices of the American Council on Public Affairs." Weekly Book Review

"An index would have enhanced the book's usefulness. There are all too many typographical errors. A topical heading on 'Hemisphere Solidarity,' listed separately in the volume, is not so listed in the table of contents. On the whole, however, this is a useful and worthwhile book." S. I. Pomerantz
+ — Am Pol Sci R 38:821 Ag '44 380w
Booklist 40:261 Ap 1 '44
Weekly Book Review p19 Mr 12 '44 200w

MOULT, THOMAS, ed. Best poems of 1943. 127p $2 Harcourt [6s Cape, J.]

821.08 English poetry—Collections. American poetry—Collections (A27-176)

This twenty-second annual volume contains poems by nearly seventy English and American writers, including: Robert Hillyer, August Derleth, Oscar Williams, Ivor Brown, W. R. Benét, J. G. Fletcher, E. L. Masters, Witter Bynner, Walter de la Mare, Mark Van Doren, Edmund Blunden, Joseph Auslander, Marianna Moore, H. D., Siegfried Sassoon.

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Book Week p3 D 31 '44 330w
Manchester Guardian p3 N 8 '44 40w

MOULT, THOMAS—Continued

"This year's volume follows the pattern. There is Marianne Moore's beautiful poem of the war, 'In Distrust of Merits' and following shortly after Joseph Auslander's unbearable address to the Unconquerable Norwegians. There are poems in which the styles of their authors can be heard, but not heard to remarkable effect. . . There are three interesting poems by young men . . . and half a dozen other self-respecting pieces, of which the best sustained is by Diana Witherby. The rest ought to be silence; instead it is an importunate chorus of the derivative, the trite, the fatuous, the merely dull, by writers known and unknown who have not developed a style or who have lost it, and who had nothing to express in these poems, one judges, which seemed to them worth any labor of heart or conscience in composition, of independence, or sensitivity, or passion, or power, not a shred." John Berryman

— + N Y Times p16 Ja 14 '45 650w

"It may be that the verse which appears in periodicals is often not of the best vintage, and there is a suggestion of the 'occasional' about this collection as a whole, and only a few poems that insist upon a re-reading. But what is lacking in imaginative depth and inevitability is made up in variety of sensibility."

Times [London] Lit Sup p455 S 16 '44 180w

MOULTON, HAROLD GLENN, and MARLIO, LOUIS. Control of Germany and Japan. 116p il $2 Brookings

940.5314 World war, 1939—Peace. Germany—Economic conditions. Japan—Economic conditions 44-7784

"Current discussions about the post-war treatment of Germany and Japan are usually more concerned with measures to weaken the Axis powers than with measures to strengthen their victims. . . Dr. Moulton, president of the Brookings Institution, and M. Marlio, a French industrialist with wide training in economics, discuss many of the suggestions made to date on this controversial subject. . . Their main purpose is to prevent the development of war power in Germany and Japan, not to check it once it has developed." Sat R of Lit

"This book has no charm of language such as The Time for Decision by Sumner Welles. It is not a literary effort at all, and is readable only because of its simple directness. . . The Control of Germany and Japan and The Time for Decision stand out among the postwar books, for they clear the air of the many ill-considered proposals which would injure Europe equally with Germany and would make a just and lasting peace so difficult." L. H. Pink

+ — Ann Am Acad 237:206 Ja '45 650w

"A brilliant and incisive survey which is so revolutionary in its details and yet so sound in its thinking that it may save the planet a third World War." Sterling North

+ Book Week p2 S 24 '44 500w

Booklist 41:75 N 1 '44

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 61:1254 N 1 '44 1400w

Christian Science Monitor p14 D 9 '44 600w

Reviewed by Paul Hagen

New Repub 111:465 O 9 '44 600w

"The book is brief in compass and highly compressed, though it is broad in scope. Though the subject-matter is inherently somewhat tough and technical, the style and exposition throughout are admirably clear and lucid. Through the maze of controversy about the pressing problems treated the layman could not easily find a simpler or more complete guide." A. D. Gayer

+ N Y Times p3 S 10 '44 1950w

"While there are bound to be differences of opinion concerning some of the specific suggestions made by the authors, or specific objections they raise to other proposals, this book performs the valuable task of analyzing highly controversial questions about the future of Germany and Japan in the practical terms of what can be actually accomplished under existing circumstances. It must be hoped that the Brookings Institution will publish a companion piece on practicable measures to strengthen the economic position of the countries whose resources have been destroyed or depleted by the Axis." V. M. Dean

+ Sat R of Lit 27:12 S 23 '44 1600w

Reviewed by F. C. James

Survey G 33:507 D '44 700w

"One of the reasons this book has distinction is that it leaves strictly alone the emotional and meaningless public argument over the respective merits of a 'hard line' and a 'soft line' toward defeated Germany. Dr. Moulton and Dr. Marlio are not concerned with revenge, as are the more bitter or bloodthirsty among us, nor with atonement, as are those of us with guilty consciences. . . This book, considering its subject, is surprisingly good reading. Partly, this is because it is novel and pleasant to read economists who can state their conclusions in sentences and not in chapters." Joseph Barnes

+ Weekly Book Review p2 S 24 '44 1250w

MOUSSORGSKY, MODESTE. See Musorgskii, M. P.

MOZART, JOHANN CHRYSOSTOM WOLFGANG AMADEUS. Magic flute; adapted by Robert Lawrence; il. by Paul Kinnear [auth. ed. of the Metropolitan opera guild]. 33p 50c Grosset

782.1 Opera—Stories, plots, etc. 44-33734

The story of Mozart's opera, simply told for young readers. There is a brief biographical note on the composer, illustrations, and some musical themes.

"Good for anyone who is going to hear this celebrated work."

+ Commonweal 41:257 D 22 '44 40w

Kirkus 12:233 My 15 '44 90w

"Though I have seen this under the best conditions in Paris and am fairly familiar with the score, for the first time I now have a coherent idea of what on earth it is about. This is a feat on Mr. Lawrence's part that will be appreciated by any Mozart lover—as all Mozart lovers know every one should be." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Je 18 '44 70w

Wis Lib Bul 40:112 Jl '44

MUDGETT, MRS HELEN (PARKER). The seas stand watch. 391p $2.75 Knopf

44-2896

Historical novel based on the dreary days following the American Revolution, when money and trade were at low ebb, and the years following during which a small measure of prosperity returned. The central characters are John Noyes, a New England sea captain, and his beautiful, understanding French wife, Julia. The book closes with the beginning of the War of 1812.

"Mrs. Mudgett tells her story exceedingly well, and makes it one that is very much worth reading. She knows the setting intimately, down to the finest details of New Bedford and Salem small-talk and the innumerable ins and outs of trading and sailing. She knows her period, and she has a crisp way about her that ties in nicely with the crisp saltiness of her narrative." Leo Shapiro

+ Book Week p11 Ap 2 '44 450w

Booklist 40:305 My 1 '44

"The story reads well; but somehow the emotional values of the book are too sharply drawn, too black and white, ever to be wholly convincing. It is here only that the book falls short. Excellent for relaxed reading."

+ — Kirkus 12:7 Ja 1 '44 240w

"In Helen Parker Mudgett we have a new historical novelist who happens to be a historian by profession. The result is extremely satisfactory. One senses solid scholarship underlying the deceptively light, easy style, but it is never obtrusive. The story could very well stand on its merits as a thrilling adventure tale of the sea, but there is a great deal more to it than that." N. B. Baker

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 12 '44 450w

"As a novel, this is no better and no worse than run-of-the-mill historical fiction, but as an account of life along our eastern seaboard from the last part of the eighteenth century through the War of 1812, it has considerable value."

+ New Yorker 20:94 Mr 25 '44 140w

Reviewed by H. L. Mitchell

Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 9 '44 280w

"Helen Parker Mudgett is a working historian with the fruits of long years of research as the harvest of an able mind. When such a person turns to and produces historical fiction it is likely to have real value." F. H. Bullock

+ Weekly Book Review p2 Mr 12 '44 1100w

Wis Lib Bul 40:86 Je '44

MUHLENBRUCH, CARL WILLIAM. Testing of engineering materials. 200p il $2.75 Van Nostrand

620.1 Building materials—Testing 44-3233

"A laboratory manual presenting a series of experiments to acquaint engineering students with the use of testing machines and the method of analyzing results and writing reports. The experiments include shear, tension, compression, and cold-bend tests of metals; flexural test of a wood beam; torsion, impact and flexural tests of ductile and brittle materials; the physical properties of laminated plastics; hardness testing; the physical properties of concrete; column tests; strain gages and their use." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Library J 69:463 My 15 '44 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:26 Ap '44

MUIR, DENIS. Death defies the doctor. 256p $2 Phoenix

44-9900

Detective story.

"Exciting and spooky."

+ Boston Globe p15 D 20 '44 30w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p24 D 10 '44 100w

"Run-of-mill."

Sat R of Lit 27:31 N 18 '44 40w

MUIR, PETER. This is India; maps by Frances Muir. 237p $2.50 Doubleday

915.4 India. World war, 1939—India 43-16448

For descriptive note see Annual for 1943.

Cleveland Open Shelf p1 Ja '44

Current Hist 6:163 F '44 30w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 22:501 Ap '44 30w

"Peter Muir's 'This Is India' has an attractiveness all its own. It is the brightly written and entirely unpretentious record of eighteen months of travelling and interviewing undertaken by a man patently free of prejudice but equipped with common sense, a keen eye, and an almost ruthless honesty." C. H. Driver

+ Yale R n s 33:565 spring '44 210w

MULHOLLAND, JOHN. Art of illusion; magic for men to do. 142p $2 Scribner

793.8 Conjuring 44-2365

Explanations of a number of simple tricks an amateur could learn to perform before small groups. Includes tricks with cards and other simple equipment.

Booklist 40:265 Ap 1 '44

"It is an informal presentation, definitely easy to follow and clear in its exposition. Excellent beginners' book, but adult in approach so that mature magicians will profit by it."

+ Kirkus 12:35 Ja 15 '44 100w

"Mr. Mulholland makes some very shrewd remarks on the general psychology of magic, and he has selected his tricks with care. If he has not given us an up-to-date Hoffmann, this is partly the fault of the times." Edmund Wilson

+ — New Yorker 20:91 Mr 11 '44 1250w

Reviewed by F. G. Bratton

Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 29 '44 220w

"Whether John Mulholland is on stage or page he is always entertaining, though on the one his patter is meant to take your mind off the way the trick is done and on the other to show you just how you can do it."

+ Weekly Book Review p14 Ap 30 '44 150w

MULLER, FREDERICK WILLIAM. Public rural electrification. 183p $3 Am. council on public affairs

621.393 Electricity in agriculture 44-4240

"A brief review of the development and achievements of the Rural Electrification Administration, set up in 1935 for the purpose of making electric service available in rural areas. The Administration's organization and policy are outlined, and a detailed explanation of how the agency operates is given." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by A. J. Lien

Am Pol Sci R 38:809 Ag '44 190w

Reviewed by Harlan Trott

+ Ann Am Acad 236:193 N '44 450w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:43 Jl '44

"This book does not deal with rural electrification by private industry. It is confined to the Federal REA program. It is a clear, concise picture of REA: its evolution, its organization, its policies, and how it functions through local cooperatives. It is much the best account the reviewer has seen." S. H. Hobbs

+ Social Forces 23:232 D '44 330w

MUMFORD, LEWIS. Condition of man. 467p il $5 Harcourt

901 Civilization—History 44-5038

The third volume in the series of which Technics and Civilization (Book Review Digest, 1934) and Culture of Cities (Book Review Digest, 1938) were the earlier books. The aim of the writer "has been to give a rounded interpretation of the development of modern man, and to show what changes in his plan of life are necessary if he is to make the most of the vast powers that are now his to command—provided he be strong enough, wise enough, virtuous enough, to exercise command." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"This book utterly lacks philosophical rigor. Yet its weak argument often embodies important half-truths; and, paradoxically, the weakness of the argument is itself a virtue, for there is little constructive speciousness or factitious evidence. Mr. Mumford is honest. The book is full of ingenious and penetrating comments, some of them probably true, upon particular historical phenomena—for example, faith and reason, protestantism, nationalism, Marxism. But, as a serious essay interpreting the present in the light of history, it does not exist. For the sake of its fragmentary merit, Mr. Mumford might perhaps think it through again, and write another essay." Rushton Coulborn

— + Am Hist R 50:91 O '44 1500w

Reviewed by J. H. Bunzel

Am J Soc 50:254 N 13 '44 1750w

"Here is a remarkable book, a book that is simultaneously a major achievement of American social science, a confession of faith, and a call to action. Of vital significance for the professional sociologist, it still cannot be judged by ordinary academic standards; every thinking man whose intellectual fare is chosen from levels higher than that of Reader's Digest will find nourishment in these pages. No review can do justice to the wealth of scholarship and wisdom they incorporate; I have read the book three times, and with each reading I find fresh sources of exaltation and new reasons for humility." Howard Becker

MUMFORD, LEWIS—Continued
+ Am Soc R 9:595 O '44 1400w

Reviewed by John Lindberg
Ann Am Acad 235:142 S '44 500w

"While Mr. Mumford indicts greed as the source of modern evil, he does not counterpose theology, but a vitalized humanism. Often this humanism assumes a mystical character, which seems to lead to the creation of a secular religion, if that paradox can be used. But on the whole, Mr. Mumford's work is an impressive demonstration of the sensitiveness and intelligence which a truly liberal education can produce." Daniel Bell
+ Atlantic 174:131 Jl '44 550w

"Lewis Mumford's literary competence is of a very high order and his erudition is remarkable. One adds with sincere reluctance that his grasp of the operational aspects of science appears insufficient for the adequate treatment of the problems he attacks. He needs a scientific co-worker—and almost any scientist one might name needs Mumford just as greatly." Wendell Johnson
+ — Book Week p1 My 21 '44 1450w
Booklist 40:354 Je 15 '44

Reviewed by J. F. Thorning
Cath World 159:472 Ag '44 600w

"Provocative-brilliant."
+ Kirkus 12:189 Ap 15 '44 170w

Reviewed by K. T. Willis
Library J 69:459 My 15 '44 70w

Reviewed by Abram Kardiner
Nation 159:132 Jl 29 '44 1750w

Reviewed by Martin Lebowitz
New Repub 110:854 Je 26 '44 950w

Reviewed by D. C. Coyle
New Statesman & Nation 28:423 D 23 '44 1400w

"The strength of this book does not lie so much in the systematic structure of its ideas as in the wealth of its perceptions and the flashes of insight that it yields on every page. It is an audacious attempt to survey the whole range of our heritage and the whole structure and plight of our civilization. To read it is to get something of a liberal education concerning the past and a new understanding of our own age. In a time when high-pressure salesmanship has accustomed us to titles that promise much over books that deliver little or nothing, here is a work which needs only the addition of the limiting word 'Western' in the rubric, 'The Condition of Man,' in order to justify its title completely." B. D. Wolfe
+ N Y Times p1 My 21 '44 2150w

"Mr. Mumford's conclusions are open to question and his argument frequently takes on a tone of omniscient certitude that some readers may find irritating. There are also occasional moments when his celebration of basic Christian values has some of the strident fervor of a reformed sinner turned missionary. . . His book, as a study of cultural and social history, is, nevertheless, a sufficiently impressive performance and should not be overlooked by anyone who is at all interested in the pilgrim's progress of modern man."
+ — New Yorker 20:81 My 20 '44 450w

"The delineation here of antecedent background is leisurely, highly selective, interpretative of men and of their creations in suggestive and highly individual appraisals. I am not competent to evaluate the accuracy of so rich a store of record and of interpretation. I know that the result is interesting and the total upshot is revealing, disturbing, appealing, and elevated." Ordway Tead
+ Sat R of Lit 27:8 My 20 '44 1600w
School & Society 59:368 My 20 '44 60w

Reviewed by Phillips Russell
Social Forces 23:100 O '44 700w
Social Studies 35:288 O '44 50w

Reviewed by E. C. Lindeman
Survey G 38:458 N '44 1250w
Time 43:100 Je 5 '44 1550w

"Cramming thousands of facts into a 400-page sermon can hardly be done without some breakage. . . I have come across more conventional scholars whose sins were far more grievous. Against the mechanicists of the right and of the left, profiteers, pedagogues, totalitarians, Mr. Mumford has given us an honest and strenuous book; not an epitome of dead knowledge, but an incentive to thought and a challenge to action." Albert Guerard
+ — Weekly Book Review p3 My 21 '44 1500w

MUNCHAUSEN. Adventures of Baron Munchausen; 160 il. by Gustave Doré. 213p $3.75 Pantheon bks.
44-47224

"The Pantheon Books edition is a compromise based on both Buerger and Gautier. The stories not translated by Gautier, and therefore not illustrated by Doré, are omitted, thus reducing Buerger's 34 chapters to only 18 —just enough for the modern reader. In the elimination of the shocking and obscene, the book follows Gautier's version while it returns to Buerger's original wherever Gautier's corrections made the story less poetic." Commonweal

---

Booklist 41:157 Ja 15 '45

"We now have an excellent text, translated anonymously into a vigorous English, much superior to Raspe's version. But the most beautiful feature of this book is the excellent reproduction of the complete Doré illustrations. These stress the fantastic element of Munchausen's adventures, add many picturesque details and radiate a sense of humor much more delicate than does the text." Max Fischer
+ Commonweal 41:81 N 3 '44 700w

"The stories are extraordinarily fresh and good reading."
+ Kirkus 12:483 O 15 '44 40w

"Both pictures and text will delight all lovers of tall-tale nonsense. Recommended for any library which can afford to buy it." J. D. Lindquist
+ Library J 69:1006 N 15 '44 60w
New Yorker 20:78 D 16 '44 140w
Springf'd Republican p4d D 17 '44 170w

"The big book is so beautifully printed it delights the eyes. If you haven't a marble-top table, any kind will hold it; indeed, in my time we took our Doré on the floor." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p6 O 22 '44 220w

MUNCHERYAN, HRAND M. Industrial radiology and related phenomena (X-rays, gamma rays, physical metallurgy, and magnetic analysis) foreword by George E. Newton. 539p il $7.50 Aircraft X-ray laboratories, 5216 Pacific blvd, Huntington Park, Calif.
537.53 X rays—Industrial applications
43-9978

"A comprehensive treatment of the use of x-rays in the examination of industrial materials. Written for inspectors, purchasing agents and foundry personnel as well as for technicians and engineers. The book is based largely on experimental findings at the Aircraft X-Ray Laboratories where the author is Chief Physicist and Research Director." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Cleveland Open Shelf p3 Ja '44

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 68:771 O 1 '43 20w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:13 Ja '44

MURPHY, ARTHUR EDWARD. The uses of reason. 346p $3 Macmillan
121 Reason. Rationalism. Reality 43-16321
For descriptive note see Annual for 1943.

"This book, by the head of the department of philosophy at the University of Illinois and chairman of the Commission on the Function of Philosophy and Liberal Education of the American Philosophical Association, is an able, timely, and genuinely important work. It embodies a highly successful effort to present the point of view and main substance of philosophy in a form which will be intelligible and interesting to the literate adult. . . In the reviewer's opinion, the author might have dealt more sharply and clearly with the problem of ultimate criteria and their limitations, and so have been both more philosophical and more useful to the readers. . . In any case, the weakness, if it is such, is a minor one; and the author may well be a better judge than this reviewer as to what those for whom he means to write are willing to take." F. H. Knight

+ Am J Soc 49:484 Mr '44 900w

Reviewed by K. H. Wolff
Am Soc R 9:445 Ag '44 850w

"There is much sound logic in Professor Murphy's learned essay. . . Unfortunately, however, the language is not as simple and direct as the author believes it is, and the general reader for whom it is partly intended may find it too labored and scholarly."

+ — Current Hist 6:437 My '44 80w

"Here is tough-mindedness joined to breadth of view and human sympathy; here is relevance of attack on the major irrational citadels of our times. Here is an antidote for cynicism, for defeatism, for nihilism. If it leaves certain readers less than satisfied, it at least puts them on their mettle and on notice to show why they will not have the moral reason on the precise terms that Professor Murphy offers it." Ordway Tead

+ Ethics 55:65 O '44 2700w

"In this genuinely enlightening book Professor Murphy offers a vigorous and eminently reasonable defense of human reason as a trustworthy organon for finding things out." Ernest Nagel

+ J Philos 41:665 N 23 '44 2300w

"A book of this sort is inevitably twice damned. Not only will the scholar condemn it for its cavalier handling of delicate issues, but the common reader—the 'everyday, intelligent person'—to whom it is explicitly addressed and whom it might conceivably enlighten, will find much of it intolerably abstract. Every act of mediation tends, if successful, to betray both sides; Professor Murphy has intentionally diluted his wisdom, which is obviously great, but he none the less fails to produce a truly potable beverage." Martin Lebowitz

+ — Nation 158:286 Mr 4 '44 1100w

Reviewed by Kenneth Burke
New Repub 110:220 F 14 '44 900w

Reviewed by L. O. Kattsoff
Social Forces 22:355 Mr '44 500w

Reviewed by Henry Blauth
Social Studies 35:234 My '44 900w

MURPHY, CLYDE FRANCIS. Glittering hill. 478p $3 Dutton

44-7914

A story of Butte, Montana, in the 1890s, and of life there amongst the various classes of Irish—shanty-Irish and sober Irish, lace-curtain Irish, fortune-making and fortune-losing Irish.

"This first novel is a surprising, though perfectly satisfactory, selection as winner of Dutton's first Lewis and Clark Northwest Contest, limited to authors of several Northwest states. It is a new approach to the writing of historical fiction, and its values lie chiefly below the belt—in the realm of full-blown belly-laughter." R. B. West, Jr.

+ Book Week p8 O 8 '44 450w

"Boisterous, turbulent and lusty is Clyde F. Murphy's portrait of Butte, Montana, in the eighteen nineties. . . Don't try this book unless you have a powerful sense of humor." J. H. Powers

Boston Globe p15 D 13 '44 440w

"A glorified Western in its appeal to men first and last; tough, rowdy, with no prettifying on the passions of men,—wine, women and song. The romance is paper thin—the hero and heroine, two dimensional. But the plot has pace and vigor; the setting is realistic, the picture of the times and the men that made them is convincing."

+ — Kirkus 12:380 S 1 '44 130w

"A good novel could be made of these ingredients, but not, apparently, by Mr. Murphy, who spoils it all by incomplete characterization and a forced plot. A certain gusto, typical of 'frontier' novels, emanates from this, but it is despite him. Not recommended." E. L. Lewis

— Library J 69:762 S 15 '44 60w

"Mr. Murphy assuredly knows whereof he writes, and in some of 'The Glittering Hill' he writes well. . . As a novel, as a piece of storytelling, 'The Glittering Hill' is something else again. At its best it is not very good as narrative, and at its worst it is technically clumsy and even naive. It suggests that Mr. Murphy, now a lawyer in California, is essentially not a writer but a native son looking back with nostalgia on a scene he understandably wanted to describe." James Fuller

— + N Y Times p6 O 8 '44 480w

Reviewed by Phil Stong
Sat R of Lit 27:23 N 4 '44 650w

"The dialog is rich and dirty, shockingly so. That is the chief criticism of 'The Glittering Hill.' Mr Murphy might have spent less effort in proving that men talked rough in those days and a little more on the shaping of his narrative. However, his novel is an authentic piece of our past and to all but the squeamish it will be entertaining." H. O. Austin

Springf'd Republican p4d N 12 '44 450w

"Overlong and overwritten, this story is considerably better in its parts than as a whole. Most of the major characters remain pretty wooden, assortments of traits rather than individuals; but there is a boisterous reality to some of the minor figures. . . Much the same thing is true of the plot. It is the incidental scenes, standing outside of the main line of the story, that are most effective. . . Incidentally, this book contains the roughest, toughest, language this reviewer, at least, has yet come upon in print." Jennings Rice

— + Weekly Book Review p6 O 8 '44 600w

MURPHY, EDWARD FRANCIS. Scarlet lily. 239p $2.25 Bruce pub.

Mary Magdalen, Saint—Fiction 44-47780

"A novel about the Magdalene. Beginning with Mary's childhood, interweaving fiction and historical fact, the author draws a sympathetic picture of one of the world's most memorable sinners." Springf'd Republican

"Murphy has invented many details, some of them unconvincing. He has attempted to write a novel, but his characters do not live. They are merely types. . . Despite all its faults, however, this is an absorbing book." Eddie Doherty

+ — Book Week p17 N 19 '44 310w

"This novel is well written, with a wealth of interesting detail concerning people who, although they lived so long ago, are not very different from ourselves. Father Murphy has handled with extreme delicacy and understanding a difficult theme and has evolved a beautiful story from one which could easily have been sordid." H. J. Sloan

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 7 '45 270w

MURRAY, RAYMOND WILLIAM. Man's unknown ancestors; the story of prehistoric man. 384p il $4.25 Bruce pub.

571 Man, Prehistoric 43-11405

"This work, by a Catholic sociologist, is intended, apparently, as a textbook of human prehistory for Catholic colleges. It attempts the rather formidable task of covering both Old and New World prehistory within a limited compass and, in addition, of reconciling Catholic theology with the theory of evolution." Am Anthropol

"Smoothly and simply written, the book includes accounts of many late archaeological developments. Where, as in the case of some of the standard material dealing with Old World prehistory, the reliable data are extensive, there is little reason to take issue with the author, albeit one or two crania are not adequately discussed. . . The American section of the book is the weaker, more from the standpoint of omission than commission. Several recent contributions to archaeological knowledge have been overlooked." L. C. Eiseley

MURRAY, R. W.—Continued
Am Anthropol 46:255 Ap '44 250w

"The book is for general reading, and the writer has conscientiously covered his subject. He quotes opinions on every side a little uncritically, which might make it difficult for students to follow the thread or to get a clear idea of prevailing doctrines. Furthermore, probably following his own interests, he devotes twice as much space to the prehistory of the New World as to that of the Old, a somewhat singular proportion for a history of human development. In any case, he has given his readers plenty to go on, and the book is well illustrated." W. W. Howells
+ — Am Soc R 9:446 Ag '44 200w

"Even to those comparatively uninterested in the subject, Man's Unknown Ancestors will be a storehouse of cultural enlightenment, and the source of a broader and more critical, because less prejudiced, attitude. Read it." K. E. Murphy
+ Cath World 157:663 S '43 400w

"The text is well arranged and clearly written for the layman. . . It is to be lamented that the author did not stop when he had written his effective story of prehistoric man. He did an excellent job. . . But he should most assuredly have omitted all mention of religion versus science, for in his references he pictures things as theory would have them." J. Mc A. Kater
+ — Commonweal 38:496 S 3 '43 350w

MURRETT, JOHN C. Tar heel apostle: Thomas Frederick Price, cofounder of Maryknoll. 260p $2.50 Longmans

B or 92 Price, Thomas Frederick 44-7789

Biography of the North Carolina priest, who was a co-founder, with Father Walsh, of the Catholic Foreign mission Society of America. This saintly man was often rudely treated by the people of his native state, but all his life he loved them—so much so that his early slogan was "every Tar Heel a Catholic." A desire for martyrdom in China caused Father Price to lead the first group of young missionaries from Maryknoll, altho he was fifty-eight and in poor health. And he did die in China, altho not as a martyr. Maps on end papers.

"The author has given a most appealing portrait of Father Price."
+ Commonweal 40:497 S 8 '44 550w
Kirkus 12:500 N 1 '44 170w

"An excellent first biography of a man who stands out in American Catholic history as a native of old stock, born in a Protestant State of convert parents, who lived and died in the medieval tradition of Christian austerity and zeal." Thomas Sugrue
+ N Y Times p16 O 1 '44 850w

MUSHAM, HARRY ALBERT. Technique of the terrain; maps and their use in the field in peace and war. 228p il $3.85 Reinhold

623.71 Maps, Military 44-8751

"Map construction, interpretation and use are presented in a concise and simplified text. The types of projections employed in map-making are described, together with an explanation of scales, direction, isogonic maps, methods for designating relief and actual drafting procedure. Three chapters deal with the interpretation and use of maps particularly from a military point of view. These include a discussion of the relationship of maps and logistics. The appendixes contain conversion factors for units of measurement, and tables of natural functions." N Y New Tech Bks

Library J 69:1003 N 15 '44 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:45 Jl '44

Reviewed by James Stokley
Weekly Book Review p6 Ja 14 '45 130w

MUSORGSKII, MODEST PETROVICH. Boris Godunoff; adapted by Robert Lawrence; il. by Alexandre Serebriakoff and Paul Kinnear [auth. ed. of the Metropolitan opera guild]. 32p 50c Grosset

782.1 Opera—Stories, plots, etc. 44-6138

The story of the opera by Musorgskii, adapted for young people who have seen the work given at the Metropolitan or heard it broadcast from there. Illustrations in color and in black and white. Includes music for many of the themes.

"Moussorgsky's opera is so told that one who has not seen the production promptly makes up his mind to go, while what he has seen is promptly recalled to one who has." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p5 Je 18 '44 100w
Wis Lib Bul 40:112 Jl '44

MYERS, CHARLES ANDREW, and MACLAURIN, WILLIAM RUPERT. Movement of factory workers; a study of a New England industrial community, 1937-1939 and 1942; a publication of the Technology press, Mass. inst. of technology. 111p $1.50 Wiley

331.126 Labor turnover 43-14337

"In this study of a typical, small New England industrial community, the authors fill in some of the gaps in our knowledge of the movement of labor between particular industries and firms. They deal effectively with the following questions: How much interfactory movement took place within the community? What was the nature of that movement; who were the people that moved? What were the principal barriers to movement between local firms? Did the movement of workers fulfill its functions of (a) equalizing wages and other conditions of work for comparable jobs, (b) distributing labor where the need was greatest, and (c) enabling workers to better themselves and to learn new occupations?" (Ann Am Acad) Index.

"The study is an important addition to our knowledge of this movement but fails to get below the surface of what it means to the workers and how it affects the structure of the community." B. B. Gardner
Am J Soc 50:249 N 13 '44 180w

"The study is well organized. The authors do not deviate from their purpose and the monograph is very readable. The faith which the authors place on such an agency as the U.S. Employment Service as providing the remedy to haphazard and wasteful labor utilization will undoubtedly not be shared by all students of the phenomenon of industrial unemployment." G. W. Hill
+ Am Soc R 9:697 D '44 220w

Reviewed by M. L. Hoch
Ann Am Acad 234:155 Jl '44 550w
Library J 68:670 S 1 '43 20w

MYERS, ELIZABETH. Well full of leaves. 215p $2.50 Morrow [8s 6d Chapman]

44-20108

Psychological novel which follows the fortunes of four preposterous English children from their middle youth in a miserable slum home to their adult years. The home was presided over by a gentle, ineffectual father, and a cruel, dominating mother. In the lives of their children the strain of that tragic beginning was evident. The older girl graduated from the life of courtesan into that of wife to a wealthy earl; the older boy had a fairly normal life; but Laura, the narrator, was a mystic, part saint, part child; and Steve, the youngest became a great actor, but lived a life of frustrated agony, and ended a murderer.

"English reviewers raved about this first novel. Americans, I predict, will find it overwritten. Not since the Bronte girls has any young lady been at once so knowing and so naive as Elizabeth Myers. . . At 17 I would have called this a great novel."

Book Week p2 My 14 '44 180w

"Mrs. Myers's short novel comes to America with the recommendations of more than a half dozen British critics. I must confess that I can't imagine why. . . The only thing to be said in favor of 'A Well Full of Leaves' is that its author really does know how to use the English language freshly—though occasionally it is a trifle too fresh, and could do with a bit of aging." H. L. B.

— + Commonweal 40:92 My 12 '44 120w

"Emotional, extreme, with rhapsodic romanticism at the close which is hard to take, this seems to us rather limited in potential market."

— Kirkus 12:80 F 15 '44 170w

"It is a quite incredible story, and I have a doubt as to the ultimate validity of Laura's mysticism, but much of it is very well written." J. D. Beresford

— + Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 27 '43 250w

"The first half of the book contains writing of unusual quality. Even though sensibility seems here to be operating in an intellectual vacuum, physical details are sharply observed, and the cause-and-effect of family relationships are reported with intuitive psychological wisdom. The second half, written in prose of a ripe plum color, may be read either as unwitting burlesque or as the lugubrious end of a case history. For Laura's autobiography disintegrates at about the same rate of speed, and in much the same fashion, as she herself presumably disintegrates." Marjorie Farber

+ — N Y Times p7 My 14 '44 800w

"Whether the author really thinks children talk and behave as these young people do or whether she is only kidding is any reader's guess. After the four children grow up and rise to social or artistic eminence, the story centres on the two younger and more neurasthenic ones, who come to untimely but on the whole not very surprising ends. Miss Myers, who is heralded by a loud blast of English critical approval, has unquestionable talent, but the sort of book she has written, to be effective, should have not only the audacity she has given it but more originality and subtlety."

— + New Yorker 20:89 My 13 '44 210w

Reviewed by N. L. Rothman

Sat R of Lit 27:27 Je 3 '44 280w

"A remarkable novel. . . Miss Myers' gift for descriptive epithet, her poet's imagination, her unfolding of an exciting philosophy of life, these are some things I have not been astonished by for a long time in a new writer. Her book is sometimes too 'literary' when it should cleave to the line of an inspired realism that it pursues at other times. . . She uses italics too much. There are other flaws. Yet all this hardly matters, because Miss Myers possesses that extraordinary and unaccountable thing that we sometimes call genius." W. R. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 27:32 Je 10 '44 340w

"This first novel has ability and promise, though the author is not well served by an introductory flourish of trumpets. She has a strain of intensity that at its surest holds attention: she sees things sharply, she captures a high, almost mystical note in reporting what she sees, and in her feeling for words she now and then invests the commonplace or trivial with individual over-tones. But hers is still a precocious and unbalanced fluency of sentiment, which is seldom wholly free, if one may say so, from emotional pretence; and the constant and italicized invocation of mystery, of visions or feelings too breathtaking to be spoken of, takes away from her powers of observation rather than adds anything to them."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p413 Ag 28 '43 360w

"The author unquestionably has a keen eye, sensitive responses, vision and an unusual energy which, however, drives her to torment her phrases, to over-enrich everything, to make too evident and too passionate an effort. From romantic the prose easily passes to grotesque. The love scenes are acutely embarrassing. And yet at times there are thrilling, exact, wonderful phrases in the book." Iris Barry

+ — Weekly Book Review p6 My 14 '44 500w

MYRDAL, GUNNAR; STERNER, RICHARD MAURITZ EDVARD, and ROSE, ARNOLD. American dilemma; the Negro problem and modern democracy. 2v $7.50 Harper

325.26 Negroes 44-635

"The Carnegie Corporation entrusted Dr. Myrdal, social economist of University of Stockholm, with task of undertaking a comprehensive study of Negro question in America, unhampered by national or racial considerations. Result fully justifies the selection. Exhaustive and objective analysis, intelligently interpreted, of anthropological, cultural, social, economic, legal, political, educational, and spiritual aspects of Negro minority (ten per cent of United States population), set against background of the 'American Creed.' Dilemma between American ideals and social concepts and the actual behavior of White towards Negro (and Negro towards White) represents 'moral lag in the development of the nation.' " (Library J) Index.

"Mr. Myrdal is friendly and sympathetic toward the United States, but at the same time he is a severe critic; and he is not patronizing, after the manner of some British observers of the American scene. While the book deals with the economic, social psychological, historical, and anthropological aspects of the problem, it does not neglect the political. As a matter of fact, I think that the book is one of the best political commentaries on American life that has ever been written, because it places its discussion of politics in a well-rounded social science setting." H. F. Gosnell

+ Am Pol Sci R 38:995 O '44 850w

"People may differ as to the soundness of Myrdal's conclusions and the adequacy of his interpretative tools, but certainly no one who reads this book can deny its provocative character. It has a novelty and a courage seldom found in our American discussions, either of our total society or of the part which the Negro plays in it." Kimball Young

+ Am Soc R 9:326 Je '44 4200w

"Though the treatise is quite thin in its theoretical aspects, it contains an amazing amount of factual material critically examined as to its reliability and inclusiveness. There are also excellent suggestions regarding further research problems." M. R. Davie

+ — Ann Am Acad 233:253 My '44 650w

"Considering the size of the problem facing him, the author has skilfully used his sharp ax of objectivity to cut away the confusion and underbrush. The result is not only compelling, but so forceful as again to underline that most violent question of the ages: Why race?"

+ Book Week p7 F 6 '44 480w

Booklist 40:227 Mr 1 '44

Bookmark 5:6 My '44

"Sociologists—if we accept the strictly scientific theory of sociology—are not as such concerned with ultimate rights and wrongs, though they do supply the material for the moralist's and even the theologian's task. Nevertheless, a sociologist can remain completely faithful to his 'pure' ideal and yet betray more appreciation than Myrdal does of the influence of religion in solving a problem which he has already acknowledged as moral. Myrdal's negligence in doing that, his further almost complete ignoring of the significance of the Catholic contribution to interracial justice, and—last but not least—his plugging in one chapter for Birth Control, of which he is a lifelong advocate: these are unpleasant blemishes on what is otherwise an admirable and certainly a powerful book." John La Farge

+ — Cath World 159:181 My '44 750w

Reviewed by H. E. Fey

Christian Century 61:433 Ap 5 '44 1250w

"Mr. Myrdal is almost obsessed with the idea that birth control is the eventual solution of this social problem, and this obsession colors

MYRDAL, GUNNAR—Continued
his findings considerably. Perhaps this is the reason for his total neglect of all Catholic work in the field—a strange and most unscientific omission." H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 39:477 F 25 '44 100w
Kirkus 11:563 D 15 '43 240w

"Frank, and not always pleasant reading, this two-volume study is real contribution towards more rational understanding of race relations and of discrimination in its cumulative effect. Recommended to all who take their 'American creed' seriously; especially noteworthy is Chapter I, 'American Ideals.'" Rudolf Hirsch
+ Library J 68:667 S 1 '43 110w

"As a scholar, Dr. Myrdal is heavily balanced on the side of comprehensive morality. As a European, he has no American sensibilities to protect. He hits hard with fact and he hits hard with interpretation." J. S. Redding
+ New Repub 110:384 Mr 20 '44 1250w

"Every aspect of the tangled problem has the light directed on it in turn: birth control, slum housing, sharecroppers, suffrage restrictions, institutions in the Negro world and so on. Only the hardiest appetite can digest it all. Perhaps only a student of social science will hope to. But it is a book which nobody who tries to face the Negro problem with any honesty can afford to miss." Frances Gaither
+ N Y Times p7 Ap 2 '44 1100w

"Regardless of whether you are interested in 'the Negro problem,' you will find this the most penetrating and important book on our contemporary American civilization that has been written. Here we Americans are revealed, clad in our patchwork 'American way,' attempting to live along with the vast and ugly reality of what Dr. Myrdal calls our 'greatest failure,' the Negro problem. The resulting analysis probes so deep and so surely that no one at all concerned with American democracy can afford to miss reading and pondering this book." R. S. Lynd
+ Sat R of Lit 27:5 Ap 22 '44 3200w
Social Forces 23:94 O '44 3100w

Reviewed by S. R. Harlow
Springf'd Republican p4d My 14 '44 700w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen
Survey G 33:183 Mr '44 3250w

Reviewed by G. W. Johnson
Weekly Book Review p2 Ag 13 '44 1350w

Wis Lib Bul 40:52 Ap '44

N

NABOKOV, VLADIMIR VLADIMIROVICH. Nikolai Gogol. (Makers of modern literature) 172p $1.50 New directions

B or 92 Gogol, Nikolaĭ Vasil'evich 44-8135

Biography of the Russian author, Nikolai Gogol, combined with a study and analysis of his work. Chronology. Index.

Commonweal 40:471 S 1 '44 700w

"Inadequate as this study may be, it is to be recommended for its close treatment of Gogol's rhetorical power and formal devices. The writing is lively, and through his play of sensibility the author succeeds in adapting his subject to modern interests." Philip Rahv
+ — Nation 159:658 N 25 '44 420w

"There is one English biography of Gogol, stoutly enough built but a slow-coach, available to the plodding student. But the creative reader (and student) who wishes to soar on Gogol's own wingéd-steed troika will choose Nabokov as his exhilarating courier." B. G. Guerney
+ New Repub 111:376 S 25 '44 1500w

Reviewed by Marjorie Farber
N Y Times p29 N 5 '44 1150w

"One of the best volumes so far in the interesting series called 'Makers of Modern Literature.' . . The chief faults of Mr. Nabokov's book are due to the fact that he is fundamentally a fiction writer and that Gogol, having been a real man, does not lend himself to the author's accomplished technique of sudden sidelights and oddly juxtaposed glimpses quite so readily as if he had been a character invented by Nabokov himself. Nabokov has done Gogol a certain amount of violence in trying to apply to him his usual methods of portraiture: he has left out considerable areas of his life and work, and the aspects which he has undertaken to treat seem sometimes rather capriciously chosen. . . His puns are particularly awful. . . Aside from this, his mastery of English is in general brilliant and amazing. . . It is a pity that his few slips in grammar and idiomatic usage were not set right by New Directions." Edmund Wilson
+ — New Yorker 20:72 S 9 '44 1250w

"This little book, intended as a guide to students, should attract them by its remoteness from the chalk-dusty atmosphere of the lecture hall. This author, a passionate devotee of Gogol, writes in a nervous, conversational style, punctuated with some unfortunate puns, but enlivened by confidential asides on his personal prejudices and predilections." Babette Deutsch
Weekly Book Review p8 D 24 '44 1300w

NAIDICH, JAMES. Air navigation made easy; with the editorial assistance of Harry Schor. 124p il maps $1.75 McGraw

629.1325 Navigation (aeronautics) 44-5910

"An elementary book designed for high school students and others who wish to pilot private planes. The presentation is given in simple, non-technical language. There is a generous number of diagrams. Problems and answers are provided." N Y New Tech Bks

Library J 69:463 My 15 '44 30w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:46 Jl '44

NAIDISH, THEODORE. Watch out for Willie Carter. 248p $2.50 Scribner

44-6793

Story of a young prize-fighter, on his way toward success. Willie Carter's career is complicated by his wife's ambitions to become a high-class night-club singer and by the interference of both sets of parents.

Reviewed by Ralph Peterson
Book Week p2 Ag 6 '44 400w

"Monosyllabic toughie of the prize ring which is high in pace and good of its kind."
Kirkus 12:287 Jl 1 '44 130w

"It must be said that this first book does not disclose an author who seriously challenges the crown of any division, from the heavies to the featherweights. But neither is he to be ruled out as a possible future threat. 'Watch Out for Willie Carter' has more angles than a plate of spaghetti, on the merit side, and if Naidish can't quite seem to focus steadily and wholly upon any of them, the punch-drunk reader is apt to excuse him." Kenneth Fearing
N Y Times p7 Ag 13 '44 440w

"Mr. Naidish, bless his heart, has given us a highly diverting novel about a prize-fighter, written quietly and unpretentiously and with a knack, rare in these talky times, of saying exactly what he means and no more."
+ New Yorker 20:62 Ag 12 '44 90w

Reviewed by N. L. Rothman
Sat R of Lit 27:10 Ag 12 '44 230w

"A story of this sort, which is never very probable anyhow, must depend for its success on the way it is told. Damon Runyon or Dashiell Hammett or James Cain can manage one with a slickness and speed that subordinates all faults the yarn may have. But Mr Naidish, here, has not. The novel moves slowly, though only three days' time are treated, and clumsily." Lee Varley
— Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 6 '44 390w

"A smoothly written first novel. . . Curiously enough, it is the lesser characters in 'Watch Out for Willie Carter' that remain in one's memory. None of the principals—Willie, his wife Helen, and their respective sets of parents, is a particularly likable person. But pudgy, sincere Tom Johnson, Willie's adviser, Jim Haley, who runs a training farm in Spring Valley, and Bardofsky, the punch-drunk sparring partner, all are sympathetically drawn characters, despite their minor roles. Only one exception can be taken to them: the dese-demdose dialect they use is badly overdone. No one, not even a prizefight manager, talks like that." Herbert Kupferberg

+ — Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 6 '44 470w

NANCE, ELLWOOD CECIL, ed. Faith of our fighters. 304p il $2 Christian bd.

940.53152 World war, 1939—Religious aspects. Soldiers—Religious life 44-40356

"An all-round book on the chaplaincy in the army and navy, this is the best that has come to our attention. The author has had ample experience in both wars, as a soldier on the fighting front in the first (five medals and Purple Heart) and as a chaplain and an instructor in the school for chaplains at Harvard in the second. But in producing this book he is editor rather than author. He has assembled contributions from Protestant, Catholic and Jewish chaplains and from others both in the ranks and in the churches who are competent to discuss the place of religion in the armed services. An important section includes eight chapters which are 'confessions of faith from camp and battlefield.' Another gives reports of visits to the battlefronts by four religious leaders, among whom are Archbishop Spellman and Dr. W. B. Pugh. The final section discusses 'faith on the home front' from the points of view of six writers. The closing word is by Vice-President Wallace." Christian Century

"The book will be of real value (a) to all present or prospective chaplains, (b) to ministers and church leaders at home who want to know how to back up the chaplains in their work, and (c) to the home folks generally who are concerned to know what is being done in the name of religion for the men and women in camp and field and how they are responding to it."

+ Christian Century 61:1449 D 13 '44 250w

"Those interested in our effort to safeguard the spiritual well-being of the men in the services will find this an inspiring volume." F. S. Adams

+ N Y Times p9 D 24 '44 400w

NASH, ANNE. Death by design. 180p $2 Doubleday

44-5689

Detective story.

"Swell."

+ Boston Globe p17 Je 14 '44 40w

Kirkus 12:155 Ap 1 '44 60w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p14 Je 4 '44 80w

"Pleasant enough, in its chatty way."

+ New Yorker 20:84 Je 3 '44 90w

"Entertaining."

+ Sat R of Lit 27:33 Je 10 '44 40w

"Miss Nash flings her ingredients around with reckless hand—a touch of screwballism here, a hearty cry there, and so forth without much rhyme or reason. Still and all, it's a good-natured item, and the doggies are something." Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p17 Je 4 '44 100w

NASH, ARNOLD SAMUEL. The university and the modern world; an essay in the philosophy of university education. 312p $2.50 Macmillan

378 Education, Higher 43-17277

Analysis of present day education which begins with an inquiry into the shortcomings of the modern university and its effect upon the world. It is the author's thesis that the worship of science is at fault. The book continues with a discussion of the totalitarian university as the wrong remedy, and concludes with the advocacy of a "middle course between the relativistic 'scientific' and the absolutist answers."

"Over and beyond its tractarian aspects, The University and the Modern World is an immensely stimulating book. Mr. Nash is an acquisitive scholar, of the order of C. E. M. Joad (whom he somehow suggests), and he puts together his many unusual fragments of knowledge in patterns new and splendid as Joseph's coat. For those who are tired of old combinations of ideas and who love the titillation of the novel (as does the present writer) there is no book to be preferred at the moment to this." Oscar Cargill

+ — Am Soc R 9:206 Ap '44 450w

"As one reads through this apparently learned book filled with keen remarks, fine distinctions, elaborate apparatus, numerous but sometimes unilluminating quotations, and a belabored vocabulary, he is humble before such an array of scholarship. The reader holds on tightly, he rereads, he ponders, he gives the author a hearing. And what is the final outcome? The reader feels just like the audience which went to see the show put on by the King and the Duke. . . This is an earnest and serious book. It deserves an audience, but in choosing his title the author wittingly or unwittingly appealed to an audience which will feel that it has been misled. Far better had he given it a frank title, such as 'A Philosophical Justification for Infusing Christianity into University Education.' Or if Part III had been omitted, more people would have taken the book in the sincere spirit in which it was written. It would then have deserved a review instead of a critical appraisal." E. B. Wesley

Ann Am Acad 237:245 Ja '45 400w

Booklist 40:278 Ap 15 '44

Canadian Forum 24:66 Je '44 480w

"There is much truth in this book and most of it is in quotations. Reading it is like leafing through an album of snapshots taken by different people in different places at different times and from different points of view. The impression it makes is slight and confused, nor are the author's recommendations clear enough to be helpful." E. C. Colwell

— + Christian Century 61:339 Mr 15 '44 240w

Current Hist 6:70 Ja '44 100w

Reviewed by C. E. Ayres

Ethics 54:301 Jl '44 1000w

Reviewed by Fredrika Blair

Sat R of Lit 27:40 S 16 '44 950w

Reviewed by C. C. Peters

Social Studies 35:330 N '44 800w

Reviewed by E. B. Sackett

Survey G 33:397 S '44 320w

NASH, ELEANOR ARNETT. Footnote to life. 229p $2.50 Appleton-Century

44-7587

"First novel by sister of Ogden Nash. Each chapter an incident in the life of Hervey Fenton, a Wall Street broker who planned his life for the 'sugar that shows' and to gain power, yet dies still striving to make his wife understand him." Library J

"Eleanor Arnett Nash's first novel is a literary soufflé. It's good but it doesn't stay with you. Hervey Fenton's life and business career follow along lines which must be true of many a big business executive but they are neither general enough to be mildly universal nor specific enough to give the book a certain dimension it seems to lack in the present." Elizabeth Watts

Boston Globe p17 S 27 '44 220w

"A psychological novel with an understanding of the inherent weakness of its central character—not always too well written."

Kirkus 12:326 Ag 1 '44 150w

"This novel of present-day life will be enjoyed by men and women. Well written, good characterization. Recommended." E. F. Kelly

+ Library J 69:699 S 1 '44 70w

NASH, E. A.—Continued

"Miss Nash doesn't draw any morals; she sketches the caricature and lets it go at that. She has some of her brother's gift for swift and satiric delineation, and one of the stimulating things about the book is the number of commentaries on people and society it incites in the reader as the tale of Hervey's life and loves races along." Thomas Sugrue

N Y Times p10 S 24 '44 550w

"Eleanor Arnett Nash has written a right good yarn. Call it a discerning first novel. Granted that the writing would be wooden if it weren't so spare and selective and if the author weren't possessed of an intelligent dramatic sense, you'll want to read this story at one sitting." A. H. Fuller

+ Springf'd Republican p4d S 24 '44 280w

"Miss Nash is much better at showing the ruthless, selfish side of her hero than in instilling any sympathy in the reader for the 'better self' that might lie within. In fact, the earlier part of the novel dealing with the boyhood of Fenton is sometimes embarrassingly sentimental. Eleanor Arnett Nash is the sister of Ogden Nash and is for her own part a lecturer and fashion consultant. It would be interesting if she would portray for us a feminine tycoon as carefully drawn and analyzed as this masculine one." G. G. Bates

+ — Weekly Book Review p6 S 17 '44 600w

NASH, ERNEST. Roman towns; photographs by [the author]. 201p $6 Augustin

913.37 Rome—Antiquities. Architecture, Roman 44-5712

"More than 130 beautiful photographs of classical architecture of Rome and its environs —walls, dwellings, public buildings, and tombs. Views of Pompeii and Herculaneum are included, with some floor plans. Forty pages of historical and descriptive text." Booklist

Booklist 40:376 Jl 1 '44

"Mr. Nash's text is almost as good as his pictures, and the publisher has turned out an unusually fine job of bookmaking."

+ New Yorker 20:78 Je 10 '44 50w

"Magnificent photographs . . . magnificently reproduced."

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Je 11 '44 280w

NASH, PHILIP CURTIS. Adventure in world order. 139p pa 50c Beacon press

321.021 International cooperation 44-2497

"The Moscow Agreement calls for 'a general international organization based on the principle of the sovereign equality of all peace-loving states and open to membership by all such states large and small, for the maintenance of international peace and security.' It is the purpose of this book to explore the problems that arise in the creation of such an organization. The tentative and preliminary draft of the constitution resulting from this exploration is based on the covenant of the League of Nations." Foreword

"The style of writing is direct and simple—sometimes too simple." W. L. Godshall

Am Pol Sci R 38:602 Je '44 230w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 22:656 Jl '44 30w

"Students of the subject will find here something definite and constructive, with high ideals and lofty principles geared into the sort of realistic and practical world machinery which we must have if hopes for a just and durable peace are to be realized."

+ Kirkus 12:137 Mr 15 '44 110w

Reviewed by Richard Match

New Repub 110:856 Je 26 '44 120w

School & Society 59:176 Mr 4 '44 30w

NATHAN, GEORGE JEAN. Theatre book of the year, 1943-1944; a record and an interpretation. 333p $3 Knopf

792 Theater—U.S. Drama—History and criticism (43-51298)

"This is the second of Mr. Nathan's compilations of his theatrical opinions issued under this title. It is, however, the twenty-first of his annual volumes which are basically the same regardless of title." Library J

Booklist 41:74 N 1 '44

Reviewed by C. W. Durgin

Boston Globe p15 O 25 '44 280w

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 160:377 Ja '45 400w

"There is Nathan's continually alive, expert analysis of the performances and performers, which varies from downright damnation to grudging praise, since his standards are, as usual, demanding, if highly individual. An interesting compilation, if expectedly biased."

+ — Kirkus 12:477 O 15 '44 90w

"Again librarians must be warned that this is no substitute for Burns Mantle's indispensable series. This book is purely personal in so far as it records wittily Mr. Nathan's frequently quoted opinions. Despite his encyclopedic knowledge of the drama, the author falls into occasional error. This could be more readily forgiven if Mr. Nathan were less pontifical in his judgment. Nevertheless, it is recommended for theater collections." George Freedley

+ — Library J 69:882 O 15 '44 70w

Reviewed by Stark Young

New Repub 111:595 N 6 '44 1000w

"In the present instance, Mr. Nathan's mood is one of romantic nostalgia. . . He is alternately beetling his brow over the activities of the 'prurientsia' who would censor the stage and—rightly—holding his nose as he approaches currently libidinous musical comedies. He alternately commends gusto or modernity and betrays mauve decade sensibilities. . . In one breath he disparages Lillian Hellman's concern with social protest, and in another he decries the effects of a theatre 'whose mission in the popular estimation is the business of reassurance.' For all that, Nathan is still the nimblest spirit in the narrow row of world dramatic criticism, and to all but victims of his heedless diatribes, he almost never fails to make pleasurable and stimulating reading." John Gassner

+ — N Y Times p28 O 22 '44 550w

New Yorker 20:100 N 25 '44 80w

Theatre Arts 29:62 Ja '45 400w

"For the second year now, George Jean Nathan has collected his reviews of all Broadway productions during the previous season, with dates, casts, and length of run. It is a pity he did not begin doing this years ago, for such volumes would be invaluable as records. Given a critic of his experience and discernment, that critic's comments on all the plays of a season tell a reader in the future not alone what the high points were, but what the average was, what the blunders, what the general drift of popular taste. We can only hope that Nathan keeps up his year-book, and enjoys a long life." W. P. Eaton

+ Weekly Book Review p16 O 22 '44 280w

NATHAN, OTTO. Nazi war finance and banking. 97p pa 50c Nat. bur. of economic research

336.43 Finance—Germany. World war, 1939—Finance—Germany. Banks and banking—Germany 44-6413

"This separately published book is partly an extension and partly a repetition of material contained in the main book [Nazi Economic System]. The available information is scanty, however, and with reference to the role of banking much still remains shrouded in mystery." Ann Am Acad

Reviewed by Paul Haensel

Ann Am Acad 236:203 N '44 90w

Reviewed by F. L. Schuman

N Y Times p6 Jl 9 '44 220w

NATHAN, OTTO, and FRIED, MILTON. Nazi economic system; Germany's mobilization for war. 378p $4 Duke univ. press [24s Cambridge]

330.943 Germany—Economic policy 44-4754

The author was one of the high officials of the German ministry of economics until Hitler came to power in 1933, when he left Germany. His book is a study of "the methods and techniques which Germany used in preparing for war. The question . . . asked throughout is not what has Germany accomplished, but how has she done it." (Pref) Index.

"With utmost scholarly care and thoroughness Dr. Otto Nathan in his The Nazi Economic System examines how Germany prepared for war in the years 1933-1939. Basing his analysis on careful documentation from German sources, he considers in detail the important organizations and techniques used by the nazis in building up a military economy which he defines as 'the over-all planning super-imposed upon capitalism for military objectives.' . . Despite the fact that the book is limited to pre-war years, it still provides some of the essential information for an understanding of the nazi economy." M. Y. Sweezy

+ Am Econ R 34:598 S '44 1050w

"Otto Nathan's book is a worthy addition to the list of distinguished works on recent German economic policies and practices." William Ebenstein

+ Am Pol Sci R 38:1007 O '44 800w

Reviewed by Paul Haensel

Ann Am Acad 236:202 N '44 360w

"There is much to be learned from this study. Fortunately Dr. Nathan writes well, in words which the layman can understand and in a style he can enjoy." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p4 Je 18 '44 270w

Current Hist 7:52 Jl '44 100w

Foreign Affairs 23:12 O '44 20w

"In a list of recent books on Germany . . . this scholarly and objective study of the Nazi economic system should rate a high place." H. H. F. Eulau

+ New Repub 111:229 Ag 21 '44 600w

"Otto Nathan has here applied all his profound knowledge and great talents as a distinguished economist to a detailed description and critical evaluation of the devices employed by the N. S. D. A. P. to control industry, agriculture, banking, labor and prices. He has done for Nazi economy what has been done for Nazi ideology and politics in 'Behemoth,' by Franz Neumann; for the career of Hitler in 'Der Fuehrer,' by Konrad Heiden, and for Nazi techniques of mobilizing mass support in 'German Radio Propaganda.'" F. L. Schuman

+ N Y Times p6 Jl 9 '44 250w

Reviewed by A. F. Kiefer

Pol Sci Q 59:614 D '44 900w

NATHAN, ROBERT. Morning in Iowa. 50p $1.75 Knopf

811 44-3669

Narrative poem about Mary, a New England girl, who starts to hitch-hike to California, but is left in Iowa by a careless truck driver. Kit Vance, a Western boy, goes east to sell his father's cattle, and has orders from his widowed father to "bring back a wife." The meeting between these two young people is dramatic.

"Nathan has worked out a complex design for this poem, employing many different rhythmic patterns, and there are some lovely portions in it. I believe it will be remembered, however, primarily for its whole shape and meaning, its revelation of the variety, the freedom and the fruitfulness of American life —and I believe this is as Nathan would wish." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p6 Ap 23 '44 150w

Booklist 40:314 My 15 '44

Reviewed by Pearl Strachan

Christian Science Monitor p13 O 14 '44 100w

"Frail as this little narrative poem is, it will sell on the Nathan name and wide popularity. . . There is a dash of the usual nostalgic philosophy, there is considerable sentimentality, and there is no end of fashionable enthusiasm for the beautiful, bountiful land of America. A half hour's worth of pure escapism, Nathan styled."

+ — Kirkus 12:129 Mr 15 '44 120w

"A slight but lovely story in verse. . . The poem is so short that it will be included in a collection later, probably, and is not essential for any library that does not buy all American poetry." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 69:354 Ap 15 '44 70w

Reviewed by Marian Castleman

— Poetry 64:231 Jl '44 600w

"There is plenty of Nathan as a poet here, and a very good poet at that. The work is head and shoulders above his more publicized 'Dunkerque.'" W. R. Benet

+ Sat R of Lit 27:23 Ap 29 '44 270w

"The 50 pages which make up this narrative are full of music: music of earth, ballads, folk songs, river songs and the music of life itself. The verse forms are varied constantly so that mood and tempo frequently change and one is swept gently along to the inevitable conclusion of story and song. 'Morning in Iowa' will fire the hearts of many with a new ardor for this great sprawling land of ours and remind us again how dearly it was bought and how dearly it must be preserved." E. M. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p6 My 1 '44 220w

Reviewed by Kerker Quinn

— Weekly Book Review p10 Ap 23 '44 330w

NATHAN, ROBERT ROY. Mobilizing for abundance. 228p $2 McGraw

330.973. U.S.—Economic policy. Reconstruction (1939-)—U.S. 44-2660

"What does the future hold in store for America? Will the postwar years bring prosperity and jobs for all or unemployment and deprivation? Will there be jobs for the returning soldier? This book, by an author who is confident that our free enterprise democratic system is the best in the world, presents a concrete and simple program to assure jobs and good living for all our people, all the time. He draws upon his many years of work in planning the mobilization for war and in economic research to present a clear description of why we have had depressions in the past and how to avoid them in the future." Publisher's note

---

"In its present form, the book can only mislead the superficial reader. The thoughtful lay reader who is assailed by doubts is bound to ask many of the questions on which the book is silent. If the book is meant as an antidote to ultra conservatism which regards government spending in depressions, social security, and other policies of maintaining effective demand as not much better than bolshevism, it could, again, impress only the unthinking but hardly convince the thoughtful." G. Haberler

Am Econ R 34:604 S '44 800w

"Many readers may not be in entire agreement with some of the postulates of Mobilizing for Abundance. However, no one will fail to find it highly stimulating." Josef Hanč

+ — Ann Am Acad 233:245 My '44 500w

Reviewed by Sterling North

Book Week p2 Mr 12 '44 450w

Booklist 40:313 My 15 '44

"His explanation of our difficulties primarily in terms of savings is remarkably simple, in fact overly simple, as he himself admits. He writes without the slightest effort at adornment, in a straightforward, vigorous style. It would be difficult to find a more convincing exposé of advanced non-classical economics."

Commonweal 39:545 Mr 17 '44 800w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 22:662 Jl '44 30w

Kirkus 12:33 Ja 15 '44 200w

"Thought-provoking, readable and clear book." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 69:306 Ap 1 '44 70w

Reviewed by George Soule

New Repub 110:669 My 15 '44 1600w

Reviewed by John MacCormac

N Y Times p4 Mr 19 '44 900w

"Mr. Nathan's book is neither foggy nor furious, but a well written, well organized, logical account of what's up in planning circles. The most interesting thing about it, however.

NATHAN, R. R.—Continued
is the way in which it unconsciously advances the debate, here and there, beyond questions of method to those of 'ends' and 'values.' Prosperity, jobs, and an abundant life for everybody are possible, he declares, and if we settle for less it will be for lack of collective intelligence and collective courage." Palmer Harman
+ Sat R of Lit 27:23 Ap 1 '44 450w

"A worth-while book, clear and readable enough for the intelligent laymen to follow." Marshall Bragdon
+ Springf'd Republican p6 Mr 25 '44 700w

Reviewed by Randall Williams
Survey G 33:332 Jl '44 270w

NATIONAL CONGRESS OF PARENTS AND TEACHERS. Parent-teacher organization; its origins and development. 197p $1.25 The congress

371.103 Parents' and teachers' associations 44-19607

Collection of articles on parent-teacher activities. Partial contents: A changing social landscape, by J. E. Anderson; Guides and goals for P.T.A.'s, by A. H. Hayes; The distribution of effort, by C. C. Mulberry; Coast-to-coast coverage, by M. A. Hastings; Projects express the P.T.A., by Alice Sowers; Home, school, and community in focus, by F. C. Bingham; The P.T.A.—a unique home influence, by A. H. Arlitt; The P.T.A.—interpreter of education, by C. O. Williams; The P.T.A. serves the community, by I. A. Booker; A rural point of view, by W. M. Robinson. Index.

Booklist 41:72 N 1 '44
J Home Econ 36:659 D '44 50w

NAUGHTON, JAMES W. Pius XII on world problems. 199p $2 America press

261 Sociology, Christian. Pius, XII, pope. World war, 1939—Roman Catholic church 43-16167

Statement of the views of the present pope on the war, on the requisites of peace, and various other questions. Contains an analytic classification of all the pope's pronouncements to date, with an index and a bibliography of each doctrine and problem discussed.

"It forms so welcome an aid to the reader, the writer, the speaker, the thinker, that we all owe the author an acknowledgement of our great indebtedness."
+ Cath World 158:604 Mr '44 140w
Commonweal 39:428 F 11 '44 40w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:491 Ap '44 10w

NAZAROFF, ALEXANDER I. Land of the Russian people. (Portraits of the nations ser) 160p il $2 Lippincott

947 Russia—History. Russia—Description and travel 44-9862

The first part of this book is a travelogue telling the young reader what he would see in an overland journey from Vladivostok to Leningrad and from there to other parts of present day Russia. The second part is a condensed history of Russia, under the czars, the emperors, and the soviets.

Booklist 41:142 Ja 1 '45

"One could wish that the present war had been treated in the history section instead of only touched on in the mention of cities involved. Otherwise, is informative, unbiased and should be very useful." Marian Cumming
+ — Library J 70:71 Ja 15 '45 70w

"The author belongs to those who, in their own minds, have made a happy synthesis between the old and the new. In fact, to him there is not an old Russia and a new, post-revolutionary Russia. 'There is but one Russia that continues.' Strong with this conviction, he has written a truly fascinating book." B. W. Shaffer
+ Sat R of Lit 28:35 Ja 13 '45 360w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p5 Ja 14 '45 350w

NEISWANGER, WILLIAM ADDISON. Elementary statistical methods; as applied to business and economic data. 740p $4 Macmillan

311 Statistics 43-18274

"Although directed primarily to the beginning student in economics and business, this text might well be used as supplementary reading for students of 'social' statistics. . . Of particular interest to teachers of sociology are the chapters dealing with the uses of statistical tools, common fallacies of interpretation, and the conduct of a statistical investigation, in addition to the usual chapters on sampling, tabular presentation of materials, measures of central tendency and dispersion, linear functions, and first-order correlation." Am Soc R

"The style of the book is clear. The material is well arranged with recipelike summaries and short (perhaps too short) bibliographies at the end of the individual chapters. . . Both teacher and students will find this a most useful textbook, especially if used in a basic course for underclassmen that is to be followed by more thorough and specialized training." J. E. Morton
+ Am Econ R 34:374 Je '44 1350w

"The author's simplicity of presentation, seemingly resting on the assumption that the average college student has long since forgotten his high school algebra (and even how to compute a square root and 'where to put the decimal point'), will no doubt lend a little aid and comfort to the student who looks upon statistics as a diabolical tool understood solely by mathematical geniuses."
+ Am Soc R 9:718 D '44 150w

NELMS, HENNING (HAKE TALBOT, pseud). Rim of the pit. 278p $2 Simon & Schuster 44-6374

Detective story.

"How the story turns out is something that can't be discussed here. But what goes on in the spirit world will give you several turns; and what goes on in a nice little romance that bobs up intermittently may give you a raised eyebrow or two." Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p10 Jl 16 '44 140w
Boston Globe p15 Jl 19 '44 50w

"Good of this type."
+ Kirkus 12:204 My 1 '44 40w

"This is a horror story all right, gripping, but not in the suavest vein." Beatrice Sherman
N Y Times p16 Jl 16 '44 160w

"Although this mystery hasn't the chill of an authentic horror story, it may scare you if you're the impressionable type."
New Yorker 20:72 Jl 15 '44 100w

"First class."
+ Sat R of Lit 27:12 Jl 15 '44 40w
Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 30 '44 150w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p12 Jl 16 '44 150w

NELSON, WILBUR CLIFTON. Airplane propeller principles. 129p il $2.50 Wiley

629.13436 Propellers, Aerial 44-2532

"A textbook covering blade action theory, aerodynamic propeller tests, blade and hub design and stress analysis, and the effect of the propeller on plane performance. Generously illustrated with diagrams and charts and with drawings and photographs of propellers and propeller parts." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Library J 69:32 Ja 1 '44 20w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:3 Ja '44

NESBITT, NELL SMIDELL. Cobi camel [il. by Mildred Gatlin Weber]. 159p $2.50 Caxton printers

Camels—Legends and stories 44-7838

Cobi was a little yellow camel attached to a large caravan in the Egyptian desert. Cobi wished he could have been a white camel but as the story goes Cobi's color was once the means of saving the whole caravan from disaster and Cobi became a hero in consequence.

"Third and fourth grade teachers will find this excellent supplementary reading."
+ Kirkus 12:277 Je 15 '44 90w

"Large, clear type, interesting illustrations. For children from nine to eleven. Good supplementary reading." K. H. McAlarney
+ Library J 69:818 O 1 '44 70w

"As a story it is wooden. Personalizing the animals does not add interest. Black-and-white pictures are ineffective. For children seven to nine. Not recommended." Isabel McLaughlin
— Library J 69:818 O 1 '44 70w

"The direct, simple style makes this easy reading for 8 to 11 year olds and the author has captured the flavor of desert life." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p12 D 24 '44 160w

NESBITT, PHILIP. Nicholas Needlefoot. [32p] il $1 Follett

Cats—Legends and stories 44-5585

Nicholas Needlefoot was a handsome black cat who was "almost" king of the cats, but there was a touch of the coward in him which had to be conquered. Then one day he conquered his fear and had a tremendous fight in which he vanquished a fierce yellow cat. And at last Nicholas was acknowledged as king. For ages four to six.

"The pictures in 'Nicholas Needlefoot' may not be art but they're good fun and so is the story." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p11 Jl 30 '44 110w
Kirkus 12:276 Je 15 '44 30w

"The pictures, faintly reminiscent of Krazy Kat, are droll and spirited. They look as if they might have been drawn by a child with a genius for artful simplicity and fluid line." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p10 My 28 '44 100w

NEUSCHUTZ, MRS LOUISE (MORGENSTERN). Jobs for the physically handicapped; with a foreword by William Rush Dunton, jr. 240p $3 Ackerman

331.86 Disabled—Rehabilitation, etc. Occupations 44-47945

Practical handbook on vocational readjustment for the physically handicapped, giving information on vocations open for various kinds of handicapped workers, case histories, and bibliographies, as well as details on training. Index.

"There is one regrettable thing about Miss Neuschutz's book—a tendency among rehabilitation authorities that does irreparable harm. Far too many of the suggestions listed boil down to one thing: salesmanship. Perhaps the whole thing is that the American theory that salesmanship-is-always-there is brought down to its most disillusioning focus among the handicapped. The lessons of the handicapped of the past are that salesmanship is no permanent solution; that valid and expert technical skills are the things that should be attempted first. That is the book's only fault, however, and it is safe to predict that rehabilitation is in reality moving away from the superficial notions of salesmanship to the safer ground of permanent skill." Ralph Peterson
+ — Book Week p3 Ja 14 '45 500w
Library J 70:34 Ja 1 '45 30w

"This is a valuable book with a double purpose. It is designed to present opportunities available to civilians with a physical handicap and to offer to the wounded veterans of the war the hope and means of rehabilitation for a useful life."
+ School & Society 60:448 D 30 '44 70w

NEVILLE, LESLIE E., ed. Aviation dictionary for boys and girls; pictures by Gregorio Prestopino. (Whittlesey house publication) 192p $2 McGraw

629.1303 Aeronautics—Dictionaries. Aeronautics—Juvenile literature 44-8290

"Definitions of words used in relation to aviation arranged alphabetically with diagram illustrations in black and red." Sat R of Lit

"Diagrams which help to explain the text are plentiful and clear, and the whole makes fascinating reading. Careful cross-indexing is used throughout, so that a term used in one explanation may be immediately looked up in another part of the book if one is not familiar with it." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p14 N 12 '44 90w
Booklist 41:95 N 15 '44

"An excellent job, particularly enhanced by the black and red diagrammatic drawings of Gregorio Prestopino." H. L. Binsse
+ Commonweal 41:129 N 17 '44 20w
Kirkus 12:437 S 15 '44 90w

Reviewed by E. D. Briggs
Library J 69:1052 D 1 '44 70w

"Probably the supreme test of a book for the layman on aviation is that it should be as intelligible to the uninstructed adult as to the generation which has, so to speak, been born with a stick in its hand. This dictionary is not only intelligible; it is readable." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p24 O 8 '44 220w
+ New Yorker 20:92 D 16 '44 50w
Sat R of Lit 27:49 N 11 '44 20w

"I cannot imagine a boy with the least interest in aviation who could open this book without losing himself in it. You read from item to item, skip about looking for points on which you are not sure, continually finding words that mean as yet nothing and will in a few lines mean a great deal."
+ Weekly Book Review p26 N 12 '44 250w

NEVINS, ALLAN, and HACKER, LOUIS MORTON, eds. United States and its place in world affairs, 1918-1943 [by Antonin Basch and others]. 612p maps $3.25 Heath

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations. World politics. World war, 1939—U.S. 43-14546

This symposium "surveying the broad field of American and world affairs from the First World war onward" was drawn up primarily by members of the Contemporary civilization staff of Columbia college. The main divisions are: Democracy and revolutionary ideologies; Western Europe from 1914 to the great depression; The United States and its position in the 1920's; Europe's descent into international anarchy; Eastern Europe between two wars; International rivalries in the Far East; The United States from the depression to the Second World war; Military aspects of the Second World war; America's involvement in the war; Mobilization for defense and war; What lies ahead. The viewpoint is strictly American. Bibliography. Index.

"We may infer from the preface that the book will be read by underclassmen in Columbia College. It will probably also find place in not a few institutions where members of the armed forces are being given an acquaintance with American and world history. Such readers will find that different sections of the work vary widely in their degree of assimilability by immature minds. Mr. Heaton's chapters lean to the colloquial, Mr. Hacker's to the statistical, and Mr. Fitch's here and there, to the abstruse. As a whole, however, the volume is well adapted to the purpose for which it was designed, and is to be commended also to the reading public." J. W. Pratt
+ — Ann Am Acad 232:210 Mr '44 450w
Booklist 40:227 Mr 1 '44

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:490 Ap '44 50w

"This book is significant for a number of reasons: for its completeness, for expertness of editing and authorship, and as an example of the high quality of contribution students of social matters are making in the present ur-

NEVINS, ALLAN—Continued
gency. Incidentally there is something reassuring in the willingness, implicit in this volume, of the social specialists to rest their case upon a sober presentation of facts, an attitude less in evidence among such specialists during the First World War." R. L. Power
+ Social Educ 8:90 F '44 550w

"Since it is no longer possible for the United States to insulate itself from other nations, and since what happens to them deeply affects American lives, a book like this one is important for the contribution it makes to better international understanding. . . Although primarily designed for the new army and navy courses, this book should offer the general reader a new perspective on the immediate past and the possible trends which may continue after the war."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 D 23 '43 190w

Reviewed by Oscar Zeichner
Survey G 33:254 My '44 330w

NEVINS, ALLAN, and WEITENKAMPF, FRANK. Century of political cartoons. 190p $3.50 Scribner

973 U.S.—History—Humor, caricatures, etc. U.S.—Politics and government. Caricatures and cartoons 44-3029

A collection of one hundred political cartoons published in the United States between 1800 and 1900. Each cartoon is accompanied by a paragraph or two explaining its meaning and its historical setting.

"The cartoons in this volume were presumably selected by Weitenkampf, who is an authority in the field, and the accompanying text written by Pulitzer Prize-winning Prof. Allan Nevins of Columbia University. The book is an informative associational item to be put on the shelves among the best histories of the past century." August Derleth
+ Book Week p9 Ap 9 '44 360w
Booklist 40:302 My 1 '44

"Not only is it fun to look at the pictures, but it is fun to get some sort of inside notion of how a trained historian looks at such ore. What is equally important, 'A Century of Political Cartoons' is excellently presented from the point of view of bookmaking and is a good buy at the price. It should prove particularly interesting to teachers of high school and elementary college history, who can certainly use it to good effect for supplementary work and for demonstration in the classroom."
+ Commonweal 39:656 Ap 14 '44 650w

"This is one of the most useful books for the student of American history that has been published in some time. The cartoons are well chosen, excellently reproduced and fully annotated. . . It is regrettable, therefore, that in commenting on a cartoon of the Reconstruction period the authors have gone to the lengths of underwriting the Southern 'white-supremacy' argument." George Mayberry
+ — New Repub 110:509 Ap 10 '44 240w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus
N Y Times p3 Ap 2 '44 900w
Sat R of Lit 27:12 Ap 22 '44 400w
Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 23 '44 160w

"About the year 1900, say the authors of this book, 'as the daily newspapers took over this line of endeavor and the comic weaklies began to disappear, the cartoonist often gave less attention to serious draughtsmanship, and furnished reporting rather than interpretation, and raillery rather than satire.' Is this a true bill? That it is an indictment there is no doubt, for it accuses the cartoonist of some loss of seriousness in his attitude toward life. If it can be sustained by convincing evidence, then it is obvious that this book ends at the right place, for it is essentially a serious volume. The fact that it is full of amusing pictures is irrelevant, for the pictures report a continuous political and social development that is anything but frivolous." G. W. Johnson
+ Weekly Book Review p2 My 28 '44 900w
Wis Lib Bul 40:67 My '44

NEW YORK (CITY). PUBLIC LIBRARY. Style manual for preparation of catalogue copy in the New York public library. 103p $2 N.Y. public lib.

025.3 Cataloging. Printing, Practical—Style manuals A44-375

"The new edition of the Style Manual is an unpretentious guide for those persons who have a part in cataloging, revising, printing, or proofreading that library's catalog cards. Obviously intended solely for intra-mural use, it wastes no words in explaining local references or the reasons for the rules. Instead, generally in the imperative mood, it states directly and specifically the rules which have been adopted for capitalization, punctuation, abbreviations, collation, division of syllables, type faces and accents, as well as practices in the preparation of copy for the printer, in composition and proofreading, etc. Transliteration tables showing the English equivalents of Greek, Hebrew, Irish and Slavonic alphabets and a collection of specimen catalog cards complete the book, except for an excellent detailed index." Library J

Reviewed by L. M. Morsch
Library J 69:199 Mr 1 '44 200w

Reviewed by A. W. Nyholm
Library Q 14:359 O '44 1500w

NEW YORK. MUSEUM OF MODERN ART. Modern drawings; ed. by Monroe Wheeler. 104p il $2.25 Museum of modern art

741.9 Drawings 44-4465

"This book presents an international survey of modern drawings beginning with Cézanne. . . The purpose of this selection is not to 'explain' kinds of drawing in relation to the modern schools which have been covered and evaluated so clearly in previous Museum publications, but to offer a general view of the draftsmanship of our time, the outlines and salients of the common accomplishment in this medium, and perhaps clues of new styles ahead." Publisher's note

Booklist 40:337 Je 1 '44
Current Hist 6:514 Je '44 20w

NEWBERRY, MRS CLARE (TURLAY). Pandora; pictures by [the author]. [35p] $1.75 Harper

Cats—Legends and stories. Cats—Pictures, illustrations, etc. 44-9750

Picture book and brief story, about Pandora, a beautiful Persian cat, and Peter, the little boy who loved her.

"Clare Turlay Newberry's cats are already famous and it is a joy to have another book of her beautiful drawings. Pandora is a handsome Persian and a very convincing story-book cat, as anyone will tell you who has ever known a cat. Peter, as any mother will tell you, is a most convincing little boy." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p18 N 19 '44 140w
Booklist 41:127 D 15 '44

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p10 N 27 '44 120w

"The 1944 contribution to a classic series of cat books; I believe no one living can draw a cat with the skill of Miss Newberry." H. L. Binsse
+ Commonweal 41:127 N 17 '44 20w

"The pictures are the next best thing to owning a cat of our own, lifelike enough to cuddle, and the appeal of the whole book is really ageless."
+ Kirkus 12:508 N 1 '44 100w

"Text is secondary in appeal to the illustrations which are extraordinary. Story is for children ten and younger, while the pictures will be appreciated by people of all ages." Dorotha Dawson
+ Library J 69:1104 D 15 '44 50w

"Pandora is a Persian cat, and surely no Persian has ever been better portrayed than this one. . . The text is first-rate, too—the briefest of stories, about a mischievous cat, an inquiring small boy, and a distracted mother who are right out of life."

+ New Yorker 20:80 D 16 '44 50w

"The eyes of Pandora are worth the book, especially when they look out from an opening bureau drawer and express without the aid of any other feature a sense of outrage beyond the power of words."

+ Weekly Book Review p8 N 12 '44 230w

NEWKIRK, LOUIS VEST, and ZUTTER, LA VADA. You can make it; things to do with scissors and paste. 214p il $3 Silver

745.54 Paper work. Toys 44-908

"The authors who have had wide experience in the field of arts and crafts in the Chicago public schools, have brought together in one large volume many ideas for children's handwork. As is suggested by the subtitle, 'Things To Do with Scissors and Paste,' the materials required for the projects described are chiefly paper and cardboard. The tools are those available in any home or school. The grade placement indicated by the publishers is from Grades V to VIII, and children of those grades should be able to use the book independently." El School J

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '44

Reviewed by Evangeline Colburn

El School J 45:241 D '44 450w

NEWMAN, BARCLAY MOON. Japan's secret weapon; ed. by Peter Greenleaf. 223p $2.50 Current pub. co, 212 5th av, N.Y.

940.53186169 Bacterial warfare. World war, 1939—Japan 44-7427

"The author, who is a science analyst, a graduate of Phillips Exeter Academy and Princeton University, and who has worked on antimalaria drugs and other problems in the U.S. Public Health Service, points out one possibility against which we should be prepared. He believes that Japan has laid out a program of oligodynamic warfare—the warfare that deals with bacteria, viruses, and fungi. He thinks that Japanese scientists have gone far in the art of spreading diseases through these media, and that they will attack us suddenly when they have developed antidotes to prevent a flashback at their own people, and while our own medical men are still ignorant of any remedies." Chem & Met Eng

"The book is not well written, and its message, with few exceptions, is not fully authenticated. If the author had limited himself to pointing out what may happen in the future, he would have been more effective than by trying to point out things that may or may not already have happened in the past. . . It is too bad that a valuable idea, which rates the length of a magazine article, should have been blown up into a book for which there was not enough data on hand." Otto Eisenschiml

— + Chem & Met Eng 22:1721 O 10 '44 550w

Foreign Affairs 23:8 O '44 20w

"The fact is that apart from the Chinese data there is no evidence whatever that the Japanese have anywhere resorted to bacterial warfare or that they intend to do so. Mr. Newman's 'clues' and 'sources of evidence' are, with one exception, excessively weak, and the conclusions he draws from his interpretation of the 'evidence' are, to say the least, strained and extreme." M. F. Ashley Montagu

N Y Times p10 Jl 16 '44 650w

NEWMAN, LOUIS E., ed. Modern turbines. 175p il $2.75 Wiley

621.165 Steam turbines. Electric generators 44-2837

"Information on steam turbines and generators to aid the engineer in selecting the right turbine for the right job. Covers those ranging from 500 to 7500 kw and normally used by industrial manufacturers and small utilities. The authors have drawn on the research of the General electric company. The material first appeared in Power Plant Engineering Magazine." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 40:298 My 1 '44

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 68:1007 D 1 '43 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:13 Ja '44

NEWMARK, MAXIM. Illustrated technical dictionary. 352p il $5 Philosophical lib.

603 Technology—Dictionaries 44-3419

"Containing standard technical definitions of current terms in the applied sciences, graphic and industrial arts, and mechanical trades; including air navigation, meteorology, shipbuilding, synthetics and plastics; with illustrations, technical data, and interconversion tables." Subtitle

Chem & Eng N 22:547 Ap 10 '44 40w

Reviewed by M. G. Callaham

Chem & Met Eng 51:185 Je '44 320w

"This is an elementary dictionary including only simple forms of technical apparatus. Price is too high for the type of information in it." L. A. Eales

Library J 69:306 Ap 1 '44 50w

"Although it has faults, the book will be useful in public and technical library reference work for some time to come."

+ — N Y New Tech Bks 29:5 Ja '44

"Those who need all possible technical definitions in a specific field or in several fields will want the special dictionaries and glossaries covering those fields. Since the material for the Illustrated Technical Dictionary has been largely, if not wholly gleaned from printed sources, it probably does not contain any definitions not already available. However, in spite of the limitations and undesirable features, it is a convenient compilation because it contains terms from many fields which will be useful to the individual or library that has need of a general source of technical definitions. It is recommended for reference use in such cases."

— + Subscription Bks Bul 15:46 O '44 480w

NEWTON, JOSEPH FORT. Live, love and learn; a little book about the great business of living. 202p $2 Harper

242 Life 43-15458

"This is the fourth published collection of selections from Dr. Newton's newspaper column, Everyday Living, which has been appearing in this paper [Churchman] and in many others. Each covers a page. They are full of wisdom, insight, humor, imagination, and deal with everything that ought to interest an intelligent Christian—religion, personal problems, books, politics, art." Churchman

Booklist 40:205 F 15 '44

"The preacher will find here many good stories and illustrations, and every reader will find much stimulating thought and helpful guidance." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 157:18 D 15 '43 100w

"Dr. Newton has succeeded in maintaining a sense of informality, of closeness to human problems, of practical approach to human needs; he tells little stories that point his morals; he salts his inspirational message with humor and everyday good sense."

+ Kirkus 11:527 D 1 '44 70w

NICHOLLS, WILLIAM HORD, and VIEG, JOHN ALBERT. Wartime government in operation; sponsored by the Am. council on public affairs. 109p $1.50 Blakiston

330.973 World war, 1939—Labor problems. World war, 1939—Food question 43-16290

The authors, an agricultural economist and a political scientist, "have attempted to go behind recent wartime government policies, analysing the governmental framework within which these policies have been formulated and administered. In so doing, we hope above all that we have provided sufficient basic principles and factual material to arouse a keener interest on the part of the reader in his government and to help him to make up his own mind on current issues so crucial to the future of the democratic way of life." (Pref) Partial contents: Manpower and wage control; Behind the wartime labor program; Food production and price control; Behind the wartime food program; Interrelationships between the labor and farm programs; Toward more effective wartime government. No index.

NICHOLLS, W. H.—Continued

Reviewed by D. O. Walter
Am Pol Sci R 38:395 Ap '44 380w

"Any person interested in the problems of democratic government in war-time particularly as they are influenced by the constitutional system of separation of powers which obtains in this country, will find this book worth reading." L. M. Short
+ Ann Am Acad 233:236 My '44 500w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:661 Jl '44 10w

Reviewed by Rita Davidson
Pol Sci Q 59:149 Mr '44 390w

NICHOLS, BEVERLEY. Verdict on India. 304p $2.50 Harcourt [12s 6d Cape, J.]

915.4 India—Civilization. India—Description and travel 44-47252

The author, an English novelist, journalist, and playwright, spent a year in India, whither he was sent as a correspondent of the British syndicate of the Allied newspapers. He was taken ill and spent part of his time in a hospital, but on recovering he stayed on as an independent observer, and this book is his report. Index.

Reviewed by Sudhindra Bose
Book Week p5 D 24 '44 350w

Booklist 41:151 Ja 15 '45

Boston Globe p34 N 29 '44 330w

"The author's style of writing is popular and confident and the book contains some passages of great beauty."
+ Christian Century 61:1419 D 6 '44 240w

Christian Science Monitor p14 N 29 '44 400w

Christian Science Monitor p12 Ja 20 '45 550w

"It is both an immensely entertaining and engrossing report. . . There's controversial material here for a controversial country; there are few soft words—and no solutions—for either white or native; but there's a widening conception of India for the general reader (who may not read less personalized accounts) which will give him an idea of many conflicts this diversified, divergent population of Hindu, Muslim, untouchable, half caste and Briton, presents."
+ Kirkus 12:490 N 1 '44 250w

"The title of this book is unfortunate. Nobody can pass a verdict on India, for the word implies finality of opinion based on full knowledge of the matter sub judice, a consummation in the case of India beyond the scope of any one individual. But the book is first-class evidence given by a credible and well-informed witness. The author is entitled to be heard by all who want to know about India." J. C.
+ Manchester Guardian p3 N 17 '44 250w

Nation 159:696 D 2 '44 180w

"If we could accept Mr. Beverley Nichols's verdict as a conscious caricature of British official propaganda about India, it might deserve a welcome. But that was not the purpose of its author. He has aimed at surpassing Miss Mayo in an attack on Indian civilisation. In its extravagance and injustice it surpasses previous efforts."
— New Statesman & Nation 28:358 N 25 '44 110w

"Mr. Nichols, an experienced novelist and essayist, knows how to write. His last book, the report of one year of contact with India, has a good chance of becoming a best seller. It is a breezy book, full of provocative thoughts and vivid images which will hold the reader's interest from cover to cover; and it offers an approach to the Indian problem rarely heard in the popular literature. . . Yet with all its qualities it is an unsatisfactory book. The serious reader will stumble over the title: 'Verdict on India' sounds not too humble, and a certain air of unfortunate presumption characterizes many passages. It adds to the facile and sparkling brilliancy, it detracts from its serious value." Hans Kohn
+ — N Y Times p10 D 17 '44 900w

New Yorker 20:106 D 2 '44 100w

"The title of this book is a misnomer. Mr. Nichols . . . has an eye for picturesque scenes and an ear for piquant stories, and, as we all know, he has the gift of writing vividly on what he has heard and seen. He is also courageous in expressing his own opinions. This is good. India is perhaps the most interesting and colourful country in the world, and it is unfortunate that so many of the people who speak or write about it can be so boring. There is nothing boring about this book; but it has few of the characteristics of a judicial pronouncement. . . Yet the result is not satisfactory. He has got a lot of his detail wrong. . . The book is full of evidence of faulty observation. Far more important, however, are the sweeping judgments which he passes on Indian life as a whole, and the practical conclusions to which they lead him." John McKenzie
— + Spec 173:364 O 20 '44 750w

"The book abounds in unfavourable verdicts, and there is little shade from the fierce heat of the Indian sun."
Times [London] Lit Sup p494 O 14 '44 480w

Reviewed by Christine Weston
Weekly Book Review p16 N 19 '44 1050w

NICHOLS, MRS JEANNETTE (PADDOCK). Twentieth century United States; a history. 506p il maps $3.50 Appleton-Century

973.91 U.S.—History—20th century 43-17113

Concise account of the recent history of the United States. "Chapters I and II of this book have been written solely for it. The greater part of Chapters III-XVII of this book, inasmuch as they covered 1900-1939, has appeared in two earlier works, The Growth of American Democracy [Book Review Digest, 1939] and Volume II of The Republic of the United States [Book Review Digest, 1942]; however, some of the material originally in these fifteen chapters has been omitted, their approach has been simplified and some new material has been inserted in them. Chapter XVIII served in large part as the final chapter of Volume II aforesaid; but the last third of it has been rewritten for present purposes. Chapter XIX, the present concluding chapter, is chiefly new narrative." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

Am Hist R 49:543 Ap '44 100w

Foreign Affairs 23:10 O '44 10w

"Many personality sidelights or thumbnail sketches, plus the thoroughly human interests related, make the book enjoyable to the layman. For him who desires to understand where we are and how we have arrived here, this will meet the need. For the student of social science there is much to challenge further thought and investigation." J. C. Appel
+ Social Studies 35:238 My '44 750w

NICHOLS, MRS MARGARET (GORMAN). Portrait of love. 240p $2 Macrae Smith co.

44-2597

The love story of an American girl, and a selfish older man. Beginning on a Mediterranean cruise, a year before the war, the story ends with Christa Haliday's realization, three years later, that her place is with her own generation.

Kirkus 11:556 D 15 '43 90w

"A novel in which the facts of life are glossed by a high varnish of noble motives." Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p14 Ap 9 '44 80w

Wis Lib Bul 40:71 My '44

NICHOLS, ROY FRANKLIN, and NICHOLS, MRS JEANNETTE (PADDOCK). Short history of American democracy. 696p il maps $4 Appleton-Century

973 U.S.—History 43-17112

"A short history of the evolution of democratic institutions in the United States prepared by abridging three earlier books, The Growth of American Democracy, The Republic of the United States, and Twentieth Century United States. It contains a comprehensive bibliography and is well indexed." Social Studies

Am Hist R 49:543 Ap '44 50w

Social Studies 35:94 F '44 50w

"On the whole this book should be readily usable for any student of college age, but only for the very mature high school student. It contains valuable suggestions for additional reading in an appendix. . . To the teacher who is looking for a fresh interpretation of well-worn facts as well as a few fresh bits of information this book should make a most welcome and especial appeal. It is a timely contribution at a moment when we are being appealed to from every side to enliven the traditional course in American history and to make its contents pertain to the problems of American democracy today." Katherine Smedley

+ Social Studies 35:379 D '44 650w

NICHOLSON, FREDERICK SAMUEL, and JONES, HUGH FREDERICK. Blueprint reading; understanding shop practices. 141p il $2 Van Nostrand

744.532 Blueprints 44-2773

"For most lessons in this book, the student has before him pictorial illustrations of a machine tool, an expository text on its uses, a reproduction of a blueprint requiring the use of the tool, and questions pertaining to the blueprint. An introductory textbook for classroom use, but useful also for self-instruction. The first author is an instructor at the Henry Ford Trade School, and the second author is head of the drawing department of the Ford Motor Company's apprentice school." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Library J 69:32 Ja 1 '44 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:4 Ja '44

NICHOLSON, SIR SYDNEY HUGO. Peter, the adventures of a chorister [1137-1937] il. by H. Tisdall. 210p $1.75 Macmillan [6s S.P.C.K] 44-8557

"This choir boy, 'Peter,' who seems to have lived for eight hundred years, is no Wandering Jew; he is merely the embodiment (or a generalization) of the generations of choir boys in English churches through these centuries. Nevertheless, in each particular appearance he is a very specific and concrete individual. The purpose, of course, is to delineate the life and services of choir boys at different periods within these centuries." Christian Century

"The purpose is cleverly, entertainingly and successfully accomplished."

+ Christian Century 61:1504 D 27 '44 80w

"Would make a delightful present for any choir boy." C. G.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 9 '44 120w

NICOLAY, HELEN. China's first lady. 224p il $2 Appleton-Century

B or 92 Chiang, Mei-ling (Sung) (Mme Chiang Kai-shek) 44-2216

Biography of Madame Chiang Kai-shek, written for teen age readers, but interesting to their elders as well. The author begins with a sketch of Madame Chiang's country and her background; describes her youth, school and college days in America; her marriage; the important part she has played in modern Chinese history; and the triumphal tour of the United States.

Booklist 40:306 My 1 '44

"It is good journalism, readable, accurate, and because of the spirit of Madame Chiang Kai-shek, it is at times inspiring." F. C. Darling

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 27 '44 110w

"Though the writing lacks brilliance, an unusually large amount of information is imparted." G. E. Cartmell

Library J 69:356 Ap 15 '44 50w

"In 'China's First Lady' Helen Nicolay presents a full-length biography written with a fine sense of balance. Readers of high school age will find this a vivid, readable study which also illuminates some of the tangled political background of modern China." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p19 Ag 27 '44 60w

Wis Lib Bul 40:127 O '44

NIEBUHR, REINHOLD. The children of light and the children of darkness. 190p $2 Scribner

321.8 Democracy 44-9689

"A vindication of democracy and a critique of its traditional defence." (Subtitle) "Dr Niebuhr believes in democracy, but he emphasizes that all democratic institutions are the result of particular experiences on the part of those who developed them. All are rooted in specific past economic conditions and the philosophical attitudes held by those who formulated them. As a result their meaning today is confused. The primary purpose of this book, therefore, is to give men an insight into the situation which will enable them to preserve the permanent values of democracy as against the ephemeral forms which democracy has taken." (Springf'd Republican)

Reviewed by R. J. Bender

Book Week p22 D 3 '44 850w

Booklist 41:147 Ja 15 '45

"Dr. Niebuhr is a master of historical analysis and his powers are shown at their best in this critical discussion of the varying forms of the philosophy of democracy. The book does effectively what its subtitle claims for it: it is 'a vindication of democracy and a critique of its traditional defence.' . . The book contains very little theology, but the only important reference to the subject is unfortunate. Dr. Niebuhr rightly emphasizes the soundness and balance of the Christian view of man as a creature capable of both good will and selfishness, a being who commonly can walk humbly with his God and always needs to. He also rightly recognizes that the truth of this view has been dimmed to modern eyes by the obscurantism with which it has been associated. Yet he persists in perpetuating this difficulty by linking this Christian conception with the doctrine of original sin which was unnecessarily dragged into it by Pauline Hebraism, and which has historically been connected with so many unethical ideas as to create a negative reaction in the modern mind against everything associated with it. However, this is a very minor criticism of a brilliant and exceedingly valuable book." A. C. Garnett

+ — Christian Century 61:1414 D 6 '44 900w

"Niebuhr is one who believes that to come to grips with the issues of today and the significance of Nazism, communism, racism, collectivism, individualism, and democracy, some people will have to dig deep under current shibboleths and uncover fundamental philosophical, ethical and religious principles. This book is for those willing and able to understand such a thorough search for the true way out of our difficulties."

Kirkus 12:505 N 1 '44 260w

Reviewed by Albert Guérard

Nation 159:720 D 9 '44 1150w

" 'The Children of Light and the Children of Darkness' is an important book, which ought to be read by those in both camps of modern thought. It is stimulating and refreshing and a powerfully illuminating guide to the world in which we live." C. D. Kean

+ Springf'd Republican p4d N 26 '44 700w

"Among the numerous discussions and programs called forth by the present crisis, this reviewer has found none going more profoundly to the root of the matter. It is to be regret-

NIEBUHR, REINHOLD—Continued
ted that the tendency to abstraction and the compactness of the expression will deter many readers who would greatly benefit. But such readers may be assured that the concentrated attention which the book demands will yield an abundant reward." W. A. Neilson
+ Weekly Book Review p3 D 24 '44 700w

NIKOLSKY, ALEXANDER A. Notes on helicopter design theory. 228p pa $3 Princeton univ. press

629.13335 Aerodynamics. Helicopters
A44-4480

"Subtitled: 'a Series of Lectures delivered March-April, 1944, at Princeton University.' This book, by an authority, digests all existing literature on the subject of aerodynamics of the helicopter, such as hovering, vertical climb, forward flight, performance calculations and static stability." Library J

Library J 69:1003 N 15 '44 70w

Reviewed by J. M. Juran
N Y Times p36 N 26 '44 90w

NIZER, LOUIS. What to do with Germany. 213p $2.50 Ziff-Davis

940.53144 Reconstruction (1939-)—Germany. World war, 1939—Peace
44-40018

"A provocative blueprint for winning the peace after the conquest of Germany. . . An examination of German history and mentality, the results of the Versailles Treaty and recommendations for punishment, restitution and preventative methods are unevenly documented and the appended lengthy bibliography is unclassified. Geopolitics is ignored and the necessity of moral reform emphasized by Sheen, Spellman and others is barely considered in the author's absorption with economic, educational and military phases." (Library J) Bibliography.

"Mr. Nizer's book is one of the most serious efforts toward preventing the World War three. It is written with a sense of responsibility and of self-control that deserves the highest respect and admiration." Albert Salomon
+ Am Soc R 9:586 O '44 150w

Reviewed by Helmut Kuhn
Ann Am Acad 233:227 My '44 460w

Reviewed by Friedrich Roetter
Book Week p3 F 6 '44 700w

Booklist 40:210 F 15 '44

Christian Science Monitor p12. Mr 25 '44 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p2 Ja '44

" 'What to Do with Germany' is of the 'tough peace' school. It does not give the most extreme version of this view. . . On such subjects as the purpose of the Nazi anti-Semitism campaign, the means whereby the German criminals avoided punishment after the last war, the role which education played in Hitler's program, the systematic way in which the other countries were despoiled and other matters involving observation and good sources of factual information, Mr. Nizer has done well. His prescriptions raise the doubts. They seem to be more concerned with punishment than with reconstruction." Edward Skillin, Jr.
+ — Commonweal 39:426 F 11 '44 650w

"It is a thoughtful, plainly written book, well worth pondering."
+ Current Hist 6:258 Mr '44 300w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:499 Ap '44 20w

"To date one of the most specific and detailed treatments of a vexatious problem. . . For the general adult reader, especially the larger libraries." R. J. Hurley
Library J 69:30 Ja 1 '44 110w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison
Nation 158:226 F 19 '44 440w

"Mr. Nizer tries to prove that Nazism is not an economically, socially and historically determined phenomenon, but an inherent characteristic of the German people, and he 'succeeds' in 'proving' his point by using all the tricks of legalistic pettifoggery, selectively quoting out of context whenever it suits his purpose and nonchalantly forgetting about Germany's highly intricate social and political history." H. H. F. Eulau
— New Repub 110:290 F 28 '44 240w

"With the exception of the historical survey, the book is well worth study, since it is an earnest attempt to answer the question that bids fair soon to overshadow all others. Right or wrong, any concrete answers are a stimulus to necessary thinking." B. D. Wolfe
N Y Times p4 Ja 30 '44 1200w

"Though this book has the endorsement of Vice-President Wallace and Senators Truman and Pepper, I cannot see that it is of any real value, save, perhaps, as inaugurating an effort to be definite about our intentions in regard to a defeated Germany." Edmund Wilson
New Yorker 19:83 F 12 '44 550w

"If the Germans are basically as Mr. Nizer describes in the first portion of his volume, it may be asked whether his, or any other, plan for their reorientation is feasible. If, moreover, the Germans throughout history are the instigators of war, if no other nations have coresponsibility, if war is as simple as that in its genesis, would there not be a still more effective method for curbing this recurrent historical phenomenon? Were there no more Germans, the truth or falsity of Mr. Nizer's view could be put to pragmatic test." C. B. Peters
Sat R of Lit 27:10 F 5 '44 1350w

Reviewed by T. H. Minshall
Spec 173:62 Jl 21 '44 500w

Reviewed by Cyril Clemens
Springf'd Republican p6 Mr 15 '44 440w

Reviewed by J. S. Roucek
Survey G 33:222 Ap '44 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p349 Jl 22 '44 1250w

Reviewed by Wallace Deuel
Weekly Book Review p4 F 6 '44 1400w

NOLAN, JEANNETTE (COVERT) (MRS VAL NOLAN). O. Henry; the story of William Sydney Porter; il. by Hamilton Greene. 263p $2.50 Messner

B or 92 Porter, William Sydney—Juvenile literature
43-17447

A biography of William Sydney Porter, best known for his short stories written under the pseudonym O. Henry. The complete story of his life, with its tragedy, humiliations, and success, is told for junior and senior high schools. Bibliography. Index.

"O. Henry's life makes as romantic and fascinating reading as any of the stories he ever penned. In this biography for the teens, Jeannette Covert Nolan has presented the man and the writer with justice and sympathy." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p9 Mr 5 '44 250w

Booklist 40:216 F 15 '44

Reviewed by Cyril Clemens
Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 10 '44 700w

Wis Lib Bul 40:41 Mr '44

NOLAN, JEANNETTE (COVERT) (MRS VAL NOLAN). Treason at the Point; il. by Henry C. Pitz. 224p $2 Messner

Arnold, Benedict—Juvenile literature
44-8164

Historical novel of the American revolution, written for young people. The story of Arnold's treason is set forth chiefly as it is seen by three youthful American patriots, Jed Drake, courier to General Washington, Emmeline, his sister, serving in Arnold's household, and their young brother, Kirby.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p8 N 12 '44 100w

Booklist 41:80 N 1 '44

"Excellent supplementary reading for the American Revolution."
+ Kirkus 12:405 S 1 '44 160w

Reviewed by E. E. Frank
Library J 69:940 N 1 '44 70w

"This book is written in a clear and forceful manner, making the reader feel that he is living in that exciting period of the Revolutionary war." Irving Boyce
+ Springf'd Republican p4d N 12 '44 60w

"Just as entertainment this story can be recommended to older boys and girls, but it has more than entertainment to recommend it."
+ Weekly Book Review p32 N 12 '44 300w

NORBY, HAAKON. Questions and answers for deck officers. 422p $3.50; text ed $2.75 McGraw
527.076 Navigation 44-4020

"This book was originally written for the purpose of serving as a review for prospective deck officers, as well as an examination guide. . . The questions contained in this book are typical of those given by the examining boards on the Atlantic, Pacific, and Gulf coasts. . . This work falls naturally into three divisions. The first (Chaps. I to XVII) is primarily for third mates, but the questions apply for all grades and should be studied by the candidate for a chief mate's license as well. The second (Chaps. XVIII to XIX) contains additional material for second mates. . . The third part (Chaps. XX to XXV) is for chief mates." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 40:352 Je 15 '44
Library J 69:32 Ja 1 '44 40w

NORD, SVERRE. Logger's odyssey. 255p $3 Caxton printers
B or 92 44-2138

"Mr. Nord is a Norwegian who came to America in 1906 and spent the major portion of his life in the logging industry on the Pacific coast. His book is a collection of letters written to a friend in 1931-32 when on a motor trip which fairly well covered the inhabited portion of the North American continent. The letters, which were not intended for publication, are filled with descriptions and historical notes and passages of reminiscence from a very roving and adventurous past. The author shows himself as physically tough, quick with his fists, credulous, extraversive and sentimental but with a good deal of intellectual vitality." Canadian Forum

"He writes in a terse, straightforward style and with a background atmosphere of the Norse saga in which nature is always monstrous and mysterious." Alan Creighton
+ Canadian Forum 24:242 Ja '45 210w

"The traveling logger tells fearsome tales of shipwrecks and tragedies, not to mention trolls and spooks, of being caught in forest fires and Arctic blizzards and of the time when he was lost in the wilderness 11 days without food. His story is spirited and interesting." J. W. C.
+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 21 '44 380w

NORINS, MARTIN RICHARD. Gateway to Asia: Sinkiang; frontier of the Chinese far west; introd. by Owen Lattimore. 200p il maps $2.75 Day
951.6 Sinkiang 44-6386

"Even those who are unfamiliar with whole travel literature from Marco Polo to Sven Hedin, read about Sinkiang's political and economic significance in Willkie's One World. Present study, undertaken by younger University-of-California-trained scholar and published in cooperation with International Secretariat, Institute of Pacific Relations, gives more detailed picture of Chinese Turkestan and its role in contemporary Asiatic affairs." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

"Although one feels that he over-values Sinkiang's position as a supply road into China, the book has interest and value as a source of information about a little-known and potentially rich and important part of Asia." Catherine Baker-Carr
+ — Canadian Forum 24:140 S '44 600w

"Though Mr. Norins presents valuable material, drawn from Chinese sources, he lacks firsthand contact. Many will prefer the judgment of Owen Lattimore, who in an introduction weighs the strategic along with other factors and feels that the strategic period is closed." R. G.
Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 21 '44 500w

Foreign Affairs 23:17 O '44 20w

Reviewed by F. E. Hirsch
Library J 69:602 Jl '44 140w

"Mr. Norins' chief debt is to books by Tu Chung-yuan and Chiang Chun-chang. Of these, the former is widely known. Much of the Chinese material is of a doubtful value and Mr. Norins obviously had to exercise great and painful care in separating fact from fancy. What has emerged is an interesting, but slight and sketchy survey of Sinkiang. . . But the reader will seek in vain the drama, the romance, the echo of clashing imperial wills and interests which fill Fleming's book, for example. . . The book is poorly organized and repetitive." Mark Gayn
+ — N Y Times p7 Jl 23 '44 800w

Reviewed by G. B. Cressey
Pacific Affairs 17:497 D '44 420w

"Mr. Norins' comments on wartime and long range developments for Sinkiang are worthy of considerable attention."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 15:3 Ag '44 240w

"In this little book, written under the auspices of the Institute of Pacific Relations, Mr. Norins is not concerned with Sinkiang's romantic past, nor has he written a modern travel book. What we have is a sober, factual analysis, largely drawn from Chinese sources, of existing conditions in the 'New Dominion' and something of the territory's future potentialities. Since publication, events in Sinkiang have taken a new turn . . . and in the light of this development many of the interpretations of the political situation given by Mr. Norins no longer appear valid." F. R. Dulles
+ — Weekly Book Review p8 S 17 '44 500w

NORLING, MRS JOSEPHINE (STEARNS), and NORLING, ERNEST RALPH. Pogo's train ride; a story of freight trains [pictures] by Ernest Norling. 40p $1.25 Holt 44-9468

A small boy and his dog make a visit to a roundhouse, take an overnight trip on a freight train, and John, at least, learns a good deal about trains in the process.

Booklist 41:127 D 15 '44
+ Kirkus 12:450 O 1 '44 90w

"Small boys who love trains will like this. . . Simple reading, good print and plain pictures in black and white make an easy book on a favorite subject. For ages nine to eleven years." G. M. Williams
+ Library J 70:36 Ja 1 '45 50w

"The best and liveliest of the Pogo stories to date." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p10 Ja 7 '45 120w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p5 Ja 14 '45 200w

NORMAN, CHARLES. A soldier's diary. 51p $1.75 Scribner
811 World war, 1939—Poetry 44-4814

"In a slender volume of short lyrics the author, a typical American who volunteered at the age of 38 and achieved his present rank in the infantry the hard way, writes of this war from the viewpoint of an enlisted man. His poems cover many moods, mirroring the effect of army life upon a sensitive individual, and describing the memories and dreams of the ordinary soldier." Springf'd Republican

NORMAN, CHARLES—Continued
" 'In this strange time that's out of time' Lieut Norman is quietly tolerant, conscious that heroes may be found in all countries, and that love and pain may also be endured by the enemy. . . He evinces much power and craftsmanship in 'The Lover as Soldier,' 'Death, Look to Your Domain,' 'December, 1941,' and 'On the Talk of War With Russia.' There is definitely a field for just such war poetry today." C. M. Sauer
+ Springf'd Republican p6 My 31 '44 300w

"Charles Norman's lyrics are by no means about Army life and fellow soldiers. They are so objectively remote from specific camp or battle that they might have been written by almost any one, in or out of service, in any war. . . Some are Elizabethan in manner, more have the studied simplicity reminiscent of Housman, almost all of them are slick, literary." Ruth Lechlitner
Weekly Book Review p12 S 17 '44 350w

NORMAN, JAMES, pseud. See Schmidt, J. N.

NORRIS, CHARLES GILMAN. Flint. 354p $2.50 Doubleday
44-505

This novel of capital versus labor is presented thru the medium of the activities of a wealthy California family, the Rutherfords, owners of Wickwire, Rutherford & Co., ship-owners and operators. The time is the 1930's. The leader of the longshoremen, Rory O'Brien, is a twisted, sardonic sort of man whose personal story is told in the last chapter by the girl Caddie, for whom two Rutherfords died.

"Charles Norris has dared to tackle one major theme of modern society. If he has fallen somewhat short of complete success, his failure is of greater importance than many a lightly won victory." Sterling North
Book Week p2 Ja 16 '44 320w
Booklist 40:198 F 1 '44

Reviewed by J. C. Cort
Commonweal 39:660 Ap 14 '44 350w

"Mr. Norris has been writing novels for some time now, and it is a thing which he does skillfully. He might sharpen his tools a bit though; during the first half-dozen pages of this present book he has been guilty of using such clichés as 'bleak December day,' 'a man whose name was one with which to conjure,' 'one son had been vouchsafed this couple,' 'gay troubadour.' But don't let such trifles stop you. If you'd like the capital-labor situation served up with a dash of murder and a touch of sex, this is for you." Thomas Sugrue
+ — N Y Times p4 Ja 9 '44 850w

"In spite of accurately drawn backgrounds, competent workmanship, and an undeniable power, Charles Norris's books always have a certain naïveté which gives a romantic cast to these earnest studies of our time meant, one is sure, to be wholly realistic. The almost complete lack of irony and humor is partly to blame. In 'Flint' the romanticism appears chiefly in the vaguely realized characters and storming narrative, not in the handling of the thesis. The author presents with scrupulous fairness the claims and grievances of both sides, and actually is less romantic than John Steinbeck, Josephine Herbst, or Michael Gold in picturing the class struggle. In spite of tedious, sagging passages of debate and analysis, the book illuminates rather than preaches, and is thus superior to such earlier thesis novels as 'Seed,' 'Bread,' and 'Brass.' " R. A. Cordell
— + Sat R of Lit 27:18 Ja 8 '44 550w

Reviewed by G. L. Joughin
Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 16 '44 440w

Reviewed by Jennings Rice
Weekly Book Review p6 Ja 9 '44 800w
Wis Lib Bul 40:38 Mr '44

NORTHROP, EUGENE PURDY. Riddles in mathematics; a book of paradoxes. 262p $3 Van Nostrand
510.76 Mathematical recreations 44-3524

Over two hundred riddles derived from different branches of mathematics. Contents: What is a paradox?; A few simple brain-teasers: paradoxes for everybody; The mighty midget 2 and other miracles: paradoxes in arithmetic; Now you see it—now you don't: paradoxes in geometry; Thou shalt not divide by zero: algebraic fallacies; Seeing is believing—perhaps: geometric fallacies; Outward bound: paradoxes of the infinite; What are the chances?: paradoxes in probability; Vicious circles: paradoxes in logic; Not for the novice: paradoxes in higher mathematics. Index.

Booklist 40:373 Jl 1 '44
Library J 69:463 My 15 '44 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:8 Ja '44

"Mr. Northrop writes well and simply. Every so often he will illuminate his discussion with an amusing example. While reading a discussion of topology, this reviewer learned how to remove his vest from beneath his jacket. It works every time." Mitchell Wilson
+ N Y Times p20 My 14 '44 170w
School & Society 59:256 Ap 8 '44 10w

NORTHRUP, HERBERT ROOF. Organized labor and the Negro; foreword by Sumner H. Slichter. 312p $3.50 Harper 331.88 Trade unions—U.S. Negroes—Employment. Labor and laboring classes—U.S.
44-3030

"In considering the attitudes of trade and industrial unions toward negroes the author reviews the Negro's position in eleven industry groups important for their racial composition, showing how in some instances exclusion exists through ritual, constitutional provisions, tacit consent and segregated auxiliary status, and how, on the other hand, national unions have professed, and even practiced equal treatment. External factors also have influenced policy: regional differences, labor supply and the presence of Negroes in industries being unionized by the C.I.O. Discusses also question of public policy raised by union policies, prospect of government action on program to curb discrimination and the future prospects of Negro labor." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

"In spite of [some] strictures, Mr. Northrup's investigation fills an important gap in our knowledge of the racial policies of trade unions and the status of Negroes in industry since the last depression. In addition to the results of his independent research, he has brought together a considerable amount of new unpublished materials from government and other sources, notably the Carnegie-Myrdal study." A. L. Harris
+ — Am Econ R 34:642 S '44 2300w

Reviewed by R. C. Weaver
Am J Soc 50:148 S '44 1300w

" 'Organized Labor and the Negro' is to be heartily recommended as a competent and painstaking job for the most part well-reasoned and socially aware." Jack Conroy
+ Book Week p2 Ap 9 '44 600w
Booklist 40:296 My 1 '44

"The book is the result of several years of careful research, is clearly written, and is supplied with a critical bibliography and an index. It will be of interest to all who still strive to make America a land of opportunity and a democracy."
+ Christian Century 61:464 Ap 12 '44 260w

"The numerous books on the Negro problem are providing food for serious thought. This book presents another facet of the problem. The position of labor unions is of utmost importance and their attitude towards the Negro question has long needed clarification. In studying the facts and presenting them, the author has made a constructive contribution."
+ Kirkus 12:58 F 1 '44 170w

"Recommended." Walter Hausdorfer
+ Library J 69:303 Ap 1 '44 140w

"Despite the large amount of survey material which has been published on the Negro in industry in the past decade, this book is a most welcome and valuable contribution. It is by far the most satisfying study yet made of the present-day attitudes, practices and issues relating to the specific problem of unionism and the Negro, and it is also heartening in its indication that the past few years have seen tangible advances and wider improvement of conditions for the Negro." Herman Feldman
+ Management R 33:215 Je '44 550w

"Dr. Northrup's book fills an important need, for it brings together in one volume more-up-to-date information on its subject than can be found elsewhere in readily accessible form. The author has not only carried on considerable field work and made extensive use of primary sources; his work also represents in large measure the fruit of an unprecedented amount of research by others during the past five years. Much of his material is based on the comprehensive manuscript prepared under the direction of Dr. Paul H. Norgren for the 'Negro in America' inquiry sponsored by the Carnegie Corporation of New York." L. H. Bailer
+ Nation 159:217 Ag 19 '44 700w

Reviewed by Carey McWilliams
New Repub 110:852 Je 26 '44 550w

"His contribution is on the whole admirably balanced. Every step in the descriptive process is supported with firm evidence. And the author doesn't rein in as so many predecessors have, at the very point where one anticipates suggestions for future action. He has a point of view, frankly expressed throughout the book, and the recommendations with which he closes the discussion are by and large logical and expected." S. L. Jackson
+ Springf'd Republican p4d My 14 '44 600w

Wis Lib Bul 40:66 My '44

NORTON, ALICE MARY (ANDRE NORTON, pseud). Sword is drawn; with il. by Duncan Coburn. 178p $2 Houghton
44-40054

The adventures of Lorenz van Norreys from the Nazi invasion of Holland, until he had accomplished a mission for the house of which he was a courageous member. Lorenz was only eighteen when his experiences began, but his travels led him from Rotterdam to Java, England, America, and back again to Holland. For older boys.

Booklist 40:272 Ap 1 '44

"The author never makes the mistake or putting propaganda in the place of plot nor of belittling the Nazis. Though perhaps intended for youthful readers, the novel will appeal to anyone who likes drama and adventure." N. E. Monroe
+ Cath World 159:91 Ap '44 160w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 13 '44 130w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 20:103 Mr '44 100w

"The book is well written and without heroics. Wash and charcoal drawings vividly illustrate the incidents of the tale and catch the strength of Lorens' character." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p23 Ap 23 '44 190w

"What troubles this reviewer about this story is its conscious effort to further international friendship. . . The American boy does not appear as a character in the story. We are told nothing about him. As the action grows swifter, more dramatic, this friendship seems less and less important. It has no meaning in connection with the stirring events that make up the action of the story. One has a feeling that the letters are 'dragged in,' that the book would be stronger and clearer without them." M. G. D.
+ — Sat R of Lit 27:75 Ap 15 '44 400w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p11 Je 4 '44 410w

NORTON, ANDRE, pseud. See Norton, A.M.

NORTON, MARY. Magic bed-knob; or, How to become a witch in ten easy lessons; il. by Waldo Peirce. [50p] $1.75 Putnam
44-381

Three children visiting an unsympathetic aunt in Bedfordshire, England, while away their time with Miss Price, an elderly spinster who is learning to become a witch "in ten easy lessons." Miss Price took up her study late in life, so was not very adept, but with the help of the bed-knob which she made magic they all had some exciting experiences.

"Mary Norton writes with a special charm and humor that is entirely her own. There are a good many chuckles. . . The American painter, Waldo Peirce, has done the many colored illustrations and the book is not so thin as its 48 pages would seem to indicate." P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p15 Mr 26 '44 320w

Booklist 40:307 My 1 '44

Bookmark 5:5 Ag '44

Kirkus 12:143 Mr 15 '44 40w

"Recommended as a read-aloud book to grades three through five." J. E. Wooster
+ Library J 69:355 Ap 15 '44 110w

"No one can tell for certain when a classic is born—but this story has all the makings of one. There is a lovely, glancing humor in the characterization of Miss Price—a kind of Lolly Willowes for children—and of Paul, as real a little boy as was ever bullied by older brother and sister. Real, too, seems the magic for its all-too-brief duration—and Waldo Peirce furthers both that illusion and the humor in lusciously colored pictures which mirror the mood." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p6 Mr 12 '44 360w

"The Waldo Peirce illustrations in water color and pen-and-ink are fine and free, but it was a mistake to play them up at the expense of the text, which is printed in small type, two columns to a page. The story is what matters here and is for eight- to eleven-year-olds, not for the picture-book age."
+ New Yorker 20:56 Jl 8 '44 110w

"Funny, crisp, unexpected, keeping as strictly as E. Nesbit's stories to the good old laws of magic, the book affords refreshing laughter not only at first sight but on readings often repeated." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p9 Je 4 '44 300w

NORTON-TAYLOR, DUNCAN. With my heart in my mouth. 167p $2.50 Coward-McCann

940.542 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American. World war, 1939—Pacific ocean 44-4980

The author, a writer on Time magazine, was sent to the South Pacific in the summer of 1943. His report, chiefly a personal narrative, tells how men live on ships and on land, and how they fight. The climax of his tale is a description of the Battle of Kula Gulf.

Booklist 40:354 Je 15 '44

Kirkus 12:247 Je 1 '44 130w

"Mr. Norton-Taylor entered the world of fighting men in a petulant frame of mind because he had lost his new trench coat in Noumea. He continues for 167 pages to say little that has not been said repeatedly. He is too obviously concerned with his own skin, and it is equally obvious that he was out of his depth in this assignment." Frederick Bell
— N Y Times p28 My 28 '44 200w

"The title, which sounds as much like Perelman or Ogden Nash as a war correspondent's book, is the only pretentious thing about Duncan Norton-Taylor's amiable and honest account of a quick junket to the South Pacific." George Weller
+ Sat R of Lit 27:11 Je 10 '44 850w

Time 43:102 My 22 '44 700w

"This is an intelligent and unpretentious report on the war in the South Pacific. . . The unemotional pace of the author's style of writ-

NORTON-TAYLOR, DUNCAN—Continued
ing is a pleasant change from that of the recent plethora of 'dramatic' war stories. This is not to say, however, that the story lacks a climax here and there." George Polk
+ Weekly Book Review p3 Je 18 '44 550w

NORWAY, NEVIL SHUTE (NEVIL SHUTE, pseud). Pastoral. 246p $2.50 Morrow
44-5716

Romance of an English bomber pilot and a pretty W.A.A.F. officer. The affair started innocently enough when the two discovered a mutual delight in fishing as a pastime. Before long Peter was proposing and Gervase was being demure. But when R for Robert, Peter's plane, was unreported for a time on a mission over Europe, Gervase knew she loved Peter, and when the bomber made a crash landing she was ready with her answer.

"The charm of this book is the charm of light and shade. . . How much Peter means to his crew, how much he means to Gervase, is never fully understood until his crash landing—the most powerful single passage in a book which is by turns adventurous and pastoral." Edward Weeks
+ Atlantic 174:125 Ag '44 480w

Reviewed by Edith Roberts
Book Week p3 Ag 27 '44 270w

Booklist 41:23 S '44

Boston Globe p17 S 6 '44 220w

"Reading a book is like biting into an apple—you soon discover if the flavor is there. Pastoral has flavor. It also has the ring of truth, for, as a Lieutenant Commander attached to the British Admiralty in London, as an airplane engineer and aviator, the author knows what he is talking about when he writes of pilots and planes. Add to that his knowledge and love of the English countryside, his sensitive awareness of how the personnel of a bomber station talk and act, and you have the combination that makes 'Pastoral' more than just another war story." A. P.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 28 '44 350w

Commonweal 41:21 O 20 '44 20w

"A slight but charming picture of the English countryside and a reminder that young people must find their individual happiness before they can function with the precision required in modern warfare."
+ Horn Bk 20:499 N '44 80w

Kirkus 12:148 Ap 1 '44 230w

"Inspiring, wholesome. Recommended." S. E. Sherman
+ Library J 69:651 Ag '44 90w

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse
Manchester Guardian p3 S 29 '44 100w

"To the end, the illusion remains with us—long after the flights are over and the love affair has had time to taper off into sentimentality. 'Pastoral' is an excellent story and its writer grows in subtlety and skill with each succeeding novel. But Nevil Shute, a man of moderation on the ground, is still no match for Nevil Shute, the virtuoso with wings." Isabelle Mallet
+ N Y Times p3 Ag 27 '44 400w

+ New Yorker 20:62 Ag 26 '44 90w

"Mr. Shute's most charming, and perhaps most popular novel. . . In 'Pastoral,' Mr. Shute has written a charming love story, and a most exciting flying story. The competition in the field of war-flying literature grows constantly keener, but Nevil Shute is still in the very front rank, thanks to his knowledge, his sympathetic imagination, and his way with words. I have read nothing of the kind more effective and affecting than the pages that describe Peter's final efforts to put down his crippled plane, with a wounded gunner in the tail, and a wireless that can send but not receive, while a whole station waits breathless beneath him." B. R. Redman
+ Sat R of Lit 27:8 S 9 '44 1000w

"The author tells his tale skilfully and uses with equal cleverness the opportunities provided by bombing—and fishing—expeditions to fill in the contours of his pleasant love story." John Hampson
+ Spec 173:370 O 20 '44 180w

"The theme of the novel, that of a young couple in love, is probably the oldest in literature; yet, here it is treated with such freshness and such simplicity that it becomes new and heart-warming." E. P. Werby
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 27 '44 600w

"An experienced writer [the author] makes his conventional story more than just readable, with exciting scenes of air combat, much pastoral warmth and charm."
+ Time 44:100 S 4 '44 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p461 S 23 '44 850w

" 'Pastoral' is written with outstanding integrity and tenderness and understanding delight in things of the English countryside, as well as in things aeronautical and human. These strange ultramodern ingredients of romance are assimilated by Lieutenant Commander Shute's intimate and enthusiastic knowledge of them into the harmonious and perfectly natural whole of a fine romantic novel. If you want to understand a bomber pilot's life—which is new—and a young man in love—which is as old as the hills—I commend to you 'Pastoral.' " F. H. Bullock
+ Weekly Book Review p1 Ag 27 '44 600w

Wis Lib Bul 40:131 O '44

"A simple, honest, wholesome, and touching love story." Orville Prescott
+ Yale R n s 34:192 autumn '44 140w

NORWOOD, WILLIAM FREDERICK. Medical education in the United States before the Civil war; foreword by Henry E. Sigerist. 487p $6 Univ. of Pa. press

610.7 Medical education SG44-196

Study of the rise and progress of medical instruction and medical schools in America from colonial days up to the time of the Civil war. The author is associate professor of the history of medicine and associate dean in the School of medicine, College of medical evangelists, in Los Angeles. Bibliography. Index.

"While Dr. Norwood attempts no socio-economic analysis of the events he describes, but writes as a straightforward medical historian, there is more than enough material in this book which very readily lends itself to such analysis. But his book will be chiefly valued for the readable and reliable record which it has provided of the medical schools in this country prior to the Civil War. There is an excellent bibliography and an adequate index." M. F. Ashley Montagu
+ Ann Am Acad 236:214 N '44 360w

"Dr. Norwood has, with great industry, sought out the facts relating to the origin and development of every pre-Civil War medical school in the country. His book is at once scholarly and eminently readable: a book that should interest both the specialist and the layman." M. F. Ashley Montagu
+ N Y Times p22 S 24 '44 440w

NOTESTEIN, FRANK WALLACE. Future population of Europe and the Soviet union. See Princeton university. Office of population research

NOURSE, EDWIN GRISWOLD. Price making in a democracy. 541p $3.50 Brookings

338.52 Prices. Economic policy 44-4594

"The author is preaching a gospel, viz., that the American economic system of free enterprise may be saved by a conscious, deliberate low-price policy on the part of business managers. . . In developing his thesis, the author devotes the larger portion of the volume to a discussion of (1) the nature of price making and of competition in our economic system at present in relation to evolutionary developments, and (2) certain problems in the application of a low-price policy (areas of applicability, appraising the responsiveness of market demand, distribution costs, wages as cost and as market, the timing of price changes)." Management R

Reviewed by G. W. Stocking
Am Econ R 34:618 S '44 3300w
Foreign Affairs 23:6 O '44 10w

"Dr. Nourse supports his dogma well—the bulk of the volume is devoted to broad, fundamental analysis and interpretation. Ultimately, however, he discards exposition, analysis and scientific prediction for an all-out appeal to the intelligence and sense of responsibility of business leaders. . . Price Making in a Democracy cannot be read too widely, especially by business executives. Theoretically, the author's case is sound. . . Unfortunately, however, historical perspective in relation to the inherent functioning of industrial and market competition does not allow one to be optimistic concerning Dr. Nourse's faith that business in the main may be expected to pursue the low-price course." E. T. Grether
+ — Management R 33:326 S '44 600w

"Dr. Nourse incidentally has written an excellent treatise for the general student on price theory, as applied to the industrial situation of our day. His intimate knowledge of the mentality, folklore, and the current problems and practices of 'Big Business' gives his discussion a realism and a tinge of practical wisdom which makes it particularly useful. His advice, to the reviewer's mind, is essentially sound and founded on good theory, clearly and simply presented. Nevertheless, it is an open question whether the advocated policy alone will suffice to achieve the end in view. The author is aware that he is not presenting a panacea." Herbert von Beckerath
+ Social Forces 23:101 O '44 1000w

Reviewed by Mabel Newcomer
Survey G 33:508 D '44 400w

"Every business executive and labor leader in America should read Dr. Nourse's valuable book for the cogent arguments he put forward on how prices should be made in a democracy. . . Only the most persevering reader will struggle through a careful reading of Dr. Nourse's long book, for his convincing arguments are annoyingly drawn out, and his presentation is often repetitious and wearisome. His copious footnotes will undoubtedly dim the enthusiasm of many readers to whom the book is directed. On the other hand, the book is well written in the sense that the choice of language is very clear and simple, the author clings tenaciously to his central thesis and its supporting arguments, and frequent summaries keep the reader abreast of the conclusions as they develop." J. J. O'Leary
+ — Yale R n s 34:182 autumn '44 850w

NOURSE, MARY AUGUSTA, and GOETZ, DELIA. China, country of contrasts. 229p il $2.50 Harcourt

915.1 China—Juvenile literature 44-8641

Introduction to China, its geography, history, and way of life, intended for young readers, but useful for those of any age. Especially interesting is the account of the main stages in the relationship between the United States and China, from 1784 to the present. The senior author lived and taught in China for fifteen years. Index.

Booklist 41:95 N 15 '44
Cath World 160:282 D '44 40w

"The book will undoubtedly prove helpful as an aid to schoolroom study."
+ Horn Bk 20:491 N '44 40w

"Good grounding book."
+ Kirkus 12:452 O 1 '44 90w

"Clear, concise, readable geography." Sonja Wennerblad
+ Library J 69:1052 D 1 '44 70w

"Written in a clear, straightforward style, in a way, perhaps, that a teacher might speak to his class." B. W. Shaffer
+ Sat R of Lit 28:33 Ja 13 '45 230w
Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 14 '45 70w

"It is astonishing how much information has been gathered into this slim volume, written for young readers but of interest surely to people of any age. The book would be profitable reading for Chinese, too. . . Most important of all, perhaps, is the author's picture of China growing and building, not a museum on the one hand nor a full-grown democracy, and their reminder throughout of the enormous task ahead and their faith in the future." Mai-Mai Tze
+ Weekly Book Review p12 N 12 '44 400w

NOWLIN, GORDON A. Connecting ships' wiring. 300p il $3 Houghton

623.85 Electricity on ships. Electric wiring, Interior 44-6456

"This book is an interpretation of the principles and specifications governing the cutting-in and connecting-up of electrical equipment on board naval and commercial vessels. The practices described are standard procedures in the installation of electrical equipment. . . This book is written from the background of experience accumulated at the Quincy Yard of the Bethlehem Steel Company by Mr. Simon Stewart, foreman of the Electrical Department, and his corps of assistants. For many years the author was a worker in the Electric Department; more recently he has been in charge of electrical training in the Quincy Yard." Pref

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:653 Ag '44 60w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:43 Jl '44

NUNEZ CABEZA DE VACA, ALVAR, 16th cent. Power within us; Cabeza de Vaca's relation of his journey from Florida to the Pacific, 1528-1536 [by] Haniel Long. 37p $1.50 Duell

B or 92 44-40102

"A slight but appealing bit of history is given in a Spaniard's letter to his king, here rewritten. Shipwrecked in the Gulf of Mexico, he made his way through the Southwest, discovering on his arduous journey an unknown endurance of body and spirit, and learning a new brotherliness from the Indians. Published in 1936 as Interlinear to Cabeza de Vaca." Booklist

"Haniel Long is a poet and prose writer of rare quality. . . He is qualified to understand the strange experience—which perhaps should not be strange—that shines through the lines of De Vaca's 'Relation' and is revealed and elaborated in Long's 'Interlinear.' " J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p4 Ap 16 '44 550w
Booklist 40:321 My 15 '44
Kirkus 12:165 Ap 1 '44 110w

NURA, pseud. See Ulreich, N. W.

NUTE, GRACE LEE. Lake Superior. (American lakes ser) 376p il $3.50 Bobbs

977 Superior, Lake 44-6303

"Miss Nute is curator of manuscripts of the Minnesota State Historical society, and a Lake Superior enthusiast, who spends her vacations on its shores. Out of her familiarity with documentary source materials and with the region itself she has accomplished a thoroughly objective job. Stories of the lake's formation, its trade, past and present, and its peoples and legends, are set down. The most moving passages are the records of hardships of explorers, voyageurs and missionaries." (Springf'd Republican) Bibliographical note. Index.

Reviewed by J. P. Pritchett
Ann Am Acad 237:228 Ja '45 250w

"It is unfortunate that Miss Nute has seen fit to make certain chapters heavily statistical. A more rigorous selection would have eliminated some of the superfluous dates and place names and the style would consequently have been less pedestrian. Her descriptions of lumber jack life, Finnish fishermen, and a cruise

NUTE, G. L.—Continued
among the Apostle Islands suggest that on occasion she can be both sprightly and vivid. But it is difficult to conceive of anyone putting down Miss Nute's book with unanswered questions in mind. The canvas is complete." J. T. Flanagan

+ — Book Week p1 Jl 30 '44 800w

Booklist 41:17 S '44

"A vigorous, colorful panorama that offers much material, well handled and interestingly presented."

+ Kirkus 12:310 Jl 15 '44 110w

"Scholarly but readable. Recommended for senior high school age." Elizabeth Burr

+ Library J 69:818 O 1 '44 80w

Reviewed by Oscar Cargill
N Y Times p17 Ag 27 '44 450w

New Yorker 20:62 Ag 12 '44 50w

Reviewed by George Genzmer
Sat R of Lit 27:24 O 28 '44 400w

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 30 '44 280w

"Miss Nute has done well by Superior, the Great Cold Lake that is so busy at Duluth, so lonely and remote at Grand Marais; the Big-Sea-Water that is rimmed with copper and iron and fed by a thousand streams and rivers." Stewart Holbrook

+ Weekly Book Review p1 Jl 30 '44 750w

Wis Lib Bul 40:129 O '44

NYE, RUSSEL BLAINE. George Bancroft; Brahmin rebel. 352p il $3.50 Knopf

B or 92 Bancroft, George 44-6406

"A full-dress biography of the Massachusetts gentleman who is generally considered the first major American historian and who, as Secretary of the Navy and for a while acting Secretary of War during the war with Mexico, as American Minister to Prussia during the Franco-Prussian War, and as friend and confidant of Abraham Lincoln during the Civil War, had a hand in the making of some history himself." (New Yorker) Index.

"He lived a useful life, and Russel B. Nye has spun the tale with skill, compressing where he could to fit his biography into the limitations of wartime bookmaking. 'Brahmin Rebel' is a sound and careful piece of work. It is to be hoped that Nye will continue his career in American biography." Louis Zara

+ Book Week p4 Ag 20 '44 650w

Booklist 41:20 S '44

Reviewed by L. M. Lyons
Boston Globe p15 Ag 30 '44 330w

"This [is a] very fine book. A rich bibliography furnishes many of the titles consulted by the author; a detailed index makes the book as useful as it is interesting." Paul Kiniery

+ Cath World 160:182 N '44 450w

"A book that is far more than the life of one man, but instead a history of Bancroft's times." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 10 '44 600w

Current Hist 7:228 S '44 120w

"We doubt the popularity of the book with the general reader."

Kirkus 12:161 Ap 1 '44 170w

Reviewed by Odell Shepard
Nation 159:300 S 9 '44 1550w

"Bancroft was a Democrat in Whig New England, but he was hardly the 'rebel' Dr. Nye's subtitle would make him out to be. He had little of the intensity of Parker or Garrison; compared to Emerson or Thoreau he was a second-rater. He hardly excited his times; Dr. Nye's 'Life' will hardly excite ours."

New Repub 111:380 S 25 '44 180w

"Mr. Nye's study is no flippant survey of a quaint, forgotten figure, but a solid historical contribution. He has dug deeply into his materials. He projects his figure against the changing intellectual and political history of the nineteenth century, its educational, its critical and its historical philosophies. He is, to be sure, a little dogged about it, and his style is competent carpentering rather than distinguished cabinet work. Perhaps, however, Bancroft is better served by pedestrian lucidity than by epigram." H. M. Jones

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 13 '44 950w

"Mr. Nye, a member of the English Department of Michigan State College, writes conscientiously rather than well and places more emphasis upon research than upon interpretation. Still, his book is as good a life of one of the lesser adornments of New England's golden age as we are likely to have, especially since it is doubtful whether any other writer will be tempted to write so detailed a biography of Bancroft, who would seem to be something of an acquired taste."

New Yorker 20:59 Ag 19 '44 150w

Reviewed by Allan Nevins
Sat R of Lit 27:9 Ag 26 '44 1050w

Reviewed by M. J. Boyer
Social Educ 8:376 D '44 550w

" 'George Bancroft, Brahmin Rebel' is a readable book in spite of its defects. As Bancroft himself rewrote editions of his history, perhaps Mr Nye some day will attempt this job again and make a mediocre book into a great one. The subject matter is worth it." C. D. Kean

— + Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 27 '44 700w

Time 44:90 Ag 28 '44 700w

"Mr. Nye's biography of Bancroft is thorough, intelligent and, for the most part, interesting. It is based on a careful examination of Bancroft's own papers . . . and presented with critical acumen. The chapters on Bancroft's political and diplomatic activities enrich our understanding of those aspects of American history, and those on the 'History' explain both its contemporary popularity and its present neglect. For an appreciation of Bancroft M. A. DeWolfe Howe's earlier biography is still indispensable, because it includes a large number of letters, but Mr. Nye's work takes its place at once as the definitive biography of the great historian." H. S. Commager

+ Weekly Book Review p3 Ag 13 '44 1500w

O

O. HENRY MEMORIAL AWARD. Prize stories of 1944; sel. and ed. by Herschel Brickell, assisted by Muriel Fuller. 268p $2.50 Doubleday

Short stories—Collections (21-9372)

Contents: Walking wounded, by Irwin Shaw; Home is a place, by Bessie Breuer; The stagecoach, by Griffith Beems; Health card, by F. G. Yerby; The buck in the hills, by W. V. Clark; Like a field mouse over the heart, by Elizabeth Eastman; Soldier of the republic, by Morton Fineman; Strike up a stirring music, by Berry Fleming; That's my brother, by Marjorie Hope; Night flight, by Josephine W. Johnson; What a darling little boy! by R. A. Knight; The fur coat, by George Loveridge; Maine, by Margaret Osborn; Lions, harts, leaping does, by J. F. Powers; Quitter, by Marianne Roane; All souls', by Gladys Schmitt; Blockbuster, by Mark Schorer; Sunday liberty, by Alison Stuart; Raziya, by Christine Weston; The pleasures of travel, by Wendell Wilcox; Old James, by Marguerite Young. Bibliography. Appendix.

"The stories themselves, all are written with skill and sensitivity on a rather equal plane or level, suggesting that there is either no outstanding individual short story writer appearing in current magazines, or that the judges have a taste for a certain norm." Leo Kennedy

+ Book Week p3 O 29 '44 270w

Booklist 41:89 N 15 '44

Cath World 160:380 Ja '45 140w

Kirkus 12:348 Ag 15 '44 130w

"This is a rather poor collection of stories. Its general level is about the same as Martha Foley's volume, upon which I commented some weeks ago. The latter, however, did reprint some five stories (out of thirty) very much worth reading, and sufficiently different from the standard product, at least in literary quality, to constitute the beginnings of a promise for both writing and editing. The present volume contains only two such stories (out of twenty-one)—'Lions, Harts, Leaping Does,' by J. F. Powers (Accent, also published by Miss Foley), and 'Old James,' by Marguerite Young (The Kenyon Review). Neither of these wins a prize. The remainder are little more than competent and are, therefore, dull." Isaac Rosenfeld

— + New Repub 111:807 D 11 '44 900w

"The book is up to the standards it has set, and, in many instances, well above them. All of the pieces are readable. . . Like Miss Foley's companion volume, Mr. Brickell's has avoided the overseas phase of the war. His writers, when they notice the war at all, are content to explore the crisis of the wife-alone, or the hopelessness of the shavetail-in-love. Two of the stories brush fashionably against the 'Negro problem,' and back away just as quickly— illustrating a tendency in the collection as a whole to create an emotional impasse and then dive for cover, to avoid climax with an almost ritualistic unease." William Du Bois

+ N Y Times p6 O 29 '44 700w

"An able collection which, although it includes very few examples of really first-rate fiction, is an honest-reflection of the present year's mental and spiritual preoccupations. . . Mr. Brickell follows his agreeable custom of taking the reader into the confidence of the judges by telling, in a shrewd and good-tempered introduction, how the committee made its awards."

+ New Yorker 20:78 O 28 '44 90w

Reviewed by Lee Varley

Springf'd Republican p4d D 10 '44 500w

"Considered simply as an anthology, the 1944 'O. Henry Memorial Award Prize Stories' offers good, solid, and sometimes electric, reading; certainly, it is a boon to those who follow the short story as an art, rather than as a commodity. The twenty-one authors represented had something definite to say, their messages are rarely on duplicate themes, and even where they are, each has used a different personalized approach. . . Considered as an estimate and prognosis of the contemporary short story, however, and as something that annually creates more than a passing ripple in the story-writer's world, not a great deal of light is shed in the present volume by either the editor and his assistant, or by the judges." Kenneth Fearing

+ — Weekly Book Review p6 O 29 '44 800w

OAKES, MAUD. Where the two came to their father; a Navaho war ceremonial, given by Jeff King, text and paintings by [the author] commentary by Joseph Campbell; silk screen reproductions by Raymond and Raymond. 100p with portfolio of pl $8.50 Pantheon bks.

970.6 Indians of North America—Religion and mythology. Navaho Indians 44-5981

"Certain of the basic Navaho myths, with their accompanying dry-paintings, have been recorded several times. . . Now comes 'Where the Two Came to Their Father: A Navaho War Ceremonial,' with the text as given by Navaho medicine man, Jeff King, and recorded by Maud Oakes. With this text is a portfolio of eighteen dry-painting reproductions. The ceremonial text is essentially the creation myth, now with the emphasis on the travels of the Navaho brothers to their father, The Sun, and then back to earth and the Navaho country." N Y Times

"Any project which gives permanent form to these tribal legends and their accompanying symbolism deserves applause. This particular project deserves special praise for its reproduction of these pollen-paintings." Hal Borland

+ N Y Times p15 F 27 '44 480w

Reviewed by E. S. Sergeant

+ Sat R of Lit 27:17 Ap 1 '44 900w

"The most interesting feature of this work is the fact that the ceremony which had been considered obsolete was revived because of the need of numerous Navaho youths for supernatural protection as they embarked upon the adventures of the global war. Although the myth has little that is new, the pictures are unusual. . . I would make a minor suggestion, namely, that the explanation as to how and why the work came to be done be placed first. As it is, the reader plunges without warning into a strange myth, and the reason and setting come as Part IV." G. A. Reichard

+ — Weekly Book Review p12 Je 18 '44 800w

OATES, WHITNEY JENNINGS, and MURPHY, CHARLES THEOPHILUS, eds. Greek literature in translation. 1072p $6.25; text ed $5 Longmans

880.8 Greek literature—Translations into English 44-2744

Selections from the writings of 58 Greek authors, translated by English and American writers. Arrangement is by form. The volume contains nine complete plays, and selections from Greek history, oratory, philosophy, biography, romance, satire, and poetry. Bibliography. Glossary.

Booklist 40:300 My 1 '44

Reviewed by H. H. Yeames

Cath World 159:471 Ag '44 270w

Reviewed by Gertrude Smith

Class Philol 40:62 Ja '45 400w

"In these days of resurveying the literature of the past, this is an extraordinary achievement in book publishing."

+ Kirkus 11:568 D 15 '43 130w

"Well-selected, comprehensive anthology. . . Highly recommended for the small library."

+ Library J 69:461 My 15 '44 50w

"Those whose 'higher education' was acquired in the days when the classics were in the ascendent but who nevertheless emerged from their study with 'small Latin and less Greek' will welcome old near-acquaintances and be surprised at the number of lesser lights that were missed by all but the few who 'majored,' and then some, in the elusive branch. Those of a later generation are afforded an excellent opportunity for rewarding voluntary study, with the aid of a collection of 'horses' far superior to the literal translations that were wont to help indifferent, and not too conscientious, students over the hard passages."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 30 '44 390w

OBERLING, CHARLES. Riddle of cancer; tr. by William H. Woglom. 196p $3 Yale univ. press

616.994 Cancer A44-1561

"Author, teacher, and investigator, Professor Oberling is a prominent figure among European students of cancer. This book is the outgrowth of a series of lectures given before the Cancer Institute of the Faculty of Medicine of Paris and the Faculty of Medicine of Teheran, and has been especially adapted to the lay public because of the widespread interest in the cancer problem. . . Professor Oberling states in a general way why cancer interests us all; gives a brief history of the development of knowledge of its nature; discusses the three hypotheses of origin—irritation, embryonal, and parasitic; considers the results that have emerged from the study of transplantable cancer, and shows that it failed because it could throw no light on the cause of the disease. He then describes induced tumors, with special attention to irradiation, parasites, heredity factors, carcinogenic chemical compounds, hydrocarbons, and viruses." (Scientific Bk Club R) Index.

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p4 Ap 9 '44 480w

Booklist 41:12 S '44

"While thoroughly technical and doubtless primarily intended for the medical profession, the book is intelligible to interested laymen."

+ Christian Century 61:403 Mr 29 '44 90w

"Recommended for larger public libraries and college libraries." J. B. Fogg

+ Library J 69:262 Mr 15 '44 100w

OBERLING, CHARLES—Continued

"To provide the non-specialist reader with understanding has been the aim of the author of the present excellent book, Dr. Charles Oberling, one time chief of the Experimental Department of the Cancer Institute in Paris, and an outstanding figure among European students of cancer. Both the author and the reader have been singularly fortunate in the translator, Dr. William H. Woglom, editor of 'Cancer Research.'" M. F. Ashley Montagu

+ N Y Times p10 Ap 16 '44 500w

Scientific Bk Club R 15:3 Ap '44 420w

"The last chapter in which, by implication at least, the author's longing for evidence of a single 'kind' of cancer is expressed is perhaps the most open to criticism by those who do not see eye to eye with him. Still, even there the arguments are made so reasonably and with so little emotion that the author's open-mindedness is contagious. The bibliography is well and conveniently arranged and rounds out as good a piece of literary orientation material as those who desire a general discussion of cancer research in relation to viruses and to other causative agents are likely to find." C. C. Little

+ — Yale R n s 33:763 summer '44 550w

OBERMAN, LE ROY L. Shipfitting simplified. 126p il $1.50; text ed $1.25 McGraw

623.86 Shipbuilding 43-17632

"Very brief outline of the terminology and practice of shipfitting in the form of a pocketbook for students and beginning workers." N Y New Tech Bks

Book Week p11 Ja 23 '44 30w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 68:1007 D 1 '43 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 28:69 O '43

"A prospective or beginning worker in a shipyard should find this little book of much value. . . Approximately the final third is devoted to a useful glossary, and a list of shipfitting abbreviations." James Stokley

+ Weekly Book Review p25 Ja 23 '44 100w

OBERMEYER, ROSEMARY (MRS ANTHONY FORMOLO). Golden apples of the sun. 282p $2.50 Dutton

44-871

Story of the orphaned gypsy girl, Rhona, and her adventures when she joins forces with old John O'Callaghan, his lovely little niece Midge, and others in their strange trek into the wilderness to escape the clutches of Midge's unpleasant father.

Reviewed by John Storm
Book Week p4 Ja 23 '44 550w

Booklist 40:252 Mr 15 '44

Bookmark 5:19 Mr '44

"A picaresque tale must always have the background of possibility which somehow Miss Obermeyer manages to maintain. She has crossed Borrow with Robert Nathan and her unusual gift for characterization augurs well for the future. Here is a new Catholic author who has style and fresh imagination."

+ Cath World 159:186 My '44 180w

"Miss Obermeyer's novel is completely natural, fresh, convincing."

+ Commonweal 39:376 Ja 28 '44 490w

Kirkus 12:49 F 1 '44 130w

Reviewed by Emily Garnett
Library J 68:1049 D 15 '43 70w

"A fine and distinctive first novel. . . The characters are all well done, but Rhona, the teller of the tale, is particularly enchanting. There is no high romance in this book, and not much derring-do, but it will go through your heart like music through a still room, and you will be grateful for it." Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Times p6 Ja 23 '44 420w

"It is regrettable that the plot should be so far-fetched in seeking for a novel twist, for it almost overshadows the natural charm evident throughout the book." P. J. R.

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e F 6 '44 170w

"'Golden Apples of the Sun' has something of the temper of Richard Hughes's variously called 'Innocent Voyage' or 'High Wind in Jamaica.' It isn't at all a book for some one who demands a clear meaning and what is called realism. It is an insouciant and unusual tale which makes you think of spring and imagine you are or wish you were one of those with the courage of the wandering foot, a fantasy that is unforced and refreshing." Mary Ross

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Ja 23 '44 450w

OBERNDORF, CLARENCE PAUL, ed. See Holmes, O. W. Psychiatric novels

OBOLER, ARCH, and LONGSTREET, STEPHEN, eds. Free world theatre; with an introd. by Thomas Mann, and a pref. by Arch Oboler. 270p $2.75 Random house

792 Radio plays. World war, 1939—Drama 44-4718

Collection of short plays, to be given over the radio. Partial contents: The people march, by Arch Oboler; Tomorrow, by Budd Schulberg and Jerome Lawrence; Music for freedom, by Don Quinn, and others; Night flight, by Arch Oboler; China to America, by Pearl Buck; Last will and testament of Tom Smith, by Stephen Longstreet; Something about Joe, by Milton Merlin and Clarence Muse; Man with a beard, by Talbot Jennings; General Armchair, by Samson Raphaelson; The second battle of Warsaw, by Irving Ravetch; In memory of a hero, by Howard Estabrook; V Day, by Arch Oboler. Biographical notes.

Booklist 41:13 S '44

Kirkus 12:248 Je 1 '44 170w

"Since the nineteen plays here assembled are by some twenty authors, working alone or in collaboration, they naturally are uneven in quality as they are in style and approach. For the most part they are good reading as they were good radio." J. K. Hutchens

+ N Y Times p18 Je 18 '44 440w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
Weekly Book Review p20 O 1 '44 180w

O'BRIEN, JOHN SHERMAN. Return of Silver Chief; il. by Kurt Wiese. 211p $2 Winston

44-384

Mystery story of wartime in the Pacific Northwest, in which Sergeant Jim Thorne of the Royal Canadian mounted police and his heroic dog, Silver Chief, play their parts in the capture of escaped Nazi prisoners.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p10 Mr 12 '44 100w

Reviewed by E. M. Gordon
Library J 69:120 F 1 '44 70w

"Lively reading, with the added interest of a wartime angle." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p27 Mr 19 '44 200w

O'CASEY, SEAN. Red roses for me; a play in four acts. 160p $2 (6s) Macmillan

822 44-40010

The scene of the play is Dublin at the time of the strike of 1913. The hero is a young worker, a lover of Shakespeare, who finally dies for the cause of labor.

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Book Week p6 F 20 '44 650w

Booklist 40:193 F 1 '44

Christian Century 61:370 Mr 22 '44 290w

"Sean O'Casey's latest play, Red Roses for Me, is a rich blend of realism and mysticism. . . Even the beggars at times rise to a beauty of speech seldom achieved in poetic drama." W. P. Sears
+ Churchman 158:19 Mr 1 '44 120w

"There are moments of high poetry in drama; there are scenes that—in proper hands—will come through more clearly played than read. But Sean O'Casey has his own audience."
+ Kirkus 12:11 Ja 1 '44 80w

"Realistic yet mystic. Highly recommended."
+ Library J 69:72 Ja 15 '44 30w

"Not since 'The Plough and the Stars' has Mr. O'Casey given us a play more richly and consistently eloquent than this one." A. D.
+ Manchester Guardian p3 D 4 '42 180w

" 'Red Roses for Me' has been produced only in Dublin. I fervently hope that it will appear upon our stage, but I am aware of difficulties that would challenge the resources of the finest theatre. In particular, the characters and the language, while rich, are often dangerously close to over-ripeness. The demands made upon several of the actors are very great, and only the most skillful director, given the most capable players, could prevent the last two acts from turning into a travesty of the experimental theatre." George Mayberry
+ New Repub 110:217 F 14 '44 1150w

"In Red Roses for Me there is the usual brilliant comedy of dilapidation and brag; it strikes one as the most passionate of his plays, the least concerned with incident and diversion; the Third Act brings off the vision of a street scene of loafers and flower-sellers who are transfigured into something greater than themselves; technically, at any rate, Mr. O'Casey has found his new poetic medium. Seems; and I think probably the drama, the knot of straggling lives, would be drawn closer by performance, though it is hard to be sure. From the page one is left exalted, wondering, upset by so much passion and haranguing, and by a death that raises a banner the device of which is half-turned away from us." G. W. Stonier
+ New Statesman & Nation 24:324 N 14 '42 800w

"When O'Casey moves away from the magnificent specificness of the manners of his Dublin tenement dwellers to a many-colored vision of the Dublin of the future or the hero Ayamonn's 'noble and mighty death,' he grows tritely symbolical and stilted in speech. That is why he interests us least when and where he means to interest us most. But there is many a fine ringing laugh in the first two acts of this play." Horace Reynolds
+ — N Y Times p10 Ja 30 '44 300w

"It is easy, in America at the present time, to blame the badness of the drama on Hollywood and on the mediocrity of most of our dramatists; but the helplessness to develop artistically of this talented and serious writer brings one up with an uncomfortable feeling that our literary movements have spent themselves, and that the forces of the times are against the arts." Edmund Wilson
New Yorker 19:81 F 5 '44 450w

"The characters are not far removed from types, and their somewhat lush and picturesque speech may be authentic Dublin lyricism, but it is not such convincing poetic language as that of Synge's peasants. There is also more than a trace of sentimentality and over-ripe idealism in the chief characters, while the fantasy and realism do not, in reading, seem to blend well."
— + Spec 169:606 D 25 '42 90w

"The play is a presentation of the poetic soul of Ireland, crossed by dogmatic and economic battles which fill Irish hearts with bitterness. It leaves no doubt of its noble intention but that is the only clear thing in it for a reader who does not know modern Ireland at first hand or understand fully the conflicts in modern Irish government and religion."
Theatre Arts 28:256 Ap '44 230w

"The play is good in itself, lively in incident, various in attack, rich in songs, and it has every sign of preparing the way for plays that will transcend it."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p22 Ja 9 '43 480w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
Weekly Book Review p17 Ap 30 '44 80w

O'CONNOR, FRANK. Crab apple jelly; stories and tales. 235p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Macmillan] 44-9575

Collection of poetic short stories about the poor living in Irish villages, or in remote cots by the sea.

"O'Connor's stories are as good as bread." Peter Quinn
+ Book Week p3 N 19 '44 320w

Booklist 41:124 D 15 '44

Reviewed by Francis Downing
Commonweal 41:307 Ja 5 '45 550w

"As you read, each story has its kernel of integrity as a story, observant realism, the feel of the Irish peasant, priest, school teacher, villager. He is particularly successful in writing of old people, of conveying a sense of extreme—though not abject—poverty, of interpreting the characteristic oneness of fantasy and real life. The final impression is wholly Irish, poetic, slightly blurred on the edges, insubstantial, and occasionally too self-consciously charming."
+ Kirkus 12:383 S 1 '44 130w

"As the collective title 'Crab Apple Jelly' signifies, most of the tales have a tart tang of ironic implication; but their most endearing characteristic is a sympathetic understanding of the oddest and most eccentric traits of human personality." Wilfrid Gibson
+ Manchester Guardian p3 My 5 '44 100w

"There is an Irish lilt to the dialogue and an Irish color to the scenery of Frank O'Connor's stories, even at their most melancholy, which, because it gives them a dimension of the strange, also acts to give them literary dimension. But emptied of local color, the stories in 'Crab Apple Jelly' don't at all carry, for me, the weight that others have felt in them. I find them sweetly sad, sadly suggestive, or even a touch frightening at moments, but never more than in the way of the skilfully rendered pastiche." Diana Trilling
+ — Nation 159:696 D 2 '44 290w

"Mr. O'Connor, while evidently a good Catholic, has warmly infused his faith with both humanism and humour. These are admirable stories, thoughtfully conceived and beautifully executed." Philip Toynbee
+ New Statesman & Nation 28:13 Jl 1 '44 120w

Reviewed by James Stern
N Y Times p3 N 12 '44 1050w

"Twelve perceptive and sometimes even vivid stories of contemporary Irish life in its less cheerful aspects."
+ New Yorker 20:90 N 18 '44 70w

"It is impossible to read Mr. O'Connor's dialogue without delight; he uses a local Anglo-Irish patois with close fidelity indeed, but he so infuses each phrase with the character of its speaker, and rifts it so deep with the lyricism and wild humour of his own mind that it becomes a very rich, poetic medium, charged with greatness. At least three of these stories are as good as any he has written—which is saying a great deal; Bridal Night is superb and deeply original; The Star That Bids The Shepherd Fold is a very delicate and shrewd piece of mockery, and Old Fellows is a wonderfully balanced passage of farce and pathos—perhaps the best thing in the book." Kate O'Brien
+ Spec 172:484 My 26 '44 420w

Reviewed by H. O. Austin
Springf'd Republican p4d D 3 '44 440w

Time 44:88 D 25 '44 400w

"Almost every one of Mr. O'Connor's twelve stories brings into view a way of peasant or small-town life rooted in seclusion, poverty, religion, drink, a sense of Irish locality—and a truly inimitable gift of narration. His is a tang of warm and vivid life because so often his characters, so to speak, do the imaginative work for him; they themselves, since they are Irish, are born story-tellers. And it is the expressiveness of their fantasy, a fantasy that is quickened by a historic sense of community and is always very near the bone, which gives an Irish realistic writer like Mr. O'Connor his poetic appeal."

O'CONNOR, FRANK—Continued

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p221 My 6 '44 900w

"Comes a day occasionally when the colors in the landscape seem brighter than usual and the faces of passers-by more interesting and important—when, with freedom of spirit, one looks at people and things for what they are in themselves, not merely as properties that do or do not fit into some expected pattern. These stories and tales by Frank O'Connor have that kind of freshness and substance. Through them one sees, as though for the first time, actual people whom one might have dismissed, in another mood, as merely ordinary or eccentric." Mary Ross

+ Weekly Book Review p8 N 19 '44 490w

O'CONNOR, MICHAEL JOSEPH LALOR. Origins of academic economics in the United States. 367p $4.25 Columbia univ. press [21s Oxford]

330.7 Economics—Study and teaching
A44-1537

"A study of American beginnings in the field of economics instruction in the period before the depression of 1837. This book is an excursion into the nature of political economy teaching, particularly in the northeastern section of the country, where a single academic model took form and exerted significant historical influence." (School & Society) Bibliography. Index.

"Many historical writers of the present feel called upon to explain why things happened while leaving us ignorant of what really happened. Generally their explanations are puerile. This author tells us in considerable detail who wrote on political economy and what he wrote. This work is both scholarly and valuable. When it attempts to tell us why they wrote as they did, it is not so strong." T. N. Carver

+ — Am Econ R 34:890 D '44 1600w

"Dr. O'Connor has done a thorough job in a field requiring minute research. The resulting volume is a model of painstaking scholarship, well organized and fully documented. Few persons will read the book entire, but it must become a standard reference book for teachers of the history of economic doctrine, and especially for those who are interested in the characteristics of early American economics texts and instruction." A. B. Wolfe

+ Ann Am Acad 235:164 S '44 700w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 Ag 27 '44 70w

"For the clergyman or layman interested in the general topic of the changing rôle of the clergy this book will prove to be excellent (though not light) reading." R. H. Abrams

+ Crozer Q 21:357 O '44 1000w

Current Hist 7:53 Jl '44 60w

School & Society 59:448 Je 24 '44 50w

Social Studies 35:287 O '44 50w

ODLUM, JEROME. Morgue is always open. 234p $2 Scribner

44-4442

Detective story.

"The tale is far from being the best of its kind, but you'll find yourself carrying a warm spot in your heart for Sam and Jimmy, nonetheless." Elizabeth Bullock

+ — Book Week p7 Je 25 '44 180w

Booklist 40:378 Jl 1 '44

Kirkus 12:50 F 1 '44 80w

"Booker and Webb are tough, greedy and unscrupulous—and the story of their exploits makes entertaining reading." I. A.

N Y Times p22 My 14 '44 100w

Springf'd Republican p4d My 21 '44 120w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p17 Je 4 '44 100w

ODUM, HOWARD WASHINGTON. Race and rumors of race; challenge to American crisis. 245p $2 Univ. of N.C. press

325.26 Negroes. U.S.—Race question
43-17678

For descriptive note see Annual for 1943.

"The kind of thinking that in 'white' America serves to maintain the mythology of 'race' with particular reference to the Negro is ably and illuminatingly dealt with by Professor Odum in his book. . . I think it is probably the best book for its purpose ever written." M. F. Ashley Montagu

+ Am Anthropol 46:254 Ap '44 270w

Reviewed by Gwynne Nettler
Am J Soc 49:548 My '44 270w

"The author writes with a combination of balance, warmth, and liveliness." H. C. Nixon

+ Am Pol Sci R 38:399 Ap '44 240w

"The reader who is attracted to this volume by its title will meet with disappointment. He will find neither a study of race nor a study of rumor; the title is alliterative and euphonious, but it is not descriptive. As an English construction, the phrase 'rumors of race' is intriguing but it seems to be a completely meaningless combination of words. . . In spite of its scholarly shortcomings, perhaps because of them, the book may serve a useful purpose. If the book is read in the South, it may create discussion, criticism, and conflict of opinion which, by putting emphasis on facts and logic, may make for greater rationality in thought and for greater decency in human and social relations." E. B. Reuter

— + Ann Am Acad 233:255 My '44 360w

Booklist 40:246 Mr 15 '44

"Dr. Odum's book is splendid in presenting the issue; not so much can be said for its dealing with ways and means to meet the issue." A. W. Taylor

+ — Christian Century 61:902 Ag 2 '44 500w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:496 Ap '44 20w

Reviewed by D. W. Brogan
Manchester Guardian p3 My 19 '44 350w

Reviewed by E. F. Frazier
Nation 158:453 Ap 15 '44 1150w

"[The volume's] permanent and unique value rests upon the author's personal investigation of race rumors and upon the exceptionally frank and well balanced judgment he brought to bear upon everything he saw and heard. As an exposition of one of our most burning problems, the result is both illuminating and chastening." J. S. Roucek

+ School & Society 60:142 Ag 26 '44 1100w

"In discussions of racial problems it seems almost impossible for an author to avoid revealing his own prejudices and inner struggles. Perhaps Dr. Odum is too alarmed over the dangers of open conflict, but in general he preserves an admirable detachment and objectivity that will win the approval of all except the most radical and the most conservative." H. C. Brearley

+ Social Forces 22:340 Mr '44 550w

"This study's approach, though representing southern liberalism at its best, also clearly defines its limitations—a lack of courage to come to grips with the real reasons back of the asserted 'reasons,' an evasion of the motives and interests behind the folkways. Counter-argument against race prejudice merely on the level of public opinion chops off these social weeds only at the ground line, leaving their vital roots unexposed and relatively safe and intact." Alain Locke

+ — Survey G 33:330 Jl '44 450w

Reviewed by G. W. Johnson
Weekly Book Review p3 Mr 5 '44 1050w

OFFNER, MONROE M. Fundamentals of chemistry and their applications in modern life. (New home lib) 408p il 69c Blakiston

540 Chemistry. Chemistry, Technical 44-9858

"A simple survey of the basic principles of chemistry and a clear description of the nature and behavior of all the chemical elements and their important compounds including plastics, nylon, sulfa drugs, new metal alloys, synthetic rubber, and penicillin." Chem & Eng N

Chem & Eng N 22:2127 D 10 '44 40w

"A comprehensive and easy-to-understand presentation of the subject of chemistry, progressing step by step so that the reader who is wholly unfamiliar with the subject may acquire a firm grasp of the basic concepts of chemical science and its influence on our everyday life."

+ School & Society 60:288 O 28 '44 60w

OFFORD, MRS LENORE (GLEN). Glass mask. 275p $2.50 Duell 44-51279

Detective story.

"Creepy."

Boston Globe p15 O 4 '44 40w

"Plenty of stage props—but a limping plot which fails to hold interest."

— Kirkus 12:384 S 1 '44 60w

"A good novel of atmosphere and character as well as a very satisfactory detective story, by the author of 'The Skeleton Key.'" E. H.

+ New Repub 111:502 O 16 '44 90w

"It is a beautifully constructed puzzle." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p17 S 24 '44 120w

"Nice atmosphere, and although the plot seems thin at times, Barby always manages to ginger things up."

+ — New Yorker 20:84 S 23 '44 90w

"Rewarding."

+ Sat R of Lit 27:31 S 30 '44 40w

"Soft-boiled, well plotted guessing game with a title deriving from Browning's 'The Laboratory.'" Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p23 O 1 '44 100w

OGBURN, WILLIAM FIELDING, ed. American society in wartime. 237p $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press [15s Cambridge]

308.2 U.S.—Social conditions. World war, 1939—U.S. A43-3092

For descriptive note see Annual for 1943.

"In general, the authors whose approach is statistical have made more useful contributions in that their chapters stimulate interpretations that are grounded in measurable phenomena. The book serves to underline the importance of verification as opposed to mere descriptive interpretation, in any studies of the long-time influence of the war upon social institutions and customs. It makes this contribution to the reader by forcing to his attention the contrast between those chapters that do include concrete data and those that are merely heavy with words." M. M. Willey

+ Am Hist R 49:543 Ap '44 320w

"On the whole, these papers form a competent and enlightening treatment of the effects of the present war upon the life of this country, including both effects that have already developed and those that are still to be anticipated. In the absence of materials better adapted to such use, this volume might well serve as textbook or required reading for part of a college course on the sociology of war. Though the book is small, the very brief Index provided scarcely seems adequate." F. N. House

+ — Am J Soc 49:369 Ja '44 350w

"The chief weakness of the volume lies in its omissions. The collection is by no means complete. The impact of the war on business, industry, government, etc., is not discussed. All of the lecturers were sociologists and anthropologists. There were no economists or political scientists among them. A second and a third volume are needed to cover some of the high spots of these fields. Undoubtedly the greatest changes in the postwar years will be in economic and political institutions." E. A. Helms

+ — Am Pol Sci R 38:185 F '44 450w

Reviewed by R. C. White

Am Soc R 9:574 O '44 350w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 22:496 Ap '44 10w

OGDEN, AUGUST RAYMOND. The Dies committee; a study of the special House committee for the investigation of un-American activities, 1938-1943. 295p $2 Catholic univ. of Am.

335 Dies, Martin. U.S. Congress. House of representatives. Special committee on un-American activities. Propaganda A44-3097

"Originally submitted as a doctoral dissertation at the Catholic University of America, the volume is heavily documented and contains a useful bibliography and index. After noting the antecedents and creation of the Committee, its work from 1938 to 1943 is traced in detail. The study is narrative and historical in approach, but the author crowds in occasional incisive, analytical comments. Major emphasis is placed upon the procedures used. Some of the reports were found to have 'real intrinsic worth,' but 'must remain suspect because of the methods and procedure used.'" Am Pol Sci R

"While the volume is excellent, further studies are needed on the relationship of Mr. Dies to the Committee, and of the latter to the Administration. Odgen criticizes the press for headlining certain accusations while playing down refutations; more can be done on this subject. Further analysis is needed also of the contents of the various reports and of the 'political' relationships of Congress to the Committee." H. A. Bone

+ Am Pol Sci R 38:808 Ag '44 380w

Reviewed by Carroll Kilpatrick

New Repub 111:52 Jl 10 '44 270w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p6 Je 11 '44 450w

OGILVIE, ELISABETH. High tide at noon. 414p $2.75 Crowell 44-40069

Life on a small island off the Maine coast is the background for this study of the growth of a woman's character. At fifteen Jo Bennett, the only daughter of the island's first family, was a tomboy, loving to work around the boats with the men of her family. The story is of Jo's growing up, of the three men who loved her, of her marriage and widowhood. When the slump in the lobster market caused the whole populace of the island to go to the mainland, Jo had to go too. But six years later she came back, to a new life, on the island she loved.

"Beautiful though this story is, it would have gained by understatement. Elisabeth Ogilvie writes moving prose, but she will learn with experience that to communicate emotion one must use nuances, and oblique approach, and must avoid at all cost, straight exposition. The book has the charm and many of the faults of the youthful, exuberant and unchastened first novelist—and those of us who have written half a dozen novels are really more envious than critical. There can be no doubt that Miss Ogilvie has a brilliant future ahead when she has learned to sail closer to the wind." Sterling North

+ — Book Week p2 Ap 9 '44 340w

Booklist 40:284 Ap 15 '44

Boston Globe p19 My 17 '44 160w

"In the staunchness of Joanna, in the quality of the style, the beauty of the descriptions of island scenery, and the gusto of the life lie the claims of the novel to the attention of readers who may not be disconcerted by some elements in that very gusto." W. K. R.

Christian Science Monitor p8 My 20 '44 700w

OGILVIE, ELISABETH—Continued
"A family story primarily, told with sympathy and steady interest."
+ Kirkus 12:48 F 1 '44 150w

"Highly recommended." H. S. Taylor
+ Library J 69:304 Ap 1 '44 70w

"Miss Ogilvie's writing, though somewhat lacking in crispness and distinction, has a warm and homespun quality which suits her story well. There is an honest smell of salt and seaweed in it." Margaret Wallace
+ — N Y Times p6 Ap 16 '44 360w

"Honest-to-goodness story about island people, with the cold splash of breaking waves on granite sea-walls and the crying of seagulls on the easterly wind. . . This is not the Maine which lives on the memory of clipper-ship days or the Maine which awaits eagerly the annual clink of money in the pockets of the 'summer people.' It is the story of a simpler, more self-reliant folk and it is good to meet them." E. M. B.
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 16 '44 250w

" 'High Tide at Noon' has the freshness and charm one might hope to find in the first book of a young writer. You feel and delight in the distinctive zestful life of a particular place and a particularly engaging family. Beyond these, the book has a vigor and substance which would do credit to an author with a long string of titles to her credit." David Tilden
+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ap 16 '44 800w
Wis Lib Bul 40:71 My '44

OLDS, ROBERT. Helldiver squadron. 225p il maps $3 Dodd
940.544 World war, 1939—Aerial operations. U.S. Navy Bombing squadron 17 44-47513

Report on the experiences of the men and planes of the first navy dive bomber, Helldiver, squadron, from the initial battle at Rabaul, November 11, 1943, thru the battles of Tarawa, the Marshalls, and Truk, to February 1944. Contains the honor roll of squadron seventeen.

Book Week p6 Ja 7 '45 200w
Booklist 41:137 Ja 1 '45

"Excellent material rather loosely organized." H. S. Taylor
+ Library J 69:1047 D 1 '44 110w

OLIVER, ROBERT TARBELL. Korea; forgotten nation. 138p $2.25; pa $1.50 Am. council on public affairs
951.9 Korea 44-9623

"After an introduction by Syngman Rhee, first president of the Korean republic, Mr. Oliver tells the story [of Korea] with brief but sufficient documentation—the history and character of the Koreans as an independent people, the rivalry of China and Japan for dominance, the 'Japanese yoke' of the past thirty years, present conditions, and the hopes for the future." Christian Century

"Robert T. Oliver's Korea is propaganda with a twofold purpose. First, it tries to influence the American public to support the promise of Korean independence given in the Cairo Declaration, and, second, it attempts to create a favorable impression for that Korean government-in-exile whose head resides in the United States. A good job has been done in both particulars, and, considering the inherent defects in such an opinionated study, an amazing amount of history and background is presented." A. E. Nuquist
Am Pol Sci R 38:1252 D '44 150w

"All friends of Korea and all those who are interested in the assurance of lasting peace through justice to oppressed peoples will be grateful to Mr. Oliver for his work in the preparation of this book. The title itself is unfortunately correct and yet well calculated to stimulate those who see it, to refresh their memories." H. H. Underwood
+ Ann Am Acad 237:213 Ja '45 900w
Christian Century 61:1079 S 20 '44 80w
Christian Science Monitor p14 S 29 '44 300w
Foreign Affairs 23:17 O '44 10w

"These are the problems that must be faced in the creation of the new independent Korea; and, in the opinion of the reviewer, the volume under review adds little, if anything, to their solution. . . In so far as Mr. Oliver reminds his readers that there is a Korean independence movement and that Korea is not lacking in patriots, he has performed a commendable service; but it is unfortunate that he has confined himself to rehearsing time-worn fulminations on Japanese and American policy in Korea, to the exclusion of any serious grappling with the real problems that lie ahead." P. H. Clyde
— + Social Studies 35:380 D '44 600w

OLSCHKI, LEONARDO. Marco Polo's precursors; with a map of Asia. 100p $1.50 Johns Hopkins press
915 Asia—Description and travel. Voyages and travels 43-8440

"This little book represents simultaneously the outline and condensation of a course of lectures delivered by the author in the Historical Seminar of the Johns Hopkins University during the academic year 1939/1940. It tries to explain the particular circumstances which made possible and successful the first systematic explorations of Central and Eastern Asia by the missionaries and merchants of the thirteenth century." (Foreword) Contents: The literary precursors; The religious and political background; The missions 'ad tartaros'; The elder Polos. Index.

"The little book is skillfully and expertly composed and the writing clear, but concise and compact, as the limits of the volume demanded. The volume has the merit of presenting not only a cogent and quite convincing running narrative but of reflecting also the author's firm grasp of the many important problems involved and an understanding of the subtle implications such a task required. Not the least contribution is that given in the many footnotes that have fortunately been appended—happily at the bottom of the page and not relegated to obscurity in an appendix. These serve as one of the finest, perhaps the best, introductions to the literature of a subject known well by too few, or only piecemeal by too many." G. C. Boyce
+ Am Hist R 49:292 Ja '44 150w
Geog R 34:169 Ja '44 600w

OLSEN, D. B., pseud. See Hitchens, D. B.

OLSON, EVERETT CLAIRE, and WHITMARSH, AGNES. Foreign maps. 237p il $4 Harper
526.98 Maps 44-6772

"A guide to the understanding and use of maps issued by foreign countries. Following a general description of maps issued by the United States, foreign maps are discussed under such headings as methods of reading, marginal information, map indexes, signs and symbols, scales and measurements and grid systems. Much space is given to glossaries of foreign map terms with their English equivalents. The final chapter summarizes the principal characteristics of maps of foreign mapping agencies. There is an eight-page bibliography." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:700 S 1 '44 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:45 Jl '44

O'MALLEY, PATRICIA. Airline girl. 202p $2 Dodd
44-47955

Story of Caddy Palmer who starts her career in aviation as "grease monkey" in the publicity department of a commercial airline.

Commonweal 41:256 D 22 '44 10w

"Presumably sound technical background for a weak and unevenly written story, virtually plotless."
Kirkus 12:481 O 15 '44 90w

"Vocational information good, but story is slight and overloaded with detail. Libraries having the other O'Malley books will want this. Will be popular with older girls." Marian Cumming
Library J 70:72 Ja 15 '45 70w

O'NEIL, KERRY, pseud. Death strikes at Heron house. 218p $2 Farrar 44-29781

Detective story.

"It's easy-going, not too tough, colloquial and full of gags you may or may not find amusing." Elizabeth Bullock
+ Book Week p6 Ag 27 '44 90w
Kirkus 12:203 My 1 '44 90w

"Casual and moderately tough, this story is the sort that picks up each new clue over a drink at a cozy bar, dancing spot, hotel or dive. . . Not a terrifically intricate plot, but a lively one." Beatrice Sherman
N Y Times p14 Jl 2 '44 120w

"Agreeable."
Sat R of Lit 27:12 Jl 15 '44 40w

"This naive item is good natured, lively and surprising in more ways than one." Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p12 Jl 30 '44 100w

O'NEILL, JOHN JOSEPH. Prodigal genius; the life of Nikola Tesla. 326p $3.75 Washburn
B or 92 Tesla, Nikola 44-9933

Sympathetic biography of an electrical wizard, a once-famous inventor, who died in comparative poverty in 1943. Born in Yugoslavia in 1856 he came to America as a young man, was associated for a time with Edison, and made a fortune by selling his alternating-current patents to George Westinghouse.

Reviewed by Joachim Joesten
Book Week p30 D 3 '44 550w
Booklist 41:107 D 1 '44

Review by William Agar
Commonweal 41:258 D 22 '44 360w
Kirkus 12:464 O 1 '44 150w

"Fascinating story by the eccentric inventor's personal friend of a man's unselfish devotion to his work for benefit of man and a half century of development of electricity in a.c. and h.f. Recommended." L. A. Eales
+ Library J 69:935 N 1 '44 100w

"John O'Neill has beautifully painted that strange and lonely man. And if he has sat too close to him to give the portrait depth and background, it is none the less a fine likeness and perhaps a great picture as well. Great, at least, when hung in the larger gallery of world leaders and events and viewed by people who understand that paint is paint and canvas canvas, and that no man alone can be God." David Woodbury
+ Sat R of Lit 27:15 D 9 '44 800w

"Out of the many years of personal friendship, with the facility of expression and ability to interpret scientific facts to the layman that won him the Pulitzer Prize in 1937, John O'Neill has written the first biography of Nikola Tesla. That Jugoslav-American genius of paradoxical personality affords rich material for a rapidly moving story authored by an enthusiastic believer in a scientific superman of suppressed spiritual and psychical characteristics."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 15:2 D '44 450w

"O'Neill's analysis of this complex personality is somewhat on the mystical side. Admitting that Tesla's own philosophy was strictly materialist, O'Neill attempts to show by certain incidents that Tesla had telepathic powers and that he may have received supernatural inspiration. These attempts detract from the objective quality of the biography. O'Neill also champions Tesla's claim to recognition as the inventor of radio broadcasting; this claim is dubious." H. M. Davis
Springf'd Republican p4d N 19 '44 800w

"This is Mr. O'Neill's first book. He has seldom written about people and he shows here that warmth and romance which has no place in scientific writing. As a science writer he was awarded the Pulitzer Prize in 1937 and the Cleveland Medal in 1938. He has reached the top of his profession without formal training in either writing or science. His scientific scholarship is demonstrated each Sunday. This book shows his deep understanding of scientists also." Gerald Wendt
+ Weekly Book Review p5 N 19 '44 1100w

OPDYCKE, JOHN BAKER. Say what you mean; everyman's guide to diction and grammar. 681p $3.75 Funk 428.3 English language—Grammar. English language—Errors—Use of words 44-3744

"This book combines chapters on the overuse of words and their underuse, their misuse and positive abuse, with spelling, punctuation, pronunciation, antonyms and synonyms, slang, idioms—so much that its index, a paragon of its kind, takes up thirty-eight double-column pages." Weekly Book Review

Booklist 40:335 Je 1 '44
Bookmark 5:6 My '44

"Anyone interested in the study of words, in the whys and wherefores of correct usage, of principles governing that usage, will find this not only a sound text book, but an excellent reference book."
+ Kirkus 12:194 Ap 15 '44 110w

Reviewed by C. B. Palmer
N Y Times p22 Ag 13 '44 240w

"Mr. Opdycke's 'Say What You Mean' . . . is of course full of true and useful information, but it suffers from the intent to be encyclopedic. I may be wrong, but I cannot imagine anyone needing it who could at the same time profit from its avalanche of admonition, examples, and tests. Moreover, Mr. Opdycke's style, half jocose, half pedantic, is hardly a good model for general imitation. But I am happy to add that his underlying feeling about language is sound. He is liberal about rules and usage, but makes no concessions to the destructiveness of vulgarians and rationalists." Jacques Barzun
+ — Sat R of Lit 27:7 Jl 1 '44 1150w
Special Libraries 35:423 O '44

"Massive as this book is, it moves and takes the reader along with it at an astonishing speed. Calling itself 'Everyman's Guide to Diction and Grammar,' it lives up to the claim not only by rules stated with liveliness but by a vast number of specific instances of what should and should not be said, to convey specific meanings."
+ Weekly Book Review p10 My 14 '44 200w

O'REILLY, TOM. Purser's progress; the adventures of a seagoing office boy; il by Leo Hershfield. 209p $2 Doubleday
940.548173 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American 44-5447

A sports columnist on PM took a job as ship's clerk on a freighter in the merchant marine, in order to do his bit in the present conflict, and to prove to his nephews and nieces that their uncle wasn't "completely washed up" because he was thirty-eight. His lively account of his adventures is told in this book.

"Men derive deep satisfaction from doing a dangerous job, and the challenge sharpens their comic sense. 'Purser's Progress' has drawn liberally on this state of mind for a book that is mighty pleasant reading." W. F. Morse
+ Book Week p11 Je 4 '44 270w
Booklist 40:374 Jl 1 '44
Kirkus 12:135 Mr 15 '44 150w

"With 'Purser's Progress,' a seagoing sportswriter, Tom O'Reilly, has written one of the happier books of World War II—the happier because he takes the war, but not himself, seriously. . . It is a little book, amusing, informative and oddly moving. Unlike most professional writers who have had occasion to write about the war, Mr. O'Reilly returns with no definitive opinions, no cosmic solutions." J. K. Hutchens

O'REILLY, TOM—Continued

+ N Y Times p7 Je 4 '44 440w

"Aside from an obvious ignorance of sea lore, which leads him to speak of every cabin on board as a 'forecastle,' O'Reilly gives a better than average report of a wartime voyage. . . The tale is told with the breezy air expected of a sports scribe. O'Reilly's adventures in the bars of Cairo with former city staff colleagues turned war correspondents might just as well have been deleted, having appeared in one form and another long before the Mulligan Stew was built." G. W. B.

+ — Springf'd Republican p4d Je 18 '44 330w

Weekly Book Review p11 Jl 2 '44 160w

ORGANIC reactions; editorial board: Roger Adams, ed-in-chief, Werner E. Bachmann, and others. v2 461p $4.50 Wiley

547 Chemical reactions. Chemistry, Organic (42-20265)

"Like the first volume, published in 1942, this book is a collection of critical discussions covering the procedures for selected synthetic reactions. Contents: The Claisen rearrangement; The preparation of aliphatic fluorine compounds; The Cannizzaro reaction; The formation of cyclic ketones by intramolecular acylation; Reduction with aluminum alkoxides; The preparation of unsymmetrical biaryls; Replacement of the aromatic primary amino group by hydrogen; Periodic acid oxidation; The resolution of alcohols; The preparation of aromatic arsonic and arsinic acids. The index includes references to the reactions discussed in Volume I." N Y New Tech Bks

"The unusually cordial reception by organic chemists of the first volume of this series will undoubtedly be repeated with the present volume. . . If the same high quality is maintained with future volumes in the series, and there is no reasonable doubt on this point, then the invaluable work is assured a place in the classical literature of organic chemistry." Henry Gilman

+ Am Chem Soc J 66:1234 Jl '44 320w

"Nomenclature is generally good but it is at this point that stricter editorial supervision would make for better uniformity. . . Such items of criticism do not loom large in the general appraisal of this fine work." C. D. Hurd

+ Chem & Eng N 22:1132 Jl 10 '44 450w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:461 My 15 '44 10w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:22 Ap '44

ORIZU, AKWEKE ABYSSINIA NWAFOR. Without bitterness; western nations in postwar Africa. 395p $3 Creative age

960 Africa—Civilization. Reconstruction (1939-)—Africa 44-7985

"Prince Orizu of the reigning house of Knewi—one of the strongest and most advanced kingdoms in Nigeria—sets forth plainly the many problems that will stem from Africa when this war is over. The book is far more than another study of particular postwar problems. An African here traces the history of the continent, analyzes its ethical and religious traditions, and sets forth its philosophy." School & Society

Reviewed by Sterling North
Book Week p2 O 8 '44 360w

Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook
Current Hist 7:498 D '44 70w

"The first presentation, to my knowledge, of the case of African independence by a Nigerian who uses his country as proving ground for his brief. . . Shedding some light on a very dark continent, this is a book for a little known cause."

Kirkus 12:334 Ag 1 '44 130w

"A revealing and constantly interesting book, it deserves a place in every public library." Ernestine Rose

+ Library J 69:697 S 1 '44 140w

"For most persons, his book will reveal a new approach to the colonial problem. Certainly it should be read by all who are concerned with long-range questions of establishing and maintaining world peace. For such questions involve the aspirations of colonial peoples to a far greater extent than those not conversant with the colonial problem can realize." M. J. Herskovits

+ New Repub 111:500 O 16 '44 650w

"Out of a welter of words, some confused and undigested thought, agonizing repetition, clumsy writing assisted by not a single map, there emerges a grim, grave warning leveled at the peoples of Europe and America, at the leaders of the United Nations, and in particular at the present and future British Government. . . History has proved that once a people is angry and it hears the voice of a prophet, there is cause for alarm.. And it is this alarm Prince Orizu wants to sound once more before it is too late." James Stern

N Y Times p10 O 15 '44 650w

"A sincere and interesting book. . . If he doesn't quite keep his promise to write without bitterness, it is not surprising."

+ New Yorker 20:86 O 14 '44 90w

School & Society 60:208 S 23 '44 70w

Reviewed by W. E. B. Du Bois
Weekly Book Review p3 Ja 28 '45 1650w

ORTEGA Y GASSET, JOSE. Mission of the university; tr. with an introd. by Howard Lee Nostrand. 109p $2 Princeton univ. press

378.01 Education—Philosophy. Education, Higher A45-685

"Written from the vantage point of one who is at once a teacher, an essayist, a publisher-editor, and a philosopher, this little book is considered by some to be the greatest original contribution of our times to the subject of general education. The author strikes at what he believes to be the heart of the problem: social orientation of the myriad individuals who make up the modern world. He analyzes the relation of the university both to contemporary society and to civilization in general." School & Society

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 Ja 14 '45 100w

Reviewed by E. F. Walbridge
Library J 69:935 N 1 '44 110w

"Despite its pontifical style and the unnecessarily long-winded introduction by the translator, 'Mission of the University' contains a number of interesting ideas." Sidney Hook

+ — Nation 160:108 Ja 27 '45 480w

"Ortega's seventy disjointed pages might be regarded as a pendant to Mr. H. L. Nostrand's well-knit thirty-page preface or, apparently, as a preface to a big work of Mr. Nostrand's which will appear next year. Mr. Nostrand's essay may well be the best apology for Ortega that has been written. But for all its scholarly mildness it does not convince, for Mr. Nostrand is an educational panaceist." E. R. Bentley

Sat R of Lit 27:8 D 23 '44 950w

School & Society 60:400 D 16 '44 100w

ORTON, MRS HELEN (FULLER). Winding river; a story of French émigrés on the Susquehanna [drawings by Robert Ball]. (Stokes bk) 239p $2 Lippincott

44-6867

In 1797 two French aristocrats, thirteen-year-old Antoinette, orphaned by the French revolution, and her aunt, arrived in Azilum, the Pennsylvania settlement built by exiled Frenchmen as a refuge. In 1801, Antoinette was restored to grace and her aunt made all preparation to take her back to her "rightful place" in France. But four years in the American wilderness had brought both love and happiness to Antoinette and she stayed to marry her young American. For older girls.

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p14 O 12 '44 120w

Kirkus 12:374 Ag 15 '44 90w

"Well-written, but slight story of little-known page of history. For junior-high age." E. E. Frank
+ Library J 69:765 S 15 '44 90w

"The story is slight and the characters shadowy, but the book is well written and there is a quiet charm in the author's picture of life in this French settlement so long ago. For the reader it is a little like taking a stroll through a restored eighteenth century village." A. T. E.
+ — N Y Times p16 N 12 '44 110w

"There is a polite romance between a young noblewoman and an American settler, both rather dimly drawn characters, but the plot has its exciting moments and the book is interesting reading because it reveals a little-known chapter in our American past."
+ New Yorker 20:90 D 16 '44 90w

"The reader learns something about the ways of eighteenth century French society. He will come to the conclusion that, although his manners may be different, a plucky Frenchman is at heart not so unlike a courageous American settler. The background facts of this little known French colony in Pennsylvania are drawn with careful regard to accuracy. The drawings by Robert Ball reflect the quaint charm of the period." B. W. Shaffer
+ Sat R of Lit 27:30 O 21 '44 450w

"A curious fascination attends this tale of exiled aristocracy, courteously biding its time under democracy's sympathetic shelter till—as they have no doubt will take place—democracy overseas shall spend its fury and pass. It is an interlude in which history pauses. Mr. Ball's decorations are taken from authentic records; the book has a warm introduction by Elsie Murray, director of Tioga Point Museum and author of the standard work for adults on Azilum." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p6 O 1 '44 300w
Wis Lib Bul 40:134 O '44

OSBORN, FAIRFIELD, ed. Pacific world; its vast distances, its lands and the life upon them, and its peoples; with maps and il. by Robert M. Chapin, jr [and others]. 218p $3 Norton

919 Islands of the Pacific. Pacific ocean 44-5498

Composite volume containing articles on the geography, people, fauna and flora of the islands of the Pacific. Material is grouped under two sections, the first part dealing with general subjects, the second with particular regions. Index.

Book Week p7 Jl 23 '44 100w
Booklist 40:389 Jl 15 '44
Christian Science Monitor p13 S 16 '44 100w
Foreign Affairs 23:17 O '44 30w

"Doubtless specialists will carp at the inevitable simplification involved in such a work, and the statistics given for populations could have been brought more nearly up to date by consulting the latest sources for a number of the areas. Nevertheless, the book represents a grand effort at collaboration and integration and should have usefulness far beyond the soldier readers who inspired its production." F. M. Keesing
Geog R 34:690 O '44 380w

"A skilfully blended piece of cooperative writing. . . This might be defined as a sort of National Geographic in book form, devoted to The Pacific World."
+ Kirkus 12:189 Ap 15 '44 150w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:653 Ag '44 40w

"To have attempted, in limited space, to include so much about the Pacific and its islands was, of course, to tackle the impossible. The marvel is not that the contributors have been guilty of an occasional error, or that they have found the space at their disposal inadequate, but that in such limited space they could have covered so much of the ground assigned to them. And, considering the great diversity of authorship and subject-matter, there is a remarkable unity—even similarity—of style." Hawthorne Daniel
+ — N Y Times p4 Je 18 '44 1450w

"As a general survey 'The Pacific World' fulfils its mission but its mission is limited. It is neither an adequate popularization nor an adequate reference (and while it lists tables of facts it fails to provide a bibliography). It fails as a book with wide appeal because its style is dull and painfully reminiscent of school geography books. It fails as a reference because of its length and because it hardly goes beyond the material available in a good encyclopedia." Robert Okin
+ — Sat R of Lit 27:28 N 25 '44 500w

"Even in so brief a book, the vastness and variety of the Pacific are apparent. 'When the battle is over, destiny will still be calling for us there.' And that is why this accurate presentation is of value to us all."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 15:3 Ag '44 240w
Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 9 '44 80w

Reviewed by Virginia Thompson
Weekly Book Review p6 Jl 9 '44 500w
Wis Lib Bul 40:129 O '44

OSBORN, VERA (MAYNARD). There were two of us; with il. by Helen Kirby. (Whittlesey house publication) 327p $2.50 McGraw

B or 92 44-8343

Reminiscences of the author's childhood and youth in a middle western small town from the middle 1890s to the first World war. The "two of us" were the author and her slightly older brother between whom there was an unusually strong bond of understanding and affection.

"While 'There Were Two of Us' won't set you howling with laughter, as tales of more fantastic families sometimes do, it will probably call forth a chuckle or two. And though the chuckles may arise more from your own memories than from incidents in the book, the total effect is heart-warming and pleasant." Dorothy Sparks
+ Book Week p4 O 15 '44 320w
Booklist 41:107 D 1 '44

"Anyone who feels that the 'Life with Father' genre is being overworked will be justified in naming There Were Two of Us as Exhibit A in proof. To be sure, this author attempts to play up the happy relationship between herself and her brother, but father, with his love of the circus and his mechanical ingenuity, soon emerges as the 'hero.' It is a mediocre performance from every point of view, done without special insight or understanding."
— Christian Century 61:1320 N 15 '44 210w
Kirkus 12:311 Jl 15 '44 130w

Reviewed by M. K. Holte
Springf'd Republican p4d N 19 '44 220w

"Although the avalanche loosed by Clarence Day has subsided, variations on the family theme still appear at frequent intervals. In contrast with those stressing the eccentric parent and turbulent household, Mrs. Osborn's recollections are engagingly free from high or low jinks. . . 'There Were Two of Us' has the charm of the familiar; it is touched with sentiment and rich in the flavor of daily living."
+ Weekly Book Review p14 O 8 '44 150w
Wis Lib Bul 40:145 N '44

OSGNIACH, AUGUSTINE JOHN. The Christian state. 356p $3.75 Bruce pub.

320 Political science. State, The. Sociology, Christian 43-5202

"The book is a philosophical essay on the nature and functions of the state written from the standpoint of St. Thomas Aquinas by one of his modern disciples. It is a protest against political absolutism in the name of the freedom and personal dignity of man." Am Soc R

OSGNIACH, A. J.—Continued
"The theological and philosophical sections of the work give evidence of careful and painstaking scholarship, but its historical and scientific data are cited from secondary and tertiary sources in an inexcusably slipshod and careless manner." H. E. Jensen
+ — Am Soc R 9:115 F '44 1100w

Reviewed by J. A. Ryan
Survey G 32:407 O '43 270w

OSGOOD, HARRIETT ELLEN (KEENEY) (MRS C. B. OSGOOD). Yukon River children; pictures by Lilian Neuner. 80p $2 Oxford 44-4877

The daily life of the Alaskan Indians described in the story of Poco and his family, showing their various activities: salmon fishing, moose hunting, holiday celebrations, school, the coming of the mailboat, etc. For grades three to five.

Booklist 40:344 Je 1 '44

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p8 Jl 31 '44 150w

"A useful, well-illustrated book to supplement geography lessons." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 20:286 Jl '44 70w

"An excellent true-picture of modern Alaskan Indians."
+ Kirkus 12:217 My 1 '44 110w

"The make-up of the book is interesting but edges of cover already worn when received by the reviewer." K. H. McAlarney
Library J 69:505 Je 1 '44 70w

"Poco—catching the first salmon of the year, learning to drive a dog team, finding school very dull indeed—will seem real and interesting to readers from 8 to 10." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p20 Je 18 '44 100w

"You learn about huskies, and a good deal about games; in fact a six-year-old learns more than he realizes, for both story and colored pictures gently prepare him for geography." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p10 Je 1 '44 250w
Wis Lib Bul 40:133 O '44

OSGOOD, PHILLIPS ENDECOTT. Say I to myself; the artistry of self-management. 142p $1.75 Harvard univ. press
170 Conduct of life A44-708

This volume, a series of short chapters on related topics, bears the subtitle "The artistry of self-management." "The subject-object personality situation, the self as the self controlling the self, the participating self and the censoring self—these form the book's central theme." (Book Week)

Reviewed by F. H. O. Bowman
Book Week p6 Mr 5 '44 400w
Booklist 40:312 My 15 '44
Bookmark 5:3 Mr '44
Christian Century 61:498 Ap 19 '44 260w

"Dr. Osgood's essays are freshly written, thoughtful, and stimulating." T. L. L.
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Mr 18 '44 600w

"The reviewer hesitates to call this a collection of stimulating talks on the 'integration of personality,' for fear that its possible readers may think it is full of the technical jargon of the professional psychologist. On the contrary, it sparkles with the picturesque, dramatic, paradoxical, humorous presentation of truth which is characteristic of Dr. Osgood, and probably will be scorned or disregarded by those technical experts who are always jealous of those who can popularize science and write more readable books than theirs." W. L. Caswell
+ Churchman 158:19 My 1 '44 270w

"Rich with illustrative material, in the skillful use of which Dr Osgood has a well deserved reputation, the book makes delightful and easy reading." D. J. Campbell
+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 27 '44 280w
Wis Lib Bul 40:66 My '44

O'SHAUGHNESSY, MICHAEL JAMES. Peace and reconstruction; a Catholic layman's approach. 151p $2 Harper 940.5314473 Reconstruction (1939-). World war, 1939—Peace. Sociology, Christian 43-13422

For descriptive note see Annual for 1943.

Reviewed by Sigmund Neumann
Ann Am Acad 233:226 My '44 140w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:4 Ja '44 20w

"The book is clearly and effectively written and is one of the most useful volumes that has appeared on a very complex subject. The title itself serves to emphasize the fundamental relation of social reconstruction to an enduring peace. The author's practical proposals both for peace and reconstruction are moderate, Christian and, in the best sense of the term, liberal." J. A. Ryan + Survey G 33:184 Mr '44 350w

"It was evidently Michael O'Shaughnessy's intention to write a book to elucidate and reaffirm the position of the Catholic Church on political and social justice, and by this means to arouse not only his fellow Catholics, but American citizens in general to a consciousness of their responsibilities in a post-war world. Had Mr. O'Shaughnessy adhered to the original plan of his work, we might have had an interesting and provocative book. As it is, 'Peace and Reconstruction' is a rather irritating series of miscellanies." Clare Godfrey
— + Weekly Book Review p12 Mr 12 '44 600w

OTT, EMIL, ed. Cellulose and cellulose derivatives; a monograph prepared by a staff of specialists. (High polymers; a series of monographs) 176p il $15 Interscience
547.3 Cellulose 43-16679

"A digest of currently accepted theory in cellulose chemistry, prepared by a staff of thirty-six specialists. Contents: Occurrence of cellulose; Chemical nature of cellulose and its derivatives; Structure and properties of cellulose fibers; Carbohydrates normally associated with cellulose in nature; Lignin and other noncarbohydrates; Preparation of cellulose from its natural sources; Bleaching and purification; Derivatives of cellulose; Physical properties of cellulose and its derivatives; Technical applications. . . Bibliographical footnotes throughout the text." N Y New Tech Bks

"Despite its minor shortcomings, the monograph is, in its truest sense, a great piece of work. Some of the material cannot be found elsewhere in the literature. The bibliographies are excellent. Most of the evaluations have been made carefully and critically. The typography is very good. Therefore, the book must be recommended to advanced students, to research workers and technologists whose problems touch the field of cellulose and its derivatives. Its value to such workers cannot be overstressed." L. E. Wise
+ — Am Chem Soc J 66:1803 O '44 700w

"The up-to-date nature of this monograph should make it an invaluable source book for several years to come. The figures and tables have been well selected and present established, reliable, basic values." G. J. Esselen
+ Chem & Eng N 22:45 Ja 10 '44 360w
Chem & Met Eng 51:186 Je '44 150w
Library J 68:961 N 15 '43 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 28:60 O '43

"The editor has done an excellent job of combining and matching the work of thirty-five contributors. Most of the chapters are composites, or rather mosaics, of the writings of several authors." T. L. Davis
+ N Y Times p18 Jl 23 '44 200w

OTT, LESTER. Transport aircraft of the world. 110p il $2.50 Watts, F.
629.1382 Airplanes 44-6724

"Nontechnical guide to present and future types of air conveyances. Cargo and passenger planes of the United States, England, Canada, Russia, Germany, Italy and France, with illustrations of planes now on the drafting board and in test models. 144 illustrations, photographs, production breakdown drawings, cutaway views, diagrams and sketches." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by W. F. Morse
Book Week p10 Jl 30 '44 30w
Booklist 41:86 N 15 '44
Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:700 S 1 '44 60w

OUR army at war; the story of American campaigns in World war II told in official War department photographs; with an introd. by George C. Marshall. $3 Harper
940.5497 World war, 1939—U.S. World war, 1939—Campaigns and battles. World war, 1939—Pictorial works 44-7651

Photographic record, with introductory chapters and running comment, showing the first two years of World war II, as pictured by the American Signal corps photographers. Photographs are arranged by campaign: the Pacific and the Far East; the Aleutians; the Mediterranean campaign; North Africa, Sicily, Italy; and Europe. The record closes at about November, 1943.

" 'Our Army at War' is a fine record, but it could have been superlative if it had been presented as straight, detailed war information, without trying to force pictures and captions into a single narrative thread." J. I. Greene
Book Week p4 D 24 '44 550w
Booklist 41:40 O 1 '44

"The 482 pictures are good; the text is clear and factual. Considering news reels and the illustrations in daily and weekly papers, the public is not entirely unfamiliar with visual aspects of the war so far as pictures can show them. But there is some value in having so much of the record brought together for a review of the events in their continuity and for preservation."
+ Christian Century 61:1140 O 4 '44 230w

"A beautiful piece of book-making. . . Few of [the photographs] convey the sense of horror that some of the more recently released recordings of, for example, the Battle of France—particularly the Normandy beaches—have shown. The result is that the pictures look a bit too cleaned up and prettied up; the men look washed and shaved in most of them; the action pictures suggest manoeuvres rather than actual battle station. Doubtless this makes for a much more presentable book for purchase."
+ — Kirkus 12:424 S 15 '44 170w

"If any doubt ever existed that this is the world's best photographed war and that the camera is at least as effective as the written word in recording history, this book alone should suffice to remove it. . . Many of the pictures are too small and crowded, though well printed by rotogravure and effectively laid out. The captions are good." Daniel Schwarz
+ — N Y Times p12 S 17 '44 440w
Reviewed by H. C. Wolfe
Sat R of Lit 27:28 N 18 '44 500w
Reviewed by R. A. Brown
Springf'd Republican p4d D 10 '44 250w
Reviewed by R. F. Crandell
Weekly Book Review p18 O 8 '44 550w

OUR flying navy; text prepared with assistance of the Office of the Deputy chief of naval operations (air); introd. by James Forrestal; pref. by Arthur W. Radford; foreword about the pictures by Thomas Craven. 97p pl $3.75 Macmillan
358.4 U.S. Navy. Air service. U.S. Navy—Pictorial works. 44-51415

The book is built around eighty colored reproductions of paintings depicting training of naval pilots, and those pilots in action. The text gives a brief history of naval aviation. The book was done under naval auspices, but paid for and presented to the government by the Abbott Laboratories.

Booklist 41:165 F 1 '45

"Happy will be the man or boy who can get his hands on this detailed authentic account of the development of U. S. Naval Aviation. Though technical, it is thrilling reading bringing a glow of pride in its record of accomplishment. . . Recommended for large libraries." H. R. Forbes
+ Library J 69:649 Ag '44 110w
New Yorker 20:68 D 23 '44 120w
Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 7 '45 300w

"Most of the paintings strike me as having strength and sinew; some perhaps are rather feeble, while the three or four imaginary battle scenes do not carry much conviction. However, the collection as a whole again shows that the Navy, through all the difficulties of security and Congressional penury, is aware of the great human drama of its activities and of the importance of giving it adequate literary and artistic expression." Walter Millis
+ — Weekly Book Review p2 D 17 '44 220w

OVERMYER, GRACE. Famous American composers; il. by Constance Joan Naar. 210p $2 Crowell
927.8 Musicians, American 44-5798

"Twelve biographical accounts chronologically arranged, beginning with Francis Hopkinson, who wrote the first American song, and ending with twentieth-century Aaron Copland. Complementary to Story-Lives of American Composers [Book Review Digest, 1941], by Katherine Bakeless, although there is some duplication." Library J

"In a volume about famous American composers it is strange—but not at all regrettable—to discover chapters which discuss Louise Homer, whose career was occupied with singing, and Theodore Thomas, who never composed anything. . . While there is not much in the book about these musicians that was not known before, Miss Overmyer has written about them engagingly and well, and, in the case of living composers like Cadman, she adopted the sensible plan of sending them her material for examination and, if necessary, revision. There are drawings of the composers made by Constance Joan Naar, and three musical illustrations." Felix Borowski
+ — Book Week p4 Jl 23 '44 230w

"Simply written, but well-done, these should appeal to music students in the teens and on up to adults."
+ Kirkus 12:119 Mr 1 '44 40w

"Pleasantly written with occasional quotations from poems or songs and with period backgrounds indicated. Recommended." E. S. Smith
+ Library J 69:264 Mr 15 '44 60w

"One wonders why Grace Overmyer chose to call her book of biographical sketches 'Famous American Composers' for not more than four names on her list of 12 qualify under this title. The most startling name is that of Louise Homer, but a footnote reassures us that 'although Louise Homer is not a composer, she is included in the book as inspirer of the creative work of her husband as well as for her own outstanding musical personality.' " Victor Prahl
— Springf'd Republican p8 Je 23 '44 330w

"The twelve concise and engaging biographies which comprise this book of some two hundred pages might have had a less imposing and more precise title. Here, nevertheless, are the salient facts, accurately set down."

OVERMYER, GRACE—Continued
+ Theatre Arts 28:556 S '44 450w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p6 Jl 2 '44 200w

Wis Lib Bul 40:150 N '44

OWEN, FRANK, ed. Bedside bonanza. 576p $2.50 Fell

Short stories—Collections 45-278

A collection of short stories, intended primarily to entertain, reprinted from various American periodicals.

Reviewed by John Norcross
Book Week p4 D 31 '44 450w

Reviewed by C. V. Terry
N Y Times p19 D 17 '44 440w

OXENFELDT, ALFRED RICHARD. New firms and free enterprise; pre-war and post-war aspects; introd. by John M. Clark. 196p $3.25; pa $2.75 Am. council on public affairs

338.7 U.S.—Industries and resources 43-17862

"This study raises important questions about new business formations and suggests tentative answers to these questions. The author also presents preliminary conclusions about the social benefits and shortcomings of business formations, with suggestions for enhancing their social benefits in the postwar era." Management R

"The weakness of the book, which diminishes only slightly the value of its factual burden, is a structural wobbliness and lack of intellectual clarity resulting from a double and shifting focus. Mr. Oxenfeldt talks now of new firms, now of entrepreneurs new and old, and now of economic newness without labeling his transitions clearly. This leaves the reader confused and restless." R. P. Mack
+ — Am Econ R 34:411 Je '44 950w

Reviewed by E. F. Donaldson
Ann Am Acad 233:244 My '44 450w

Management R 33:67 F '44 40w

OXNAM, GARFIELD BROMLEY, bp. Behold thy mother. 42p il $1.25 Macmillan

252 Sermons. Mothers 44-20004

"A little book designed to express the beauty and filial piety that should characterize Mother's Day, or any other tribute to mothers, but to exclude the conventional sentimentalism into which such tributes are in danger of falling." Christian Century

Christian Century 61:530 Ap 26 '44 30w

"Treated with deftness and fine literary skill." T. F. O.
+ Churchman 158:19 My 1 '44 50w

Kirkus 12:67 F 1 '44 60w

"The effect is that of a rambling sermon. Not recommended." Eileen Riols
— Library J 69:202 Mr 1 '44 70w

"Many beautiful examples of motherhood are depicted here, including the mothers of Jesus and of Augustine, of Michael Pupin and of Charles W. Eliot. The attractiveness of the book is enhanced by reproductions of Whistler's 'Mother,' Rembrandt's 'Mother' and the 'Madonna' by Dagnan-Bouveret." J. R. Shepler
+ Springf'd Republican p8 Jl 6 '44 220w

OXNAM, GARFIELD BROMLEY, bp. Preaching in a revolutionary age. 207p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury

252 Preaching. Church and social problems 44-47053

This volume contains Bishop Oxnam's Lyman Beecher lectures on preaching, delivered at Yale. "The major part of the lectures is concerned with world problems in the light of their political and social significance... The lecturer does not put his chief emphasis upon what to preach; here are no ready-made topics and outlines. He rather prefers to build the preacher and the pastor upon foundations that are eternal and that now become more valuable and imperative than ever, if Christian preaching is to be effective—or even survive." (Crozer Q)

"It deserves more space than can be given to it here, but three factors guarantee its significance: a notable lectureship in which there have been few disappointments since its founding seventy-two years ago; an urgent and inescapable theme; and a lecturer not only expert in the art of preaching but deeply and wisely informed concerning the issues of this turbulent time."
+ Christian Century 61:1449 D 13 '44 80w

Reviewed by R. E. Keighton
+ Crozer Q 22:90 Ja '45 500w

Reviewed by J. H. Holmes
Weekly Book Review p8 Ja 21 '45 250w

P

PACKARD, LEONARD OSCAR; OVERTON, BRUCE, and WOOD, BENJAMIN DE KALBE. Our air-age world; a textbook in global geography. 838p il maps $2.80 Macmillan

910 Geography 44-3709

"High school textbook interpreting economic geography with relation to modern methods of transportation and trade routes. The global concept is described first, followed by description of the United States and the use of its resources and industries in the war, and briefer sketches of other countries of the world. Many illustrations and maps as in other books by these authors. Questions and study projects for each chapter. Bibliography." Booklist

Booklist 40:376 Jl 1 '44

Current Hist 6:514 Je '44 50w

"Factors of the physical environment such as climate, landforms, soil, and waterbodies are not developed enough to interpret the economic conditions described in later chapters. In fact, throughout the book emphasis is placed on facts and description. Environmental interpretation is meager and not very penetrating. . . When selected this book will serve as a text for a year of geography. Geography taught with this book should be classified in the social studies field or area." T. H. Barton
Social Educ 8:279 O '44 600w

PADEN, MRS IRENE (DAKIN). The wake of the prairie schooner; with pen and ink drawings by the author. 514p il maps $3 Macmillan

917.8 West—Description and travel. Overland journeys to the Pacific 43-15419

For descriptive note see Annual for 1943.

"With side lights on Mormons, Indians, Marcus Whitman, and other topics, this 'diary' ranks high in readability and probably stands as the final mapping of the old trails. A preface by Professor H. E. Bolton, pen-and-ink sketches by the author, and eleven sectional maps are not the least of the interesting aspects of this remarkable book." W. D. Wyman
+ Am Hist R 49:486 Ap '44 550w

"The value of this work for the sociologist lies in the fact that it supplies another of the many minutiae which must be secured in order to discover the nature of the social processes that built the American society of today. It is also an important document bearing on the facts behind the legends and counterlegends of the 'romance' of the Oregon Trail and the 'Forty-niners.' . . The [book] may not be orthodox history, but it is a genuine social document." J. E. Hulett, Jr.
+ — Am Soc R 9:441 Ag '44 750w

Bookmark 5:15 Mr '44

"In her story within a story, her story of the party's cross-country experiences and her story of the other experiences that throng the old trail, Mrs. Paden has done extremely well. There is no sense of discursiveness; one incident, of past or present, flows into another, the transition requires no effort of the reader's imagination, the story evolves as a whole. And as a marvel of research, submitted for information and entertainment, it offers a treasure-trove to the fiction writer of historical romance." E. L. Sabin

+ Sat R of Lit 27:25 F 12 '44 450w

"The Wake of the Prairie Schooner is not designed for mass circulation; rather it is written for that part of the reading public who have a special interest in the events so clearly described. The first account of its kind, it fills a considerable gap in the reconstruction of the paths of our westward expansion. It is to be hoped that the Paden family will follow other trails to locate additional landmarks, and that Mrs. Paden will write as entertainingly of their future travels." R. A. Brown

+ Social Educ 8:139 Mr '44 600w

PAGE, KIRBY, ed. Living abundantly; a study of creative pioneer groups through twenty-seven centuries of exploration of pathways to joyous and abundant life; with the substantial collaboration of Mary Alma Page [and others]. 513p $2.50 Farrar

242 Spiritual life 44-4836

A collection of 125 devotional readings chosen from the works of the Hebrew prophets and the early Christians, Luther, Calvin, George Fox, John Wesley, modern missionaries and ministers, and leaders of social reform in many nations. Index.

Booklist 41:7 S '44

Christian Century 61:670 My 31 '44 150w

"No one not a member of the Fellowship of Reconciliation to whom the volume is dedicated would accept all the readings as inspirational, but every openminded Christian would be stirred to thought and forward-looking action by the use of this volume."

+ Kirkus 12:251 Je 1 '44 190w

PAGEL, WALTER. Religious and philosophical aspects of van Helmont's science and medicine. 44p pa $1 Johns Hopkins press

610.81 Helmont, Jean Baptiste van 44-5558

"The aim of this excellent monograph is to exhibit the details of van Helmont's various scientific achievements as integrally connected with his larger theological and philosophical views. The author thus stresses relations which are usually minimized or dismissed in discussions of van Helmont's researches in physics and medicine. Dr. Pagel shows convincingly how van Helmont's opposition to the formal logic of the schoolmen was associated with a rejection of the materialistic philosophy of the ancients, and he gives a valuable account of the manner in which van Helmont's vitalistic pluralism served as the basis for the latter's contributions to modern science." J Philos

+ J Philos 41:502 Ag 31 '44 390w

"A valuable monograph. . . There is a tendency in this essay to exaggerate the directness of the theological contribution. Was there not a general philosophical climate of opinion that offered the key conceptions of entelechy, vital spirits, life and time, without seeking them directly in theology—even granting the difficulty of separating philosophy from theology? The use of the vitalistic view by van Helmont to oppose Silvius' chemical analysis of ferments should be remembered as a negative influence on scientific research. The author, however, seems to favor vitalistic biology." E. E. Aubrey

+ — J Religion 24:302 O '44 130w

PAINE, THOMAS. Representative selections; with introd, bibl, and notes, by Harry Hayden Clark. (American writers ser) 436p $1.60 Am. bk.

320.81 Political science 44-3959

"Professor Clark, for a long time occupied with the study of Paine, has brought together the principal writings of Paine in somewhat condensed form, and has prefaced these writings with a very useful analysis of Paine's ideas. . . [He] not only has dealt with the essential points in the general theory of Paine, but has given unusual attention to his economic ideas and the practical application of his theories to current problems. Paine's opposition to the banking and 'funding' system of his time has been developed before, but Clark lays special emphasis on less commonly noticed policies such as that of social security. In his Agrarian Justice and in the Rights of Man, many of these policies, such as state aid for the poor, old age pensions, employment for the casual poor, have a modern ring. His emphasis upon the meaning of education in democracy was parallel to that of Jefferson. Inevitably, Professor Clark, as a student of literature, has contributed an interesting chapter on the literary qualities of Paine." (Am Pol Sci R) No index.

"Professor Clark's introduction to this selection of Paine's writings is the best analysis in print of Paine's ideas and their sources." Philip Davidson

Am Hist R 50:143 O '44 480w

Reviewed by C. E. Merriam

+ Am Pol Sci R 38:793 Ag '44 380w

"The selections are well-chosen and, as far as The Rights of Man and The Age of Reason are concerned, deservedly full. It seems to this reviewer a pity that space could not be made for the inclusion of the brief Dissertation on the First Principles of Government (1795), in which there is so clear an exposition of the author's more restrained ideas on suffrage, property rights, and constitutions. The loss, however, is hardly irreparable, since many of these points are developed in The Age of Reason. The chronological table of Paine's life and writings, the notes, and the excellent selective annotated bibliography are valuable additions to the work." J. L. Blau

+ J Philos 41:420 Jl 20 '44 240w

PAINTER, SIDNEY. Studies in the history of the English feudal barony. 211p pa $2 Johns Hopkins press

321.3 Feudalism. Great Britain—Peerage. Great Britain—Politics and government 43-14188

Study of the internal, economic aspects of the English barony: its feudal and non-feudal obligations, the resources (franchisal, feudal, and manorial) and income of the barons, from the twelfth to the fourteenth century.

"Mr. Painter has written a stimulating book. As he explains in his Preface, he has turned aside from research on the reign of King John to explore the Angevin and Plantagenet baronage. The result is just what its title indicates —not a history, but studies for a history yet to be written. . . Mr. Painter has made a preliminary survey of a subject as yet insufficiently explored, in the hope of tempting more students into the study of baronial history. The lucidity and challenge of his presentation should provide the necessary bait. If he has tempted himself, in the process, into writing a history of the baronage during this period, we may look forward to a work which will be a classic in its field." W. B. Willcox

+ Am Econ R 34:156 Mr '44 1200w

Reviewed by W. A. Morris

Am Hist R 49:700 Jl '44 850w

"The author has challenged further studies by producing a useful and valuable monograph." Gaines Post

+ Am Pol Sci R 38:194 F '44 300w

Reviewed by G. E. Woodbine

Columbia Law R 44:287 Mr '44 1000w

PAINTER, SIDNEY—Continued

"I can only mention the admirable treatment of administration and justice, and of many other topics. Many monographs of this sort become studies of a frozen static condition, but Mr. Painter has preserved admirably a dynamic outlook." Courtenay Hemenway

+ Social Studies 35:190 Ap '44 850w

Times [London] Lit Sup p338 Jl 15 '44 420w

PALACHE, CHARLES, ed. See Dana, J. D. System of mineralogy

PALMER, ALBERT WENTWORTH, ed. Aids to worship; a hand-book for public and private devotions. 139p $2 Macmillan

264 Liturgies 44-31995

"The present volume is not a discussion of worship—though the two-page introduction is so packed with meaning and with helpful insights that it has almost the value of a book on the subject—but it is a body of carefully selected and skillfully arranged worship materials suitable for use in either public or private devotions. Here are poetry and prose, Scripture and prayer, litanies and confessions of faith, aids to meditation and orders of service." Christian Century

+ Christian Century 61:776 Je 28 '44 80w

"Such a range of material will be of unlimited use to laymen as well as to ministers, to individuals as well as to groups, to churches, schools, classes, and societies. Needs and tastes of varying kinds and levels are sure to be supplied or at least stimulated. This is an admirable book, the best in the field, and will come as the answer to the long-felt desire of many an inquiring but unsupplied leader of worship services. Incidentally, the two-page introduction is one of the sanest and most convincing presentations of the character and power of worship to be found anywhere." R. E. Keighton

+ Crozer Q 21:367 O '44 200w

"While the worship material has no denominational or sectarian cast, it would be most useful to liberal Protestant ministers and their congregations. However, every minister would find this an invaluable addition to his working library."

+ Kirkus 12:142 Mr 15 '44 150w

PALMER, EDGAR A., ed. G. I. songs; il. by Richard A. Loederer and Kurt Werth. 253p $2.75 Sheridan

784.71 War songs. World war, 1939—Songs and music 44-6136

Collection of songs "written, composed and collected by the men in the service." Includes thirty complete piano scores, and many illustrations. Index.

Booklist 41:38 O 1 '44

Kirkus 12:243 Je 1 '44 130w

"Mr. Palmer hopes to keep his volume up-to-date as new songs appear on the scattered battle-fronts. It is a worth-while project and no doubt 'G. I. Songs' will see yeomen service in the years to come when veterans get together." Jack Gould

+ N Y Times p12 Ag 13 '44 360w

"An entertaining and varied collection."

+ New Yorker 20:60 Ag 5 '44 130w

"This is a collection that civilians should see. It runs the gamut from lighthearted to grouchy, it takes off with not too subtle humor every situation that happens to a serviceman, and it probably conveys the feel of service as well as anything that is on sale in shops at home."

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 2 '44 280w

"Students of the rowdier forms of recent war verse will find in 'G. I. Songs' practically all the muse that's fit to print, with footnotes indicating where the bawdy begins. Some of the more popular of the marching songs and barrack room ballads from the first world war are included for comparative analysis."

Weekly Book Review p8 Je 25 '44 100w

PALMER, FREDERICK. It can be done this time. 307p $2.75 Scribner

341 World war, 1939—Peace. World politics. Security, International 44-6875

A survey of world history and of world politics leading up to the conclusion that universal peace can be established now, thru the cooperation of the three great powers and their employment of air force to police their separate spheres of influence. Index.

Reviewed by Ralph Peterson

Book Week p10 Ag 27 '44 400w

"The section in which he discusses the fundamental policies and objectives of the three nations is one of the most worth-while of all. But the book is rambling, and is burdened with needless detail, and littered with historical facts and interpretations. Many of the facts, too, are irrelevant, while certain of the interpretations will probably be questioned by historians." R. A. B.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 23 '44 450w

"Material often diffusely presented and loosely concluded, representing a rather dated viewpoint."

Kirkus 12:268 Je 15 '44 130w

"It is on the political and psychological side that difficulties seem likely to arise in what would amount to an armed government of the world for an indefinite period by three paramount powers. . . Unless it is subscribed to by all others as well as the paramount powers, the system of law and equity which Mr. Palmer outlines might well come to be resented by the nonparticipating states as intolerable tyranny. In addition, the author seems inclined to brush aside too lightly some of the potential differences between the United States and the Soviet Union and between Great Britain and the Soviet Union." W. H. Chamberlin

N Y Times p25 S 10 '44 550w

Springf'd Republican p8 O 10 '44 400w

"Wisps of history, philosophy and personal experience are so delightfully prolific on the writer's tree that one scarcely knows whether the timber or the shade is most valuable. 'It Can Be Done' is good thinking made more palatable by expert seasoning." G. R. Wilson

+ Weekly Book Review p6 S 3 '44 550w

PALMER, H. MARION. Surprise package. See Disney, W.

PALMER, MRS WINTHROP (BUSHNELL). 272 Maple avenue. 240p $2.50 Harbinger

44-5100

"A story of stormy family life interwoven with the author's sharp opinions on and remedies for certain American business practices." Springf'd Republican

Book Week p10 Je 18 '44 80w

"Mrs Palmer's novel enables her to attack certain phases and institutions of American life, and to prescribe her rather advanced (though not unfamiliar remedies). . . One would like to know more about the family, for its members are drawn strongly and consistently; but this is mainly the story of business and it is in the outcome of the battle within management that the reader will find the paramount interest." M. D.

Springf'd Republican p4d Je 25 '44 330w

PANE, REMIGIO UGO. English translations from the Spanish, 1484-1943; a bibliography. 218p $2.50 Rutgers univ. press

016.86 Spanish literature—Translations into English—Bibliography 44-42659

"Over 2500 entries list nearly all translations of peninsular Spanish literature and history from 1484 to 1943. The list is arranged alphabetically by author and includes English editors of anthologies; translators are indexed separately. Translation of selections and single poems, as well as of whole works, are listed." Booklist

Booklist 41:101 D 1 '44

"This is a welcome addition to the meager bibliographical material available on the subject. Mr. Pane's bibliography covers a longer period of time and contains more entries than any other in the field." A. B. Adams

+ Library J 69:878 O 15 '44 750w

PANETTA, GEORGE. We ride a white donkey. 186p $2 Harcourt

44-7510

Hilarious sketches dealing with the activities of a family of Italians living in East side Manhattan.

Reviewed by Marion Strobel

Book Week p4 Ag 27 '44 500w

Kirkus 12:325 Ag 1 '44 150w

"No other writer, to our knowledge, has presented as frank and as true a picture of the poor Italian family in New York as Mr. Panetta does here." Michael Hill

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 27 '44 400w

"These matters are related in a guileless, deadpan tone, and, provided you can take dialect in large doses, the chances are you'll find it quite entertaining. The white donkey is not one of the characters; he is merely part of one of those cryptic Calabrian sayings."

+ — New Yorker 20:63 Ag 26 '44 130w

Reviewed by Phil Stong

Sat R of Lit 27:10 Ag 19 '44 320w

Time 44:96 Ag 28 '44 50w

"The whole book is fairly good, fairly clean fun. The Panetta appetite for life, capacity for sorrow and birth rate are part of post-war Manhattan." Ernestine Evans

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Ag 27 '44 650w

Wis Lib Bul 40:147 N '44

PANIKKAR, KAVALAM MADHAVA. The future of south-east Asia. 126p $1.75; to members $1.40 Inst. of Pacific relations; $1.75 Macmillan [5s Allen, G]

950 East (Far East). Asia—Politics. World war, 1939—Territorial questions 43-17296

For descriptive note see Annual for 1943.

"In spite of many inaccuracies, this little volume presents one of the most stimulating and suggestive statements on the problems and politics of this important region which has yet appeared." Amry Vandenbosch

+ — Am Pol Sci R 38:406 Ap '44 400w

"According to the reviewer's estimate, this small volume gives viewpoints of the peoples of Asia in general regarding the future of southeast Asia; and thus it is the most important book so far published on the subject. It is to be hoped that experts as well as laymen interested in the future of southeast Asia will give special attention to this work." Taraknath Das

+ Ann Am Acad 233:218 My '44 900w

Booklist 40:249 Mr 15 '44

"Mr. Panikkar believes that a politically independent India should form the centerpiece of an integrated Southeast Asia after the war. . . The proposal has many new features and deserves close study by all who are looking for trends toward postwar security on a global scale." H. J. S.

Christian Science Monitor p12 Mr 25 '44 120w

Current Hist 6:69 Ja '44 70w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 22:503 Ap '44 30w

"We may not be able to grasp all the plans of the author. But he makes us understand the magnitude and complexities of the problems of post-war South-East Asia—in a way that will be hard for us to forget." W. E. Lowther

+ N Y Times p17 F 27 '44 500w

"In some respects some readers may feel that Mr. Panikkar hops a little too lightly over his obstacles, while his touch on certain parts of the whole problem is not always too sure. But his book is welcome and deserves to be seriously studied. For it is an authentic endeavor made by an able Indian mind to look into the future of a region likely to be of crucial importance in world politics." A. F. Whyte

+ — Pacific Affairs 17:109 Mr '44 490w

Reviewed by Nathaniel Peffer

Pol Sci Q 59:287 Je '44 180w

"While the specialist on the area will think of a hundred queries he would like to raise and will also mark a fair number of errors of detail and interpretation, both he and the general reader will find this staunch little volume a fresh and sharply stimulating antidote to the vague and ambiguous mass of printed material on colonial issues. It cuts to the roots of the main problem, and lays bare the base of controversy. K. M. Panikkar, an Indian, comes to his subject well prepared." Raymond Kennedy

+ Yale R n s 33:555 spring '44 1050w

PANNELL, ERNEST VINCENT. Magnesium, its production and use. 137p $4 (12s 6d) Pitman

669.7 Magnesium 44-101

"Practical book on production and fabrication of magnesium with stress on engineering and industrial aspects by a British metallurgical engineer. Alloys, their heat treatment, casting, working, corrosion and protective measures and their industrial application. Mostly British and German experiences cited." Library J

"Regardless of [certain] criticisms, [this] is a book which should be in the library of companies and individuals interested in light metals. Throughout the entire contents of the volume are points of pertinent information representing the condensation of practical discussions gleaned from the literature and organized from industry through 1941. In an industry so completely new and dynamic as magnesium, it would be quite impossible to bring all current beliefs, theories, and practices to date in any volume." A. J. Boyle

+ — Chem & Eng N 22:1422 Ag 25 '44 800w

Reviewed by S. D. Kirkpatrick

Chem & Met Eng 51:189 Jl '44 200w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 69:700 S 1 '44 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:7 Ja '44

PANNELL, LUCILLE, and HENRY, RALPH. Chuggety-chug; il. by Katherine Evans. $1 Follett

Toy-book which consists of a picture train between book covers. The train opens out to a length of several feet and stands up. Simple text is printed on each section. For kindergarten age.

"From engine to caboose, Chuggety-Chug is a success." P. A. Whitney

+ Book Week p10 S 24 '44 150w

"Another book about a train that will delight the very youngest."

+ Kirkus 12:449 O 1 '44 70w

"This is a toy item that will not do for general circulation but may be used as display

PANNELL, LUCILLE—Continued
material. . . Nothing out of the ordinary, of course, but might be of value in primary classroom collections." S. J. Johnson
Library J 69:886 O 15 '44 40w

Reviewed by L. M. Palmer
N Y Times p18 N 12 '44 50w
Weekly Book Review p34 N 12 '44 100w

PARES, SIR BERNARD. History of Russia. 4th ed rev 575p maps $4.75 Knopf
947 Russia—History 44-7324

"Compact history of the Russians from the early Middle Ages to 1944, with special attention to the living conditions of the people. In this edition more space is given to the soviet period, with a short account of the war years." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1926.

Booklist 41:92 N 15 '44

"As good a one-volume history of Russia as there is in print."
+ New Yorker 20:82 S 23 '44 50w

"Since 550-odd pages obviously afford too little space for a full treatment of the long history of a country like Russia, Sir Bernard might have produced a more valuable book by giving attention to synthesis and evaluation of the data he has gathered together. The style is definitely sluggish." Donald Derby
Springf'd Republican p8 N 16 '44 280w

PARES, SIR BERNARD. Russia and the peace. 293p $2.50 Macmillan
947.084 Russia. World war, 1939—Russia 44-5922

"Among interpreters of Russia to the English-speaking world, Sir Bernard Pares holds a unique position. . . He knew Imperial Russia; he knows Soviet Russia. . . What Sir Bernard has done, in what he himself refers to as a pendant to his former studies of Russia is to suggest possible answers to the questions that may arise in regard to the settlement of peace. There are brief chapters upon such basic phases of the Soviet government's internal policy as 'Russia and Communism,' 'Russia and Religion,' and 'Settlement of the Multinational Question,' and upon almost every issue involving Russia's relations with her neighbors and the other great powers. The approach is in almost every instance historical." Weekly Book Review

"Whether philosophers should be kings, as Plato hoped, is doubtful. But this small volume leaves no doubt that historians ought to be (and can be) statesmen." F. L. Schuman
+ Am Pol Sci R 38:1017 O '44 490w

"The reader is urged to consult the book, with a promise of the reviewer that he will be fully rewarded for his time. It is lucidly written, intelligently interpreted, and each subject touched should be of interest to every public minded citizen who is aware of the forthcoming issues before all of us." A. G. Mazour
+ Ann Am Acad 237:205 Ja '45 400w

"He writes the clear, sensible English of which so many British scholars are the masters. In dealing with controversial questions, he manages to convey a sufficient understanding of the background without getting his readers tangled up in dates, maps and treaties. Having held aloof from political struggles from the beginning, Sir Bernard has no partisan ax to grind. For the Russian people, among whom he lived many years before the revolution, he has a profound affection." William Card
+ Book Week p4 Jl 30 '44 360w
Booklist 41:17 S '44

"An excellent and useful book. It does not give many answers, but it gives the knowledge in the light of which the answers must be judged." G. M. A. Grube
+ Canadian Forum 24:188 N '44 550w

"Sir Bernard's approach to his subject is that of a scholar and a historian, not of a politician or a journalist. It is only natural, therefore, that his book should dwell on the background of the current problems rather than on their present intricacies and possibilities of solution. To a certain extent, therefore, the title of the book is misleading and it must also be stated that 'Russia and the Peace' in parts appears to be merely a rehash of Pares' earlier books on Russia. But apart from these minor defects, it certainly is an enlightening and a sound book." J. J.
+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 7 '44 550w

"Sir Bernard Pares is quite impressive in what he says, but does he say all that must be said? Certainly, he does not completely omit the dark side of the Soviet past. He criticizes severely the ambiguous policies of the Soviet régime. But he somewhat idealizes Stalin. The purges of 1936-1938 are not mentioned; the forced land collectivization is not discussed; there are no chapters on the secret police and the concentration camps, on the totalitarian aspects, of Stalin's régime. These omissions must be regretted because they will defeat somewhat the purpose of the book. Only complete frankness, not tactful silence about disagreeable facts, can help to win the right attitude toward Soviet Russia." Waldemar Gurian
+ — Commonweal 40:306 Jl 14 '44 420w
Current Hist 7:133 Ag '44 90w
Foreign Affairs 23:13 O '44 30w

"A sound book, and a useful one."
+ Kirkus 12:87 F 15 '44 170w

"Distinguished British scholar, one of the world's leading experts on Russia, whose historical works have been widely read in this country, discusses here some present-day problems of Soviet Union without partisanship. Book . . . should help in destroying some prejudices about Stalin's aims and pave way for sober appraisal of Russia's future role in world affairs. . . Recommended for public and college libraries." F. E. Hirsch
+ Library J 69:202 Mr 1 '44 130w

"A model of concise, pertinent, readable information. It is not an encyclopedia of Russian history and culture: it gives the educated reader exactly what he wants to know about Russia as a factor in world politics." Albert Guerard
+ New Repub 111:163 Ag 7 '44 420w

"A typically English book, urbane, shrewd and considerate—a personal account of rambling and not very well organized recollections." Hans Kohn
+ — N Y Times p4 Jl 9 '44 1000w

"Sir Bernard knows his subject intimately, maintains a pleasant balance between sympathy and sanity, and has a way of putting blocks of conventional phrases together so that they read like literate prose. Those who have kept up with Russian developments, however, are not likely to come across anything new in these pages, and, while the book is a good enough introduction to Russia the author might have written a much better one had he worked more thoroughly and on a smaller scale."
New Yorker 20:71 Jl 15 '44 150w

Reviewed by O. V. Field
Pacific Affairs 17:366 S '44 350w

"The work covers such a wide field that some subjects are inevitably treated in rather sketchy and cursory fashion. However, there are some useful sidelights on Russian history, some shrewd comments on Russian character and an up-to-date description of the attitude of Russian emigrants, along with the material bearing directly on Russia's attitude toward the peace." W. H. Chamberlin
+ Pol Sci Q 59:604 D '44 1350w

"Sir Bernard's essays tell of course, not the whole story of the new U.S.S.R. He does not say much about the crucial problem of her present and future relations to China. And some readers will find his general appraisal sometimes too rosy and optimistic. I don't think it is. At any rate, Sir Bernard has given us a great human interest story about 175 million neighbors in our own backyard. Twenty-five years hence they might number

250 million. Which is something to ponder about." H. W. Weigert

+ Sat R of Lit 28:37 Jl 22 '44 950w

"Abstract truth is very well in its place, but Sir Bernard has kept it there when what it really needs in this case is to be shouted from the housetops. This reviewer feels that true understanding of the people and the politics of our hammer-and-sickle allies is more effectively accomplished by the warmly human documents of Maurice Hindus." Edrie Van Dore

Springf'd Republican p10 Ag 11 '44 280w

Reviewed by F. R. Dulles

Weekly Book Review p3 Jl 9 '44 1250w

Wis Lib Bul 40:143 N '44

PARKER, CHARLES M. Steel in action. (Science for war and peace ser) 221p maps $2.50 Cattell

672 Steel. Steel industry and trade 44-40033

"In a brief introductory chapter, the spotlight is focussed upon the importance of steel in our daily life. Then the history of the use of iron and steel is quickly sketched to pave the way for a description of the many varieties of steel and the various processes of manufacture that are used today. The distribution of the essential mineral resources and the struggle for their control are discussed with rare discernment. International trade in iron and steel, as well as the wartime expansion of the American steel industry, receives full treatment, and the role of steel in the war is portrayed with due recognition of the needs of the Axis Powers as well as those of the United Nations. The final chapter suggests some of the ways in which steel is destined to play its part in the better world of the future." Scientific Bk Club R

Booklist 40:229 Mr 1 '44

N Y New Tech Bks 29:7 Ja '44

Reviewed by D. R. James

N Y Times p10 Ja 23 '44 360w

"Mr. Parker is well qualified to speak with authority in his chosen field. His selection of relevant material shows excellent judgment, and his style of presentation is fluent and interesting."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 15:2 Ja '44 300w

Reviewed by P. N. Case

Springf'd Republican p8 Mr 2 '44 270w

PARKER, MRS DOROTHY (ROTHSCHILD). Dorothy Parker; with an introd. by W. Somerset Maugham. (Viking portable lib) 544p $2 Viking

818 44-4169

An anthology of the writings of Dorothy Parker, in prose and verse. Among the short stories are five which have never before been published in book form. Index of poem titles and first lines.

"Have these stories as much endurance as Katherine Mansfield's? It is hard to say. We who reread them today do so with a sense of recognition other readers will not possess. That, we say, is the way New York looked and felt in the twenties and early thirties. Yes, that's the way people talked. The observation—especially of women—is as sharp as a scalpel, and the loneliness in the city, the inability of her people to get through to each other, is beautifully conveyed. But as we see the work in toto, with its laughter, its wit, its silly sophistication, and its heartburn, we realize that there are limitations, the chief of them being a lack of depth and a lack of cordiality." Edward Weeks

+ — Atlantic 174:125 Jl '44 480w

Reviewed by Sterling North

Book Week p2 My 21 '44 500w

Booklist 40:353 Je 15 '44

"One critic is quoted as saying, 'I can imagine no more intoxicating experience than to be reading Dorothy Parker for the first time'. I disagree. For my part, it is much more intoxicating to read her for the second and third and fourth time and still find no shadow of disappointment."

+ Kirkus 12:202 My 1 '44 80w

Reviewed by John O'Hara

+ N Y Times p5 My 28 '44 1150w

"This collected volume has a value derived from rarity—a rarity like that of steel penknives, good erasers, and real canned sardines, articles of which the supply has almost given out and of which one is only now beginning to be aware of how excellent the quality was. It seems to me, though I shall name no names, that it has been one of the features of this later time that it produces imitation books. There are things of which one cannot really say that they are either good books or bad books; they are really not books at all. When one has bought them, one has only got paper and print. When one has bought Dorothy Parker, however, one has really got a book." Edmund Wilson

+ New Yorker 20:75 My 20 '44 1150w

"Admirers of Dorothy Parker's poetry will rejoice at discovering that all the poems in 'Not So Deep as a Well' are included as an extra dividend in reading pleasure. One is filled with envy of those fortunate few who will read Dorothy Parker for the first time. There is, however, for her devotees, comfort in the shock of recognition at finding here so many favorites of long standing." E. M. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d My 21 '44 220w

"This Dorothy Parker collection of collections, one of her stories, the other of her poems, with some material not previously available in book form, proves little that is literary news except, perhaps that this author's work can be had in such an extremely pleasant, convenient volume. It is small enough to be carried or wedged almost anywhere, to be concealed even when it is open, and it looks as though it would last, in both senses of the word." Kenneth Fearing

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Je 11 '44 550w

PARKER, HAROLD TALBOT. Three Napoleonic battles. 225p maps $3 Duke univ. press [18s Cambridge]

944.05 France—History, Military. Napoléon I, emperor of the French 44-5068

These three historical essays "portray Napoleon at the height of his power (Friedland), in his first serious personal check (Aspern-Essling), and in final defeat (Waterloo)." (Pref) Index.

"Only a specialist in Napoleonic history could criticize the factual content of this heavily footnoted work, and I am by no means such a specialist. I can only say that the writer's style is vigorous and readable, that his presentation of his material is clear and well articulated." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 Je 25 '44 180w

Current Hist 7:54 Jl '44 40w

"The general reader will find the book extremely impressive, thanks to its logic and order. The military student, particularly one studying the attributes of commanders, will find the book of very great use."

+ New Repub 110:858 Je 26 '44 150w

PARKER, KAY PETERSON. What and whatnot; a picture story of art. 61p $2 Houghton

709 Art—Juvenile literature 44-8689

Story of the development of art and architecture, shown in descriptive text and black and white drawings. In demonstrating how a house was designed in 1880, Uncle Andrew, a modern architect, goes back to primitive days and shows his nephew and niece where the different parts of their grandmother's house originated.

"This is a truly handsome book and a very worthwhile one, since it serves as an introduction to the history of art. . . I feel that this is a book which will do better in the hands of an adult who explains the pictures to the young person. The text, though full of information, and carrying a thread of story, is slow reading. For an art teacher the book should be especially useful, and, of course, you can't look at the many beautiful pictures without learning something of the history of art." P. A. Whitney

PARKER, K. P.—Continued
+ Book Week p14 N 12 '44 180w

"Artistically inclined children will get a lot about the 'What-Not' but not so much about the 'What' in this amazingly condensed survey of art from the cave paintings of the stone age down to the present day. . . Ingenious, well pictured and slyly humorous."
+ Cath World 160:282 D '44 80w

"An admirable attack on eclecticism in architecture and a plea for contemporary design. Done with a sense of humor." H. L. Binsse
+ Commonweal 41:129 N 17 '44 20w

"Planned to make children conscious of the development of architecture in this country, this story will be most effective if read under direction, or with an older person."
Horn Bk 20:493 N '44 70w

"A fine piece of bookmaking, beautiful reproductions of drawings which decorate—and illustrate—each page, each period. List of sources of works of art incorporated in pictures gives added educational value. An ingenious scheme—a bit too complex in development."
+ — Kirkus 12:433 S 15 '44 170w

Reviewed by Leota Herren
Library J 69:1050 D 1 '44 70w

Sat R of Lit 27:47 N 11 '44 20w

"Whatever you call this book, unusual must be one of the adjectives; histories of art for young people have seldom gone at the subject in this way and seldom addressed children so young."
Weekly Book Review p38 N 12 '44 450w

PARKER, ROBERT B. Headquarters Budapest. 345p $3 Farrar

949.6 Balkan states. World war, 1939—Balkan states 44-5344

Personal reminiscences of a foreign correspondent in Eastern Europe from 1938 to the present time. Mr Parker moves from Budapest to Bucharest to Istanbul, with a great many interesting side excursions, and discusses both the war and the involved political situation in the Balkan peninsula. Index.

"The concluding paragraph reveals why this is an important book. Bob Parker is an able reporter and he tells vividly about his experiences during those hectic four or five years when Hitler, first 'peacefully,' and later by force of arms, was creating his 'Lebensraum' in the Balkans. . . Parker's book is informative and most readable. One may learn a great deal from it, and its conversational style holds the interest throughout." M. W. Fodor
+ Book Week p3 Je 25 '44 450w

Booklist 40:387 Jl 15 '44

Christian Science Monitor p12 Jl 8 '44 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 Je '44

"Colorful, vivid mirroring of recent history that is thoroughly readable."
+ Kirkus 12:211 My 1 '44 190w

"Such flaws are all the more regrettable since in general Mr. Parker's political thinking is perceptive and clear. He has a lively style and weaves many delightful and witty stories into the accounts of his innumerable interviews. The book has the merits of its author; its failings are in part the result of that unfortunate assumption that a hasty journalistic report changes into a book if it is printed in octavo size." Rustem Vambery
+ — Nation 159:272 S 2 '44 900w

"Although the author is occasionally naïve in his evaluation of political events, his closeness to the scene of action makes his book lively and readable."
+ — New Repub 111:317 S 11 '44 150w

"Perhaps Mr. Parker has his eye on the film rights; his portrait of himself suggests Hollywood's conception of the foreign correspondent. Unfortunately, hunched beside the driver of an open car, roaring toward the Jablonica Pass to check on German invasion plans, hopping the Orient Express to get the low-down on King Carol, dining in dim, exotic restaurants with—or sometimes just near—low-voiced diplomats engaged in hatching desperate plots, Mr. Parker is not convincing. One doesn't feel comfortable with a man who has so many answers, so neatly packaged." Kendall Foss
— N Y Times p7 Je 18 '44 1050w

" 'Headquarters Budapest' presents a fascinating-war-time close-up of one of the most important and colorful regions in the world, Central Europe and the Balkans. . . Robert Parker does a top-notch job in introducing the average American reader to Central Europe and the Balkans of World War II." H. C. Wolfe
+ Sat R of Lit 27:8 Jl 8 '44 1100w

" 'Headquarters Budapest' is a reporter's report on the Balkans. It records no strong feelings, few personal reactions and no great sympathy for the victims of Nazis or of the evil leaders within each country. It is a calm, sometimes too calm, setting down of facts. But it is a book which will add much to the understanding of that corner of the world where, as Mr. Parker says, two world wars have started and where a third may already be spawning. Besides that, it is sprightly reading." Robert St. John
+ Weekly Book Review p4 Je 18 '44 1050w

PARRISH, ROBERT HARKNESS. For magicians only; a guide to the art of mystifying; with pertinent diagrams and impertinent decorations by Doris Holley Peters. 121p $2; pa $1 Ackerman

793.8 Conjuring 44-40115

Explains the mechanics of some thirty tricks of magic, which can be performed without elaborate equipment. Contents: Warning: the fun of magic; The way it looks and the way it is; The old ways and the new; The first trick; After-dinner magic; Card magic with the greatest of ease; How to be psychic; Manipulating many things; Larger tricks; A magic show.

Booklist 40:337 Je 1 '44

"Written in a breezy, entertaining style and illustrated in the same vein. . . The explanations, unlike those in some books on magic, are remarkably clear and explicit and the format of the book is unusual. Mr Parrish's material on the new methods in magic as contrasted to the older school, the 'grand style,' is outstanding." F. G. Bratton
+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 4 '44 170w

PARRY, ALBERT. Russian cavalcade; a military record. 334p il $3.50 Washburn

947 Russia—History, Military. World war, 1939—Russia 44-406

"A short military history of Russia. Beginning with Gottlieb Heinrich Tottleben, the Saxon soldier who was refused a general's commission by Frederick the Great and then went over to the Russians to lead their armies in a successful march on Berlin, it takes up most of the major Russian military figures and ends with Stalin and the Red Army." (New Yorker) Index.

"Parry has dug up a wealth of little-known material." Sterling North
+ Book Week p2 F 6 '44 450w

Cath World 158:603 Mr '44 90w

"It is impossible to paint a portrait of the Red Army without some reference to the Soviet people and to Soviet administrative policies and procedures, yet this book consistently avoids reference to socialism in any of its constructive phases. . . Every reference to Stalin is derogatory. This potboiler may provide a pleasant evening's topical diversion but as a military record it is as unsatisfactory as a soufflé made of good materials and thoroughly spiced which, through the cook's lack of skill, has failed to rise." W. H. Melish
— + Churchman 158:19 Mr 1 '44 300w

Commonweal 39:424 F 11 '44 600w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 22:500 Ap '44 20w

"Readable, timely and informative book. . . Recommended for libraries which are following current events." F. L. D. Goodrich
+ Library J 68:1049 D 15 '43 110w

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin
N Y Times p8 F 20 '44 1050w

"As elementary as a McGuffey primer and written in much the same breath-taking style, but the author has assembled a lot of material that has hitherto been scattered all over the place."
+ — New Yorker 19:83 F 5 '44 110w

Reviewed by Donald Armstrong
Sat R of Lit 27:11 F 19 '44 1000w

"The man who is bewildered when headlines scream Russian victories and account after account depicts the 'master race' falling back before the onslaught of red armies everywhere should place 'Russian Cavalcade' on his reading list. This military study by Albert Parry helps Americans to understand the people and strategy which made possible the miracle of Stalingrad." E. W. K.
+ Springf'd Republican p6 F 7 '44 550w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
Survey G 33:256 My '44 150w

Reviewed by B. D. Wolfe
Weekly Book Review p5 F 13 '44 850w

PARSONS, MRS ALICE (BEAL). The mountain. 219p $2.50 Dutton

818 Country life 44-503

Some twenty years ago the author bought a house and several acres of land on an elevation of land overlooking the Hudson. To the natives the elevation was known as "the mountain," and so the mountain it became for Mrs Parsons too. These are her recollections of her life, her neighbors, the view, city people, guests, village politics, and country living in general. Parts of this book have been printed in the New Yorker, or other magazines.

Booklist 40:209 F 15 '44

Christian Science Monitor p12 Mr 18 '44 380w

Cleveland Open Shelf p2 Ja '44

Kirkus 12:41 Ja 15 '44 110w

"Recommended for large libraries." E. L. Lewis
Library J 69:71 Ja 15 '44 70w

"There are discussions of birds, Northern Lights, Rockland County politics, religion and a hundred and one other topics, all treated with good humor and good sense. The book has no continuity and no suspense—but it is a hard one to put down just the same." Charlotte Dean
+ N Y Times p12 Ja 30 '44 420w

"'The Mountain,' you see, is one of those books whose subject matter defies formal classification and whose charm depends partly, of course, on the style of its writing, but almost more on the intimate relationship the author manages to establish between you and her from the start. When you finish it you feel almost as if you had been the week-end guest of a delightful hostess." Richie Mabon
+ Sat R of Lit 27:35 F 5 '44 650w

"The book resembles somewhat Marjorie Rawlings's 'Cross Creek.' It too is the story of a household in an isolated spot, but it doesn't pretend to have the vim and excitement of the Florida volume. However, the reader is quite content with the more peaceful picture Mrs Parsons presents, close to the comforting things of earth." M. D.
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 30 '44 350w

"It is an engaging little volume, filled with the rich stuff of experience culled from the trivia of daily life. . . A warm current of humor and philosophy carries the book gently into the reader's regard." Rose Feld
+ Weekly Book Review p3 Ja 23 '44 600w

PARSONS, LOUELLA (OETTINGER) (MRS H. W. MARTIN). Gay illiterate. 194p $2 Doubleday

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Moving pictures 44-501

Autobiography of the intrepid Hollywood reporter and columnist, in which she explains some of her methods of assembling and publishing her gossip columns.

"One gets the idea quite definitely that the lady can take care of herself in a fight or a frolic and relate either amusingly." H. J. Murdock
Book Week p2 Ja 16 '44 360w

"'The Gay Illiterate' is generally a testimonial banquet to Mrs. Parsons and her immediate family, with a few close friends of the family—Marion Davies, William R. Hearst and Bebe Daniels—getting some good plugs in that unbelievable style Mrs. Parsons calls chatting." Manny Farber
— New Repub 110:53 Ja 10 '44 420w

"That Miss Parsons sees no discrepancy between the heroine of this story and the little Louella of her autobiography is probably no stranger, after all, than the Gilbert and Sullivanesque fact that when 'the coster's finished jumping on his mother he loves to lie a-basking in the sun.' For purposes of general amusement, however, one wishes that Miss Parsons had written more freely and fully about her jumping and a little less about her basking in the sun." F. S. Nugent
N Y Times p6 Ja 9 '44 800w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 19 '44 60w

Weekly Book Review p10 F 13 '44 270w

PARTCH, VIRGIL FRANKLIN (VIP, pseud). It's hot in here; ed. by Gurney Williams [cartoons]. 80p $1 McBride

741.5 Caricatures and cartoons. Humor, Pictorial 44-6361

Collection of VIP's cartoons, most of which have already appeared in Collier's. There is an introduction by Kyle Crichton.

"While some of Partch's characters are potential inmates of padded cells, there is no psychiatry in Partch's work itself. His drawings are completely his own, usually grotesquely but strikingly distorted, most often entirely wacky, now and then filled with hilarious satire, social, military and what have you. His cartoons are to be looked at and enjoyed, whatever your mood, not to be probed and examined for deep hidden meanings." August Derleth
+ Book Week p13 My 21 '44 220w

Kirkus 12:157 Ap 1 '44 60w

"Partch must be swallowed whole, or left severely alone. The fact that we can swallow him at all and live to digest Steig is our national secret weapon. Our own brand of strength-through-joy training builds up a healthy national resistance to shock, which means despair to our enemies—and to some of our allies too." Isabelle Mallet
N Y Times p5 Je 18 '44 160w

Springf'd Republican p4d My 28 '44 110w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
+ Weekly Book Review p18 My 28 '44 350w

PATERSON, WILLIAM B., ed. Cornell red book of marine engineering; questions and answers. 492p il $3.50 Cornell maritime

621.12 Marine engineering 44-6472

"Many problems with solutions. Will be useful as a refresher course or for preparation for license examination or raise of grade. Among subjects covered are reciprocating engines, turbines, boilers, Diesels, generators, motors, refrigeration, safety at sea and general rules and regulations." Library J

PATERSON, W. B.—Continued
Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 69:700 S 1 '44 50w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:45 Jl '44

"The book will be particularly helpful in preparing for license examinations." James Stokley
+ Weekly Book Review p19 Ag 13 '44 50w

PATRICK, REMBERT WALLACE. Jefferson Davis and his cabinet. 401p $3.75 La. state univ. press

973.716 Confederate States of America. Davis, Jefferson 44-9637

"In this work all the members of the Confederate administration pass in review. Here are Toombs, Hunter, Walker, Randolph, Seddon, Breckinridge, Benjamin, Memminger, Trenholm, Mallory, Reagan, Bragg, Watts, and George Davis. They are portrayed not only as secretaries, but also as individuals in the war society of Montgomery and Richmond. . . This study of the Cabinet is based on manuscript collections, printed documents, reminiscences, and newspapers as well as the important secondary works." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 N 26 '44 180w
Booklist 41:105 D 1 '44
— Christian Century 61:1258 N 1 '44 150w

"This is the first adequate study of President Davis and his Cabinet that has been made. Burton J. Hendrick's able book, 'Statesmen of the Lost Cause,' was concerned chiefly with foreign policy. Dr. Patrick's well-integrated volume is a valuable addition to our knowledge of Confederate statecraft." Virginius Dabney
+ N Y Times p6 Ja 21 '45 500w

"The whole story has not been told by Mr. Patrick and could not be compassed in a single volume; but he has written well and has selected wisely from the materials. He has used his sources, particularly the contemporary newspapers and magazines, with so much skill that one hopes this fine first book will be followed by others in the same field. As a historical writer, Mr. Patrick is a man to keep in mind." D. S. Freeman
+ Sat R of Lit 27:12 O 21 '44 650w

"For a book enlarged from a doctoral dissertation Mr. Patrick has done well indeed. He should not be criticized unduly for a number of minor factual errors, nor for some categorical statements that need revision. . . We hope that Mr. Patrick can later add a needed treatment of that conscientious marplot of the Confederacy, Vice-President Alexander H. Stephens." R. D. Meade
+ — Weekly Book Review p6 D 31 '44 950w

PATTERSON, SAMUEL HOWARD. Social aspects of industry; a survey of labor problems. 3d ed 536p map $3 McGraw

331 Labor and laboring classes—U.S. U.S.—Industries. U.S.—Social conditions. U.S.—Economic conditions 43-3716

"In this new edition of a standard and probably widely used textbook, Dr. Patterson has reworked his entire volume. Not only does it bring the discussion up to contemporary events, but it adds a measure of detachment and balanced judgment in keeping with the trends of the social sciences in recent years." (Am Soc R) For earlier editions see Book Review Digest 1930, 1935.

"The book is a good text for college or secondary school classes concerned with presenting a general course in social-economic problems. . . The author . . . writes authoritatively on social-economic analysis. In his review of labor history he but repeats and summarizes what other writers have presented more fully. In his interpretation of social movements, moreover, in the reviewer's opinion, the presentation in this, as in earlier editions, is unsatisfactory, lacking depth and particular insight." Mildred Fairchild
+ — Am Soc R 9:453 Ag '44 250w

"The book is devoid of sociology and political science and all but devoid of economics. Its unity is the unity of a series of artificial patterns of organization that are so ever present that it is painful to read. There is no analytical woof through which the warp threads of the descriptive materials can be drawn." M. J. Bowman
— J Pol Econ 52:186 Je '44 1550w

PAULI, HERTHA ERNESTINE. Story of the Christmas tree; il. by William Wiesner. 69p $2 Houghton
44-9330

Story of the first Christmas trees in America, with glimpses of Christmas tree customs in other lands. The six stories are for grades four to seven.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p43 D 3 '44 310w
Booklist 41:111 D 1 '44

"Despite some of the charming stories Pastor Schwan discovers in his efforts to justify his use of a Christmas tree, this book is not for our children, for the justification hinges on the approval of Martin Luther and the real meaning of Christmas is not grasped."
Cath World 160:279 D '44 50w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christmas Science Monitor p4 D 14 '44 100w

"With bright, cheerful pictures this story of a loved custom makes an unusual Christmas book."
+ Horn Bk 20:473 N '44 110w
Kirkus 12:510 N 1 '44 130w

"The delightfully written story gives the history of the Christmas Tree in Europe. Full-color illustrations by William Wiesner add greatly to spirit of the story. Will delight all ages." Margaret Miller
+ Library J 69:1104 D 15 '44 70w

"The author has written with enthusiasm, but her style is heavy-footed and she has chosen to tell her story in such a complicated fashion that few children will have the patience to follow the narrative to the end." A. T. Eaton
— + N Y Times p26 D 3 '44 120w

Reviewed by Diane Pease
Springf'd Republican p4d N 12 '44 80w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p5 D 24 '44 200w
Wis Lib Bul 40:162 D '44

PAULLIN, ELLEN. This little boy went to kindergarten; pictures by Elizabeth Ripley. [39p] $1.25 Oxford 44-7595

Picture-story book about a little boy who wore red overalls and went to kindergarten. A sample day at school is the subject. For ages three to six.

"There has not been a wholly successful kindergarten story yet,—that I have seen—and this isn't right either. In the first place, the pictures in three colors by Elizabeth Ripley are incredibly bad. In the second place, the text, while good, is over-crowded with incident, and—to a very small child—would be confusing."
— + Kirkus 12:427 S 15 '44 70w

"Young children will enjoy the bright colorful pictures, in spite of the fact that they are somewhat distorted. Not a necessary item, but it may fill a need for very simple picture books." D. M. MacDonald
Library J 69:886 O 15 '44 40w

"Should you know a very little boy who doesn't like the idea of going to kindergarten, read him this, letting him look over the jolly colored pictures, and you can't keep him from one. It is told with chuckling intimacy that makes even an older person feel as if he were there." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p5 O 29 '44 150w
Wis Lib Bul 40:149 N '44

PAULY, KARL B. Bricker of Ohio; the man and his record. 215p $2 Putnam

B or 92 Bricker, John William. Campaign literature, 1944 44-3247

Biography of the man who has been three times governor of Ohio and is the Republican candidate for the vice-presidency. The book contains the story of his youth, the record of his public service, and an estimate of his character. The author is an Ohio newspaper man.

"The Bricker book sounds like a Fourth of July oration, including birth in a log cabin, the long walk to the little red schoolhouse, and how to get ahead by joining the right law firm. . . [Its] balance sheet will leave readers as cold as the page of a well-kept ledger." Sterling North

— Book Week p2 Ap 9 '44 350w

Booklist 40:303 My 1 '44

"The book is painful reading, but it should be read thoughtfully. For it reveals what mediocre and provincial, though honest, leadership some Republicans propose to give our country in the midst of global bloodshed. Mr. Pauly damns his hero with such irrelevant and picayune praise that people aware of the world's plight will lay his book down thinking they'd as soon vote for Mickey Mouse as for Bricker for the Presidency this fall." Volta Torrey

Nation 158:454 Ap 15 '44 360w

Reviewed by H. W. Baehr

Weekly Book Review p14 Ap 30 '44 430w

PAUST, GILBERT HARRY. Here's how to fly. 264p il $2.50 Essential bks.

629.13 Aeronautics 44-8191

"An explanation in popular terms of the principles of flight, civil air regulations, maps and piloting, meteorology and weather forecasting, aircraft engines, load factors in stress calculations, and finally, how to use a parachute if the need arises. Written for the aviation student preparing for examinations for private pilot certificate. A series of test questions is included, similar to those set by the Civil Aeronautics Authority." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by G. A. Scheuer

Book Week p8 S 10 '44 250w

N Y New Tech Bks 29:39 Jl '44

PAUST, GILBERT HARRY, and LANCELOT, MILTON. Fighting wings [a pictorial history of aerial combat]. 256p $2.75 Essential bks.

940.544 European war, 1914-1918—Aerial operations. World war, 1939—Aerial operations. Aeronautics—Pictorial works 44-40215

Pictorial record of aerial warfare from the time of World war I to the present, with accompanying text. No index.

Booklist 41:134 Ja 1 '45

Library J 70:34 Ja 1 '45 50w

"A book rich in the remarkable action pictures of the war now raging. Some of these will be familiar to many readers. . . There are many more, equally breath-taking but less well known. . . The text is written from an extensive knowledge of the subject, although non-American readers might question whether the superiority of American types over all others is always as pronounced as the authors seem to think." F. S. Adams

+ N Y Times p9 D 31 '44 550w

"The photographs are not always as clear as they could be and the text gets fancy at times but it is a good survey of the development of military aviation in the past thirty years."

+ — New Yorker 20:68 D 23 '44 40w

PAYNE, EMMY. Katy no-pocket; pictures by H. A. Rey. [32p] $2 Houghton 44-8099

Katy Kangaroo was most unfortunately unprovided with a pocket in which to carry her son Freddy. She asked other animals with no pockets how they carried their children but none seemed satisfactory. Finally a wise old owl advised her to try to find a pocket in the City, and so off she went and in the City she found just what she and Freddy needed.

"Emmy Payne's story is a honey and the pictures are H. A. Rey at his funniest." P. A. Whitney

+ Book Week p16 N 12 '44 150w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p10 S 25 '44 120w

"Silly but funny."

Kirkus 12:428 S 15 '44 60w

Reviewed by M. C. Skinner

Library J 69:864 O 15 '44 70w

"Truly amusing pictures by Rey make this worth the high price. Recommended highly." Gertrude Andrus

+ Library J 69:886 O 15 '44 60w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton

N Y Times p28 N 19 '44 100w

New Yorker 20:80 D 16 '44 50w

Springf'd Republican p4d N 19 '44 80w

"Children who like funny picture books in very bright colors think this one comes out just right."

+ Weekly Book Review p34 N 12 '44 220w

PAYNE, MRS JOSEPHINE BALFOUR. Once there was Olga; il. by Joan Balfour Payne. 45p $1 Putnam

44-6670

Story for four-year-olds about a peasant farmer and his wife, and the "fat, sleek little donkey" named Olga who carried loads to market for the farmer.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p21 N 12 '44 90w

"A simple folklore quality prevades both the story and the childlike drawings."

+ Horn Bk 20:481 N '44 80w

Kirkus 12:430 S 15 '44 50w

"The folklore manner in which the story is told and the simplicity of the fine black-and-white illustrations will appeal to younger boys and girls." Olive Brain

+ Library J 69:886 O 15 '44 70w

"The drawings are droll and comfortable and endearing in a genuinely childlike fashion and there is a pleasing absence of that straining after the grotesque which disfigures so many of the present-day books for little children." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p25 O 1 '44 220w

"For four-year-olds or so who love to listen to stories whose fun is unforced and whose pleasant words keep repeating. . . The impulse of an older reader is to seek out a small child to share this book." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ag 27 '44 150w

PEARSON, CLAUDE EDMUND. Extrusion of metals; with a foreword by R. Genders. 205p il $3.75 Wiley [18s Chapman]

671 Extrusion (metals) 44-5163

"A concise account of the metallurgical and engineering aspects of extrusion practice as they relate to different classes of work and materials. The historical development of the process is presented briefly, followed by descriptions of plants and procedures and discussions of flow phenomena and the influence of temperature and pressure upon the quality of extruded metals. Impact intrusion used in making collapsible tubes and zinc shells is treated in a separate chapter, as is also the special technique of extrusion-forging. There are chapter bibliographies. The author is Head of the Metallurgy Department of King's College, University of Durham." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 41:55 O 15 '44

Chem & Met Eng 51:220 D '44 50w

PEARSON, C. E.—Continued
"Authoritative, well-written, concise. . . Valuable for metallurgists and engineers and all engaged in the production and use of commercially extruable products." L. A. Eales
+ Library J 69:653 Ag '44 80w
N Y New Tech Bks 29:28 Ap '44

PEARSON, FRANK ASHMORE, and PAARLBERG, DON. Food. 239p $2.75 Knopf
338.1 Food supply—U.S. World war, 1939—Food supply. Agriculture—Economic aspects 44-1834

A discussion of various aspects of the food problem especially as manifested under war conditions. The authors contend that many of the Administration's policies are wrong and that, specifically, free prices would regulate food supply better than rationing and price ceilings. The senior author is professor of prices and statistics at Cornell university.

Reviewed by M. S. Stewart
Nation 158:518 Ap 29 '44 240w
Reviewed by M. M. Heseltine
Survey 80:143 Ap '44 150w
Wis Lib Bul 40:52 Ap '44
Reviewed by A. W. Griswold
Yale R n s 34:171 autumn '44 360w

PEASE, HOWARD. Thunderbolt house; il. by Armstrong Sperry. 287p $2 Doubleday 44-4098

Mystery story for older boys. The scene is San Francisco at the time of the earthquake, and a small California town nearby.

"When you take a mysterious old mansion on Nob Hill, a dead miser who hoarded, not gold, but rare first editions, an American family newly rich, and lay these ingredients against the rowdy, romantic background of San Francisco at the turn of the century, you're pretty sure to have a story. But when you climax the tale with the San Francisco earthquake and fire and present the whole with the skill and story-telling magic of Howard Pease, you have a book that any youngster from 12 up will enjoy—and most adults, too."
+ Book Week p11 Ap 16 '44 250w
Booklist 40:344 Je 1 '44
Cath World 160:282 D '44 10w

"This is a book which will appeal to older girls as much as it will to boys."
Christian Science Monitor p10 My 25 '44 270w

"Mr. Pease pictures the social life of the period with truthfulness and care. There is real substance in the way he develops the effect of newly acquired wealth on each member of the family after they move to San Francisco." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 20:103 Mr '44 100w

"Pease has chosen an odd situation as the theme for this new story. Personally, I found it distasteful, and I think many people will agree with me."
— Kirkus 12:97 F 15 '44 160w
Reviewed by Dorotha Dawson
Library J 69:465 My 15 '44 60w

"This is not the strongest of Mr. Pease's stories—devoted readers looking forward to one of his rugged tales may indeed be disappointed—but it is good reading nevertheless." E. L. Buell
+ — N Y Times p18 Ap 9 '44 180w

"When Howard Pease writes a mystery novel for the teens, the customers get their money's worth. This, considering the thinness of many such stories, is worth emphasis. Here is a book for older boys that any one could read without losing interest and losing face." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p5 Je 11 '44 420w

PEASE, JOSEPHINE VAN DOLZEN. This is the world; pictures by Esther Friend. 71p $2.50 Rand McNally
44-9356

"Some people live in the city, says this picture story in colors, some in the tangled jungle, some in houseboats or little white farmhouses. 'But we all live on the enormous, tremendous, stupendous, wonderful ball called the Earth. It is our world!' So begins a moving book that may be given to a child before geography sets in, for quite little children often have a capacity for taking in, as it were emotionally, the essence of subjects that come to them later through facts." Weekly Book Review

"Esther Friend's illustrations are not only beautiful, but they give the child something of a feeling for the way the earth is made. I like the 'different kinds of people are fun' idea behind the book, and the dedication—'To all children everywhere.' " P. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p22 N 12 '44 130w
Commonweal 41:256 D 22 '44 40w

"This Is the World will be a distinct help in developing right attitudes toward the peoples of other lands, in visualizing the world as a whole, and in bringing about understandings which are essential for the maintenance of harmonious relations among the nations of the earth." G. E. Storm
+ El School J 45:299 Ja '45 1050w

"Primer fact book and a good one, introducing a global concept which even first and second graders can grasp."
+ Kirkus 12:518 N 15 '44 90w
New Yorker 20:84 D 16 '44 60w

"This is one world, little children say who read this book: a thought in the air not strange to them, they take it in, simply and truly."
+ Weekly Book Review p7 N 12 '44 400w

PEATTIE, MARGARET RHODES. Return. 128p $2 Morrow
44-664

Series of brief sketches showing what happened on one day in a Vermont town—the day when the boys came back from World war II.

Reviewed by Emily Schassberger
Book Week p9 F 6 '44 450w
Booklist 40:252 Mr 15 '44
Bookmark 5:20 Mr '44
Reviewed by N. E. Monroe
Cath World 159:92 Ap '44 160w

"Simply, poignantly, with the power to put herself in the place of men and women of many different sorts, Margaret Peattie has pictured the day as a community event, as a typical and an individual climax of emotion, one of welcome, exaltation, fraternity, love, peace, and safety. The day came to an end, but the account of it leaves a continuing sense of adjustments to follow." W. K. R.
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 F 19 '44 480w

"A catchy idea at this time, credible situations very briefly sighted, but sentiment with a heavy hand. For the ladies."
+ — Kirkus 11:558 D 15 '43 110w

"It is a true-feeling book, and everyone who reads it will long more than ever for the coming of the days it celebrates." Charlotte Dean
+ N Y Times p12 F 20 '44 200w

"This is a warmly wishful little book, written with love and sympathy." E. M. B.
+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 13 '44 250w

"This is one of those small books that have begun to come in response to war economy and effort. It is satisfying in that respect, but unlike the rule of most things that are 'good for you' it is a wish-fulfilling story as well. It will reach straight to the hearts of all those who wish the war to end." Kathleen Coyle
+ Weekly Book Review p4 F 13 '44 550w

PEATTIE, RODERICK, ed. Great Smokies and the Blue Ridge; the story of the southern Appalachians; the contributors: Edward S. Drake [and others]. 372p il $3.75 Vanguard

917.68 Great Smoky mountains. Blue Ridge mountains 43-18187

For descriptive note see Annual for 1943.

Bookmark 5:15 Mr '44

Christian Science Monitor p13 Ap 8 '44 400w

"Here is a book which provides a beautiful report on magnificent mountains and is conceived in understanding and appreciation of the people who have kept old patterns of language and living in their inaccessibility." Jonathan Daniels

+ Sat R of Lit 27:13 Mr 4 '44 550w

Wis Lib Bul 40:24 F '44

PEATTIE, RODERICK. Look to the frontiers; a geography for the peace table. 246p maps $3 Harper

320.128 Boundaries 44-9379

"A noted geographer speaks in human terms of what geographic considerations must mean to any feasible peace plan. Discussing first the general role of geography and boundary problems, he then examines separately the difficulties of Europe as they differ from those of Asia. The concluding proposals of 'zonal' boundaries and confederation are based on the assumption that as the world grows smaller through transport and communication, boundaries must become more flexible and be based on new social concepts rather than on nationalism alone." (Booklist) Index.

Reviewed by Harvey O'Connor

Book Week p4 N 26 '44 140w

Booklist 41:102 D 1 '44

Current Hist 8:70 Ja '45 80w

"The author's sincere endeavor to simplify his subject may put it over with some readers; but on the whole the book is hard to digest."

Kirkus 12:363 Ag 15 '44 90w

"A particularly readable and attractive presentation of the geographical aspect [of present day economics]. . . His chapter on 'The Life and Death of Geopolitics' may interest those who have been puzzled by the geopoliticians, and it will help clear thinking."

+ Sat R of Lit 27:9 N 18 '44 70w

"Mr. Peattie set out to 'let the people know' some facts of geography, hoping thereby to enable them better to judge proposals for the coming peace. The result is a stimulating discussion of some potential post-war problems. Whether the discussion will leave many readers with a clear conception of the fundamental prerequisites of peace is, however, a matter of doubt. The doubt implies no criticism of Mr. Peattie's able presentation of his subject. It is rather the reflection of another doubt, as to whether geography is in truth a major factor in shaping the history of mankind." W. H. Hindle

Sat R of Lit 27:9 D 9 '44 1550w

"As a reaction against the labored nonsense of the 'geopoliticians' the book is refreshing, and Mr. Peattie manages to come up with a number of suggestive ideas and viewpoints. They are still embedded, however, in that morass of the obvious and the platitudinous in which most political geography seems to be bogged down; it is not always easy to see just what the author is driving at or what it adds up to in the end. Mr. Peattie is clearly, however, on the side of the angels." Walter Millis

+ — Weekly Book Review p30 D 3 '44 750w

PECK, ANNE MERRIMAN. The pageant of Canadian history. 370p il $3 Longmans

971 Canada—History 43-17250

For descriptive note see Annual for 1943.

"Canadians may well be thankful for such a sympathetic popularization of their national story as Mrs. Peck has written for an American audience. As far as I can see, she should have every reason to believe that Canadians will consider this volume a valuable contribution to better understanding between the two countries." R. M. Saunders

+ Am Hist R 49:786 Jl '44 160w

"The narrative is intended to be descriptive rather than historical. As far as new facts are concerned, it contributes practically nothing to what the serious student of Canadian history can be expected to know, and for him, there are many books of greater usefulness than this one. But for the general American reader, who knows very little of the fascinating story of the Dominion and of the close relation of Canadian and United States history, this volume will provide an interesting and stimulating introduction." Carl Wittke

Ann Am Acad 232:195 Mr '44 450w

Christian Science Monitor p12 O 14 '44 100w

"It is not a student's history. The greater part of it is interesting reading, but traces of guidebook literature may be noticed in the chapters which bring the story up to date."

+ — Current Hist 7:50 Jl '44 80w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 22:665 Jl '44 10w

"Mrs. Peck has made a valuable contribution to American understanding of the peoples north of the Border: their types, their environment, their economic and social problems, and their essentially national character which is Canadian. . . The book is easily read, much of it comprehensible for high school age, and most certainly for college. There is a fairly adequate map." Avaline Folsom

+ Social Educ 8:183 Ap '44 800w

"A pageant and not a conventional history is the author's description of this book. The six divisions of the book in outline tend to substantiate this claim. . . The part on the pageant of fur is well done but frequently this fine writing is not sustained and the book degenerates into a textbookish conglomeration of facts." C. G. Winter

+ — Social Studies 35:137 Mr '44 420w

Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 6 '44 180w

Wis Lib Bul 40:24 F '44

PECK, MARY GRAY. Carrie Chapman Catt; a biography. 495p il $3 Wilson, H.W.

B or 92 Catt, Mrs Carrie (Lane) Chapman 44-5670

"A spirited account of the long public career of a woman known throughout the world as a leader in the movement for recognition of the civic and social rights of women. Mrs. Catt has lived through a period of great social and economic changes. Her childhood was in the time of the Civil War and Reconstruction period and her old age has been disturbed by the present world-wide tragedy." (Library J) Index.

"The [book] is perhaps more a history of the suffrage cause since 1890 than a biography of its leader, since Mrs. Catt sublimated almost all else to suffrage and still maintains a certain personal reserve. Despite these limitations, certain of her dynamic attributes pervade the pages, and through the all too few quotations from her letters and speeches the reader is left wishing for much more about the lady herself." J. P. Nichols

+ Ann Am Acad 237:233 Ja '45 550w

Booklist 40:389 Jl 15 '44

"Like Mrs. Catt herself, Mary Gray Peck's biography of her is direct and moves forward with the current of her destiny and accomplishment." J. A. A.

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 Ag 19 '44 800w

"Recommended for larger libraries." A. R. Eaton

+ Library J 69:402 My 1 '44 80w

"This book is written by a votary for votaries, and it will be read chiefly by those who love to recall the old days and look at the old pictures which the publisher has furnished without stint. Miss Peck is as conscientious as the social editor of a local newspaper in including all the names. Her treatment of the militant wing of the American movement is a model of judicious restraint—if restraint was required after a quarter of a century. But the Great Healer has likewise laid his cooling hand on the buoyancy of the girls who marched in gold; to all but the survivors this is a story of long, long ago." Betsy Hutchison

PECK, M. G.—Continued
Nation 159:330 S 16 '44 550w

"It is difficult to write the biography of a living person, especially of a friend. Miss Peck is to be congratulated on the well written, authoritative, and entertaining history she has evolved from a vast amount of documentary material and her own close association and knowledge. . . But no portrait is ever wholly satisfactory to those who know the sitter. So this reviewer may be permitted to regret that the author did not feel at liberty to make this book less the chronicle of a brilliant career and more the intimate story of one of the most colorful and significant personalities of our time." Dorothy Straus
+ Sat R of Lit 27:22 Ag 26 '44 750w

"Perhaps the book leans over in giving credit to Mrs Catt, although it is made clear that in every instance she was the choice of retiring leaders to carry on this work; but as one reads one cannot help accepting the view of the author that Mrs Catt was the spearhead of the final phases and that it was her genius for organization and her capacity for work that made for final victory. The book is well documented by references to Mrs Catt's book, 'Woman Suffrage and Politics,' to comments on her speeches, and to quotations from her speeches and letters to the author." Gena Hickox
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 9 '44 1100w

"To those of us who had the privilege of being lieutenants in Carrie Chapman Catt's woman suffrage army, it would have seemed impossible that mere printed pages could recreate the vigor and magnetism of her leadership. Miss Peck's biography has done this—and more. In its pages are focused more color, drama, and excitement than veterans of that long, hard pull for women's enfranchisement were aware of at the time." Vera Whitehouse
+ Survey G 33:426 O '44 500w

"In this straightforward and lively record, Mary Gray Peck traces the career of one of the dynamic leaders of her time." Mary Ross
+ Weekly Book Review p12 S 10 '44 1300w

Wis Lib Bul 40:127 O '44

"Throughout the book the point of view of the suffrage leaders is steadfastly held. This procedure keeps the spotlight on the main figures and is favorable to clarity and vividness; but an opportunity is lost of interesting the reader who would like to see the suffrage movement related to the general evolution of democracy. Nevertheless, Miss Peck's book serves its purpose in giving a convincing portrait of a woman of stature." A. C. Notestein
+ Yale R n s 34:151 autumn '44 700w

PEDLER, MARGARET (BASS) (MRS W. G. Q. PEDLER). No gifts from chance. 339p $2.50 McBride [8s 6d Hodder]
44-9913

Love story of present day England, the scene of which is rural Devonshire. The heroine, Susan, meets again in Devon the man who had saved her life during a London blitz. There is a mystery about his past, but nothing serious enough to obstruct the way to a marriage.

"Home brew, with high sugar content."
Kirkus 12:327 Ag 1 '44 90w

Springf'd Republican p4d N 26 '44 130w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p16 O 15 '44 70w

PEERS, EDGAR ALLISON. Spirit of flame; a study of St John of the Cross. 214p $2 Morehouse [6s Student]

B or 92 John of the Cross, Saint (Juan de Yeppes) 44-1580

Introduction to the life and works of St John of the Cross, a Spanish Carmelite friar, born some four hundred years ago. He was an outstanding figure of the counter-Reformation. Index.

"It is no small comfort in days as dark as ours to find a man of the author's position paying a tribute of intelligent enthusiastic admiration to the saint who has been called 'the poets' poet and the mystics' mystic.' St. John's greatness, first perceived by St. Teresa, has come to be generally and officially recognized; this book will serve still further to increase the multitude of his admirers."
+ Cath World 159:94 Ap '44 180w

"By an author who, among all modern scholars, is best equipped to treat the theme with understanding and sympathy."
+ Christian Century 61:178 F 9 '44 50w

"Save in two particulars the tone of the book is thoroughly Catholic: the scriptural quotations are, naturally, from the Authorized Version: and nowhere is mention made of the ardent devotion to the Holy Eucharist which characterized Saint John of the Cross as it did many another great mystic of the Church." D. H. Moseley
Commonweal 39:452 F 18 '44 400w

Reviewed by Cyril Clemens
Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 4 '44 440w

"The value of this little book is that it not only gives a brief outline of the life and a commentary upon the work of one of the greatest of the Christian Mystics, but that it is so well annotated and indexed that it forms an encouraging guide to any who may be inspired to make closer acquaintance with the writings of the sixteenth-century Spanish poet and Saint."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p323 Jl 3 '43 60w

PEGUY, CHARLES PIERRE. Men and saints; prose and poetry; rendered into English by Anne and Julian Green. 303p $2.75 Pantheon bks.

848 44-47938

A second volume of selections from the works of this French Catholic writer. The first volume, Basic Verities, was published in 1943 (Book Review Digest, 1943).

Reviewed by Katherine Brégy
Cath World 160:275 D '44 400w

"Péguy, who was killed in battle in 1914, deserved to be rescued from the oblivion which threatened him, but in this reviewer's opinion he is less important than Green considers him. He is very French, very Catholic, very critical of the modern world, very much devoted to what seem to him the old simplicities, sincerities and spiritualities. No uncertainties trouble him. He knows with complete conviction whatever he thinks." W. E. Garrison
+ — Christian Century 61:1319 N 15 '44 750w

"As the French text and the English translations are on opposite pages, those wishing to brush up on their French as well as those interested in good literature and a beautiful expression of religious faith will find this volume of value."
+ Kirkus 12:503 N 1 '44 120w

"To pick out apophthegms and purple patches as Anne and Julian Green have done in 'Basic Verities' and now again in 'Men and Saints' is perhaps to distort and certainly to flatter Péguy, but it is the only way to get him widely read. The new selection exacts no radical reconsideration of the author, but after reading both volumes the reader is in a better position to see Péguy's limitations." E. R. Bentley
+ — Nation 159:595 N 11 '44 360w

Reviewed by André Du Bouchet
New Repub 111:770 D 4 '44 850w

"Péguy was a sincere and unaffected prose writer and a true poet. His poetry, made accessible in 'Men and Saints' and happily rendered into English, has none of the magic of Verlaine, the sublimated purity of Valéry or the magnificent imagery of Baudelaire and Claudel. It is a rhythmic prose, monotonous and repetitious at times, and at times transfiguring the language of everyday life into verse almost as simple and as pregnant as the Gospels. These expert translations by two French writers of American nationality will serve as a valuable initiation to the vast works of Charles Péguy." Henri Peyre

+ N Y Times p7 O 29 '44 1500w

" 'Men and Saints' tempts us to call it the finer of the Greens' volumes of selections. The style of the translation besides is more harmonious than in 'Basic Verities.' And Péguy's prose appears on the handsomest page on which it has ever had the fortune to be presented." Paul Rosenfeld

+ Sat R of Lit 27:11 N 4 '44 700w

Reviewed by C. D. Kean

Springf'd Republican p6 D 22 '44 600w

"This may seem a quiet book, but it is nothing of the kind. The ideas it contains are in our world to stay, to inspire us if we look toward tomorrow, to plague us if we don't." John Erskine

+ Weekly Book Review p5 D 31 '44 1300w

PEI, MARIO ANDREW. Languages for war and peace. 575p maps $5 Vanni

410 Language and languages 44-836

"This might well be a textbook for an 'orientation' course in modern languages; for it describes the major languages spoken all over the world, where they are spoken, by whom, by how many persons, and gives what might be called the earmarks of each. For each of seven 'key' foreign languages, (French, German, Spanish, Portuguese, Italian, Russian, Japanese) it presents a 20-page outline of pronunciation, writing and grammar, together with a basic vocabulary reduced to about 1,200 words. It also gives a concise description of over 30 'minor' languages, with the idea of enabling a person to tell whether he is faced with Czech or Polish, Norwegian or Icelandic, Turkish or Persian, Burmese or Malay." Christian Science Monitor

---

Christian Science Monitor p6 Mr 4 '44 250w

